INVESTIGATION OF ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1950

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE,
Washington, D. C.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

The committee met, pursuant to call of the chairman, at 2:30 p. m., in the District of Columbia committee room, the Capitol, Washington, D. C., Senator Estes Kefauver (chairman) presiding.

Present: Senators Kefauver, Hunt, and Wiley.

Also present: George S. Robinson, associate counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order.

(Discussion off the record.)

The CHAIRMAN. I think it would be well to have some of these statements on the record. Lieutenant, will you identify yourself for the record?

TESTIMONY OF WALTER CASEY, ACTING LIEUTENANT, NEW YORK CITY POLICE DEPARTMENT, DETECTIVE DIVISION

Lieutenant CASEY. Walter Casey, acting lieutenant, New York City Police Department, Detective Division.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been in the police department, Mr. Casey?

Lieutenant CASEY. 24 years. Prior to that I worked with Lincoln National Detective Agency.

The CHAIRMAN. How old are you?

Lieutenant CASEY. Forty-six. I started when I was 16 doing that work.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not look it. Go ahead and tell us anything else.

Lieutenant CASEY. You mean about the district attorney's office?

The CHAIRMAN. About the general set-up up there.

Lieutenant CASEY. The general set-up in the district attorney's office as far as my knowledge goes would be that Mr. Hogan had a squad of detectives assigned to his office with a Captain Grafnecker and a lieutenant whose name I don't recall right now, and about 60 to 70 detectives assigned to that office to do all the work coming out of that office. In addition to that, the district attorney's office in Brooklyn has a squad of men. I don't know the number, but I imagine it must be 20 to 30 men working out of that office. Right now he has a number of probationary patrolmen whose identities aren't even known to any of the detective division, working on the gambling probe in Brooklyn. The district attorney's office in Queens County has a staff of detectives. I don't know how many he has, but I should say 10 to 15, maybe 20, and the district attorney in Bronx County also has a staff of New York City detectives assigned to his office.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean the New York City detectives under the police commissioner of New York are assigned to these other municipalities like Brooklyn and Queens?

Lieutenant CASEY. Of course, the detective division of New York City would take in the entire five boroughs.

The CHAIRMAN. I see.

Lieutenant CASEY. They have precinct squads. They have approximately 120 or 130 precincts in the entire city of New York, the 5 boroughs, and each of these precincts has a detective squad with an acting lieutenant or lieutenant or captain in command. Each squad has anywhere from 8 to 25 men assigned to the squad. That is according to how busy that precinct would be. For five precinct detective squads, there would be what is called the divisional officer. The division will be commanded by an acting captain or a deputy inspector or inspector. Then each borough is commanded by a deputy chief inspector. Then we have a chief of detectives who takes in the entire city.

At police headquarters itself we have what is called the central office squads consisting of the specialty squads such as the safe and loft, narcotics, pickpocket, the main office squads, the ballistics bureau, the police laboratory, and they are all commanded by Acting Deputy Chief Inspector Liddon. They work out of police headquarters.

The CHAIRMAN. Lieutenant Casey, while you are here, and since everybody is going to Florida, as you know, if you would give Mr. Robinson or somebody else as much of the picture as you can while you are on this trip, and then you will be available for us to call on you for information or records.

Lieutenant CASEY. At any time at all. I was told by the police commissioner yesterday to inform you gentlemen that anything at all you want in the city of New York is yours, any records, any investigations the committee wants made there, or anything we have in the adjoining States. We have quite a bit of information on racketeers in New Jersey.

The CHAIRMAN. We appreciate that very, very much.

Senator HUNT, do you have any questions?

Senator HUNT. I do not believe so.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Wiley?

Senator WILEY. I think you should state on the record what you started to tell in the beginning before we put it on the record, the connection interstatewise between Jersey and New York. You said, among other things, that you thought that the large racketeers had emigrated to Jersey. Do you want to go more into detail in relation to that and tell us who they are?

Lieutenant CASEY. About 10 years ago there were fellows like Joe Adonis, Albert Anastasia, a fellow named Tony Bender—I have a few cards here that I will refer to—a fellow named Genovese, another fellow named Willie Moretti and Salvatore Moretti, and there are a number of others whose names I cannot recall right now. They were all residents of New York City, of Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx, Manhattan. About 7 or 8 years ago they started moving out of the city, and they all seemed to go over into one section of Jersey, just across from the George Washington Bridge, Cliffside, N. J., Hasbrouck Heights, and that section.

Senator WILEY. Do they have their homes there?

Lieutenant CASEY. They have their homes there. There is a bar and grill which is the favorite hang-out, known as Duke's Bar and Grill, and the address is 5786 Palisades Avenue, Cliffside, N. J. That for the last 10 years has been a meeting place for all of these fellows. We have kept these men under observation from time to time. We have trailed anybody living in the city of New York; we keep them under surveillance when we have the men to do it. Many times we take them right from New York over to Jersey. Erickson we have followed from his home at 610 West End Avenue to a place at 31½ Essex Street, in Paterson, N. J. That was about a year ago. That seemed to be his headquarters at that time. He would go there daily, driven there by a chauffeur and a couple of other people who would meet him at his residence. In covering the store at 31½ Essex Street in Paterson we also observed his brother leaving the place. Leonard Erickson, who is his accountant. He is a certified public accountant.

Senator WILEY. What rackets did they engage in?

Lieutenant CASEY. That was bookmaking, but the bookmaking seemed to be all done in Jersey, at least the trips were all made over there. We could never get them to do anything in New York City outside of playing golf. Of course, Leonard Erickson had an office at 487 Park Avenue which was raided by District Attorney Hogan and his office about a month ago, where all the records in the Erickson case were found. Erickson since then has been indicted, at least an information filed in the special session and he pleaded guilty and received 2 years in prison and also a $30,000 fine.

Senator WILEY. What effect does that have on bookmaking?

Lieutenant CASEY. I never did any work on gambling. My work was to get the background of these racketeers, to dig up any information I could possibly do, such as their associates with whom they were associating, where they hang out, any businesses that they may have, legitimate or illegitimate. Then we have a special squad assigned to the chief inspector's office that does all the gambling work. The detective division does not handle the gambling in New York City.

Senator WILEY. Who looks after the racketeering in relation to shipment, getting large quantities of materials that have been stolen and disposed of, and so forth?

Lieutenant CASEY. We have our safe and loft squad that handles all truck highjackers. They also handle any safe burglary and any loft burglary in the city, any warehouse burglary in the city of New York.

Senator WILEY. It has been estimated that $100,000,000 worth is taken that way. Have you done anything to find out who is the head of that racket?

Lieutenant CASEY. If it has been estimated $100,000,000 has been taken that way, it didn't come into our office. The reports never came in to our office, so I would have no knowledge of it.

Senator WILEY. What about the rackets in labor unions?

Lieutenant CASEY. We have a special squad that takes care of labor unions, what we call the special services, the bureau of special services. Senator WILEY. That is the Maritime Union too?

Lieutenant CASEY. That takes all unions, any union trouble at all. They have records of all the officers. I guess they can tell you practically anything about any union in New York City.

Senator WILEY. Who is the head of that squad?

Lieutenant CASEY. There is a new captain, I think his name is Smith, who was put in charge of the squad recently.

Senator WILEY. What suggestions have you to make as to how to handle, from the standpoint of the Federal Government, the situation as you know it, the racket situation in New York, in New Jersey, and so forth?

Lieutenant CASEY. I wouldn't have any suggestions right now. I believe that Chief Liddon, who has handled a lot of this work, would be the man to make any suggestions.

Senator WILEY. I think you said something in one of your previous statements that you did have some information on the bookmaking proposition that connected up with Florida. Any place else?

Lieutenant CASEY. We know that these fellows in New York and New Jersey have connections in Florida. They have such places as the Colonial Inn, and I think Frank Costello was supposed to own the Beverly Club in New Orleans, just outside of New Orleans. Then several years ago they had gambling houses in Las Vegas, Nev. Who had those I don't recall right now. I believe a man named Meyer Lansky had something to do with that; also Bugsy Siegel, who was killed on the west coast several years ago.

Senator WILEY. You have in New York a State income tax, haven't you?

Lieutenant CASEY. Yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. Do these fellows return their State income to New York or to New Jersey?

Lieutenant CASEY. I don't know.

Senator WILEY. New Jersey has a State income tax, do you know?

Lieutenant CASEY. I don't know whether Jersey has one or not. I may be wrong, but I don't believe Jersey has a State income tax. I might be wrong.

Senator WILEY. Are there any distinct fields of racketeering that you have knowledge of that you think the committee should have information about outside of what you have stated?

Lieutenant CASEY. No, sir; not that I can recall.

The CHAIRMAN. How about the narcotics trade?

Lieutenant CASEY. The narcotics trade is another phase that is handled by a special squad, the narcotics squad. They have probably 25 to 30 detectives assigned to that work and that work only. Any information that any detective in New York City gets regarding narcotics must be given to the narcotics squad so that squad can handle it. Of course, they work in cooperation with the Federal Narcotics Bureau.

The CHAIRMAN. That is fine. We appreciate very much your offer of help, and we will call on you very extensively.

Lieutenant CASEY. Anything that we can possibly give you you are welcome to.

Mr. Halley asked me last night to show you these pictures in which he thought you might be interested. This is the residence of William Moretti.

The CHAIRMAN. Can we keep these pictures?

Lieutenant CASEY. I will get a set and send it down.

The CHAIRMAN. It is a nice house, isn't it?

Lieutenant CASEY. This is another view of Moretti's house. He has a beautiful home there. This is a residence of Anastasia overlooking the Hudson. This is the residence of Abner Zwillman, known as Longie Zwillman, East Orange, N. J. This is the home of Zwillman at Deal, N. J., his summer home.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean he has two houses?

Lieutenant CASEY. So has Moretti. This is the summer home of Frank Costello on Long Island. This is the home of Genovese, in New Jersey. This is the residence of Thomas Luchese, at Malvern, N. Y. That is in New York City. This is another view of Zwillman's home in Deal, N. J. This is the residence of Joe Adonis.

The CHAIRMAN. Where does he live?

Lieutenant CASEY. He lives at Cliffside, N. J. This is a photograph of Duke's Bar and Grill in Cliffside, N. J. That is the hang-out for all these fellows.

The CHAIRMAN. What sort of cooperation do you get out of New Jersey police commissioners and the attorney general?

Lieutenant CASEY. Any work that we had in Jersey we do ourselves, if we can, without asking cooperation, because all of our work would be surveillance. When we have these fellows under surveillance we don't want too many people to know it. We don't want anybody to tip them off. For that reason any surveillance work we generally keep to ourselves, whether it is these racketeers or a burglar or anybody. We have a special squad doing that work who are not known to the public. They are all young fellows.

Mr. ROBINSON. May I ask how long have these people been under surveillance?

Lieutenant CASEY. On and off. They are not kept under surveillance steadily. We haven't enough men to do that. We have probably 50 or 60 that we have to keep watch on, so we just take one or two at a time and spend 4 or 5 days, and then we have a check made of their residence to see whether they are in or out of the city, and if so, we have several contacts there to tell us where they went. We don't go too far out of the city ourselves.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is supposed to own Duke's Bar?

Lieutenant CASEY. I have his name. DeNoia, I believe it is. It is a similar name, anyway, D-e-N-o-i-a. That is phonetic. I am not just sure how to spell his name, but it is a name similar to that. I have his name and can get it for you. I think he just fronts for it. I think he just has the license and probably somebody else has the place itself. That place has been visited time and time again, I believe, by the FBI and some Federal agencies going back as far as 7, 8, or 9 years ago.

The CHAIRMAN. These details we will be getting from you from time to time and if you could send us copies of these pictures we certainly would appreciate it.

Lieutenant CASEY. I will get copies and send them down to you, surely.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Robinson, I think we ought to release these letters to the press and also write the mayor and police commissioner an appropriate letter and tell them how grateful we are for their offer of assistance and for assigning Lieutenant Casey with us to act until the deputy chief inspector returns from his vacation, and that we will be calling upon these officers who have been designated to give us information and help from time to time. Give the substance of what I have said to the press. Lieutenant Casey came down personally to offer his services and made a brief statement before the committee.

Is that an appropriate statement?

Senator HUNT. Quite appropriate. Would the use of Mr. Casey's name jeopardize his work? Could you not do the work a little better if it were not publicized?

Lieutenant CASEY. I think it was pretty well publicized in New York. About a year ago we got a lot of publicity on the squad up there working on these fellows. I think most of them know it anyway.

Senator HUNT. You gentlemen know more about that than I do.

The CHAIRMAN. That is a point well made. Would you be spotted so that they would know you are helping the committee?

Lieutenant CASEY. No. They know me by name. I don't think more than two or three of these fellows know me personally.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, thank you, Lieutenant Casey.

(Discussion off the record.)

(The testimony of M. H. Goldschein, special assistant to the Attorney General, Department of Justice, Washington, D. C., is included in pt. 12 of the hearings of the committee. The hearing was adjourned at 3:50 p. m.)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 15, 1950

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE,
New York, N. Y.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

The committee met at 2:35 p. m., pursuant to call, in room 513, United States Courthouse, Foley Square, New York City, N. Y.

Present: Rudolph Halley, chief counsel; John F. Elich and Patrick C. Murray, investigators.

STATEMENT OF ALEXANDER A. SUTHERLAND, SECURITY DIRECTOR, WRIGHT AERONAUTICAL CORP. ENGINE PLANT, WOOD-RIDGE, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. You are security director of the Wright Aeronautical Corp., engine plant, at Wood-Ridge, N. J.?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is correct.

Mr. ELICH. How long have you been security director there, Mr. Sutherland?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Since January of 1948. That is 2 years and 7 months.

Mr. ELICH. During that period of time as the security director certain matters were brought to your attention indicating that certain employees are active in accepting bets from other employees in the plant?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is correct.

Mr. ELICH. The money that is collected by these individuals goes where?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. To the best of my knowledge, across the street from the Wright plant to an establishment operated by Charles Astore.

Mr. ELICH. When you say this is delivered to Charles Astore, you have a considerable number of guards who work for you who are stationed at the various entrances and exits?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is correct.

Mr. ELICH. Did you ever receive any information that possibly one of the employees was making a delivery of a package to somebody to deliver across the street?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes; I did.

Mr. ELICH. Do you know what employee that was?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Joseph Mello.

Mr. ELICH. Is he known to be one of the bookmakers in the plant?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes; he is.

In fact, the top bookmaker.

Mr. ELICH. When you say the top, do you mean he possibly collects from other runners?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is correct.

Mr. ELICH. Then after collecting from the other runners, what does he do?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. He wouldn't necessarily take it out nor has he been within the last, let's say, 60 days. Other employees have been doing that.

Mr. ELICH. Do you have the names of those other employees?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes; I do.

Mr. ELICH. Would you be able to name those employees?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes. One is John C. Hayes.

Mr. ELICH. Let me interrupt at this point. When you say that John C. Hayes has taken out these so-called collections, do you have some information which indicates that he leaves the plant at specific times and returns within a period of time?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes; I do have.

Mr. ELICH. What do you have showing that?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. A form which we call a gate pass, which an employee must sign upon leaving the premises at any time during his working shift other than his normally scheduled lunch period.

Mr. ELICH. Have you found that John Hayes leaves the plant quite frequently during a weekly period?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I found that over a period of 10 or 12 consecutive days, his departures would be between 1:25 and 1:30 p. m.

Mr. ELICH. In other words, the reason for that probably is that track time is around 1:30 or 2 o'clock at most of the tracks, and the company pays him for this time?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. ELICH. Does this pass show the reason why he is leaving the plant?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. In some instances the comment was made on there for personal reasons. In other instances there was no comment on the pass. Understand, that these passes have to be approved by his supervisor. In other words, the man can't just leave the plant on the basis of his signature. He has to have his supervisor's approval on that gate pass.

Mr. ELICH. Would you say it is common knowledge among the supervisors that they know why the person leaves the plant for this period of time?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Let me get that question.

Mr. ELICH. Would you say that it is common knowledge for the supervisors to know why some of these employees leave the plant periodically?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I wouldn't say that it was common knowledge, but I could only believe that over a period of time a supervisor must know or be well aware of the fact why a man day after day would leave the plant at about the same time and return perhaps 10 or 12 minutes later.

Mr. ELICH. Would you give us the names of the other people who have been reported to us as being bookmakers within the Wright Aeronautical plant?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes. Let me refer to my records here.

There is one here, W. William Malone, then John McLaughlin. I have already given you John C. Hayes.

Just so we are clear on this, I don't want to leave the impression here that I have information that these men actually removed material from the plant. I am speaking now of men who are active within departments in the plant going around and picking up.

Mr. ELICH. That is right. You might indicate, too, the occupation that these people perform in the plant for the purpose of showing that the positions they occupy probably give them freedom of movement.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. All right. Joseph Mello, electric trucker; and Anthony Altieri, janitor; Joseph McCluskey, Frank Longo, receiving clerks; Patrick Mancini, trucker; Murray Glatt, he is an expediter. Both Mancini and McCluskey are truckers; James Perotti—I don't have his occupation—Dominick Altieri, engine disassembler; Albert Proulx, tool maker; Frank Bonito, tool maker.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a much longer list?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. No. Joseph Rotondo, laborer; C. Chartiore, assembler; George Semento, lathe operator; Kenneth Schwoy, engine tester; Stephen Gooch—I don't have his occupation.

Mr. ELICH. In addition to the list of names——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. May I interrupt?

Mr. ELICH. Yes.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I have one more man who has been observed leaving the premises.

Mr. ELICH. But you don't know whether he is a bookmaker or not?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I can only tell you that I have once observed him leave the plant and go to this establishment across the street: A. J. Cavaliere. He is an inspector.

Mr. HALLEY. The establishment across the street is a diner; isn't it?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. No. It is a combination taxi stand and novelty shop at the moment.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the wholesale jobbers novelty company? What is the name of the novelty shop?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. What other evidence have you that these people were bookmakers?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I have personally not seen transactions take place in the plant. I haven't seen envelopes or slips or money passed. Any information which I have here is data which I have received from confidential sources.

Mr. HALLEY. Various employees in the plant told you about it?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the answer. Who do you think is the head man in all this gambling?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Inside the plant, Mello.

Mr. HALLEY. On the horse track racing?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do they do other kinds of gambling?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. There were reports, which I never confirmed, that there were baseball pools operating. I checked that recently, and we couldn't come up with any evidence.

Mr. HALLEY. What does Altieri have to do with it?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Which Altieri is that, Dominick?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. He was reported as being a picker-upper in certain areas in the plant.

Mr. HALLEY. That is Dominick Altieri?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you made attempts to stop it?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes, we have, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. What have you done?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. On two occasions. Back in the latter part of 1948, either November or December, I don't have those particular notes with me—Mr. Schmidt has them—management decided, because of the unfavorable publicity in the newspapers that we should report the matter to the prosecutor's office in Hackensack. Mr. Schmidt, who is industrial relations director, and myself, were assigned to see Chief Emile Bugnon of Wood-Ridge and tell him what management's wishes were and he accompanied us to the prosecutor's office in Hackensack. The matter was discussed with Chief Michael Orecchio, of the prosecutor's staff and arrangements were made by Orecchio to have Pinkerton furnish an undercover operative in the plant. Before Pinkerton's man came in I submitted a list of about 15 names along with photographs to Orecchio and gave him any additional information I had as to points of pick-up in the plant. The operative of Pinkerton's was in the plant about a week. Subsequent to his departure my boss and Bugnon were called to Orecchio's office and the investigator's report was read to us. Following that, I received a call one day from Chief Orecchio, say, either in January or February of 1949, and at the time he told me that he wanted to contact Schmidt and couldn't reach him, so he gave me this message. He said that he, Orecchio, had had Mr. James Gyle, who is acting president of the union in the plant at that time, and George Granmore, who is regional representative of the CIO, in his office and he instructed them to go back to the Wright plant and to tell their people, that is the way he put it, to tell their people that they would have to discontinue picking up bets in the plant. Following that, I continued to compile information until about 60 days ago when I again went to my boss and told him that I had been receiving information from various employees in the plant that two of my own guards had helped to establish the fact that certain individuals were leaving the plant at about the same time every day. They did not know where they were going to. I observed John Hayes leave the premises—do you want the locations?

Mr. HALLEY. Try to make it fast at this point. I am just trying to get the over-all story.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I saw him leave the plant premises and drive in his car to Charles Astore's establishment. I saw him get out of the car. I saw Astore step out. They both walked in an alleyway to the rear of the building. I could not see what transpired there. I continued to report and retain as many gate pass records pertinent to Hayes as I could gather.

Mr. HALLEY. Couldn't you just refuse to issue gate passes?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Why not? Couldn't the plant change its rules?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. As long as a man comes to the gate and has the supervisor's name on the pass we couldn't refuse to let him out.

Mr. HALLEY. Couldn't the supervisor refuse to let him out?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Surely.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't the management take it up with the supervisor and say, "No more"?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. What?

Mr. HALLEY. Couldn't the management take it up with the supervisor?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The reason the management didn't take this particular case up that I am relating of 60 days ago was because we were asked by Mr. Stammeler's office not to take any action so that they could continue their investigation on the outside in anticipation of getting to some of the bigger individuals.

Mr. HALLEY. Did they finally come to a conclusion?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. No. As far as I know—Mr. Schmidt can answer that better than I can, but to my knowledge it is still an active case as far as Attorney General Parsons' office is concerned.

Mr. ELICH. Approximately how many runners do you think there are at the plant?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Of my own knowledge only the names that I have given to you?

Mr. ELICH. How big is the Wright Aeronautical plant? How many employees do you have?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. As this particular time about 8,000.

Mr. ELICH. Have you received any letters from any business people over in that vicinity complaining that employees were unable to pay their bills or to take care of their families on account of losing their money?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I have not.

Mr. ELICH. Do you have any idea as to how much money each one of these runners picks up a day?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Might I say something here? The only call that I ever had in connection with complaints of men losing their week's wages in the plant would be perhaps a year and a half ago when Chief Vander Valk Ryan spoke to me on the phone and said, "Al, I had a physician in town report to me that the wife of an employee in the Wright plant could not pay her doctor's bill because her husband was losing his wages gambling."

Mr. HALLEY. Is it the official position of the company that the gambling interferes with production?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Definitely.

Mr. HALLEY. Why?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Why? The men who are running around picking up bets are losing time. They are annoying other employees at their various occupations. We would consider it detrimental to production.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you think it takes the men's minds off their work?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Oh, I would think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that the official view of the company?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Is that the official view of the company?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I don't think, Mr. Halley, that I would be quite in position to say that is the official view. I am not an official of the company in that sense.

Mr. HALLEY. I know, but have you been informed that it is?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Naturally that would be management's conclusion on it. They are against it. We have notices at vantage points in the plant that gambling in any form is prohibited. We give each employee a rule book that tells them that gambling is prohibited.

Mr. HALLEY. Are there other questions?

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. HALLEY. What is your name?

Mr. TOSCANO. James C. Toscano, Jr.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you represent Mr. McLaughlin, is that it?

Mr. TOSCANO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I understand you represent some of the other witnesses who are here.

Mr. TOSCANO. Yes, sir. I represent four all told.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is paying your fee on this, the individuals who are witnesses?

Mr. TOSCANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You represent McLaughlin, is that right?

Mr. TOSCANO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Malone?

Mr. TOSCANO. Mr. Malone.

Mr. HALLEY. Astore?

Mr. TOSCANO. Astore and Mr. Mello.

Mr. HALLEY. I don't believe we can allow you to stay here with all the witnesses.

Mr. TOSCANO. I asked Mr. Elich and he says—

Mr. HALLEY. When a man represents one witness, but we won't let one counsel sit here and represent everybody.

Mr. TOSCANO. That is up to you gentlemen.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry, that is an impossibility. You can pick any one of them.

Mr. TOSCANO. All right.

(Mr. Toscano left the room.)

Mr. ELICH. This is Mr. John McLaughlin.

STATEMENT OF JOHN McLAUGHLIN, LINDY LAKE, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. McLaughlin, I am the counsel to the Senate Committee Investigating Interstate Crime. We are looking into a charge that there has been a considerable amount of bookmaking at the Wright Aeronautical plant at which you work. This is not a committee hearing and you will not be put under oath, but we want you to cooperate, if you will, by answering questions and answering them honestly. You are entitled to be represented by counsel and if you want to exercise that privilege you may.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. We all had the same counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. That is something I will not permit. If you want somebody else, you may have him or if he wants to pick you as the one he will represent, that is all right.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Let him pick who he wants. It doesn't matter to me.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address, Mr. McLaughlin?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. The address that the subpena was served at?

Mr. HALLEY. Your home address.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Lindy Lake, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your position at the Wright Aeronautical plant?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Inspector.

Mr. HALLEY. In what department?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Inspection department. I guess you could call it vendor's inspection.

Mr. HALLEY. On the final assembly?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No. Small parts inspection. We inspect small purchase parts.

Mr. HALLEY. You were served with a subpena, were you not, Mr. McLaughlin, by Mr. Elich?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. At that time I believe you told him that you had been accepting bets at the Wright plant for a number of years?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that the fact?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I guess; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How much in bets do you pick up on the average day?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. The weekly average would be better. The weekly average may be $100 or $120.

Mr. HALLEY. Total for the week?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. I thought you told Mr. Elich it was about that per day.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No. I misunderstood him. I thought he meant for the week. You can't get around too much. You have to stay with your own certain department.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you do with the money you pick up?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Most of it I keep myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you ever pass it over to Charles Astore?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You told Mr. Elich that you did.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No. I have never given Charlie any money.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Elich is sitting right here.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Not for bets, anyway. We paid Charlie for scratch sheets and other things, cab fares.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is "we"?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Some of the other fellows that I would pick up.

Mr. HALLEY. Who books the bets?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Each individual fellow.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't book bets. Let's not be silly.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. The few small ones that come in; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You book them out of your own capital?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I mean they have to be small.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't book bets, do you?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. If you could see the bets——

Mr. HALLEY. Don't you leave the plant regularly to go see Astore?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I don't leave the plant at all outside my regular working hours.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you tell Mr. Elich that the take for you is about $100 a day; that you turn it over either directly or indirectly to Astore for various runners?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. None of us turn it over to Charlie that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you turn it over to?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I keep most of it myself. Like I say, any of the large bets at times there would be fellows at the back gate that we could turn them over to and take them away.

Mr. HALLEY. Who would be at the back gate?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Well, I knew a fellow as Julia—I don't know his name. Sometimes a fellow by the name of Mac would come.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet them?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. At the back gate or the front gate, wherever it was convenient for them.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you first get to know them?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Through a couple of fellows in the shop.

Mr. HALLEY. For whom?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Joe.

Mr. HALLEY. Joe who?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Joe Mello.

Mr. HALLEY. He introduced you to these people?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. There was no introduction at all. Different fellows that were picking up just said, if you wanted to take bigger bets out, he would be at the back gate whenever you wanted him. Give him a call any afternoon.

Mr. HALLEY. When would he come back to pay off if there was a payoff?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. The next day.

Mr. HALLEY. And you would meet him at the back gate?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. At what time?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Generally after dinner, anywhere from a quarter to 1 or 1 o'clock to 1:30.

Mr. HALLEY. Any other questions?

Mr. ELICH. In other words, who gives you a scratch sheet that you operate with yours?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. If we want scratch sheets we call Charlie up and Charlie would get the scratch sheets.

Mr. ELICH. Charlie Astore?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That is right.

Mr. ELICH. How many scratch sheets does he give you for distribution to the men who are going to play with you?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. We have to buy the scratch sheets.

Mr. ELICH. I understand, but how many do you buy from him?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Two or three. There are not that many fellows around.

Mr. ELICH. Then you go around and pass those out. Who is it that actually gives you the scratch sheets—Charlie?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. We go up to the back gate and get them or the front gate or sometimes I go out on my lunch hour and get them.

Mr. ELICH. In other words, the man that you turn over the bets that you don't intend to hold on to is the man who comes around to pay you off in the morning, at that time also delivers the scratch sheet to you?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Generally he doesn't have the scratch sheets. Charlie sometimes came over with them or we went over to Charlie's.

Mr. ELICH. If this man that you met out at the gate comes up there, does he come at a regular time every day?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Not every day.

Mr. ELICH. Does he come up there on foot?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No. He always has a car.

Mr. ELICH. He drives a car.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. ELICH. Are you the only ones who go out to meet him to get the payoff?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No.

Mr. ELICH. How many others go out there with you?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Generally—I was going to say—offhand I might be the only one, me or whoever else had a bet coming up. Everybody wouldn't be there.

Mr. ELICH. Would you say that most of the fellows lose their bets, then?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. The ones I turned over I should say the majority.

Mr. ELICH. What percent do you get of the money that you turn over to the outside?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Nothing on that.

Mr. ELICH. Nothing. Why do you do it?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. If the bets hit, you are out of luck.

Mr. ELICH. What would you call a large bet?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Anything over a dollar.

Mr. ELICH. Anything over a dollar you turn over to them?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Yes.

Mr. ELICH. What is the average bet that is made?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. What do you mean, the fellows in the shop?

Mr. ELICH. Yes.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Most of them are 50-cent bets.

Mr. ELICH. Is it all on horses?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mine is; yes.

Mr. ELICH. Do any of the supervisors bet with you?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No.

Mr. ELICH. Do the supervisors have knowledge that you are accepting those bets?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. It is a funny question. Offhand they have never said anything to me like that.

Mr. ELICH. Do the men who are working in the shop open their scratch sheets in front of supervision?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Not that I know of; no.

Mr. ELICH. Do you have any radios in the plant?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No.

Mr. ELICH. Then you do not know what the results are in the afternoon?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No; not unless somebody comes in on the second shift.

Mr. ELICH. Do you ever call out to get the results?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No.

Mr. ELICH. There is no way for you to get the results?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No.

Mr. ELICH. You do not handle any baseball tickets?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No.

Mr. ELICH. Do you handle any lottery tickets?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No.

Mr. ELICH. About what percentage do you find between the play and the win? If you take in, as you have stated to me you took in, $100 a day—we will let that go for the time being—if you take in $120 a week, approximately what percentage of that is usually returned to the employees in winning bets?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Maybe 75 percent I guess.

Mr. ELICH. Seventy-five percent losers. In other words, out of $120 for the week you figure you are making yourself around $75 to $90 a week?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. No. I wouldn't make that much a week, if 75 percent of the bets hit. I couldn't make that much.

Mr. ELICH. Seventy-five percent of the bets do hit?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I would say an average, yes.

Mr. ELICH. You are not under oath today, Mr. McLaughlin.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That is right.

Mr. ELICH. I think possibly you might be called a little later on. I know a little bit about plant betting. I know something about the plants and I know something that is in this plant, and I don't believe that you are being truthful with this committee. That is all I have to say.

Mr. HALLEY. I will add this: You made one statement to Mr. Elich a few days ago and others did too. I don't know what they are going to say. But now you all come in with the same lawyer, and what has happened is quite apparent to me. You are going to be called back and put under oath. I don't know that bookmaking in a plant is a serious offense, if indeed it is considered any offense. That I don't know, but I do know that giving false testimony under oath before a Senate committee is a felony and I would advise you to consider carefully the testimony you are going to give. We are not interested in the bookmaking aspect of this as much as in the fact that it is a war plant, and the question of whether or not it should be stopped as being a good or bad thing. We are here to get the facts. I strongly advise you to consider carefully whether your testimony under oath is going to be honest or not. That will be all now.

STATEMENT OF JOSEPH MELLO, FAIRLAWN, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Mello, I am asking questions on behalf of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee and we are interested in bookmaking in the Wright plant because it is a war plant. We understand that Mr. Elich here served a subpoena on you a few days ago.

Mr. MELLO. That is true.

Mr. HALLEY. You are here pursuant to that subpoena.

Mr. MELLO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mr. MELLO. 13-26 Orchard Street, Fairlawn, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your job at the plant?

Mr. MELLO. I am a power trucker.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you worked there?

Mr. MELLO. Eleven years.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been making book there?

Mr. MELLO. Well, it was a short time after I came back from the service, maybe it was about a year and a half after I came back from the service.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get started?

Mr. MELLO. One of the fellows who was picking up was leaving and he asked me if I wanted to take it. I didn't know the first thing about it, but I figured if I could make a dollar, I would try it.

Mr. HALLEY. How did it work?

Mr. MELLO. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. How did it work?

Mr. MELLO. Well, right around the plant I met different people who wanted to bet and I would take their bets.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you get the information, the scratch sheets and things?

Mr. MELLO. We got the scratch sheets from Charlie.

Mr. HALLEY. Charlie who?

Mr. MELLO. Astore.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do with the bet he took?

Mr. MELLO. We took the bets.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you turn the money over to? Who booked them?

Mr. MELLO. We did.

Mr. HALLEY. You booked them yourself?

Mr. MELLO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. That is not what you told Mr. Elich the other day.

Mr. MELLO. The other day when Mr. Elich came I was very much disturbed, I think, a little on the nervous side like I am right now.

Mr. HALLEY. You ought to be nervous because you are not telling the truth.

Mr. MELLO. I am telling the truth.

Mr. HALLEY. You come here with Charlie Astore and with Malone and McLaughlin, and you all have the same lawyer.

Mr. MELLO. We all got together.

Mr. HALLEY. You talked it all over, didn't you?

Mr. MELLO. No; not at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Would it be right to say you all have the same story now and have decided to stick to a story?

Mr. MELLO. No; it is not a story. It is the truth.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you keep all your bets?

Mr. MELLO. No. We give the bigger ones away.

Mr. HALLEY. Whom did you give the bigger ones to?

Mr. MELLO. A fellow by the name of Julia.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his full name?

Mr. MELLO. I don't know anything only Julia.

Mr. HALLEY. How did he get there for you to know him?

Mr. MELLO. Through Charlie Astore.

Mr. HALLEY. Does Julia work for Charlie?

Mr. MELLO. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you get your scratch sheets from Charlie?

Mr. MELLO. At the gate or go out and get them.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you get them?

Mr. MELLO. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you go for them?

Mr. MELLO. Either out of the plant or at the gate.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you meet Charlie there?

Mr. MELLO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Himself?

Mr. MELLO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And he would give you scratch sheets?

Mr. MELLO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he ever book any of the big bets?

Mr. MELLO. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you pay him for the scratch sheets?

Mr. MELLO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How much?

Mr. MELLO. Twenty-five cents apiece.

Mr. HALLEY. How many a day did you buy?

Mr. MELLO. Three or four or five.

Mr. HALLEY. How many runners are there at the plant taking bets?

Mr. MELLO. That is a hard question to answer, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your best guess?

Mr. MELLO. On the three shifts?

Mr. HALLEY. Let's take your own shift, which shift are you on?

Mr. MELLO. The first. There are quite a few.

Mr. HALLEY. Over ten?

Mr. MELLO. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Over 50?

Mr. MELLO. Yes, I would say there are over 50.

Mr. HALLEY. Are there over a hundred?

Mr. MELLO. Numerous people picking up all kinds of bets, baseball, numbers, horses.

Mr. HALLEY. Did all the fellows who took horse bets work more or less together?

Mr. MELLO. We would interchange bets with one another, but as far as finances were concerned we all worked on our own.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you all buy scratch sheets from Charlie Astore?

Mr. MELLO. I don't know if they all did. I know I did.

Mr. HALLEY. You know you are not under oath now, but you will be under oath when the committee convenes here. I suppose bookmaking, I am not sure but in New Jersey I think bookmaking is not a very serious offense.

Mr. MELLO. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Petty bookmaking, I don't know if they bother with it at all—

Mr. MELLO. I haven't booked in that plant in the last 5 or 6 months.

Mr. HALLEY. But testifying falsely under oath, of course, is perjury and I hope you understand that.

Mr. MELLO. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Because we are going to bring you back and put you under oath and get the facts. We expect to get them at that time.

Is there anything you would like to say now about that?

Mr. MELLO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You do admit that you told Mr. Elich the other day that you were booking the bets and taking the money to Charlie Astore?

Mr. MELLO. No. He asked me if I gave Charlie money, and I told him "Yes."

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean, any money?

Mr. MELLO. On the scratch sheets.

Mr. HALLEY. He asked you if you booked your daily take.

Mr. MELLO. I am sorry I didn't understand it that way.

Mr. HALLEY. There was no doubt about it. There is nothing about scratch sheets at all.

Mr. MELLO. That is the impression I got.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your average daily take?

Mr. MELLO. I average from $75 to $100 a week; $125 a week.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course, you told Mr. Elich the other day that it was $175 a day. Do you remember that?

Mr. MELLO. No; I don't. I don't remember it. I was in a very bad state of nervousness the other night. I really was.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you nervous about?

Mr. MELLO. I don't know. I just came back from my vacation and to be confronted with something like that it really upset me. I haven't been bothering with it.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it possible you told him $175 a day?

Mr. MELLO. It could be possible. I am not saying it isn't, but it isn't true.

Mr. HALLEY. You told him that it was given to various runners who took it across the street to Astore's, didn't you?

Mr. MELLO. I told him that? I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. He says you did. He made a note of it.

Mr. MELLO. I don't think so, Mr. Elich.

Mr. ELICH. We have another witness here; there were two of us there at the time, Mr. Pat Murray and myself at the time of the interview. It was a very short interview and I asked you approximately how much you took in a day and you indicated it was $175. I asked you to whom did you turn it over, and you said to various runners. I asked you what the various runners did with it and you indicated they took it across the street. Then I asked you if you meant Charlie Astore and you nodded your head that that was right. Isn't that about the total sum of the interview?

Mr. MELLO. Of what I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that much true? Was that said?

Mr. MELLO. What is that, sir?

Mr. HALLEY. What he just said.

Mr. MELLO. About the $175?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MELLO. I wouldn't know, honestly.

Mr. ELICH. I also asked you if you didn't think there would be probably 200 runners, if that would be a fair number, and you indicated that would be about right.

Mr. MELLO. It is hard to say how many there were offhand.

Mr. ELICH. We were guessing.

Mr. MELLO. On the three shifts anyway. You can go to almost anyone, and I guess they would take any kind of a bet.

Mr. HALLEY. You all got together and talked this over, of course?

Mr. MELLO. No, we didn't. The first time I saw these men was this morning.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to hire your lawyer?

Mr. MELLO. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to hire your lawyer?

Mr. MELLO. I called Mr. Astore last night about a lawyer. He said he had gotten one for us.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you ask Mr. Astore to get a lawyer?

Mr. MELLO. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Why would you ask Astore to get you a lawyer?

Mr. MELLO. I figured he had better contacts than I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Why?

Mr. MELLO. As far as lawyers were concerned.

Mr. HALLEY. Why would he have better contacts, because he was a bookmaker?

Mr. MELLO. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Don't you have any knowledge as to whether Astore is a bookmaker?

Mr. MELLO. No; I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you never known Astore to take a bet on a horse race?

Mr. MELLO. Do I know of him taking a bet? No, I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never heard of him taking a bet?

Mr. MELLO. No, I didn't.

Mr. HALLEY. You never saw him?

Mr. MELLO. No, I never did.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you going to stand on that testimony?

Mr. MELLO. Certainly I am.

Mr. HALLEY. I would advise you to think it over very carefully. That will be all right now. Keep yourself available. We are going to call you again on this same subpoena. We are simply adjourning it. Thank you for coming in.

STATEMENT OF CHARLES ASTORE, LODI, N. J., ACCOMPANIED BY JAMES V. TOSCANO, JR., ATTORNEY

Mr. TOSCANO. I decided to represent Mr. Astore. Is that all right?

Mr. HALLEY. Confining it to one client?

Mr. TOSCANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. ASTORE. Charles Astore.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mr. ASTORE. My home address?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ASTORE. 395 Westerville Place, Lodi, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. ASTORE. I am in the cab business and I own a tavern.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is your tavern?

Mr. ASTORE. 6 Charles Street, Lodi.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is your taxi business located?

Mr. ASTORE. 11 Terhune Avenue.

Mr. HALLEY. Lodi, N. J.?

Mr. ASTORE. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that located close to the Wright Aeronautical plant?

Mr. ASTORE. On the Lodi side.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been arrested?

Mr. ASTORE. About 8 years ago I had a little argument in the tavern and I was arrested for it.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you convicted?

Mr. ASTORE. I paid $25 for disorderly.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever arrested on any other occasion?

Mr. ASTORE. At one time I was arrested, my brother-in-law was on trial and I walked into a place and they thought I went there to bother a witness, but I didn't even know the witness was there. But it was just dropped afterwards. They held me and dropped it.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your brother-in-law on trial for?

Mr. ASTORE. Robbery in Pennsylvania.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his name?

Mr. ASTORE. Ralph Freeko.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you publish scratch sheets?

Mr. ASTORE. No; I buy them.

Mr. HALLEY. Who do you buy them from?

Mr. ASTORE. A confectionary store on Main Avenue, Passaic.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you need them for?

Mr. ASTORE. Sometimes different places I get them for them, and sometimes they call me up and tell me to get some for them, and I pick them up. I send a cab driver or I go.

Mr. HALLEY. Why do you handle those scratch sheets? What is in it for you?

Mr. ASTORE. I make daily trips to race tracks with the cabs, I have special rates, so I buy a dozen scratch sheets. The fellows I know, they use them on their way to the track. I make trips to the ball games.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known John McLaughlin?

Mr. ASTORE. Well, I would say a couple of years. I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you meet him?

Mr. ASTORE. When did I meet him? When he went to work in the plant I worked in the plant also.

Mr. HALLEY. What plant?

Mr. ASTORE. Wright's.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you work at Wright?

Mr. ASTORE. The last part of the war, near the end of the war.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you work there?

Mr. ASTORE. About 4 months, approximately 4 months.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your job there?

Mr. ASTORE. I worked on the third shift, nights; they called it ventilation work, fixing ventilators.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet Wiley Malone?

Mr. ASTORE. During that time, about that time.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he also work in the plant at that time?

Mr. ASTORE. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet Joseph Mello?

Mr. ASTORE. I would say a couple of years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to meet Mello?

Mr. ASTORE. I had a lot of fellows come down in the cab office hanging around, and they would play cards, and we used to have maybe a card game on week ends, a little pinochle, maybe a little poker and I have a parking lot there, you see. He parks his car in my lot. I have a parking lot where they park cars. That is around the property where the cab company is.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you do any business with them?

Mr. ASTORE. With what?

Mr. HALLEY. With Mello or Malone or McLaughlin?

Mr. ASTORE. They park their car there. As I said, I have taken them to the race track, and they have used the cab. They come around and play cards like everybody else. They hang around there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know that they make book in the plant?

Mr. ASTORE. Oh, yes, I know—I don't know who makes book, but I know that book was being made in the plant.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you know that?

Mr. ASTORE. By hearsay, and I worked in the plant and I saw it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know that Malone was making book in the plant?

Mr. ASTORE. He led me to believe that he used to every now and then. That is what I was led to believe.

Mr. HALLEY. In fact, you knew that is what they wanted the scratch sheets for, isn't that right?

Mr. ASTORE. That is probably what they wanted them for. Other fellows used to get them too; not only them. Maybe one fellow would come out and I would bring them to the gate.

Mr. HALLEY. You would walk over to the gate and hand them the scratch sheet?

Mr. ASTORE. No. Sometimes one side of the building, sometimes another side of the building, wherever they could come out.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever made book?

Mr. ASTORE. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Never?

Mr. ASTORE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any part of it?

Mr. ASTORE. If you want to say, a couple of years ago I didn't make book, but some fellow used to give me some bets and I used to give them to a fellow by the name of Jimmie who used to work with some company doing some repair work. That was a couple of years ago. He used to give me a few dollars for going to that trouble.

Mr. HALLEY. What part did you do? What trouble did you take?

Mr. ASTORE. I just gave him the bets that anybody else would give me. I gave them to him.

Mr. HALLEY. Who would give you the bets?

Mr. ASTORE. Anybody.

Mr. HALLEY. People from the plant you mean?

Mr. ASTORE. Some would ask me if I could get a bet in for them, and I said I would give it to this fellow Jimmie.

Mr. HALLEY. How recently have you done that?

Mr. ASTORE. Quite a while.

Mr. HALLEY. A year?

Mr. ASTORE. I would say more than that, because I don't stay there any more around the cab office. I go there in the morning for a while. Then I go to the tavern and I stay there all afternoon. About noon-time I go to the tavern. I have boys who stay down at the cab office, the drivers.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever helped make bets for McLaughlin to help him out, passing it over to Jimmie?

Mr. ASTORE. That was before. When Jimmie was working there I didn't know him. He worked for a different company. This company did repair work for the company, an outside contractor. He used to pick up all the bets.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you never made book yourself?

Mr. ASTORE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever accept horse bets?

Mr. ASTORE. Just in that way, where I took it and then gave it to this fellow.

Mr. HALLEY. What is this fellow's name, Jimmie what?

Mr. ASTORE. I just knew him by Jimmie, and he worked for this company.

Mr. HALLEY. For what company?

Mr. ASTORE. Mahoney Troast Co.

Mr. HALLEY. What business are they in?

Mr. ASTORE. Construction.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you spell "Troast"?

Mr. ASTORE. T-r-o-a-s-t.

Mr. HALLEY. You pick up the bets an turn them over?

Mr. ASTORE. They would give them to me to give to him.

Mr. HALLEY. To give to whom?

Mr. ASTORE. To give to Jimmie.

Mr. HALLEY. Who would give you these bets, people from the plant?

Mr. ASTORE. Different individuals, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long ago was that?

Mr. ASTORE. That company left a little over 3 years ago. They left after the war, right after the war. I don't remember exactly because there was no reason for me to try to remember it.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you going to state that within the last year you haven't accepted any bets on horses?

Mr. ASTORE. I didn't book any bets.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you accept them and pass them on to others?

Mr. ASTORE. If you would ask me—I want to clear myself. If you ask me to give something to him and pass it through my hands, I wouldn't call that taking any bets.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you do that? Did you take bets and pass them on to somebody else?

Mr. ASTORE. No; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't do that?

Mr. ASTORE. I didn't take any bets.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you take money from somebody to give to somebody else within the last year?

Mr. ASTORE. Well, for some other reasons.

Mr. HALLEY. For horse bets?

Mr. ASTORE. I probably have taken money and given it to someone to pay someone. I probably have, I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you taken money from anybody at the Wright plant to give to somebody else?

Mr. ASTORE. I do everything down there.

Mr. HALLEY. No; I mean take money to place on horse bets.

Mr. ASTORE. I can handle money. I cash checks. As I say, we go to the race track and some fellows borrow money from me. Sometimes being to the track together. I take them to the track. Money is handled. In my parking lot I handle money. Some fellow used to pass by there and pick up bets. Whether he picked them up, I don't pick them up. He used to take them. If they gave any bets to him I don't know anything about that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he pick them up at your place?

Mr. ASTORE. No; not in my place. He probably hung around the street. There is more than one side to the plant. I am on the side of the plant. There is the front of the plant that they can go out and all that stuff.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any questions?

Mr. ELICH. You say you furnished sheets to these individuals; is that right?

Mr. ASTORE. Only when they asked me.

Mr. ELICH. That is right. How much do you charge for them?

Mr. ASTORE. Well, if I give a guy a couple of scratch sheets he gives me a couple of dollars because he pays for the cab fare.

Mr. ELICH. I see.

Mr. ASTORE. I don't go all the time. Sometimes I send my boy over.

Mr. ELICH. Either you or your boy or your taxi stand—how many sheets would you say you furnish to the Wright Aeronautical plant per day?

Mr. ASTORE. I would say approximately 20 to 25, but then there are individuals who come there and buy them from me in the cab office.

Mr. ELICH. The other day in serving the subpoena on you I asked you whether or not the chief of police of Lodi or the chief of police of Wood-Ridge or the two of them together came to you about 1 year ago asking you to put a stop to gambling in the Wright aeronautical plant, and you indicated this was not so. Is that true or false?

Mr. ASTORE. What was not so, that he asked me?

Mr. ELICH. That what I said to you was not so, that they had never come to see you about stopping gambling in the Wright plant.

Mr. ASTORE. Nobody saw me because I have no power to stop it.

Mr. ELICH. They didn't come to you and ask you for your assistance?

Mr. ASTORE. They didn't ask me; no.

Mr. ELICH. Do you know whether or not they asked anybody else?

Mr. ASTORE. They asked me if there was any gambling going on in the cab office pertaining to horses, and I said "No." They said, "If there is, you will cut that out." Of course during the war there was someone else hanging around there taking bets off the street, and he laid down the law to him and at the same time told me if there was any to cut that out. So I don't bother with it.

Mr. ELICH. Did you tell me when I served the subpoena on you that during the war certain individuals used to bring out bets to you because they were unable to go to a bookmaker themselves, and you knew a party that you could do them a favor and place the bet for them?

Mr. ASTORE. Some fellow used to come around, and he used to do business with them, you see. Sometimes he wasn't there, and they would hand it to me to give it to him.

Mr. ELICH. You also indicated at that time that there were some bosses and executives who gave you bets, is that right?

Mr. ASTORE. You say bosses.

Mr. ELICH. I mean part of management, supervisors.

Mr. ASTORE. There were at that time a lot of foremen, during the war.

Mr. ELICH. And a lot of them gave you bets to place for them?

Mr. ASTORE. They would say, "Will you give this to this fellow," and I would say all right.

Mr. ELICH. You would do that for them?

Mr. ASTORE. Yes.

Mr. ELICH. Mr. Halley asked you a while ago whether or not you accepted any bets or any money from various individuals. This is along the same line. Have you ever had anybody deliver to you a package from the Wright aeronautical plant, the contents of which might not be known to you, a brown package or a small bag?

Mr. ASTORE. On several occasions people have left stuff in my office, saying that whenever a fellow comes out for his car to give him the package. A number of time I knew what was in the package, and a number of times I did not.

Mr. ELICH. Would you say that you knew what was in the package?

Mr. ASTORE. Some of them were taking different scraps that the company would ordinarily throw away. They were taking it home. Sometimes like pieces of wood, special kinds of wood, special kinds of, say, stainless steel that they used to make rings with and stuff like that. They used to take it out.

Mr. ELICH. Do you know Salvatore Maretti?

Mr. ASTORE. No.

Mr. ELICH. Do you know Willie Moretti?

Mr. ASTORE. No, sir.

Mr. ELICH. You have never talked to either one of them either by telephone or in person?

Mr. ASTORE. No.

Mr. ELICH. That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Your subpoena will be continued for appearance before the committee and we will let you know when to come.

Mr. ASTORE. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. You are under subpoena and you still remain under subpoena.

Mr. ASTORE. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. We will let you know when the committee wants to see you?

Mr. ASTORE. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

STATEMENT OF KENNETH SCHMIDT, TEANECK, N. J., INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS MANAGER, WRIGHT AERONAUTICAL CORP., WOOD-RIDGE, N. J.

Mr. ELICH. Your name is Mr. Kenneth Schmidt, S-c-h-m-i-d-t.

Mr. SCHMIDT. That is right. 470 Sagamore Avenue, Teaneck, N. J.

Mr. ELICH. You are the industrial relations director?

Mr. SCHMIDT. Industrial relations manager, Wright Aeronautical Corp., Wood-Ridge, N. J.

Mr. ELICH. Would you explain as to what information you might have which might indicate that there is gambling going on in the Wright aeronautical plant at Wood-Ridge, N. J.?

Mr. SCHMIDT. The only information that I have has come from Mr. Sutherland, and as a result of that information, in the latter part of the summer of 1948 Mr. Sutherland and myself went to Chief Bugnon of the police. The three of us went over to the prosecutor's office and I talked to Prosecutor Winne and then we went into, I think he is the chief of detectives, Chief, I think, Orecchio. I think he is chief of county detectives. We went over the situation with him and gave him the names of some people whom we thought might be making book or gambling. We were called back, and he suggested that an operative be put in the plant. He made the arrangements with Pinkerton and an operative came in there for approximately a week. Upon the completion of his tour of duty in the plant, Mr. Sutherland, Chief Bugnon, and myself called over Chief Orecchio's office and parts of a report were read to us, indicating that some of the people whose names we had given had acted in a suspicious manner. The report as I remember—I might say here I was never able to get a copy of the report—indicated that he had not seen bets being made but there was suspicious actions.

Toward the middle part of January of 1949, I received a letter from Prosecutor Winne, saying that the charge that Pinkerton was making was $110.90 and that he would appreciate being reimbursed for that. He asked that the reimbursement be made in cash rather than check, and that was done by me personally on March 3, 1949. We continued to compile information, and approximately 60 days ago I went to Mr. Stammeler who is I believe special attorney general appointed by Mr. Parsons, the attorney general. I gave him all the information that I had, answered all the questions that he asked me, and he said that he would get in touch with me. Approximately a week later one of his investigators came into my office, which is located so that you could look out of the window and see the place that Mr. Astore runs across the street in Lodi. We sat there until I guess it was 3 o'clock and saw no one whom we recognized coming from the plant who were over there that day.

About a week later another investigator whom Mr. Stammeler had borrowed from the ABC came in and said that he had been investigating conditions around the vicinity and indicated that he had found nothing whatsoever of a suspicious nature.

I subsequently went to Mr. Stammeler and indicated to him that we were not at all satisfied with the action that he was taking and suggested that we were going to call Chief Bugnon and ask him to come down and arrest the individual whom we thought was carrying on in the plant. We had quite a lot of discussion about that. Mr. Stammeler indicated that he felt that if that action was taken by us—and mind you, he did not say that we shouldn't take it—he said it probably would upset the appletart for the investigation that we were making. He spoke of some rather well known figures in supposedly gambling circles. He indicated to me that the place across the street, while to us it appeared to be a very important place, was in the scheme of things a relatively unimportant place, that the moneys that were placed on the horses went from there to some other place, and they were in the process of finding out where.

We talked about getting an operative in, and that night I made that suggestion that the State of New Jersey Department of Health had been in and made a survey and that it might be possible to have someone come in representing the State department of health. He thought that that might be a pretty good idea. He called me the following morning and said that he would have difficulty doing that, and, subsequently, I went down there again and at that time he said that he was going to give us his best man as soon as he was relieved of the assignment he was then working on. Subsequent to that he advised me that that man could not be released, and the last conversation that I had with him was that he was working on getting an operative to come into the plant. Mr. Stammeler indicated to me that he thought it would probably take 60 to 90 days for a man within the plant to get the true story on what was going on.

The last request that I had from Mr. Stammeler was for the list of all of the past union officers—and by past I mean those who were defeated in the last election—as well as the list of current union officers, giving the names, addresses, and age. I have that list. I have not sent it to him as yet, but it is ready to go.

Mr. ELICH. How many people do you believe are engaged in gambling activities in the Wright plant over a 24-hour period in view of the fact that I understand you do have three shifts?

Mr. SCHMIDT. I can't answer that. I don't know.

Mr. ELICH. Would you be able even to hazard a guess?

Mr. SCHMIDT. No.

Mr. ELICH. How many people have been reported to you as being allegedly engaged in gambling?

Mr. SCHMIDT. By Mr. Sutherland?

Mr. ELICH. From all sources.

Mr. SCHMIDT. Certainly no more than 20.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. ELICH. Back on the record now for awhile.

Mr. Schmidt, has the company or management ever discussed the manner in which the management might proceed against these people who accept bets in the plant and what the union attitude might be in the event that individuals are found to be accepting bets?

Mr. SCHMIDT. Several times I have talked to the then president of the local 669, and there was no agreement of any kind about this but the indications were that the union would have no dealings with anyone who was found participating in gambling at the plant.

Mr. ELICH. The question arises that the management at this time apparently does not have anything in writing which would indicate that there was a meeting of the minds between any one or any part of any one or all the unions that might be representing employees in connection with the company.

Mr. SCHMIDT. There is nothing in writing.

Mr. ELICH. You are still under subpoena, and in the event we want you again we will call you. I don't think it is necessary to hold onto you due to the fact that you have made arrangements to go on vacation, and it is the vacation period. In discussing it with Mr. Halley, he has indicated that you should be allowed to go and enjoy yourself.

Mr. SCHMIDT. The reason that we pursued the course we did was simply that it was our feeling at all times that if we were to discharge an individual or individuals, it would not stop the source of gambling, and we have at all times felt that we were under considerable handicap with a drop located immediately across from the plant. It was for that reason that we asked for assistance from, first, the local police and then the county police and then the State police.

Mr. ELICH. Does the management have anything in writing at this time wherein they have submitted anything in written form to either the chief of police of Lodi, the chief of police of Wood-Ridge, or any prosecuting agency, including the State of New Jersey?

Mr. SCHMIDT. No.

Mr. ELICH. Mr. Schmidt, do you feel that any one individual might be held responsible for all gambling within the plant?

Mr. SCHMIDT. No.

Mr. ELICH. Where do you feel that that responsibility belongs?

Mr. SCHMIDT. With supervision.

Mr. ELICH. When you speak of supervision you are talking about the vast areas throughout the plant which is, generally speaking, one solid floor wherein supervisors are located in various areas? Is that right? I want to establish what supervisor you are referring to, the supervisor down at the milling machine, the annealing shop, the assembly department, and so forth.

Mr. SCHMIDT. My answer is all levels of supervision.

Mr. ELICH. All supervisors pertaining to the different parts and departments, then?

Mr. SCHMIDT. That is right.

Mr. ELICH. That is all.

STATEMENT OF EMILE E. BUGNON, CHIEF OF POLICE, WOOD-RIDGE, N. J.

Mr. ELICH. State your name and address.

Mr. BUGNON. Emile E. Bugnon, 569 Anderson Avenue. Wood-Ridge, N. J., chief of police. I am in my twenty-fourth year as chief of police.

Mr. ELICH. As the chief of police, the Wright aeronautical plant comes under your jurisdiction?

Mr. BUGNON. That is right.

Mr. ELICH. Have you ever had any complaints from management that they have a considerable amount of gambling in the Wright aeronautical plant?

Mr. BUGNON. Yes, sir; I have.

Mr. ELICH. How many times?

Mr. BUGNON. I have been over there on four occasions.

Mr. ELICH. On those occasions whom did you talk to?

Mr. BUGNON. I was called one time by Mr. Sutherland, who is in charge of plant protection, who informed me that an individual by the name of either Astor or Astore was coming over from the other side of the street over onto company property. He told me he thought he came from Lodi. I told Mr. Sutherland that I would take care of that. What did he think he was doing? They thought he was something to do probably with some gambling or picking up some bets or something. So I went over to the Lodi police headquarters and contacted Chief Witte. I told Chief Witte there was an individual by the name of Astore or Astor from his town coming over on to the Wright property and I wanted him warned to stay the hell away from there. Witte assured me that he would get hold of this fellow and have him keep off the place, and I checked with Sutherland later and he didn't go near there.

Then on another occasion I was called back there. Mr. Sutherland had information that a chap by the name of McLaughlin and a fellow by the name of Mello were acting suspicious picking up envelopes and talking to fellows either in the washroom or in different parts of the plant. This fellow Mello had the run of the plant, being that he operated I think one of those little automobiles that they use for hauling, those automatic trucks. So I went over there and I said to Al, "Call these fellows in here, let's get them in here and talk to them." The union president came in, a fellow by the name of Bambarra. I had had experience with Bambarra during a strike we had there. I had warned him about certain rough stuff that was going on, stoning of cars and things of that sort. Rocco Bambarra was the president of the union at that time. We questioned these two fellows, and of course they denied it in pretty strong language. I called them a couple of G. D. liars. I told them if we had any more reports of anything like that the ax would fall on them. Bambarra promised me that nothing like that would go on any more.

On another occasion I received a call from Mr. Sutherland giving me the number of a car that had come over on the property and gone near one of the windows—that would be on the south side of the plant there—and I told him I would be right over there. On the way over, going down Passaic Street parked over on the Lodi side in front of one of the lunch cars was this automobile. The automobile being in Lodi, I couldn't go over and grab it over there. I could have I suppose, but I know, it is a courtesy to go to the chief of police in whose territory the thing is. So I went over there and asked Witte if he would send over a man to pick up this fellow, which they did. They brought in this young Italian fellow. I asked him what he was doing over there. Of course, he was just riding in there. I said, "Did somebody hand you a package out of the window?" He said, "I didn't get no package."

I said, "You are a damned liar because you were seen, and several people saw you. I want to tell you something, you are only a young chap. If you want to get into some trouble you just try that again."

I heard from Sutherland that that had stopped.

We went, I think it was in December 1948, we had a conference with the prosecutor, Mr. Schmidt, Chief Oneccchio and myself, and we made arrangements to see if we could get some information out of there. The prosecutor's office hired I believe Pinkerton, I am not sure. They had him in there for 3 or 4 days. The prosecutor's office has that report.

Mr. ELICH. How many people do you feel, chief, might be accepting books in the Wright plant?

Mr. BUCNON. Well, I couldn't answer that truthfully, John. I tell you why. I had some experiences in there during the war of course. I picked up some fellows in there. We had a type-off one day. I happened to be one of the members of the war price and rationing board for that territory. Of course it took a lot of time, but I didn't mind doing it. I had a report from Brown one day—Brown at that time was in charge of plant protection—that there was a lad in there selling sugar stamps, shoe stamps, gasoline rationing stamps, and tire certificates. So we went in the plant there and, of course, you have to be careful in there. You can't question a fellow and ask him what the other fellow is doing, because if the union gets it, it is just too bad for him. We went in there and made this fellow open up his tool box and sure enough, gasoline stamps were all in an envelope, perfectly legitimate stamps. We asked him where he got them. Of course, his story was that he used to meet a fellow on the side of River Road, which is between South Hackensack and the river. We parked there for 6 nights with him waiting for this fellow to come along and sell him those stamps. Of course, that was a lot of baloney. We never saw him. If you go in a place, like if I walked in the door there, everybody in the plant knows I am in there. I truthfully couldn't tell you how many I think have been picked up. I don't doubt if this gang is cleaned up, there is a bunch in there ready to take over. That is my personal opinion. I may be wrong, but I think I am right.

Mr. ELICH. Do you feel Astore is the boy who has been accepting the bets across the street?

Mr. BUGNON. That is that Garfield taxi. That is where they have been going.

Mr. ELICH. In other words, the taxi company is a front for it?

Mr. BUGNON. No. There are taxies at the place.

Mr. ELICH. He does run taxies?

Mr. BUGNON. I think they are yellow and black; yes. That is a peculiar set-up there. I don't know if you noticed it.

Of course your main plant is here—

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. ELICH. All right, Chief, that is all.

STATEMENT OF HENRY WITTE, CHIEF OF POLICE, LODI, N. J.

Mr. ELICH. Will you be so kind as to give the reporter your name?

Mr. WITTE. Henry Witte.

Mr. ELICH. Address?

Mr. WITTE. 80 Hunter Street, Lodi, N. J.

Mr. ELICH. Chief, we are conducting an investigation in regard to gambling in the Wright Aeronautical plant, and I have developed information which indicates that probably a Charlie Astore might be involved or engaged in accepting bets from this plant. Do you have any information in regard to activities?

Mr. WITTE. Not as taking bets. Do you want me to continue?

Mr. ELICH. Yes.

Mr. WITTE. At one time we went there, and we got information that there was some card gambling going on. I went with a captain of detectives whose name is Carbenetti. We walked in the joint like that. Later on we got more information that there was supposed to be betting. We went down there, but we couldn't find anything.

Mr. ELICH. When you say "we"—

Mr. WITTE. Captain Carbenetti and I. Later on Captain Carbenetti—this is I will say in the last 4 months—the prosecutor's office of Bergen County, detective DeLear—I don't know how to spell that one—and detective Jimmie Milligan and Captain Carbenetti went there in regard to horse racing. We didn't find anything.

They made another trip there later on about 2 weeks afterward, Captain Carbenetti and I think DeLear again, and still they couldn't find anything.

Mr. ELICH. Do you feel personally, as chief of police, that he is not making book at this point?

Mr. WITTE. I would say that I think that he himself—I don't know. If he is taking any bets it would be over alongside the plant, if he is, which I don't know, because where his place is situated it is right across.

Mr. ELICH. That is right.

Mr. WITTE. Once Chief Bugnon came in and asked me to not go to Wright plant in the front, by the front of it. So I got hold of him and said, "If you go over there and are not working, they are going to knock you off for being on private property."

But there have been rumors that there have been bets going across back and forth. There may be.

Mr. ELICH. A rumor that packages are picked up through the fence? Have you heard about that?

Mr. WITTE. Yes, sir.

Mr. ELICH. And also that automobiles have driven up and accepted packages from various employes?

Mr. WITTE. No; I didn't get that.

Mr. ELICH. We have had that, that it has been passed through the fence.

Mr. WITTE. I have heard that, but I never saw it.

Mr. ELICH. But that would be outside of your jurisdiction because it is across the street?

Mr. WITTE. It is the boundary line.

Mr. ELICH. In other words, the street that goes around the plant where Charlie Astore's place is located, one half of that street is in Lodi and the other half is in Wood-Ridge?

Mr. WITTE. That is right. You see by Astore's place there are cars, a number of them. First of all, there is Astore's place, then there is a flower shop, then there is a novelty shop, then there is a taxi station. Next to him is the lunch wagon, a tavern. There is a parking lot there. Next to that is another parking lot and a lunch wagon. Next to that is another parking lot and a lunch wagon. Cars go in there. People come out of that main gate across there. Christ, you wouldn't know. They could take packages out and slip them or talk to somebody right on my side and give it to them, unless you happened to be there. It is like everything else, sure they bet. I think they bet, I mean. The question as you say, is, you must have the evidence.

Mr. ELICH. Have you ever received any written notice from the Wright Aeronautical plant that they had a situation where gambling existed in their plants?

Mr. WITTE. No.

Mr. ELICH. You never have?

Mr. WITTE. No.

Mr. ELICH. That is all, Chief.

STATEMENT OF WILLIAM B. MALONE, PATTERSON, N. J.

Mr. ELICH. State your full name and address.

Mr. MALONE. William B. Malone, 50 Cross Street, Patterson, N. J.

Mr. ELICH. You are an employee of the Wright Aeronautical Co.?

Mr. MALONE. That is right.

Mr. ELICH. You were served with a subpoena by me which indicates that the committee is looking into alleged gambling in the Wright Aeronautical plant. Would you explain what knowledge you might have of any gambling that is going on in that plant?

Mr. MALONE. I haven't got no knowledge of any going on.

Mr. ELICH. Have you accepted any bets yourself?

Mr. MALONE. No, sir.

Mr. ELICH. None whatsoever?

Mr. MALONE. None whatsoever.

Mr. ELICH. You have no knowledge of anybody else's accepting any?

Mr. MALONE. No.

Mr. ELICH. You haven't bet on any horses?

Mr. MALONE. No, sir. I bet on them at the track, where I get some good odds.

Mr. ELICH. What occupation do you have in the Wright Aeronautical plant?

Mr. MALONE. I am an inspector.

Mr. ELICH. That would be in the inspection department then. Is that small parts?

Mr. MALONE. Small parts, the manufacturing crib.

Mr. ELICH. Have you discussed this matter with anybody before you came here to testify today since you were served with the subpoena?

Mr. MALONE. I haven't.

Mr. ELICH. Not with any one?

Mr. MALONE. No.

Mr. ELICH. Did you talk with Willie Astore about it?

Mr. MALONE. Beg your pardon?

Mr. ELICH. Did you talk with Charlie Astore about it?

Mr. MALONE. No.

Mr. ELICH. Did you talk to John McLaughlin about it?

Mr. MALONE. No.

Mr. ELICH. To Joseph Mello?

Mr. MALONE. No.

Mr. ELICH. Did you talk to this attorney who was supposed to represent you today?

Mr. MALONE. I told him, I said I have a subpoena, but I just want to find out why I got it and why my name was mentioned.

Mr. ELICH. Did you hire him to represent you?

Mr. MALONE. The four of us were supposed to chip in figuring we would save money.

Mr. ELICH. Whose idea was it to chip in and hire him?

Mr. MALONE. All of us. We figured we couldn't afford one apiece.

Mr. ELICH. You all met at once and said—

Mr. MALONE. That is right, let's all chip in $10 or $15 apiece.

Mr. ELICH. You are not under oath today, but we may subpoena you at a later date at which time you will be under oath. Bookmaking is not a serious offense. However, a person committing perjury before the committee might turn out to be rather serious. Therefore, you want to think that over a little bit between now and the time that you are sworn because there is a little question in my mind as to whether or not you are telling the truth when you say that you have not been bookmaking.

Mr. MALONE. Me? Oh, no. You can bet all the tea in China on that.

Mr. ELICH. How long have you been an employee of the Wright Aeronautical plant?

Mr. MALONE. Ten years.

Mr. ELICH. You have not accepted any bets during that full 10-year period?

Mr. MALONE. Oh, yes. The first year I ever worked at Wright's, the first year I sold a couple of chances at football games; that is all.

Mr. ELICH. That is 10 years ago?

Mr. MALONE. Before I went into the service.

Mr. ELICH. When did you go in the service?

Mr. MALONE. 1941.

Mr. ELICH. When did you come out of the service?

Mr. MALONE. 1943.

Mr. ELICH. Since 1943 to this date you can say that you have not accepted a single bet in regard to horse races, baseball games, or lotteries or pools of any kind?

Mr. MALONE. That is right.

Mr. ELICH. That is all.

Mr. MALONE. Can I go to Florida now?

Mr. ELICH. Take this off the record a minute.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. ELICH. Let the record show that although a subpoena has been issued, this man has denied that he has accepted any bets of any kind. There definitely is a question in the mind of the speaker as to whether or not he is telling the truth. However, due to the fact that he has sent his wife and family to Florida and is on vacation, it is believed that he may be called before the committee at the end of his vacation, which will be 2 weeks from this last Monday.

Mr. MALONE. All right. Thank you.

(Whereupon, at 4:30 p. m., the committee adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.)

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1950

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE,
New York, N. Y.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

The committee met, pursuant to call of the chairman, at 10:55 a. m., in room 2804, United States Courthouse, Foley Square, New York, N. Y., Senator Estes Kefauver, chairman of the committee, presiding.

Present: Senators Kefauver and Tobey.

Also present: Rudolph Halley, chief counsel; Boris Kostelanetz, assistant counsel; John F. Elich, Patrick Murray, Thomas E. Myers, and John Murphy, investigators; Nat K. Perlow, of Senator Kefauver's staff; Nathan Frankel, c. p. a., New York committee staff.

Irving H. Saypol, United States attorney, southern district of New York.

Judge Robert P. Patterson, chairman, Commission of American Bar Association to cooperate with Senate Crime Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

Mr. Sullivan, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give the committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. SULLIVAN. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JOHN T. SULLIVAN, NEW YORK, N. Y., REPRESENTING WILLIAM MORETTI

The CHAIRMAN. All right, gentlemen. We will get started.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, Mr. Sullivan?

Mr. SULLIVAN. John T. Sullivan.

Mr. HALLEY. Whom do you represent?

Mr. SULLIVAN. William Moretti.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have with you a statement from a doctor?

Mr. SULLIVAN. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the doctor's full name?

Mr. SULLIVAN. The doctor's name is Theodore Morici, 80 Howe Avenue, Passaic, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. Is the statement in affidavit form?

Mr. SULLIVAN. The statement is not in affidavit form; however, I saw the doctor sign it.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, but is there any reason why the doctor should not produce an affidavit?

Mr. SULLIVAN. None whatever.

No, sir. I didn't think it was going to be necessary that the doctor for the purpose of the hearing before the committee that it be put in affidavit form.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the doctor's name?

Mr. SULLIVAN. Theodore Morici.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is he practicing as a doctor?

Mr. SULLIVAN. Passaic, N. J., Senator.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you also represent Joseph Adonis?

Mr. SULLIVAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Joe Doto?

Mr. SULLIVAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you present the letter which you have to the committee?

The CHAIRMAN. Letter of October 10, 1950:

This is to certify that Mr. William Moretti is under my care at St. Mary's Hospital, Passaic, N. J.

He was admitted to the hospital about 1:10 a. m. October 9, 1950, with severe hemorrhage of the nose. I was called to the hospital about 1 a. m. and found him full of blood in his face, mouth, and clothes. His nose was packed and admitted.

His blood pressure at that time was nearly 200/100.

It appears to me that the—

P-i-s-t-a—

Mr. SULLIVAN. May I see it, Senator?

Mr. HALLEY. Suppose you read it.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, I will read it.

The CHAIRMAN. Begin with the third paragraph.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Very well.

It appears to me that the epistasis—apparently a medical term—

was a sign for him to be hospitalized, for if the hemorrhage had not occurred from his nose, he would have developed a cerebral bleeding which would have been fatal or cause a hemoplegia.

In my opinion, I believe that he must rest in bed for at least 1 week to relieve the congestion and hypertension. He must not have any commitment whatsoever for his well-being for fear of another occurrence.

Yours truly,

THEODORE MORICI, M. D.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Sullivan, under ordinary circumstances, as counsel, I would be prepared to recommend to the committee that they accept such a statement on its face. However, the committee has just received a telegram from Dr. Morici, the same doctor, in which he states that Mrs. Joseph Doto, another of our witnesses, is also his patient and also unable to testify. In view of the fact that this same doctor turns up representing both Willie Moretti and Mrs. Adonis, who is Mrs. Doto, I cannot recommend to the committee that they accept unsworn statements, and under the circumstances it is my recommendation that unless Dr. Morici is willing to come in here and explain just what the situation is to the committee, both witnesses must be required to appear.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Well—

Mr. HALLEY. You may argue that to the committee.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, may I argue that.

The CHAIRMAN. Here is a telegram I have just received from Cliff-side Park, N. J., to the chairman.

Received your telegram but unable to appear under doctor's orders. My physician will wire you details.

Mrs. JOSEPH DOTO.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I of course have no knowledge whatever of such dual treatment. It could very well be that he was a doctor for both people. There is no doubt that Moretti is in the hospital bleeding profusely from the nose. The order of the hospital can show that. Moretti retained me for the purpose of representing him before this committee, and he was very, very anxious to come here. He is not seeking in any way—Moretti was glad to take a subpoena and wanted to come here. Ordinarily in court a certificate such as this would be accepted without an affidavit if this man is a practicing physician, and the mere fact that he may represent both this other woman and this man doesn't seem to me to invalidate this certificate.

Mr. HALLEY. In an attempt to be fair but yet hewing to the line, the circumstances are such that I think the committee is entitled to get a detailed explanation from the doctor.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose we have the doctor appear as a witness.

Senator TOBEY. Or an alternative, Mr. Chairman, what about having a doctor in our behalf go to see whether it is a fake or whether it is genuine or not and make a report to us. Also what is the reputation, Mr. Witness, of this man Morici. Is he a doctor that deals in statements of this sort to benefit certain people under indictment, or is he a reputable physician?

The CHAIRMAN. The chairman doesn't know Dr. Morici and I don't know if anyone here does.

Mr. HALLEY. May I have the benefit of a short conference with the committee?

(Discussion off the record.)

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Sullivan, how long does it take to get here from Passaic?

Mr. SULLIVAN. I think he could get here by automobile in an hour, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose we subpoena Dr. Morici to come in at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. Halley.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I will call. I am sure he is a reputable physician with connections in many hospitals in New Jersey. I know nothing about him personally, so I can't testify, but I shall call and seek to get him. I am pretty sure you will get him here.

Mr. HALLEY. There is no implication that he is not, Mr. Sullivan. The only point is that the circumstances are such that the committee must get that explanation from the doctor himself. No inferences ought to be drawn that he is not or that he is. We just don't know.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I will call and will report to you as to what my success is.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you advise him that the committee would like for him to appear at 2 o'clock, and if that isn't satisfactory, then some time between 2 and 4 this afternoon.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you report back to the committee?

Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, I will.

The CHAIRMAN. While we are on the subject, here is a letter from Mrs. Doto saying that she is—

Not well enough to come to court today, but when I am able I will let you know. Please write me whether this is satisfactory to you.

I think we should notify Mrs. Doto that her letter is not satisfactory and the committee wants to see her, unless her doctor furnishes better evidence of her illness. Will you see that she is notified?

(Discussion off the record.)

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Silver, will you stand and be sworn? Do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give the committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. SILVER. I do.

TESTIMONY OF HENRY SILVER, NEW YORK N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. SILVER. Charles Henry Silver.

Mr. HALLEY. And your address, please?

Mr. SILVER. 101 Cooper Street, New York City.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the G. & R. Trading Co.?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; I did. I have some withholding slips I think.

Mr. HALLEY. You once worked for the G. & R. Trading Co.; is that right?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that in 1945?

Mr. SILVER. Yes, sir; 1945.

Mr. HALLEY. You have brought with you some income tax withholding slips?

Mr. SILVER. Yes. I brought what I was asked.

Mr. HALLEY. They were furnished to you?

Mr. SILVER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you turn them over to the committee at this time?

Mr. SILVER. Yes, sir. These are the ones that I showed the other gentlemen when they talked to me.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you first get your job with the G. & R. Trading Co.?

Mr. SILVER. Well, I know some men who are dealers, and in talking they told me about this place that was going to open. I spoke to them about going to work in a general way, and then a man by the name of Goldfine was the man who hired me.

Mr. HALLEY. This was in 1945; is that right?

Mr. SILVER. I guess so. That is my recollection according to those slips; that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. In what capacity did you work?

Mr. SILVER. As clerk at a gaming table?

Mr. HALLEY. At a gaming table?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of gaming table was it?

Mr. SILVER. A crap game.

Mr. HALLEY. A crap game?

Mr. SILVER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What were your duties as a clerk?

Mr. SILVER. A stick man, box man.

Mr. HALLEY. A stick man is a man who rakes in the money.

Mr. SILVER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And what is a box man?

Mr. SILVER. A box man is a man who sits at the table and sometimes when he works around the table, he sits, instead of working dealing, he sits in the middle and kind of looks out, you know, helping the other man at the table.

Mr. HALLEY. How many men were working at a table representing the house?

Mr. SILVER. I should say roughly around six usually, with the relief men. You know you get off time. You don't work right through for hours at a time.

Mr. HALLEY. Perhaps we had better go through the list of different corporations for which you worked, and then we can go back and pick up the details.

In 1945 it was the G. & R. Trading Co. Who was your boss there, do you remember?

Mr. SILVER. Well, Goldfine was the man who was in charge of the help.

Mr. HALLEY. Goldfine.

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his first name?

Mr. SILVER. Alex Goldfine.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his particular job there?

Mr. SILVER. Supervisory, I guess, in charge of the tables.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he an accountant?

Mr. SILVER. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Who took care of the money?

Mr. SILVER. There was an office that the money was in, I imagine, because—to the best of my knowledge there was an office that the money was in, but I didn't have anything to do with that, really.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Tony Guarini connected with the place?

Mr. SILVER. That is the man I believe that I would know as Tony Greeno. I think it was Tony Greeno. I wouldn't know how you spelled it.

Mr. HALLEY. But it is pronounced Greeno?

Mr. SILVER. I think that is the same man. That would be the man around there.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he the boss, the top man?

Mr. SILVER. He seemed to be the executive around there.

Mr. HALLEY. He seemed to be the executive.

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. At this point, Mr. Chairman, I offer in evidence withholding receipt for the year 1945 to Charles Henry Silver, 101 Cooper Street, showing wages of $2,900. The employer is listed as Anthony Guarini, G. & R. Trading Co., 109 Roosevelt Avenue, Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be received and made a part of the record as exhibit No. 1 to Mr. Silver's testimony.

(Exhibit No. 1 is on file with the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. Who was Emmanuel Schafer?

Mr. SILVER. He was the fellow who was more or less in charge of help in a way, too. I should say he was on the floor. He gave orders to the help.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Jimmy Lynch there?

Mr. SILVER. I believe I have seen him there.

Mr. HALLEY. You saw him there?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he give orders from time to time?

Mr. SILVER. Not to me; no. He was more like an office man.

Mr. HALLEY. More like an office man.

Mr. SILVER. I would think so; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. But he appeared to be connected with the management?

Mr. SILVER. I guess so.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Joe Doto there in 1945?

Mr. SILVER. I couldn't swear to that. I may have seen him around there.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did the crap game take place?

Mr. SILVER. This place I think was somewhere close to Paterson, to the best of my recollection. I am a little confused on some of these locations. I tried to explain to the gentleman that I spoke to before.

Mr. HALLEY. We will work through it slowly year by year and try to work it out. Perhaps it will refresh your recollection about the locations if we go through these various places. Did you work at any place in 1946?

Mr. SILVER. No, I didn't work in Jersey at all in 1946.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you work in any gambling place anywhere in 1946?

Mr. SILVER. Not to the best of my recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. The withholding statement for 1947 shows wages to this witness $3,350, and the employers are listed as the following: James Lynch, Gerald Catena, Joseph Doto, and Salvatore Moretti, doing business as L. & C. Amusement Co., care of Charles Handler. Is it your recollection that that is where you worked in 1947?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did all these people I just mentioned appear on the premises and take an interest in it?

Mr. SILVER. No; that I would not say because that I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Lynch there?

Mr. SILVER. I believe I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Catena?

Mr. SILVER. That I don't know. I don't recollect that at all. I may have.

Mr. HALLEY. Doto?

Mr. SILVER. I may have seen him, yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Moretti?

Mr. SILVER. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Who gave you this withholding statement? Where did you get it?

Mr. SILVER. I believe it was mailed to me, to the best of my recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. In an envelope from the L. & C. Amusement Co.?

Mr. SILVER. I would assume so, but I don't know that for sure, either. I don't remember that.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get connected with the L. & C. Amusement Co. after this lapse of a year?

The CHAIRMAN. Let's let this second withholding slip for 1947 be made exhibit No. 2 to Mr. Silver's testimony.

(Exhibit No. 2 is on file with the committee.)

Mr. SILVER. In more or less the same way that I was employed originally, just by word of mouth, hearing about the place opening. May have gotten a phone call. Of that I am not sure. There may have been something in person.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it possible that Emmanuel Schafer called you?

Mr. SILVER. It may have been; yes. I said that before. It may have been.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was working there, about the same people who were working in 1945?

Mr. SILVER. Approximately. There is a certain turnover in help in places of this type. Fellows go to the other cities to work or are not working or maybe the people they worked for previously don't want to hire them. Roughly, there were a lot of the same people.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was a credit man there, Kitty Klein?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he also at most of the places we are talking about? Was he at the G. & R. in 1945?

Mr. SILVER. I believe he was. I wouldn't say he was in all of them because I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. But he was at a substantial number?

Mr. SILVER. It is my recollection that he was there.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1948 you worked, did you not, for the L. & C. Amusement Co.?

Mr. SILVER. Whatever that says; I did work there in 1948.

Mr. HALLEY. I offer in evidence withholding statement for 1948 to Mr. Silver from the L. & C. Amusement Co., care of Charles Handler, and the individuals mentioned on it are J. Lynch, G. Catena, J. Doto, and S. Moretti.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be received and made a part of the record as exhibit No. 3 to Mr. Silver's testimony.

Mr. HALLEY. Also, in 1948, did you work for the Pal Trading Co.? Do you remember that?

Mr. SILVER. I only remember it from that. You see, when we go to work they don't say to us you are going to be working for the Pal Trading Co., but you just go to work, and then you know who the boss is, you see.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course, in all of these places you did the same general type of work.

Mr. SILVER. More or less the same work.

Mr. HALLEY. You acted as a clerk at a crap game.

Mr. SILVER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Withholding receipt offered in evidence, 1948, to Charles H. Silver, $1,500, from Pal Trading Co., care of Charles Handler, the principals are J. Lynch, J. Doto, A. Guarini, et al. I am reading from the slip.

The CHAIRMAN. It will be received as exhibit No. 4.

(Exhibit No. 4 is on file with the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. In 1948 there is a withholding statement which I will offer in evidence for the same witness from the General Trading Co., 109 Roosevelt Avenue, Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be made a part of the record as exhibit No. 5.

(Exhibit No. 5 is on file with the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. How did you originally go to work in 1945? Had you been working for any gambling places prior to that time?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Where had you originally started working in a gambling place?

Mr. SILVER. I worked at another place in Jersey in 1944.

Mr. HALLEY. Even prior to that, did you work in Habana?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. And prior to that were you in New York City as a bettor and bookie?

Mr. SILVER. Not as a bookie; no.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do, lay off bets?

Mr. SILVER. I used to bet, go to the race track. I usually knew people around who would bet and I would take care of their bets for them, go to the windows for them, and so on.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you handle lay-off money?

Mr. SILVER. No; you wouldn't call it lay-off money. That is what was in that other thing that I was talked to, but those men interpreted it that way and put it down, but it wasn't quite that way. If I was something, a lot of these people who bet on horses and things, they don't want to be bothered running to the windows, and so on, or to the bookmakers. In those days I believe they were bookmakers. So you would scout around and try to get the best price on a horse, and so on, and in that way you would make a living. It wasn't much of a living, but it was enough for my needs.

Mr. HALLEY. You did that from the time you came to New York in 1938 from California?

Mr. SILVER. For a couple of years; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Until about 1939, when you went to Cuba?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; 1938 or 1939. It may have been 1938; I am not sure of that year.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get into that business?

Mr. SILVER. Well, I guess you just kind of drift into it, I don't know. It seems to me a good way to make a living.

Mr. HALLEY. Did anybody introduce you around?

Mr. SILVER. You get to know people in a general kind of way.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get to know, for instance, Frank Erickson?

Mr. SILVER. No. I would know him if I saw him, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. Any of his people, such as Cantor and Strader?

Mr. SILVER. I think by sight I might know them.

Mr. HALLEY. Griggs?

Mr. SILVER. I never had anything to do with them, no business or anything like that.

Mr. HALLEY. In any event, you did that until 1939, and then you went down to Cuba.

Mr. SILVER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get your job at the Jockey Club in Habana?

Mr. SILVER. I heard about the place being opened, and that there were Americans running it, so I just went over and tried to get work.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of work did you do there?

Mr. SILVER. I did clerical work in the bookmaking department and in the gambling room too, at times.

Mr. HALLEY. John Barker and Joe Goldie were your bosses there?

Mr. SILVER. They were executives; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And later you worked with them up in New Jersey, is that right?

Mr. SILVER. I don't think I ever worked any place with Goldie in New Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. But with Barker you did?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; Barker was at some of these places we have been referring to.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you came back to New York and went into betting again?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; the same thing more or less.

Mr. HALLEY. Betting at the race tracks and taking bets and placing them for people.

Mr. SILVER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You did that until about 1945?

Mr. SILVER. I worked in another place over in Jersey before.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked at Ben Marden's Riviera, is that right?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In what year did you work at the Riviera?

Mr. SILVER. In 1942.

Mr. HALLEY. Who gave you that job?

Mr. SILVER. I went over there and spoke to Mr. Marden and asked for a job. I was told that if my services were desired, they would communicate with me. A short time later I received a phone call to come over there to go to work.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was in charge of the help there?

Mr. SILVER. A man by the name of Leon Levy.

Mr. HALLEY. Then who hired you for G. & R. in 1945?

Mr. SILVER. I believe it was Alex Goldfine.

Mr. HALLEY. After working through this, is your memory any clearer on where you worked, where this building was that you worked at in 1945?

Mr. SILVER. I believe the building that I worked at in 1945 was in a community called West Paterson. I am not positive of that. I believe I have heard that name mentioned.

Mr. HALLEY. What community?

Mr. SILVER. West Paterson.

Mr. HALLEY. West Paterson.

Mr. SILVER. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. What was it? A private residence?

Mr. SILVER. I guess you could so describe it as that. I don't believe I ever saw it in the daytime, so it was kind of difficult to determine.

Mr. HALLEY. How would you get there?

Mr. SILVER. I would get there in a car driven by one of the dealers, mostly it was one of the dealers.

Mr. HALLEY. Did the club ever provide a car to pick you up at the George Washington Bridge?

Mr. SILVER. I may have ridden out in a club car. I believe I did on occasions.

Mr. HALLEY. Did bettors from time to time ride out, customers, in club cars?

Mr. SILVER. That would only be kind of hearsay on my part because I don't know that for sure. That wasn't in my province. You know what I mean. Nobody discussed that with me.

Mr. HALLEY. But the club did have cars to pick people up in New York and take them over, is that right?

Mr. SILVER. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. How many crap tables did they have at this place?

Mr. SILVER. Three, I believe.

Mr. HALLEY. What other gambling was there?

Mr. SILVER. There were some roulette wheels?

Mr. HALLEY. How many men would work at each crap table?

Mr. SILVER. I should say around six usually would consist of the group working.

Senator TOBEY. Six players?

Mr. HALLEY. No; six men representing the house.

Senator TOBEY. How many players would be around these tables?

Mr. SILVER. I guess they would accommodate anything from 12 to 14.

Senator TOBEY. Did the players use their own dice?

Mr. SILVER. No; the house supplied the dice.

Senator TOBEY. Were they loaded?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir; to to my knowledge, they were not.

Mr. HALLEY. Then when you went to work in 1947 was it the same place or a different location?

Mr. SILVER. No; that was a different location.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that location?

Mr. SILVER. I think that was the place that has been referred to as being Lodi.

Mr. HALLEY. Lodi.

Mr. SILVER. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you describe that as best you can, the location and its whereabouts?

Mr. SILVER. I would guess it is somewhere around 10 miles away from the bridge on the left side of the road going out.

Mr. HALLEY. How large a place was it?

Mr. SILVER. I am not a good judge of that.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it a big building?

Mr. SILVER. It appeared more like it might be a garage or something, from what I could see of it.

Mr. HALLEY. No restaurant attached to it?

Mr. SILVER. There was a dining room in there; oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there entertainment?

Mr. SILVER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Just food served?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How many crap tables were there at the Lodi place?

Mr. SILVER. I believe there were two there at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there roulette?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How many roulette wheels?

Mr. SILVER. I think there might have been four there, three or four, four I would say. I am pretty sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there chemin de fer?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; there was.

Mr. HALLEY. At this place how long did it operate? Was that all through 1947?

Mr. SILVER. I figured that out from those slips with those other gentlemen that I spoke to. That is about the only way I can judge it. I don't remember the period now that we figured. They kind of helped me work it out in my mind at the time.

Mr. HALLEY. You show income in 1947 on this withholding statement of $3,350 from the L. & C. Amusement Co. Would that be a flat salary for you?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; that was a flat salary.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get a commission?

Mr. SILVER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How were you paid? What was your salary?

Mr. SILVER. I got $100 a week.

Mr. HALLEY. Then it would appear that you worked most of the year.

Mr. SILVER. Yes; that is what I say. That slip would just about show it. That is the reason I referred to it.

Mr. HALLEY. All at this one place, a rather steady operation, is that right?

Mr. SILVER. I think there was a break there where I didn't work for about a month when it didn't operate, it was during the summer sometime, or in August.

Mr. HALLEY. That would be the slack season. Did you go to Saratoga at that time, that summer?

Mr. SILVER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever gone to Saratoga?

Mr. SILVER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you work at Saratoga?

Mr. SILVER. I never worked at Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. A lot of the people you were with worked up there, didn't they?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; that is true.

Mr. HALLEY. They worked at the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. SILVER. I believe they did during that period of time that I referred to, but I didn't go up there. I didn't work.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever offered a job at Saratoga?

Mr. SILVER. No; not that I recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask for one?

Mr. SILVER. No; I didn't.

Mr. HALLEY. What sort of places do they have at Saratoga?

Mr. SILVER. Well, that would only be hearsay, but I imagine they are more like night clubs up there from what I have heard about them.

Mr. HALLEY. Weren't you ever in any of the gambling places at Saratoga?

Mr. SILVER. Not in recent years.

Mr. HALLEY. Was this place at Lodi ever raided?

Mr. SILVER. Not while I was there; no.

Mr. HALLEY. It wasn't particularly a secret operation, was it? People would come and go? It was open?

Mr. SILVER. I would say so.

Mr. HALLEY. It must have had a large parking lot on the outside.

Mr. SILVER. There was a space for parking cars.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any sign on the outside calling it a restaurant or anything?

Mr. SILVER. No .

Mr. HALLEY. Just a building and people would walk in and out.

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Then in 1948 just from your records you worked in two places, first for the L. & C. Amusement Co., which is the same company you worked for in 1947, and your records show that they paid you $1,300. Do you remember where you worked in 1948? Is that the same operation in Lodi?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir. That wasn't.

Mr. HALLEY. I am talking now about the L. & C. Amusement Co., the first one you worked for.

Mr. SILVER. Part of that may have been in Lodi. Of that I am not sure. I am a little confused on that. I believe that overlapped into 1948. I believe it did.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you went to another place in 1948, is that right, to the Pal Trading Co.?

Mr. SILVER. I think so. There must be a reason why those slips are separated. I don't remember exactly what took place.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the other location at which you worked in 1948?

Mr. SILVER. I think part of the time it was in that place in Lodi. Then I think part of the time was a place closer in near the bridge. I wouldn't know what you call it. I believe that is 14, but I don't know for sure. It is right across the bridge.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked in 1949 also for the Pal Trading Co.—no; you worked for General Trading Corp. in 1949. Do you remember that there was a difference between the place you worked for for Pal and for General?

Mr. SILVER. Yes. I think there was another place somewhere around the Palisades. I don't know what the name of that town is. Those towns over there kind of run together like, and it is hard to tell.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of place is the place in Palisades? Did it have more than one crap table?

Mr. SILVER. Yes. It had three crap tables.

Mr. HALLEY. Did it have roulette?

Mr. SILVER. No; it didn't.

Mr. HALLEY. Chemin de fer?

Mr. SILVER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Just three crap tables.

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. While we are working on this phase of it, could you tell the difference between a carpet place and a sawdust place?

Mr. SILVER. I would say the difference would be that in one there were women and in the other there wasn't. That would be about the big difference.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean a sawdust place would be a game?

Mr. SILVER. A sort of place that women wouldn't be interested at being at.

Mr. HALLEY. Would they serve food at all? Would it be there a little buffet?

Mr. SILVER. There might be a lunch counter where you could buy a sandwich or something like that, but that would be all.

Mr. HALLEY. There would be no elaborate arrangement.

Mr. SILVER. No; nothing like a restaurant.

Mr. HALLEY. However, the games were just as big and just as important, I suppose.

Mr. SILVER. More or less similar; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How much money would you say would be played at a table in the course of an evening?

Mr. SILVER. I hate even to hazard a guess on that because it might fluctuate a great deal. Naturally I never participated in anything like counting or anything like that.

Mr. HALLEY. How long would the game go on in an evening?

Mr. SILVER. I guess around 9 or 9:30.

Mr. HALLEY. When would the crowd really begin to arrive?

Mr. SILVER. It would fill up by midnight, I should say, if it were going to fill up. There were some nights that were slower than others. It varied. It wasn't uniform.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did it stay pretty well filled up?

Mr. SILVER. A couple or 3 hours, maybe.

Mr. HALLEY. Until say 3:00 in the morning?

Mr. SILVER. Maybe.

Mr. HALLEY. When would you close?

Mr. SILVER. I guess whenever there were no more people around, when it wasn't worth while.

Mr. HALLEY. Would that be around 4 or 5 a. m.?

Mr. SILVER. It could be anywhere around that time.

Mr. HALLEY. Could it be even later?

Mr. SILVER. Hardly ever.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there a limit on these games?

Mr. SILVER. A what?

Mr. HALLEY. A betting limit.

Mr. SILVER. Yes. That varied sometimes according to the places. In some places the limit might be $100 and in others it might be as much as maybe $300.

Mr. HALLEY. For any bet?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. So a man could stay there all night and make a few hundred bets, is that right?

Mr. SILVER. That would be up to the player.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes; but on any one bet it would be limited to $100 or $300.

Mr. SILVER. That is right. It would depend upon the circumstances, possibly, and the margins on which the people were operating.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was the highest limit, at what place?

Mr. SILVER. I believe at the Lodi place was about the highest limit at any table that I worked at. That was $300. To the best of my recollection, that is the highest.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the smallest bet that a man could make at, say, Lodi?

Mr. SILVER. I think about $5.

Mr. HALLEY. About $5. In other words, you couldn't even walk up to the crap table and put a dollar bill down on a roll. You would be frowned on.

Mr. SILVER. Well, no; it wouldn't be that, but there weren't many people who cared to, apparently.

Mr. HALLEY. Then there must have been on almost every roll of dice a few thousand dollars on the table.

Mr. SILVER. Oh, no; I wouldn't say that. No. It is difficult to try to explain it to you, naturally. I am not good at that sort of thing and you don't understand anything about it. So it is a little difficult to explain it to you.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right. Do it your own way. What we are trying to do is to visualize the operation.

Mr. SILVER. You might have a player who would stand there and make a bet every 10 minutes, and then you might have a player who would stand there and make a bet every 2 minutes, depending on the individual. There is no compulsion on the part of a house to force a man to bet if he didn't care to. He might be betting on a hunch. He might not like the haircut of the man shooting the dice, or he might be superstitious about the man wearing eyeglasses, I mean in a general kind of way.

Mr. HALLEY. I have watched the operations quite carefully at Las Vegas, where it is legal, and most betters play pretty regularly. They don't stand there and bet every 10 minutes, do they?

Mr. SILVER. I of course have never worked out there but so I don't know, but from what I have heard the action out there is always a lot faster than it ever is in the East. Apparently the people in the West gamble higher and faster than they do in the East.

Mr. HALLEY. The stakes are nothing like the stakes you have described. They are much lower.

Mr. SILVER. I have never worked out there up until now, so I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. In any event, would you say that in the course of an evening a great many thousands of dollars passed over the table?

Mr. SILVER. I wouldn't say a great many. I might say a couple or a few, depending upon the business and also it might pass either way, because there are many, many winners, too. It goes both ways.

Mr. HALLEY. Regardless of which way it passes, the total number of bets couldn't possibly be in an evening under $10,000 for any one table?

Mr. SILVER. I would say definitely yes. I would say that is much too high a figure, offhand, I should think.

Mr. HALLEY. You think that would be too high?

Mr. SILVER. I would think that would be much too high.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you fix it at for any one table in an evening?

Mr. SILVER. You have me at a disadvantage again because there is no way of determining that. The same money goes in and out possibly during a great deal of the time. Whether it actually changes hands is a question. You might come in and might start off and lose a couple of hundred dollars and then win it back. If you would include all that money that circulates, it would be difficult to determine.

Mr. HALLEY. That is what I mean. Here is what I am trying to get at. If you walked in there and just walked over to one of these tables and looked at it, say at around 1 a. m. on a good night, you would be apt to see sitting right on the table a couple of thousand dollars at any one table, wouldn't you, in chips?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; I would say that.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course, the dice are rolled perhaps every 30 seconds.

Mr. SILVER. Pardon me. May I interrupt. When I say "yes," I don't mean that all of that is in action and being bet. I wouldn't say a couple of thousand was being bet at any one time. What I meant was players would have it in front of them as well as its being on the table in action.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you be likely to see on the table?

Mr. SILVER. In action, you mean?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. SILVER. Oh——

Mr. HALLEY. Of course it would depend on who was there.

Mr. SILVER. That is true. You see it is such a problematical question. Some nights you might have people who gambled big and some times you might have people who don't gamble.

Mr. HALLEY. Suppose you had people who gambled big, on a big night how much would you be apt to see on the table in action?

Mr. SILVER. Maybe around a thousand or so. I don't know, that is just a guess. I don't want you people to think I have any accurate way of determining that. I don't have.

Mr. HALLEY. I know that. We are just trying to get a picture of the kind of money that moved back and forth. On a small night it might be as little as a hundred or less?

Mr. SILVER. Very easily.

Mr. HALLEY. In any one roll of the dice.

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course the dice kept rolling constantly.

Mr. SILVER. That doesn't mean that the bets changed necessarily. The dice might roll for 10 minutes, as much as 10 minutes, I have seen it happen, without any money changing hands, without any decision.

Senator TOBEY. Do they throw ones or the best two out of three?

Mr. SILVER. If you want me to go into a dice course on it I will try to explain it to you to the best of my ability.

Senator TOBEY. Very briefly. Is it one throw.

Mr. SILVER. You may bet that the shooter is going to win. If you are shooting at dice, other people can bet on you as well as yourself. If you throw 2, 3, or 12, you lose. If you throw a 7 or 11 you win.

Senator TOBEY. Is there just one dice to throw?

Mr. SILVER. No, two, sir. If you throw any other number, then you continue to throw the dice until such time that you either throw the number that you threw originally, which means you win, or you throw a 7 which means you lose.

Senator TOBEY. It is the aggregate, 6 and 1 would be a 7 or 4 and 3.

Mr. SILVER. Yes, the total.

Senator TOBEY. It is the top number on the dice, isn't it?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. The better standing around the table could bet with or against the man who is rolling the dice, is that right?

Mr. SILVER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And they could make all sorts of side bets on the next roll or the next two rolls or on almost any possible combination.

Mr. SILVER. Yes; there are various ways of betting.

Senator TOBEY. Are the bets written down?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Just the man's mentality.

Mr. SILVER. The tables are marked in such a way that it indicates what you are operating on. Your money is placed at that particular point and that means you are betting on that.

Mr. HALLEY. We have covered all but one last place, and that is the place in New Jersey, the last place you worked, just across the George Washington Bridge. Do you remember that one?

Mr. SILVER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you describe that?

Mr. SILVER. That is the place that I believe was referred to as a carriage factory?

Mr. HALLEY. How many tables were there?

Mr. SILVER. Three.

Mr. HALLEY. Any roulette?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Any chemin de fer?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When you get across the George Washington Bridge, in which direction would you go to the carriage factory?

Mr. SILVER. Not very far, and then it was to the left, a very short distance.

Mr. HALLEY. It was a sort of old-fashioned two-story building?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. It had a sign on it saying carriage factory?

Mr. SILVER. I was told that. I am not sure if I ever saw that sign or not. It may have had it and it may not have. I don't know. I don't recall it. I have heard it referred to that way.

Senator TOBEY. Was there anything appropriate about that name?

Mr. SILVER. Not to my knowledge, sir.

Mr. ELICH. It is a factory building, Senator, a large building. They only occupied a small portion for their activity.

The CHAIRMAN. When did he work there?

Mr. HALLEY. You worked there in 1949, is that right?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Up to the very end, in December, is that correct?

Mr. SILVER. I worked until December of 1949 in Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. From June?

Mr. SILVER. At that place or that other place that we referred to. Some of that time may have been in that other place that we were talking about at Palisades.

Mr. HALLEY. The place at Palisades.

Mr. SILVER. You see, sometimes you change over, you know what I mean. I am trying to give you people the best of my recollection. I may not be 100-percent perfect in every answer. I hope you people understand that I am doing the best I can under the circumstances trying to get this thing behind me as quickly as possible. I know that you feel the same way about it.

Senator TOBEY. Are you still in the same business right now?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir. I am not doing anything right now.

Mr. HALLEY. The carriage factory was what you would call a sawdust place?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Elich is shaking his head.

Mr. ELICH. I am sorry. There were two places running at the same time. One was a sawdust place and one was a carpet place. Wasn't the carpet place over across, just a short distance, about a block away?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir. I believe this gentleman is wrong about that.

Mr. ELICH. I merely asked you.

Mr. SILVER. Don't verify it by me, but to the best of my knowledge, that is not right.

Mr. ELICH. That is the impression I got.

Mr. HALLEY. There is a place at Palisades, a carpet place?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Both were sawdust places?

Mr. SILVER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. As far as the amount of money bet—

Mr. SILVER. May I interpose and say one thing regarding what that gentleman said?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. SILVER. There may have been at various times, I am not aware of this, and I am not supposing, there may have been times when there were two places running simultaneously, but I wouldn't necessarily have knowledge of the fact. I want you people to understand that I just worked there, and if there were certain things going on, they didn't necessarily inform me of them. He may be right that some time or other there were two places working simultaneously that I am not aware of. It may be true and it may not be. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. In all of these places from 1945 to 1949, there was basically the same group of employees; is that right?

Mr. SILVER. There was a turn-over, but more or less the same cases.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were the bosses, for instance, through this whole period? Was Goldfine there constantly?

Mr. SILVER. Yes; I believe he was.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Schafer there?

Mr. SILVER. I believe he was. I can't be absolutely sure of those answers because to the best of my recollection they were there right along; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Kitty Klein there?

Mr. SILVER. I don't think he was in every place; no, I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Which places was he in, do you remember?

Mr. SILVER. I would say definitely that I saw him in that place I referred to in Patterson and another place I referred to in Lodi. That I would say.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever arrested in any of these places? Were they ever raided?

Mr. SILVER. Not while I was there.

Mr. HALLEY. You had no trouble at all?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see any policemen in them?

Mr. SILVER. Not in uniform, not that I would know were policemen.

Mr. HALLEY. Did they ever come in and sit down and have a drink?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And a bite of food?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. No further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. To your knowledge how was this protection arranged?

Mr. SILVER. That I wouldn't know. I tried to explain I worked for these people and they regarded me just as help and that is all. They don't discuss things like that with me.

The CHAIRMAN. But they were all places open to the public, where the public could come in if they wanted to gamble?

Mr. SILVER. I wouldn't say they were open to the public to the extent that you could walk in the way you would into a public drinking place or dining place.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have to give some special knock?

Mr. SILVER. The people who came in were known to somebody in the place. Otherwise—that is just my guess on the matter.

The CHAIRMAN. Did they have horse books in these or wire service in these places?

Mr. SILVER. Not to my knowledge. I never saw anything like that around.

The CHAIRMAN. Any betting on horses?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How many of these places were also supper clubs or restaurants where you could eat and then go back and gamble?

Mr. SILVER. Two of those.

The CHAIRMAN. Which two?

Mr. SILVER. The one I referred to somewhere in Paterson, I believe it was, and the other one in Lodi.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Kostelanetz, do you have any questions?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. Were these places ever raided?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Do you ever see Joe Adonis?

Mr. SILVER. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Where?

Mr. SILVER. Well, I believe I saw him in a couple of these places.

Senator TOBEY. Was he playing the game or in a managerial capacity, partner, or what?

Mr. SILVER. No managerial capacity so far as I was concerned.

Senator TOBEY. What was he doing?

Mr. SILVER. Just walking in the place and looking around possibly, maybe he would be in the dining room eating.

Senator TOBEY. Did they show him proper respect for his rank?

Mr. SILVER. That I didn't pay any attention to, sir, because usually if I happened to see him I would be working and couldn't pay much attention.

Senator TOBEY. How did you know he was Joe Adonis?

Mr. SILVER. I knew him when I saw him.

Senator TOBEY. How many times had you seen him before that?

Mr. SILVER. Before that I don't believe I had ever seen him.

Senator TOBEY. How did you know him?

Mr. SILVER. Because somebody mentioned the fact that was who it was.

Senator TOBEY. Did they say it with a little bit of respect and reverence in their voice?

Mr. SILVER. Well, possibly respect. I wouldn't say reverence.

Senator TOBEY. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

Mr. SILVER. May I ask something, sir?

Mr. HALLEY. Surely.

Mr. SILVER. I realize that subpoena I received holds me to appear whenever you want me, but do you think that I would be wanted again in the event that I was able to get employment elsewhere out of town, possibly in the West, in Nevada or something like that or must I remain in New York? Just what takes place now so far as I am personally concerned?

The CHAIRMAN. You are, of course, continued under subpoena. We would want you to let us know where you are.

Mr. SILVER. Do you think if I went away, particularly a great distance, that I would be required to return? What I am trying to get at, I will try to explain, if I do go away it will be for the purpose of obtaining employment, and if I obtain employment and it were necessary for me to leave, I would lose that employment more than likely. That is what I am trying to determine.

Senator TOBEY. I don't want to inquire into your personal affairs, but do you contemplate or hope for employment along the same lines you have been doing here?

Mr. SILVER. I was thinking about Nevada. I don't know whether I will do it or not. It is possible I may, it is possible that I may not.

Senator TOBEY. That brings about another question of human relations which I am interested in and I am doing a little research work in these cases. How old are you?

Mr. SILVER. Forty-five.

Senator TOBEY. This is the business you have been in some time?

Mr. SILVER. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. What was your business prior to this?

Mr. SILVER. Prior to this I was salesman.

Senator TOBEY. What is there about this that intrigues you? It isn't very heavy money you are getting.

Mr. SILVER. No, it isn't, you are right.

Senator TOBEY. Aiding and abetting an illegal business. Why don't you as you look ahead look for something more stable? Why don't you cut the stuff out?

Mr. SILVER. You have the right idea. I have been thinking about it for quite a while.

Senator TOBEY. Then don't go to Nevada.

Mr. SILVER. Maybe you are right about that, too. Of course, it is legal there.

Senator TOBEY. I know, but it is playing the same game, that is all.

Mr. SILVER. You are right about that.

Senator TOBEY. Do you have any children?

Mr. SILVER. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Are you married?

Mr. SILVER. Yes, I am.

Senator TOBEY. That is all I have.

The CHAIRMAN. It is quite likely that within the next few weeks we will need you here, but we don't want to prevent you from going anywhere else to accept employment, but when you are notified to come back you will have to come back.

Mr. SILVER. You mean if I left you would require me to return? Do you think you would require me to return if I did go away?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. It is quite likely that we will.

Mr. HALLEY. The matter will probably be cleaned up within a matter of a few weeks. In any event, if you do go away be absolutely sure to let Mr. Elich or Mr. Kostelanetz know where you are going.

Mr. SILVER. In view of what I was told I doubt very much if anything will come of it. Anything else now?

The CHAIRMAN. No. That is all.

Mr. Barker, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. BARKER. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JOHN W. BARKER, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Barker, what is your address?

Mr. BARKER. 12 East Ninety-seventh Street.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. BARKER. I work in club houses.

Mr. HALLEY. Gambling houses?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been doing that?

Mr. BARKER. A great many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you start at the old Riviera, run by Ben Marden?

Mr. BARKER. Did I start there? Oh, no.

Mr. HALLEY. You started even before that?

Mr. BARKER. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked in Habana, is that right?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. At the Jockey Club?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that where you started or can you go back even further?

Mr. BARKER. Well, can I move over just a little. When did I start?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. I started about 60 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you start?

Mr. BARKER. Omaha, Nebr.

Mr. HALLEY. In what cities have you worked in gambling houses since then?

Mr. BARKER. I have worked in gambling in Omaha, as I told you, Saratoga, and New York City.

Mr. HALLEY. Around 1933 you worked at the Jockey Club at Habana?

Mr. BARKER. In 1933? Yes, I think we were there in 1933.

Mr. HALLEY. Was one of the men who worked for you Charles Silver, who just left?

Mr. BARKER. Silver?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. Do you remember him?

Mr. BARKER. No, not in 1933.

Mr. HALLEY. At a later time he did work for you, is that right?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. About 1939?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you at the Jockey Club in Habana?

Mr. BARKER. I was there for quite a while off and on. I don't remember what year I first went out there. To tell you the truth, I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in charge of the wheels?

Mr. BARKER. In Habana, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. They would be roulette wheels, is that right?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you came to the Riviera owned by Ben Marden, is that correct?

Mr. BARKER. No. I came to the Riviera, but the Riviera was conducted by Mr. Marden as a restaurant. I came there with some people from Philadelphia.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were they?

Mr. BARKER. There first with Keolker.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that spelled K-e-o-l-k-e-r?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet Mr. Keolker.

Mr. BARKER. In Habana.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he have any connection with the Habana Club?

Mr. BARKER. No, not then.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he at any time?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you tell the committee about it, how he got into the Habana Club and then how he happened to bring you up to New Jersey?

Mr. BARKER. How he happened to bring me? Well, I will tell you. He was in Habana not engaged in the casino. He had nothing to do with that. I don't know, perhaps he liked my work. Anyhow, when he came back here I met him on the race track one day and they said they were going in the Riviera. That is the old Riviera, you understand.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that located?

Mr. BARKER. I think it might be a couple of hundred feet farther up the Palisades.

Mr. HALLEY. It burned, did it not?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir; on Thanksgiving evening, night.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't there gambling at the old Riviera?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir. I am telling you I went in there with the Keolkers.

Mr. HALLEY. At that time was Marden running the restaurant?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. At the old Riviera?

Mr. BARKER. Well, his name was there. I guess he run it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you work at the new Riviera?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. During what period?

Mr. BARKER. You see, when that burned down it took some time to rebuild the new Riviera, and I won't be positive exactly when we did go in there.

Mr. HALLEY. You were ill for a while, weren't you?

Mr. BARKER. Yes. I was 9 weeks in the Inglewood Hospital.

Mr. HALLEY. When you came out of that hospital, was that in 1942?

Mr. BARKER. Yes. I think I came out maybe in September. I wouldn't be sure about it. I know when I went in.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Ben Marden ask you to take charge at the new Riviera?

Mr. BARKER. Did he ask me to take charge?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. I don't know that. I just moved in, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. You just moved in.

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. At the new place he actually ran the gambling operation, did he not?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your function there?

Mr. BARKER. I looked after the wheels. I don't know what you would call it.

Senator TOBEY. You kept them greased?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How many roulette wheels were there at the new Riviera?

Mr. BARKER. Well, let me count up. I will try to figure it out. I think we had four.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the function of the man who looks after the wheels? What do you do? Supervise all four?

Mr. BARKER. Yes. Well, generally have somebody, you know, who works around with me.

Mr. HALLEY. You have one or two men at each wheel, is that right?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And then you and one or two other men also circulate around.

Mr. BARKER. Yes; that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. After you worked at the Riviera for some time, it closed, did it not, at the end of 1942?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Between 1942 and——

Mr. BARKER. May I interrupt you?

Mr. HALLEY. Please.

Mr. BARKER. After I came out of the hospital I took no active—I have to tell you this, because I have income-tax returns that show those things. After I came out of the hospital I went in there on the 30th of June, and I came out—I was in there 9 weeks. Would probably be around maybe in the first week of September.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you, by the way, bring your income-tax records with you?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have them here now?

Mr. BARKER. I haven't those away back there; no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have the more recent ones?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you present them to the committee?

Mr. BARKER. Why, certainly.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

Mr. BARKER. I only brought any records that might be pertaining—

Mr. HALLEY. To the more recent operations?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. That is just what we wanted. Thank you.

Mr. BARKER. You see, I don't keep these records myself. I have a concern that takes care of my income tax when I have any income, and I leave those papers there.

Mr. HALLEY. Between 1942 and 1945 did you work for any gambling operation?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your occupation in those years?

Mr. BARKER. Nothing.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1945 did you go to work for the G. & R. Trading Co.?

Mr. BARKER. Well, I suppose I did. I don't keep much of a record of initials or letters, but whatever is on there, I must have worked for.

Mr. HALLEY. We have here a withholding receipt for the year 1945 to John W. Barker, 12 East Ninety-seventh Street. That is one you just brought in; is that right?

Mr. BARKER. That must be my income tax.

Mr. HALLEY. It looks like it. This is the one you just brought in; is that right?

Mr. BARKER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Three thousand seven hundred dollars income paid by G. & R. Trading Co., 109 Roosevelt Avenue, Hasbrouck Heights, N. J. The individual name is Anthony Guarini. Would you tell who Anthony Guarini is?

Mr. BARKER. I am afraid I can't tell you that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet him?

Mr. BARKER. I am afraid I can't tell you. I might have, but I don't know. I will tell you, I never had anybody ever to give me any orders. I never came in contact with anybody that ever told me what to do or what not to do.

Mr. HALLEY. Who hired you in 1945?

Mr. BARKER. Who hired me?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. This perhaps will seem a little ridiculous to you, but nevertheless I don't know how much you know about these procedures of the gambling business. You may know all about it. They were going to open a place over in Jersey. I didn't even know where it was, but a lot of them were going over from Seventh Avenue. I went down and we went over there, and I guess there must have been I don't know how many automobiles, and somebody drove me over to this place.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean when you say there were a lot of people going over from Seventh Avenue? Is that the meeting place?

Mr. BARKER. They just happened to meet there, I suppose; whoever was going to drive them with machines told them they would be there. I didn't know anything about it. I am a little peculiar about where I go and where I work.

Mr. HALLEY. Who told you about it?

Mr. BARKER. Somebody, some of these boys—I don't know—that I know, called me up.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't remember who it was?

Mr. BARKER. I don't remember. I didn't pay enough attention to it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go to Seventh Avenue and get into an automobile?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, and went over.

Mr. HALLEY. Who went with you; do you know? Did you know the people in the automobile?

Mr. BARKER. I am under oath, and I wouldn't like to mention somebody's name that I really didn't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you give your best recollection? It will be taken for what it is worth by the committee.

Mr. BARKER. It seems to me there was a man by the name of Clayman or Cleyman, or something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Cleyman?

Mr. BARKER. I think he was in the machine. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you taken to a place in Caldwell, N. J.?

Mr. BARKER. That is right. I couldn't get there, and I wouldn't know how to get there.

Mr. HALLEY. What was it—a private residence?

Mr. BARKER. I would imagine it might some time have been a little small restaurant or something. It might have been. It was like in a private house.

Mr. HALLEY. And there was a gambling room; is that right?

Mr. BARKER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Or was there more than one gambling room?

Mr. BARKER. Oh, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Who hired you there? Who did you talk to?

Mr. BARKER. Nobody. That is what I am trying to tell you; nobody hired me. You go in those places and see somebody maybe that you know. They must have known me from—some of the boys must have told them something about me or I never would have gotten the telephone message.

Mr. HALLEY. It sounds to me like you are trying perhaps for good motives to protect somebody.

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. But you must have known who was the straw boss at the place.

Mr. BARKER. I have nobody to protect. This man that you are mentioning there, he might have been somewhere there in charge.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is that? I mentioned Charles Silver. You don't mean him?

Mr. BARKER. He never was in charge.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Alex Goldfine?

Mr. BARKER. Alex Goldfine worked there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he have anything to do with hiring you?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his job there?

Mr. BARKER. He ran the craps.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he a supervisor of any kind?

Mr. BARKER. Not that I know of. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. What did Kitty Klein do there?

Mr. BARKER. He was credit man.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Jimmie Lynch there?

Mr. BARKER. Yes; he was.

Mr. HALLEY. You saw him there?

Mr. BARKER. Well, I think he worked on the books or maybe in the money room, that I never got in.

Mr. HALLEY. You never got into the money room at all?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Joseph Doto there, Joe Adonis?

Mr. BARKER. Joe Adonis? I might have, but I wouldn't be positive. Just a minute. You say Joe Adonis.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. Is he on that card of mine?

Mr. HALLEY. He is sometimes known as Joe Doto.

Mr. BARKER. Well, I don't know anybody by the name of Doto. I have read a great deal in the papers about Joe Adonis, but I never read anything about Doto, but he might have been there and I might have seen him.

Mr. HALLEY. Actually isn't Joe Doto the name that is on the cards you have?

Mr. BARKER. Yes; but I don't know anything about those names there. I was asked that once before.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Joe Adonis? Do you know who he is?

Mr. BARKER. I might have seen him there. I expect probably he has been in there.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you seen him at some of the other gambling places you worked at in recent years?

Mr. BARKER. I might have seen him somewhere else. You see, there is lots of people who come there—I will try and explain it to you. They have a restaurant attached to those places. There are some people who come in there in the restaurant who never come out. They could be there and I would never see them, because I don't go in there. I never eat any meals there. I never have any business there. So he could have been in there and I might not have seen him.

Mr. HALLEY. When you say you might have seen him, do you really mean you probably saw him but you are not absolutely sure?

Mr. BARKER. I probably did if he was there.

Senator TOBEY. Would you know him if he walked in here now?

Mr. BARKER. Would I know him? By sight I probably would; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you have seen him some place.

Mr. BARKER. I say I probably have seen him.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you have never seen Guarini?

Mr. BARKER. Maybe, but I don't know him by that name.

Mr. HALLEY. By what name do you know Guarini?

Mr. BARKER. I don't know him by any name. There are a lot of those people I couldn't know their names.

Mr. HALLEY. Who paid your salary?

Mr. BARKER. It come out of the office.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean a cashier in a cage? Who would come out of the office and hand it to you?

Mr. BARKER. Well, anybody could bring it out. I will have to go through that with you.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you, please.

Mr. BARKER. We have a clubroom there. The doors are closed until 9 o'clock. At 9 o'clock the dealers come into that room. On pay nights envelopes are sent in there for the men who work on the wheels. Those envelopes could be brought in by anybody. They could be given to me; they could be given to the cashier; they could be given to anybody. But probably if they were given to me for the men who were working on the wheels or maybe if they were given to Mr. Kessler, who helped me around there, we would say here are four wheels, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4, and the men who worked on No. 1, their envelopes would be there laid on what they call the work board. When they came in they would pick them up.

Senator TOBEY. Mr. Chairman, there is a missing link here that we ought to bring out, it seems to me. He says he went over there, took a ride, and went in the place and handled the wheels, but no testimony has been given as to who made the financial arrangements to link him up with the management definitely.

Mr. HALLEY. I am trying to find out who the boss was.

Mr. BARKER. I had no boss.

Senator TOBEY. Who hired you? Who told you to go to work and agreed to pay you so much money?

Mr. BARKER. Perhaps this Mr. Greeno was the one.

Senator TOBEY. You know who hired you, don't you?

Mr. BARKER. I beg your pardon?

Senator TOBEY. Haven't you a vivid recollection of what he said to you when he hired you?

Mr. BARKER. Somebody spoke around there and said, "You go on the wheels."

Senator TOBEY. And you were willing. Did he quote the price?

Mr. BARKER. No; not then.

Senator TOBEY. You took whatever they wanted to give in the envelope; is that right?

Mr. BARKER. I got my salary at the end of the week.

Senator TOBEY. How did you know how much it was?

Mr. BARKER. I didn't know.

Senator TOBEY. You took whatever they put in the envelope?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. That constituted your salary.

Mr. BARKER. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. With no agreement between two minds at all.

Mr. BARKER. No agreement.

Senator TOBEY. You are certainly a trusting soul.

Mr. BARKER. Trusting?

Senator TOBEY. Yes; very trusting. When a man goes to work for somebody, he generally wants to know what the quid pro quo is going to be. You took it all on faith.

Mr. BARKER. All kinds of houses pay different salaries. I could afford to work a week and find out. If it didn't suit me, I didn't have to stay.

Senator TOBEY. Wouldn't the natural thing be to ask, "What is in it for me; what are you going to pay me?" Men don't work for their health. They work for wages.

Mr. BARKER. I didn't ask them.

Senator TOBEY. That is a funny thing, gentlemen.

Mr. BARKER. I don't think so.

Senator TOBEY. I would like to see some other line of business where they do it that way.

Mr. BARKER. If you understood this business as I do probably you would have the same idea.

Senator TOBEY. Were you afraid not to go to work for them?

Mr. BARKER. Afraid?

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. Oh, no.

Senator TOBEY. In other words, you went to work for them, and they said, "Take a wheel," and you took a wheel.

Mr. BARKER. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Price and salary unknown.

Mr. BARKER. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Whatever you want to give me, gentlemen, is all right.

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. When you opened the first envelope that constituted your salary—

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir; it was $100.

Senator TOBEY. You looked for the same thing thereafter?

Mr. BARKER. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Any percentage on the winnings?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Senator TOBEY. Just a clean straight $100.

Mr. BARKER. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Was that a fair salary, in your judgment?

Mr. BARKER. Well, it was maybe a case of half a loaf is better than none. It would be better to work. I think, 6 months for $100 a week than 3 months for $200.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Barker, I didn't understand who called you in the first place to meet them down at Seventh Avenue.

Mr. BARKER. It probably was one of the boys.

The CHAIRMAN. You must know who called you.

Mr. BARKER. That had been associated somewhere else with me. People call people up all over the country, call them up from Chicago, and tell them they are going to open some place.

Mr. HALLEY. You were in charge of three wheels, were you not?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You had an important job?

Mr. BARKER. What?

Mr. HALLEY. You had an important job.

Mr. BARKER. I wouldn't call it very important.

Mr. HALLEY. You certainly were supervising the man at each wheel, were you not?

Mr. BARKER. Yes. I was looking after those wheels.

Mr. HALLEY. He knew you were his boss; is that right? You gave him orders.

Mr. BARKER. Give him orders; why, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You would tell him when to take a relief period and when to leave the wheel.

Mr. BARKER. He would ask me probably. He could ask anyone; he could ask Mr. Kessler or he could ask anyone who was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you get your orders from?

Mr. BARKER. I didn't get any orders.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean in all the time you worked in that place nobody gave you an order?

Mr. BARKER. I mean to tell you that I never got an order from anybody in that place.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Barker—

Mr. BARKER. Nobody told me what to do and what not to do, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Barker, you must have known who the people were who were in charge of that gambling establishment.

Mr. BARKER. All I know is what is on that card.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't even know what is on the card. You don't know Guarini, you say.

Mr. BARKER. I don't know him by that name. If he has another name, I might know him.

Mr. HALLEY. What name did you know your bosses by?

Mr. BARKER. What bosses?

Mr. HALLEY. You have mentioned Greeno? Did you have a Greeno there?

Mr. BARKER. Probably he was.

Mr. HALLEY. Now probably is not an answer. Was a man named Greeno there?

Mr. BARKER. I suppose—I guess I will have to say there was because I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. No; you don't have to say anything but the fact.

Mr. BARKER. The fact is that I never had any boss that I know of that ever came and told me anything by the name of Greeno or any other name.

Mr. HALLEY. Nobody ever gave you a single instruction in all that time?

Mr. BARKER. Maybe they thought I knew my business and they didn't have to give me any.

Mr. HALLEY. After Caldwell, did you go to work at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you describe the operation at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. The operation?

Mr. HALLEY. The number of wheels, the number of crap games.

Mr. BARKER. I think maybe we might have had one more wheel in Lodi.

Mr. HALLEY. There were four wheels there, is that right?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Your boss there was the L. & C. Co., is that right?

Mr. BARKER. I guess that is so, if it is on that.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't that correct?

Mr. BARKER. I guess it is.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you work at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. Well, they were open and closed there. I worked a very short season there once. Then they reopened again, and I went back.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the first year in which you worked at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. I think it must have been 1946. You see, I haven't worked in any of those places in over 2 years.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked in there 1946 and 1947, would that be correct?

Mr. BARKER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know who ran the gambling house at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. Who ran it?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. The only man that I would say might have had something to do with it was a man by the name of Lynch.

Mr. HALLEY. James Lynch?

Mr. BARKER. Jim, James; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You would see him in the gambling room?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He did give orders to people?

Mr. BARKER. He never gave me any, but maybe he gave them to somebody else.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he or did he not give them to somebody else?

Mr. BARKER. I wouldn't know that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him giving orders? That is simple enough.

Mr. BARKER. No; I didn't see him giving any orders.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you see him do?

Mr. BARKER. He was either keeping the books or in the money room.

Mr. HALLEY. He walked in and out of the money room freely?

Mr. BARKER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. That is something you never did?

Mr. BARKER. No; I had no business in there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else went into the money room?

Mr. BARKER. Well, if he had some assistants there, they probably went in.

Mr. HALLEY. He must have had some assistants, isn't that right?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Then the answer is he had some assistants.

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Not if he had some.

Mr. BARKER. I suppose he had.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were the assistants?

Mr. BARKER. That I wouldn't know.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you work there?

Mr. BARKER. I will explain that to you too.

Mr. HALLEY. It will take a lot of explaining, Mr. Barker. Please go ahead and try.

Mr. BARKER. There was a back way to come in that money room, and anybody could go in there and I wouldn't see them.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Kitty Klein ever go into the money room?

Mr. BARKER. Probably he did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him go into it?

Mr. BARKER. That I couldn't say.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you say probably he did?

Mr. BARKER. Well, because there was a little space there and a door led into the money room. He used to sit in there. That is where, if you wanted to know about any credits, he was in there.

He could get into the money room. He could get in there, and maybe he did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Joe Adonis at the L. & C. Amusement Co. at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. Probably have seen him there.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Barker, you know whether you have seen him or not. Did you see him or not?

Mr. BARKER. Well, I wouldn't be sure, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. You know Joe Adonis when you see him?

Mr. BARKER. I must know him.

Senator TOBEY. Why must you?

Mr. BARKER. They all say he was in there and if he was in there I must have seen him.

Senator TOBEY. Don't you know him and haven't you had conversations with him several times in your life?

Mr. BARKER. No, no.

Senator TOBEY. If he walked in here you would know him, wouldn't you?

Mr. BARKER. Probably.

Senator TOBEY. Why do you say probably? You would or you wouldn't.

Mr. BARKER. If he was there and I saw him.

Senator TOBEY. I didn't say that. If he walked in the door you would know him.

Mr. BARKER. Probably.

Senator TOBEY. You would know it was Joe Adonis. The answer is "Yes," isn't it?

Mr. BARKER. I have seen his picture in the paper a lot of times.

Senator TOBEY. You have seen his face too, probably, face to face.

Mr. BARKER. Probably I have.

Senator TOBEY. Why do you say probably. You have or you haven't.

Mr. BARKER. I think I have.

Senator TOBEY. Then say "Yes," and cut out this word "probably"; it is too ambiguous.

Mr. BARKER. I will say "Yes" if it will help any.

Senator TOBEY. When you went to work at this other joint, I don't know where it was, a while ago you said you met him at Seventh Avenue and went over there.

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. How about the Lodi place? How did you get access there? Who hired you there?

Mr. BARKER. Who hired me?

Senator TOBEY. Yes, at Lodi. Who put you on the job there working.

Mr. BARKER. The same people that worked over there with us, the boys that worked in the place went over there, some of them.

Senator TOBEY. Who told you to come there?

Mr. BARKER. Mr. Goldfine might have called me.

Senator TOBEY. You have these probable words that you use. You have probably and might have. You have a good lexicon there. But we want brass tacks. Was it Goldfine who called you or not?

Mr. BARKER. I think it was.

Senator TOBEY. Say "Yes" or "No."

Mr. BARKER. Suppose I was mistaken.

Senator TOBEY. Because we take the chance on that. You give us the testimony "Yes" or "No."

Mr. BARKER. I will say "Yes" to that.

Senator TOBEY. Going ahead. When you got over to Lodi's how about the modis operandi of salaries there?

Mr. BARKER. The same thing.

Senator TOBEY. Did you get just an envelope in the same way?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. What did you get?

Mr. BARKER. $100.

Senator TOBEY. What did the fellows under you get?

Mr. BARKER. I don't know what they got.

Senator TOBEY. You were over them, weren't you?

Mr. BARKER. Sir?

Senator TOBEY. You were over them, weren't you?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, but I didn't ask them.

Senator TOBEY. They were underlings?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Do you know what they got?

Mr. BARKER. The same thing, I guess.

Senator TOBEY. Money, check, cash, or what?

Mr. BARKER. Money.

Senator TOBEY. Where did this crowd bank, do you know? Where did they bank their money?

Mr. BARKER. I don't know anything about their money.

Senator TOBEY. That is all, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BARKER. I know nothing about their money at all. I have never handled any of their money, aside from my salary. Nobody in those places, dealers, have anything to do with the money.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1947 you also worked at Saratoga, did you not?

Mr. BARKER. Yes; that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked there for the L. & L. Co.?

Mr. BARKER. That is what is on there. I worked for it.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get that job?

Mr. BARKER. We all went from Lodi over there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is we all?

Mr. BARKER. These dealers.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were the dealers? Give us some names.

Mr. BARKER. I think Mr. Waggoner worked there.

Mr. HALLEY. What is Waggoner's full name?

Mr. BARKER. Leon, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. Any others?

Mr. BARKER. They were on the craps. I had nothing to do with that.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there a Sammy Fishman?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he a dealer?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there a Bill Williams?

Mr. BARKER. No; I don't think he worked in Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. But Fishman did?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And he also worked in Lodi, is that right?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Jimmie Cohen work at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. Jimmie Cohen worked at Caldwell, but I can't remember whether he went down to Lodi or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he go to Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Mike Lascari work at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. I don't know him.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know Mike Lascari?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. L-a-s-c-a-r-i, Mike Lascari.

Mr. BARKER. There wasn't any dealer there by that name.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't he the cashier?

Mr. BARKER. Oh, there was a man by the name of Mike. I never knew his last name.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was he the cashier?

Mr. BARKER. In Lodi.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he go to Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He did?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there a man named Alex Goldfine?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He was at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He was also at Caldwell?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he go to Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. At Saratoga where were you actually located? Where was the gambling?

Mr. BARKER. Where the clubhouse was?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. A place called Arrowhead Inn.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was your boss there?

Mr. BARKER. Mr. Lynch was there. If he was the boss, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. James Lynch?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who offered you the opportunity to go to Saratoga in the summer of 1947?

Mr. BARKER. We all went there from Lodi.

Mr. HALLEY. You must at least have gone home and packed a grip. Who told you you were going to Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. Everybody around there said we are going up to Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. Who told you when to go and where to go?

Mr. BARKER. Who told me when to go?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. They told me they were going to open there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who told you?

Mr. BARKER. Well, maybe Mr. Goldfine. I wouldn't be surprised if he did.

Mr. HALLEY. I would like to know definitely and not maybe.

Mr. BARKER. Well, I would say "Yes."

Mr. HALLEY. You would say "Yes"?

Mr. BARKER. I would say "Yes," but maybe somebody else, but I will say "Yes" anyhow.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you travel there alone or in the company of others to Saratoga? How did you get to Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. On the train.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go alone or with others?

Mr. BARKER. No; my wife went with me.

Mr. HALLEY. Who paid your carfare to Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. Who paid it?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. I paid it myself.

Mr. HALLEY. You paid your own fare to get there?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you live there?

Mr. BARKER. I lived at the Red Sandal.

Mr. HALLEY. Who paid your rent there?

Mr. BARKER. I paid it.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your salary at Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. Before I went there I told Mr. Goldfine that I mentioned the fact to him that I couldn't go up there and pay the expenses up there and my own expenses here, and when I got up there my first week's check was more than $100.

Mr. HALLEY. What was it?

Mr. BARKER. $250.

Mr. HALLEY. Who arranged that increase in salary?

Mr. BARKER. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean you went without any assurance that you would get more money?

Mr. BARKER. I went, took a chance.

Senator TOBEY. He knew Mr. Goldfine was a large-hearted man.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Goldfine wasn't the boss there?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. With whom else did you have a conversation about your salary at Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. Nobody.

Mr. HALLEY. You are under oath. You understand?

Mr. BARKER. I understand that.

Mr. HALLEY. You are now testifying that you did not discuss the salary you were to receive at the Arrowhead Inn, Saratoga, in 1947—please let me finish the question—with anybody except Mr. Goldfine?

Mr. BARKER. Before I went there.

Mr. HALLEY. Before you went there.

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. After you got there with whom did you discuss it?

Mr. BARKER. I didn't discuss it with anybody. I thought I would wait and see what I got.

Mr. HALLEY. You had no discussions at all?

Mr. BARKER. Not at all.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you work in Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. I must have worked 4 weeks.

Mr. HALLEY. How many roulette wheels were there?

Mr. BARKER. Well, I think we had six.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you added one; is that right?

Mr. BARKER. And then I think when we might anticipate a big night, we added another.

Mr. HALLEY. Business must have been real flourishing.

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. If you had six wheels and added a seventh you must have had a lot of customers.

Mr. BARKER. On one night, maybe.

Mr. HALLEY. On one night?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean you brought a wheel in? Did you remove it again?

Mr. BARKER. Night after night there might not be three wheels going.

Mr. HALLEY. But you had seven on the premises?

Mr. BARKER. Yes; that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You found it necessary to add the seventh?

Mr. BARKER. We added that anyway.

Mr. HALLEY. How many crap tables were there?

Mr. BARKER. Two; I think there were two.

Mr. HALLEY. What other gambling was there?

Mr. BARKER. We had for awhile what you call a big six wheel.

Mr. HALLEY. What is that?

Mr. BARKER. It is a wheel with numbers on it, where you put your money down.

Mr. HALLEY. A vertical wheel?

Mr. BARKER. And if your number comes up you get paid.

Mr. HALLEY. What other gambling was there?

Mr. BARKER. None.

Mr. HALLEY. The Arrowhead Inn was also a restaurant, was it not?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Andrew Bruno in charge of the restaurant?

Mr. BARKER. Bruno? No; I don't think he was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was in charge of the restaurant?

Mr. BARKER. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was in charge of the credit at the gambling?

Mr. BARKER. Kitty Klein.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was in charge of purchasing supplies, do you know?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know of a David Hyde?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his job there?

Mr. BARKER. He wasn't there.

Mr. HALLEY. He was not there?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there also entertainment at the Arrowhead Inn? It was wide open to the public, is that right?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did people have to give any special signal to get into the gambling room or was it just a part of the gambling room with the doors open?

Mr. BARKER. The doors were open, but they generally had a man there to keep out objectionable characters, people who were drinking or anything of that kind.

Mr. HALLEY. But anybody from the restaurant could wander into the gambling room, is that right?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you work after you worked at the Arrowhead Inn in Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. I came back to Lodi.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you work at Lodi after you worked in Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. We came back from Saratoga, which probably would be around the 1st of September, and I was there until the following March.

Mr. HALLEY. 1948?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. March of 1948?

Mr. BARKER. Since that I haven't worked.

Mr. HALLEY. When you returned to Lodi were conditions about the same as you previously described them?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever worked at the Colonial Inn in Miami Beach?

Mr. BARKER. Years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Under Ben Marden?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you worked at any other gambling places at Miami?

Mr. BARKER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Miami Beach?

Mr. BARKER. No; I take that back. It is so long ago, it is 25 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked at Colonial Inn around 1939 or 1940, did you not?

Mr. BARKER. But you asked me if I ever worked there, and I said "No," in Miami Beach. I forgot that I worked there about 25 years ago out in a place called the Jungle Inn.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get to and from the gambling house at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. Well, some of the boys would pick me up.

Mr. HALLEY. And take you out in an automobile?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who would pick you up?

Mr. BARKER. Well, perhaps the one that was most convenient. Sometimes Mr. Kesler would pick me up, sometimes Mr. Goldfine would pick me up, sometimes somebody else would pick me up.

Mr. HALLEY. Would they use a house car?

Mr. BARKER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. There were house cars, were there not?

Mr. BARKER. Yes; I believe so.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the house cars used for?

Mr. BARKER. I have to surmise about some of these things.

Mr. HALLEY. Please surmise.

Mr. BARKER. I imagine they were to bring customers in.

Mr. HALLEY. From New York?

Mr. BARKER. Probably they were.

Mr. HALLEY. There is no doubt about it, is there?

Mr. BARKER. I never had anything to do with any of that kind of thing.

Mr. HALLEY. Look, you have been in that business, you have testified, for very many years, I think you said 40.

Mr. BARKER. A little more, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You had a very responsible job at Lodi and at Arrowhead. You must have known what was happening.

Mr. BARKER. Well, I am not very inquisitive. I don't go around asking people what they do or who they are. This is a business with me.

Mr. HALLEY. It is a business in which you must keep your eyes wide open.

Mr. BARKER. Yes; for what I am doing.

Mr. HALLEY. How did the players get there, in these house cars?

Mr. BARKER. I suppose lots of those players had their own cars. I don't know that.

Mr. HALLEY. But you also know; do you not?

Mr. BARKER. I wasn't on the door. I wasn't the doorman.

Mr. HALLEY. You know, do you not, that the house cars picked up some players in New York?

Mr. BARKER. I don't know that from my personal knowledge; no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You know it from your general observation.

Mr. BARKER. I know that they had some cars around there. What they did with them I don't know. They might have picked people up in New York, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. We will offer in evidence the remaining income tax returns and documents brought by the witness covering years 1947 and 1948. You already have before you the return for 1945.

Mr. BARKER. I had no returns for 2 years.

The CHAIRMAN. They will be filed in evidence and made appropriate exhibits to Mr. Barker's testimony.

(The documents referred to were identified as exhibit No. 6, and returned to the witness after analysis by the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Meyer Lansky?

Mr. BARKER. Yes, I know him.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your acquaintance with him?

Mr. BARKER. Casual

Mr. HALLEY. He was one of the bosses at the Arrowhead Inn; wasn't he?

Mr. BARKER. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him at the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. BARKER. No; I don't think I ever saw him.

Mr. HALLEY. You never saw him there?

Mr. BARKER. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him at Lodi?

Mr. BARKER. I think I have seen him there; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he have anything to do with the operation?

Mr. BARKER. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him in any other places at which you worked?

Mr. BARKER. Any other places; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him at Colonial Inn in Florida?

Mr. BARKER. No, no; I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him at Hasbrouck Heights?

Mr. BARKER. No; I don't think I ever saw him there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know a man named Stacher?

Mr. BARKER. No. I don't know him by that name. Maybe I know him. People have lots of names. I have only one.

Mr. HALLEY. No other questions.

Mr. BARKER. Is that all?

The CHAIRMAN. No, just a minute.

Mr. Kostelanetz?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. No.

Senator TOBEY. I would like to ask you this question: This gambling, it is elementary to say, was illegal at Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. I believe they have some kind of law in the State of New York. I don't know just what it comprises.

Senator TOBEY. Are roulette wheels and crap games legal in New York?

Mr. BARKER. Are they legal?

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. I wouldn't think so because if there were there would be a good many places around.

Senator TOBEY. How did you account for the fact that the police authorities at Saratoga never raided this place, did they, where you were?

Mr. BARKER. Well, you are asking me something that I couldn't tell you because I don't know anything about the authorities and Saratoga.

Senator TOBEY. They never raided any of these places you have been in, have they?

Mr. BARKER. Well, I think I have read of a few raids at Saratoga.

Senator TOBEY. I mean when you were working at these places.

Mr. BARKER. No.

Senator TOBEY. Was protection in your judgment on the part of the owners and the police authorities?

Mr. BARKER. That I don't know.

Senator TOBEY. Did you ever wonder why they didn't come down like a ton of bricks on you and put you out of business?

Mr. BARKER. I never gave it a thought.

Senator TOBEY. I see. I would like to have that happy state of mind. It must be wonderful.

Mr. BARKER. It is maybe a little hard to convince you about this kind of business, but it is a very peculiar thing. You have to take a lot of things on their face value.

Senator TOBEY. Let me ask you, is there a group or a crew or an entourage, put it that way, of wheelmen and crapmen and credit men and men who operate these joints, who are a floating supply, and when they move from A to B, from B to C, they send the word around surreptitiously? Is there a group they call the faithful that they can call up at the wave of a hand and you are on the job, is that it?

Mr. BARKER. No. There are a lot of men who work in these places. Some are more competent than others. If you are trying to get a crew of men together, you try to get the most competent. You have a lot of things to consider, I suppose, whether the men drink, whether you can depend on them. I will say to you—you wonder why these things happen, so I will have to cite an instance. If you were engaged in this business and you were in New York and the word got out, which gets out very fast, because that is their livelihood, you would have probably 100 letters and telegrams, and that is the way they know. If you ask me did I know such and such a man who was a wheel dealer, what about him, if I knew him or if I had ever had any connection with him, I would say he is A-1, all right. That is the way the information gets around.

Senator TOBEY. There is a pool or reservoir of good men to operate these places?

Mr. BARKER. Oh, yes.

Senator TOBEY. That are known as the faithful, so to speak, and they call them up when they need them; is that it?

Mr. BARKER. I suppose so; yes, certainly. They would naturally pick somebody that they knew, that they had had in their place, and they knew their reputations. They would probably send for him.

Senator TOBEY. That is all, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Barker, you were never raided at Lodi or Saratoga or anywhere in New Jersey?

Mr. BARKER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. How long has it been since you have been in a place that has been raided or where somebody has been arrested?

Mr. BARKER. Well, I was in a place they raided once, but I had nothing to do with it. They came in there.

The CHAIRMAN. How long ago was that?

Mr. BARKER. Maybe around 1915 or 1912.

The CHAIRMAN. 1912 or 1915?

Mr. BARKER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is the last gambling place you operated in New York City?

Mr. BARKER. Here?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. I haven't worked in here for a good many years.

The CHAIRMAN. How many years?

Mr. BARKER. I would say—I haven't worked in any gambling house in New York City but maybe 2 days to help somebody out.

The CHAIRMAN. How long ago has that been?

Mr. BARKER. That has been 15 or 20 years ago.

The CHAIRMAN. Where was that?

Mr. BARKER. I think it was on Eighty-third Street.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know the address?

Mr. BARKER. No; I don't, because I was only there twice.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know Patty Rock, the chief of police up at Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. Patty Rock; yes, I know him.

The CHAIRMAN. How do you happen to know him? Where did you meet him?

Mr. BARKER. I used to go to Saratoga many years ago when Saratoga was Saratoga.

Senator TOBEY. What is it now?

Mr. BARKER. It is not much.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you known Chief of Police Patty Rock?

Mr. BARKER. I will say this to you: That I wouldn't know Patty Rock if he came in here.

The CHAIRMAN. But do you know him?

Mr. BARKER. Well, I know who he was. He has been pointed out to me.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know him to talk with him personally?

Mr. BARKER. I think I have talked to him.

The CHAIRMAN. Would he come in to the Arrowhead Club?

Mr. BARKER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ever see him in there?

Mr. BARKER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Where would you see him when you talked with him?

Mr. BARKER. I tell you there is a place up there called the Worden House and almost everybody sits there sometime during the day. There is no place to go except up and down that Broadway. Somebody might mention the fact that he is Patty Rock. Probably I have spoken to him. Maybe he didn't speak to me. I might have spoke to him. But it wasn't anything pertaining to gambling.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ever see Patty Rock at any club that you operated up there?

Mr. BARKER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. How many times have you operated in Saratoga?

Mr. BARKER. How many times?

The CHAIRMAN. How many years.

Mr. BARKER. I think I first went to Saratoga around maybe 1910 or 1911.

The CHAIRMAN. Since 1910 or 1911 you have been there off and on, off and on?

Mr. BARKER. Off and on.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever operated in Westchester County?

Mr. BARKER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You never have?

Mr. BARKER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Any further questions, gentlemen?

Senator TOBEY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to make an observation. Looking up on the wall is the picture of the late Chief Justice of our Supreme Court. When I was a young man, just married in the early part of this century, I heard him speak when he was Governor about the operation of the race track and gambling interests in New York City. He inspired me then and he inspired me in many ways, and I look on his face now and pay tribute to a great American and a great Governor and a great statesman now gone to his reward. I think it would do this committee good to look at his face and be fired with the same zeal for duty and hatred of sin that that man had in his soul.

Mr. BARKER. You asked about knowing people, who the bosses were. I worked for 2 years in Denver for a combination but I never came in contact with any of them.

Senator TOBEY. You are not supposed to be inquisitive. Yours is not to reason why, yours but to take the salary and deal the cards.

Mr. BARKER. As I told you, this is strictly a business. I had no interest in anybody else. There is only one interest I had in it, when they lay down the manila.

Senator TOBEY. It wasn't very much, $100 a week.

Mr. BARKER. Well, I ain't getting it now.

It might help a little right now.

Senator TOBEY. Somebody probably will call you up in the next 2 or 3 days and say come out some place.

Mr. BARKER. Do you think they will?

Senator TOBEY. I think so, a man as good and experienced as you are.

Mr. BARKER. I tell you, I will give you an answer to that. If somebody called me up tomorrow and told me about some place I could go to work, I would hand it right back to him as long as this committee is in existence.

Senator TOBEY. Thank you for that compliment.

The CHAIRMAN. We appreciate that, Mr. Barker.

Mr. BARKER. I have told you anything that would help you.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Barker, you haven't told us as much as we think you could tell us, but your information has been informative.

Mr. BARKER. I assure you, Senator, that I have told you all I really know. I cannot manufacture any stories.

The CHAIRMAN. We think you have been truthful about what you have said, but your memory is not as good as it might be.

Mr. BARKER. It might be. I am not so young.

The CHAIRMAN. Anyway, Mr. Barker, you will remain under subpoena, and if and when we need you we will call you.

Mr. BARKER. That is all right. About those——

The CHAIRMAN. We will see that they get back to you.

Mr. BARKER. That is all right because I will need them for my income-tax man.

The CHAIRMAN. They will be in good hands.

(Whereupon, at 12:45 p. m. the committee recessed until 2:15 p. m. the same day.)

AFTER RECESS

(The committee reconvened at 3:15 o'clock p. m.)

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order.

Mr. Bernstein, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I do.

TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM BERNSTEIN, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. Your name is William Bernstein?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you live?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. At the Essex House, 160 Central Park South.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I am the secretary and treasurer of the Wilmark Services.

Mr. HALLEY. Wilmark——

Mr. BERNSTEIN. W-i-l-m-a-r-k, Service System.

Mr. HALLEY. In the year 1948 did you lose certain moneys gambling?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Was the total of that $19,700?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I wouldn't say that was the total. It might have been in checks, but I took back some cash, maybe $4,500 in cash.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you lose this money?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. In a place over in Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know where the place is?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No. All I know is that I was taken in an automobile. I have been suffering with a cold. I was taken in an automobile over the bridge.

Mr. HALLEY. The George Washington Bridge?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. The George Washington Bridge. You ride for about three-quarters of an hour, and then there is a place where they have second-hand automobile cars, and they take you through a driveway into a dark spot. There was some man with a little service light that opens the door and lets you in. There was a party of five of us including my wife.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you arrange to go?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. While I was sitting in the lobby, to my sorrow, a fellow who is in the fur business said he heard of a gambling place over in Jersey where you can get a nice steak dinner free. They serve a wonderful meal, he said.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is this man?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I knew him at the time. His name was Victor, in the fur business, a fellow who hung around the lobby.

Mr. HALLEY. Victor what?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I don't know his last name. That was the name I knew him as, Victor.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he live in the Essex House?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. He lived at the Essex House.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you learned his name since?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes. Now I know his name is Ceder, Victor Ceder. He suggested that we go over there. He said, "Do you want to go alone." I said to my wife, "Do you want to go over to a gambling place in Jersey?" I said, "We will lose a couple of hundred dollars and come back." Instead of losing a couple of hundred dollars we lost eight. I went over there two other times after that.

Mr. HALLEY. I see checks dated February 18, February 26, February 27, and March 10, 1948.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that your recollection?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. It might be about that time.

Mr. HALLEY. Let me show you the checks.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I appeared before the district attorney with these checks.

Mr. HALLEY. Are these your checks (handing checks to the witness)?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is correct, they are my checks.

Mr. HALLEY. What game did you play at this place?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Dice. My wife might have played some roulette while I was playing dice.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Mr. Ceder introduce you?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Mr. Ceder brought us over at the time.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you arrange transportation?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. He said there is a car that calls for you. He says he calls up a number and they send a car. In fact, he said he called up a number and the car was coming over, and do I want to go.

Mr. HALLEY. The car came right to the Essex House?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. To the Essex House; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And picked you up there?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. There were two other people as well?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know the other people?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. The live in the Essex House, too.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are they?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. A man by the name of Brickman and a man by the name of Glickman. One didn't play, and I think the other lost about $100.

Mr. HALLEY. You went there on three occasions?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. As many occasions as that, because I came back with cash. After the way I got this money—for instance, is there a check for $8,700?

Mr. HALLEY. The first check is $8,700.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. What I did there, I gave them a check for $8,700, but the other check was, when I gave them the check, I got some cash back with which I gambled some more.

Mr. HALLEY. May the record show that the first check is on the Chemical Bank & Trust Co., dated February 18, 1948, signed by Mr. Bernstein, endorsed on the back by James Lynch, and was deposited in the Merchants Bank of New York.

How much did you lose altogether on the four occasions?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I will say all told maybe about $14,000.

Mr. HALLEY. About $14,000 on four occasions?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were there many people playing at this establishment?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. In this place?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I will say the nights I was there between 200 and 300.

Mr. HALLEY. How many crap tables were there?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Two. The rest were playing roulette and then there was a chemin de fer game there.

Mr. HALLEY. Were there other large losers that you could see?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Mr. Halley, I was trying to make points. I was sober. I went over there to get a free dinner. I wouldn't have gone over the second time if I didn't try to get back what I lost the first time.

Mr. HALLEY. And the third to get back what you lost the second time.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I was just a damned fool for going over there just like everybody else was.

Mr. HALLEY. Was a lot of money being placed at the table?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes; money was being played. There were three abreast at each crap game.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the stakes? What was the smallest bet?

MR. BERNSTEIN. The smallest bet I think was $5, and the biggest bet, if I am right—I may be wrong on the smallest bet, but I know the biggest bet was $200.

MR. HALLEY. On any one bet?

MR. BERNSTEIN. On any one number. You know what I mean. In other words, you could lay $200 on each number, you see.

MR. HALLEY. You could put thousands down.

MR. BERNSTEIN. But you could bet only $200 on the line, you see.

MR. HALLEY. Would you say that while you were there the average amount of money on the table during any one time was in excess of a thousand dollars?

MR. BERNSTEIN. Oh, more than that.

MR. HALLEY. More than $5,000 on the table at a time?

MR. BERNSTEIN. I would say around $2,000 at every play.

MR. HALLEY. With every play.

MR. BERNSTEIN. Easy. With three abreast and everybody fighting to get into the table.

MR. HALLEY. Fighting to put their money down.

MR. BERNSTEIN. Fighting to lose their money.

MR. HALLEY. Were you taken home again after you left this place?

MR. BERNSTEIN. They gave you a car.

MR. HALLEY. A card?

MR. BERNSTEIN. A car. You just say you want a car, and they give you a car in front of the door. As you come out this dark place, five of us jumped into a car and were taken back to the Essex.

MR. HALLEY. What games besides craps did you see playing there?

MR. BERNSTEIN. There was roulette and chemin de fer.

MR. HALLEY. Mrs. Bernstein played roulette, you think?

MR. BERNSTEIN. She played roulette; yes.

MR. HALLEY. Did she lose, too?

MR. BERNSTEIN. She lost about $300 each night.

MR. HALLEY. Each of four nights?

MR. BERNSTEIN. Yes; and then she stood alongside of me rooting for me.

MR. HALLEY. I see. Did you get the free dinner?

MR. BERNSTEIN. Free dinner? By golly, it was the most expensive dinner I ever ate in my life. I just remarked what a sad affair it was that I had to stand at the settee at the hotel when this fellow came along and remarked about a crap game over in Jersey. It was my hard luck that I hadn't gone to a theater or had an appointment with somebody.

But it is one of those things that happens in a person's life, and I took it with a grain of salt and forgot about it.

MR. HALLEY. There was a restaurant?

MR. BERNSTEIN. A restaurant—as you walk in there is a big restaurant. Then you go under an arch into the gambling end of it.

MR. HALLEY. Was there any entertainment or just food?

MR. BERNSTEIN. Just food, but food. They give you steaks and steaks as a chaser and steaks and more steaks, and that thick. You never saw such an assortment of food in your life. But they don't charge anyone for their meals. Everything is free.

MR. HALLEY. The meal is free.

The CHAIRMAN. How about drinks. Free drinks?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. All the drinks you want, but I don't drink, Senator.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you have any qualms about appearing publicly to testify about this?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. To appear and testify?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Well, Mr. Halley, I represent 23,000 corporations in the United States, and I don't want these corporations to know that I go in and gamble, and so forth and so on. You know what I mean. I happen to be one of the firm. I mean if I have to and it was going to do you a lot of good and it meant a lot, I wouldn't hesitate. You know what I mean.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Bernstein, how much do you make a year?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. How much do I make a year?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, just approximately.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Last year, Senator, my salary was $46,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that gross?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No. That is before income tax.

The CHAIRMAN. That is what you paid a tax on.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes. I paid a tax on $46,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Is your home permanently here?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes, my home is at the Essex House.

The CHAIRMAN. What kind of automobiles did they take you back and forth in?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. A closed car.

The CHAIRMAN. A Cadillac?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I wouldn't know what the make of the car was.

The CHAIRMAN. A big black car?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes. You know. Listen, I wish to God that you would stop all that gambling throughout the United States and if I could help you, I would be the first one to come to the front for you.

The CHAIRMAN. I know how you feel about it, Mr. Bernstein. Thank you very much for your cooperation.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. You are quite welcome, I assure you.

The CHAIRMAN. How are you, doctor? Do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

TESTIMONY OF THEODORE MORICI, M. D., PASSAIC, N. J., ACCOMPANIED BY JOHN T. SULLIVAN, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mr. KONSTELANETZ. Where do you practice medicine, doctor?

Dr. MORICI. Passaic, N. J.

Mr. KONSTELANETZ. How long have you been a doctor, sir?

Dr. MORICI. Twenty-five years.

Mr. KONSTELANETZ. Are you qualified in any particular specialty?

Dr. MORICI. Surgery.

Mr. KONSTELANETZ. Are you a diplomate in surgery?

Dr. MORICI. I am supposed to be a diplomate in surgery, yes.

Mr. KONSTELANETZ. Do you do any general practice at all, doctor?

Dr. MORICI. Very, very little.

Mr. KONSTELANETZ. Do you know a Mrs. Joseph Doto?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. How long have you known her?

Dr. MORICI. About 5 years.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. How long has she been a patient of yours, doctor?

Dr. MORICI. She has been a patient of mine about 4 years.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Has she been visiting you regularly?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Did you do the surgery in her case?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. How far is Passaic from your town, sir?

Dr. MORICI. Passaic from where?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Where your town is, from the town you live in.

Dr. MORICI. I live in Passaic.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. I am very sorry. I withdraw that. How far is the town in which Mrs. Doto lives?

Dr. MORICI. About 10 miles.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Do you know Mr. William Moretti, Doctor?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. How long have you known him?

Dr. MORICI. About 15 years.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Is he a patient of yours?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Have you treated him in your specialty?

Dr. MORICI. No. I have treated the family.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. I see. Have you ever treated him before this time?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. How often would you say you have treated him?

Dr. MORICI. In what way do you mean, sir?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. In your specialty?

Dr. MORICI. I never operated on him.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. I am sorry, in any way, sir.

Dr. MORICI. In any way, well, since 1943. At that time I had to treat him because he was becoming mentally unbalanced and we had to send him to Midtown Hospital in New York for malaria treatment and heat treatment. Every year I gave him a course of certain kinds of injections for this condition, twice a year. In 1946 he got his first hemorrhage from the nose due to his hypertension, and on another occasion he got another one. This time it was about half past 12 or a quarter of 1 that I got a call from St. Mary's Hospital where they had rushed him with a severe nosebleed. I took care of him there and I admitted him to the hospital.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. When did you see him last, sir?

Dr. MORICI. This morning.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. How far is the community in which Mr. Moretti lives from your office?

Dr. MORICI. About 3 miles, 2 miles.

Mr. HALLEY. How soon do you think he will be able to appear to testify?

Dr. MORICI. In about 10 days or so.

Mr. HALLEY. Will he remain in the hospital all that time?

Dr. MORICI. He is going to stay in the hospital until Sunday.

Mr. HALLEY. Will he be available to testify Monday?

Dr. MORICI. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. You think by Monday he will be able to testify? I think your letter stated his blood pressure was something like 200/110.

Dr. MORICI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. That is not unusually high; is it?

Dr. MORICI. No. Sometimes you have a blood pressure of 300 and don't get any trouble, but in certain people pressure is what we call relevant to that particular person. A blood pressure of 300 in me might not cause anything, and the pressure in him, where the brain is already soft anyway, would give trouble.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he a competent witness? Does he have his faculties?

Dr. MORICI. To a certain extent.

Mr. HALLEY. Could you elaborate on that answer?

Dr. MORICI. I think he knows what he is talking about.

Mr. HALLEY. Is his memory impaired?

Dr. MORICI. He repeats a great deal.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he recall things?

Dr. MORICI. He doesn't recall. Sometimes he says one thing and then later on he repeats the same thing in maybe little different words. Then he may elaborate on it. He is one of those fellows that has grandiose ideas.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry I didn't hear that.

Dr. MORICI. Grandiose ideas.

Mr. HALLEY. But he does recall things that happened in the past?

Dr. MORICI. Oh, yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Would it be injurious to his health to appear today?

Dr. MORICI. Today, I don't think he should appear at all because he is very, very nervous. He wanted to come down and I forbade him.

Mr. HALLEY. Would he be able to appear tomorrow?

Dr. MORICI. No. I think he should stay in 1 week—in bed.

Mr. HALLEY. When did he go to bed?

Dr. MORICI. He went to bed at 1 o'clock Monday morning, that night. He went to the hospital Sunday night around 12 o'clock or half past 12, somewhere around there, and I got this call, and that is the time he went to bed.

Mr. HALLEY. He will remain in the hospital until Sunday; is that right?

Dr. MORICI. Until Sunday or Saturday.

Mr. HALLEY. On his leaving the hospital, you say he will be able to testify?

Dr. MORICI. On leaving the hospital, he ought to go home, but that is not my business. If his pressure is low enough, I will let him go. His pressure today is much better than it was.

Mr. HALLEY. And then he could testify?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his blood pressure today?

Dr. MORICI. Today it is 170/105.

Mr. HALLEY. That is really quite reasonable for a man of his age; is it not?

Dr. MORICI. As I said before, if you have arterio-sclerosis, you never know when they are going to break.

Mr. HALLEY. With regard to your other patient, Mrs. Doto, how long has she been a patient of yours?

Dr. MORICI. About 4 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know her husband, Joe Doto?

Dr. MORICI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Dr. MORICI. About the same length of time.

Mr. HALLEY. Could you say through whose recommendation they came to you?

Dr. MORICI. Through Mr. Moretti.

Mr. HALLEY. Through Willie Moretti.

Dr. MORICI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. They are friends; is that right?

Dr. MORICI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What is her condition at this time?

Dr. MORICI. Her condition at this time, you never know from one minute to another. She had two pulmonary embolisms—infarcts, we call them—one on the right and one on the left lung, and those are the most dangerous things you can have. I may be sitting here, and the minute I stand up I get one of those and they would carry me out forever. She still has fluid in her lungs. She still has swelling of her leg which the embolism originates from, and that might take anywhere from 3 months to 5 years before it is absorbed to normal, if it ever absorbs.

Mr. HALLEY. She goes about the house; does she not?

Dr. MORICI. Yes; she is allowed the house, but she is not supposed to be under any excitement.

Mr. HALLEY. How would excitement affect her?

Dr. MORICI. Excitement affects anybody that way. If she has excitement, she would start to breathe faster; her heart would beat faster, and it may be enlarged at any moment.

Mr. HALLEY. On the other hand, she does move around normally; is that right?

Dr. MORICI. She doesn't do anything; she just moves around. She goes to the bathroom. She goes downstairs in the yard and takes some sunshine, and that is all she does. She doesn't do a thing.

Mr. HALLEY. Does she attend to her regular household duties?

Dr. MORICI. She doesn't do that.

Mr. HALLEY. Who does?

Dr. MORICI. She has a day nurse and night nurse, and she has a lady who comes in to do the housework.

Mr. HALLEY. Is she at the present time under the care of nurses?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long has she been under the care of nurses?

Dr. MORICI. Since she got out of the hospital.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Dr. MORICI. About July—5 weeks after June 3. That would be somewhere around July 4 or 5.

Mr. HALLEY. How long was she in the hospital?

Dr. MORICI. Five weeks.

Mr. HALLEY. Was she under your treatment in the hospital?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You were directly in charge of her case.

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you supervised her treatment ever since?

Dr. MORICI. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. You have supervised her treatment ever since?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You know that she has nurses in attendance at this time?

Dr. MORICI. I know what?

Mr. HALLEY. You know that she has nurses in attendance at this time?

Dr. MORICI. I know because I put them on.

Mr. HALLEY. They have been there ever since?

Dr. MORICI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it your testimony that it would be injurious to her health to appear as a witness?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it your testimony that it would be dangerous to her life to appear as a witness?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you feel that she could appear here if there were no undue questioning and if she were asked some simple questions and could leave without running the risk of experiencing difficulties?

Dr. MORICI. She would run a risk by coming here. As a matter of fact, after Mr. Sullivan told me that I should come up here, I inquired of several doctors and explained the case to them, and they said that I would be crazy to let her go.

Mr. HALLEY. Who said that?

Dr. MORICI. Several doctors.

Mr. HALLEY. What are their names?

Dr. MORICI. Do you want specific names?

Mr. HALLEY. Please.

Dr. MORICI. Surely, I will give you names. I have asked Dr. Lotana and Dr. Costible.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you talk to them?

Dr. MORICI. When did I talk to them?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, when.

Dr. MORICI. This morning.

Mr. HALLEY. Where are they located?

Dr. MORICI. They are located in Passaic.

Mr. HALLEY. Are they familiar with the case personally?

Dr. MORICI. I explained the case to them. As a matter of fact, I talked with different doctors on many occasions about that case to see if there was anything else that could be done with her.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see her husband?

Dr. MORICI. Her husband I haven't seen for quite a while.

Mr. HALLEY. How long?

Dr. MORICI. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. A year?

Dr. MORICI. I would say a year. I saw him several months ago. I saw him while she was at the hospital.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know the names of the nurses who are on the case?

Dr. MORICI. Yes. One is Miss Lyons and the other one is Estelle—I don't know the last name.

Mr. HALLEY. Are they registered nurses?

Dr. MORICI. One is a registered nurse and the other one is not.

Mr. HALLEY. Are they nurses whom you obtained for her? Did you obtain these nurses for her? Did you arrange for their services?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. If this committee appoints a doctor to look into the matter, will you be willing to consult with him and show him your records?

Dr. MORICI. Certainly.

Mr. HALLEY. If he found it necessary to examine the patient, would that be possible?

Dr. MORICI. Positively.

Mr. HALLEY. That is, with reference to Mrs. Doto.

Dr. MORICI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. With reference to Moretti, you say he will be able to testify by Monday.

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. That is all I have.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you the physician for all of the Moretti family?

Dr. MORICI. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are their family physician?

Dr. MORICI. That is right, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How about all the Doto family?

Dr. MORICI. The Doto family, his immediate family.

The CHAIRMAN. You are the doctor for Mrs. Doto. How about Mr. Doto?

Dr. MORICI. Yes; I take care of him.

The CHAIRMAN. You are their regular family physician.

Dr. MORICI. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. How far do you live from the Morettis?

Dr. MORICI. I answered that question before; about 3 miles.

The CHAIRMAN. And from the Dotos?

Dr. MORICI. About 15 minutes' ride from my office.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Doctor. We thank you.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Gale, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. GALE. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JOSEPH T. GALE, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. Your name is Joseph T. Gale?

Mr. GALE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you live?

Mr. GALE. 310 Riverside Drive, New York City.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. GALE. Theatrical agency.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you lose a sum of money in gambling in the years 1947 and 1949?

Mr. GALE. I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you explain the circumstances to the committee?

Mr. GALE. I used to go out to a gambling house in Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know the name of the establishment?

Mr. GALE. I don't think it has one.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you make the connection?

Mr. GALE. A friend of mine took me out there shortly after I came out of the service.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the name of the friend?

Mr. GALE. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet this friend?

Mr. GALE. It must have been somebody I had known, but at the time—as you know, this is quite a number of years ago, and I never gave any importance to having remembered who brought me out there.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was this gambling establishment?

Mr. GALE. Somewhere in New Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. What did it look like?

Mr. GALE. From the outside—I always went there at night—it looked like a big garage or barn or something of that sort from the outside.

Mr. HALLEY. You went across the George Washington Bridge?

Mr. GALE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How far out after you crossed the bridge?

Mr. GALE. I would say somewhere around a 20-minute ride.

Mr. HALLEY. Did they have a restaurant?

Mr. GALE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. The food was free?

Mr. GALE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it good food?

Mr. GALE. Excellent.

Mr. HALLEY. All you wanted of any kind?

Mr. GALE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Including liquor?

Mr. GALE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And no charge for either?

Mr. GALE. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. There were crap games and roulette and chemin-de-fer, is that correct?

Mr. GALE. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. At what game did you lose your money?

Mr. GALE. Chemin-de-fer.

Mr. HALLEY. You went out almost throughout the entire year of 1947, is that right?

Mr. GALE. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever win?

Mr. GALE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Your checks for the period 1947 and 1948 totaled $16,750. Would that represent a net loss?

Mr. GALE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How much would you say you lost over the period?

Mr. GALE. I would say probably four or five thousand. I never kept any exact figures on that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you invariably play on a cash basis or did you have credit?

Mr. GALE. I always paid by check at the end of the evening.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have chips?

Mr. GALE. Usually they advanced cash to me.

Mr. HALLEY. They advanced cash to you?

Mr. GALE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. At the end of the evening you provided a check to pay cash.

Mr. GALE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. I have here a number of checks drawn by you mainly on the Irving Trust Co.

Mr. GALE. Solely on the Irving Trust Co.

Mr. HALLEY. Are they solely on the Irving Trust?

Mr. GALE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. I notice they were drawn to cash. Were you told to draw them to cash?

Mr. GALE. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Many of them bear the signature of James Lynch. Do you know who James Lynch is?

Mr. GALE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Some bear the signature of A. Laytore. Do you know him; who he is?

Mr. GALE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. All seem to have stamped on them "Max Stark, special." Do you know Max Stark?

Mr. GALE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. They seem to have been put through the Merchants Bank of New York. Will you glance through the checks and state if they are your checks?

Mr. GALE. They are.

Mr. HALLEY. You have on a previous occasion examined them; is that right?

Mr. GALE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. They total $16,750.

How did you get transportation to and from this place? Was it provided by the house?

Mr. GALE. That is right. You would call a number and tell the operator where you wanted the car to pick you up.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you call a New York or New Jersey number?

Mr. GALE. It was a New Jersey number.

Mr. HALLEY. And the car would appear how long afterward?

Mr. GALE. Oh, anywhere from 15 minutes to half an hour.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were ready to leave, a car would take you home?

Mr. GALE. Or you called and told them when you wanted a car to come.

Mr. HALLEY. No other questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Gale, was all this gambling in just one place?

Mr. GALE. That is right, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Or did you visit several places?

Mr. GALE. Just one.

The CHAIRMAN. How about Saratoga?

Mr. GALE. I have never been there to gamble.

The CHAIRMAN. You have never been there to gamble.

Mr. GALE. That is right, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you get to know who the owners or operators of the place were?

Mr. GALE. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You look like you are a high-salaried man.

Mr. GALE. I have been doing fairly well, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What does your net income average a year?

Mr. GALE. I would say, since I came out of the service I have been probably averaging fifteen or twenty thousand a year.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. What is your business, Mr. Gale?

Mr. GALE. In the theatrical business, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Managerial?

Mr. GALE. Well, sort of a cross. We are basically a booking agency, but we service our clients. In other words, our clients are all under contract to us under an exclusive agency contract.

The CHAIRMAN. One question I forgot to ask you: Were a lot of people there? About how many people were there usually when you were there?

Mr. GALE. It would be hard to estimate the number of people, but the rooms were usually crowded. In other words, I imagine——

The CHAIRMAN. Would you say 100 or 200?

Mr. GALE. I would say at least 200.

The CHAIRMAN. That was the average crowd there?

Mr. GALE. I went there only on a Saturday night, so that is the only night that I could speak of.

Senator TOBEY. It may be too personal and if it is you need not answer, but what did you patronize there, cards or roulette?

Mr. GALE. The cards.

Senator TOBEY. What game did you play?

Mr. GALE. Chemin-de-fer.

Senator TOBEY. I see. Would you care to make a statement from your operations in playing cards or roulette, has it been profitable or not in the long run?

Mr. GALE. Oh, I lost.

Senator TOBEY. I was interested to know.

The CHAIRMAN. What is chemin-de-fer?

Mr. GALE. It is a card game. I think there are six decks of cards that are shuffled together and placed in a shoe, in a long box with a slot at the end from which one card at a time can be removed. The banker and the player each receive two cards apiece. The idea of the game is to learn who has cards totaling nine or closest to nine will win. The player is permitted one draw, in other words, one additional card, and so is the banker if he so desires. The first two cards are turned face down. The third card is turned face up. There are certain rules to the game. For example, if you have a 8 or 9 you are not permitted a draw. That is, you just turn your hand up and neither the banker nor the player can have an extra card. Whoever has the highest wins.

The CHAIRMAN. That is, nearest 9.

Mr. GALE. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. But if you get over 9 you bust?

Mr. GALE. No, there is no such thing as bust. If you have a total of 17 in your cards, say a 9 and 8, you have 7.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Anything else?

Mr. HALLEY. Just one question. Did you observe the general size of the pots in chemin-de-fer? The amount of money being spent?

Mr. GALE. The maximum that you could have in one pot was a thousand. In other words, you could not bet more than a thousand dollars.

Mr. HALLEY. On a three-card pot?

Mr. GALE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How many chemin-de-fer dealers were there?

Mr. GALE. As a general rule, between 12 and 14 were at the table at one time, no more.

Mr. HALLEY. As a general rule, were there at the table sums of money at one time in excess of, say, $5,000?

Mr. GALE. Oh, yes. On the table among all the players; oh, yes, definitely.

Mr. GALE. I mean actively in play.

Mr. GALE. When you say "actively in play," if you mean on the table, among all the players at the time; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You say there would be $5,000 or more actually in play at one time?

Mr. GALE. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What would be the minimum bet?

Mr. GALE. $20.

Mr. HALLEY. How many people generally were in the establishment when you were there?

Mr. GALE. As I said, I imagine at least 200.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you be willing even to guess the amount of money that crossed the table in a night?

Mr. GALE. No.

Mr. HALLEY. It must have been up near $100,000.

Mr. GALE. I wouldn't even make a guess. I would say it would be a fantastically large amount.

Senator TOBEY. Was the game honestly conducted?

Mr. GALE. I should hope so.

Senator TOBEY. You have experienced it. Do you think it is honestly conducted?

Mr. GALE. As far as I know, I think it was.

Senator TOBEY. Where does the house make on it?

Mr. GALE. In the chemin-de-fer game, the house would cut 5 percent of all the winning bets.

Senator TOBEY. How did they happen in the first place to put you on the favored list of clients to give transportation?

Mr. GALE. I had gone out there some time, I imagine in the earlier part of 1946, and at that time I was introduced to one of the men out there. From that time on—

Senator TOBEY. I see. Do you know any of the men, the leaders there?

Mr. GALE. No, sir. There are only two of the men who I faintly remember, and that would be two of the credit men.

Senator TOBEY. Do they run on credit, too?

Mr. GALE. I imagine so, because after all I received credit, if only until the end of the evening. It would be a thousand or two thousand dollars. I was not considered a big player.

Senator TOBEY. What would happen if a man gave a rubber check for a thousand dollars?

Mr. GALE. That I don't know. I imagine things happen.

Senator TOBEY. I imagine that has happened, human nature being as it is. Do you know where they buried him?

Mr. GALE. No, I don't know.

Senator TOBEY. That is all I have.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Gale. Thank you.

(Off the record.)

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Haft, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. HAFT. I do.

TESTIMONY OF ISIDORE HAFT, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. HAFT. Isidore Haft.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. HAFT. Dress business.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the address where you do your work?

Mr. HAFT. 36 Ellwood Street.

Mr. HALLEY. In Manhattan?

Mr. HAFT. That is in the heights.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you give checks for $10,625 in 1947 and 1948 for gambling?

Mr. HAFT. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to be introduced to this gambling place?

Mr. HAFT. Introduced?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. HAFT. Well, some friends took me over there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was your friend, do you know his name?

Mr. HAFT. Some acquaintance. I couldn't tell you just the name. He used to call me up. They used to tell me there was a place there to play chemin-de-fer, or craps.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you play personally?

Mr. HAFT. Craps.

Mr. HALLEY. You played dice.

Mr. HAFT. Dice, that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Was the place known to you as the Lodi place?

Mr. HAFT. There was everything there, roulette.

Mr. HALLEY. No, what was the name of the place where you went?

Mr. HAFT. I don't know the name.

Mr. HALLEY. You called the place Lodi, didn't you?

Mr. HAFT. No, they called me up and gave me a telephone number and whenever I wanted to go I should call up this number and they would send me a car.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know it as Charlie's?

Mr. HAFT. No.

Mr. HALLEY. No name at all?

Mr. HAFT. No name at all. Just a telephone number.

Mr. HALLEY. Who gave you the telephone number?

Mr. HAFT. They would call me up and I took the telephone number down. Whenever I wanted a car I called up.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember the telephone number?

Mr. HAFT. There were so many different ones. Every now and then they gave me a different number.

Mr. HALLEY. How would you get back home again?

Mr. HAFT. By car.

Mr. HALLEY. They would give you a car?

Mr. HAFT. They would give a car; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. The car would bring you back to New York.

Mr. HAFT. Back home, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You went on a great many occasions in 1947, did you not?

Mr. HAFT. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you lose a total of $10,625?

Mr. HAFT. No, I didn't lose that all.

Mr. HALLEY. How much would you say you lost?

Mr. HAFT. Well, maybe a couple of hundred, probably seven or eight hundred, because I gave checks whenever I lost.

Mr. HALLEY. You gave checks for your losses, but your winnings you took home in cash.

Mr. HAFT. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get free dinner there?

Mr. HAFT. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And drinks?

Mr. HAFT. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How many people were generally there when you were there?

Mr. HAFT. A lot of people.

Mr. HALLEY. A couple of hundred?

Mr. HAFT. A couple of hundred.

Mr. HALLEY. How many crap tables were there?

Mr. HAFT. I recollect something like two or three.

Mr. HALLEY. Was the meal that you got a good one?

Mr. HAFT. Well, anything you want.

Mr. HALLEY. Anything you wanted.

Mr. HAFT. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And all the liquor you wanted?

Mr. HAFT. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the smallest bet at the crap table?

Mr. HAFT. $5.

Mr. HALLEY. And what was the limit?

Mr. HAFT. I think about $300, I believe.

Mr. HALLEY. On any roll of the dice how much money would there be generally on the table? Would it be in the thousands?

Mr. HAFT. Well, I couldn't—sometimes there were two or three bettors, sometimes there were to capacity.

Mr. HALLEY. When the place was crowded would the table have a lot of money on it?

Mr. HAFT. Chips, no money.

Mr. HALLEY. Chips, but they were big chips, weren't they?

Mr. HAFT. There were $5 chips, and $25 chips, and $100 chips, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. When the game was really going well and the dice were being played, there would be a few thousand dollars bet on the table constantly, wouldn't there?

Mr. HAFT. I suppose so.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't that what you saw?

Mr. HAFT. I saw a lot of chips. I wouldn't count them.

Mr. HALLEY. You would see a lot of $100 chips though.

Mr. HAFT. Sometimes I didn't see hundred dollar chips at all. Sometimes the fellows couldn't play with that sort of chips. They would play with fives and twenties.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you say, though, that a great deal of money was passed.

Mr. HAFT. Oh, sure.

Mr. HALLEY. A very, very great amount?

Mr. HAFT. It was quite a bit. Sometimes all of a sudden you would see it half empty. They would go away. They would win and go away, or they would go away broke.

The CHAIRMAN. These checks were all endorsed. The endorsement is James Lynch, Max Stark, special, T. B. Harms. Two checks A. Laytore.

Senator TOBEY. What bank did those go through?

Mr. HALLEY. These are all Merchants Bank here in New York City. They are not Pennsylvania.

Senator TOBEY. The Pennsylvania Exchange Bank is here in this city.

(Off the record.)

The CHAIRMAN. Any questions, Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. You went there a good many times?

Mr. HAFT. Just as many times—

Senator TOBEY. You felt at home there?

Mr. HAFT. Practically, you know, to have a good time.

Senator TOBEY. They gave you a good greeting.

Mr. HAFT. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Who gave the glad-hand mostly?

Mr. HAFT. We didn't see any—they didn't ask you anything over there about who you are or where you are or nothing.

Senator TOBEY. Did you talk with any of the men who run the place there, their leaders?

Mr. HAFT. Only when I gave the check to the man who gave me the chips, when I presented the check.

Senator TOBEY. What are the names of some of the men there?

Mr. HAFT. I don't recollect any of the names. Only one fellow that I gave the check.

Senator TOBEY. What was his name?

Mr. HAFT. I think his name was Milton.

Senator TOBEY. Milton what?

Mr. HAFT. I don't know his second name.

Senator TOBEY. It wasn't John Milton, was it?

Mr. HAFT. No, no.

Senator TOBEY. That is all I have.

Mr. HAFT. His first name was Milton. That is all I know.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, thank you, Mr. Haft. That is all.

Mr. Tausend, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

TESTIMONY OF FRANCIS TAUSEND, NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Tausend, what is your address?

Mr. TAUSEND. 115 Central Park West.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. TAUSEND. I am in the importing business.

Mr. HALLEY. With what company?

Mr. TAUSEND. With Felix Tausend & Sons.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you the principal in that business?

Mr. TAUSEND. One of them.

Mr. HALLEY. You are a partner?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. During 1947 and 1949 did you have occasion to draw a number of checks in connection with a gambling game in New Jersey?

Mr. TAUSEND. I did, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to learn about this gambling game?

Mr. TAUSEND. At one time I received a card with a phone number.

Senator TOBEY. What did the card say?

Mr. TAUSEND. In reference to dining room opening, or words to that effect. I knew it referred to that. With a separate card with a phone number on it. I called and they sent a car for me. We used to go over there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did any individual tell you about the place?

Mr. TAUSEND. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You must have heard it from somebody, did you not?

Mr. TAUSEND. Through the card.

Mr. HALLEY. Only through the card?

Mr. TAUSEND. Only through the card.

Senator TOBEY. How did you know what the card meant?

Mr. TAUSEND. I had an idea it was and I called and that is what it was and I went over.

Senator TOBEY. What did they say when you called?

Mr. TAUSEND. I asked about it, and they said yes, it was a casino and I went over. They received my name, I was interested to know, from a place that I used to go before because they were most of the same familiar faces from the same place.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you been to the other places in Jersey as well?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is where I think they received my name, from a place called the Riviera a year ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Ben Marden's place?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How much of the total amount, which I see is $7,100 in checks you drew, would represent the net losses on your part?

Mr. TAUSEND. A lot of those checks represented checks that I cashed over there. They didn't exactly represent losses. There were times I did win. Other times those checks were cashed for friends of mine who did go over that I advanced the money who repaid me later on.

Mr. HALLEY. I see from May 1947 to January 10, 1948, there is a total of 11 checks, totalling $7,100. Are you in a position to say how much you lost over that period?

Mr. TAUSEND. I believe I can. I think that in 1947 I figured that I lost roughly around $800 personally.

Mr. HALLEY. And in 1948?

Mr. TAUSEND. In 1948 it was a little more than that, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1948 you had only $2,000 in checks. Would they represent mainly losses?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is what it is, because in 1948 I know I lost more than I did in 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. They provided the transportation back and forth?

Mr. TAUSEND. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You would telephone and the car would come to your house?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were ready to leave they would provide a car back?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How many people would be there at a time?

Mr. TAUSEND. I would be only guessing when I say maybe 150 or 200 people, something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. What game did you yourself play?

Mr. TAUSEND. I played mostly the roulette wheel.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the stakes at the roulette game?

Mr. TAUSEND. For the women I believe it was quarter chips, and for the men 50-cent chips or higher if you wanted to play higher.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any maximum?

Mr. TAUSEND. I won't be able to answer that because I never went that high. I wouldn't know any maximum.

Mr. HALLEY. As a rule, how many people would be around the roulette tables? Could you guess?

Mr. TAUSEND. They had quite a few tables there, sir. At one table there might have been eight or nine, and maybe others standing behind them waiting for a color or something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. With each turn of the wheel how much money would there be bet, would you say generally speaking? I know it varies tremendously.

Mr. TAUSEND. I would be only guessing, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Give your best recollection. You can probably visualize it. Were these wheels busy?

Mr. TAUSEND. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. With money on almost every number.

Mr. TAUSEND. They were very active.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course there are 38 numbers on a roulette wheel in addition to the black and white, even and odd. If there was active play there could easily be a couple of hundred dollars on every turn of the wheel.

Senator TOBEX. Is this at Lodi?

Mr. HALLEY. This was at Lodi, was it not?

Mr. TAUSEND. We went over Washington Bridge in the direction of Paterson. I believe it was around 15 minutes from the other side of the bridge. Where Lodi is—mostly I have been there—I don't know. I wouldn't know if I was in Lodi, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have any qualms or worries about being there, obviously in the company of a lot of thugs?

Mr. TAUSEND. I never pictured it that way.

Mr. HALLEY. Suppose—did you ever visualize what you would do if you won $25,000 and had to get home with it?

Mr. TAUSEND. I don't think that would ever happen to me. I mean I never was that steep of a gambler. I don't think I would ever have the chance of winning $25,000.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any concern about the people who ran the place and the company you were in?

Mr. TAUSEND. At the time, no.

Mr. HALLEY. The patrons for the most part appeared to be very nice people, would you say?

Mr. TAUSEND. Definitely so.

Senator TOBEY. Had you been fortunate enough to win $25,000, do you think you would have arrived home with it?

Mr. HALLEY. You live in the Majestic Apartments?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mr. TAUSEND. I have heard of him. I have seen him. I don't know him.

Mr. HALLEY. He lives in your building, doesn't he?

Mr. TAUSEND. I know he lives in the building.

Mr. HALLEY. It is a very large building; I know that.

Mr. TAUSEND. I think there are a couple hundred tenants.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know him?

Mr. TAUSEND. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is David Harris, the payee of one of your checks?

Mr. TAUSEND. I don't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he a friend to whom you made it out and then endorsed it over?

Mr. TAUSEND. No.

Mr. HALLEY. All of your checks appear to have been endorsed James Lynch. Do you know who he is?

Mr. TAUSEND. No.

Mr. HALLEY. And apparently then endorsed Max Stark, special. Do you know Max Stark?

Mr. TAUSEND. The only way—I don't know him, but he was pointed out to me when I was called for the hearing by the State.

Mr. HALLEY. On Max Stark?

Mr. TAUSEND. On Max Stark. That is the first time I ever saw him.

Mr. HALLEY. Your checks were all deposited in the Merchants Bank, is that right, in New York?

Mr. TAUSEND. I believe so.

Mr. HALLEY. If it so appears on their face, that would be your understanding, is that right?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Tausend, I was interested in your saying you think they got your name from the Riviera that you used to go to.

Mr. TAUSEND. That is my own idea, Senator, because the same people were the same players that were over there. I had an idea there was a list of them.

The CHAIRMAN. When was it you would go to the Riviera? How many years ago?

Mr. TAUSEND. That would be about 10 years ago or so.

The CHAIRMAN. But the same players and the same fellows in the gambling room were there that later on were over in this place in 1947?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. What other places did you go to in New Jersey?

Mr. TAUSEND. I went to a place in—that was quite a few years ago now, and I am trying to recollect—South of Paterson.

The CHAIRMAN. When was that?

Mr. TAUSEND. That might have been in 1942 or so. I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you see the same people there that you saw at this place in 1947 and '48?

Mr. TAUSEND. No.

The CHAIRMAN. They were different?

Mr. TAUSEND. They were different.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. TAUSEND. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know Jerry Catena?

Mr. TAUSEND. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Anthony Guarini?

Mr. TAUSEND. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How about Saratoga? Did you ever play up there?

Mr. TAUSEND. Yes, once.

The CHAIRMAN. Where did you play there?

Mr. TAUSEND. There is a great big dining room.

The CHAIRMAN. Arrowhead Inn? Do they have a floor show and a restaurant?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is right, sir. I am not sure if it is Arrowhead Inn, but they did have a restaurant.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you see some of the same people there that you saw over here in New Jersey?

Mr. TAUSEND. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. When was it you were playing at Saratoga?

Mr. TAUSEND. Quite a few years ago.

The CHAIRMAN. Five years ago?

Mr. TAUSEND. Around five.

The CHAIRMAN. Was it wide open? Could you go in the restaurant and eat and then find out there was a gambling place in the back and go on in?

Mr. TAUSEND. Yes; walk right in, sure.

The CHAIRMAN. Could you walk right in the place over here in New Jersey?

Mr. TAUSEND. From the restaurant, but not walk right in to the restaurant; no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. You couldn't drive over there in your own car, could you?

Mr. TAUSEND. I never did, sir.

Senator TOBEY. None of the patrons do, do they? They had to be ferried over by the company's cars, didn't they?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is what I understood.

Senator TOBEY. So you couldn't go there again if you wanted to. You wouldn't know where it was, is that right? You couldn't find it?

Mr. TAUSEND. I wouldn't know where it was, no.

Senator TOBEY. Did you win or lose in the long run?

Mr. TAUSEND. I lost in the long run, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Did you feel the gambling was conducted fairly and that you got a fair deal?

Mr. TAUSEND. I did.

Senator TOBEY. You didn't know the names of any of the officials or head men there at all? It was entirely impersonal? You just walked in and did your betting and didn't call anybody by name and they didn't call you by name.

Mr. TAUSEND. They called me by my initials, sir. Mr. "T."

Senator TOBEY. Is that the custom to call the different patrons by their initials?

Mr. TAUSEND. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. So they could say "Mr. CWT," and you would know that was you and me.

Mr. TAUSEND. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. That was done so people wouldn't know who the patrons were.

Mr. TAUSEND. I don't know what the idea was but I know that is the system they used.

Senator TOBEY. When you bet you gave them your check.

Mr. TAUSEND. Sometimes I did and other times I went in and I cashed a check ahead of time and gave some of the money to my wife and some to the friends who went along with me and they used it.

Senator TOBEY. That is all I have.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Mr. ARKIN, will you hold up your hand. Do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. ARKIN. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JACK W. ARKIN, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Mr. Arkin, what is your full name and address?

Mr. ARKIN. Jack W. Arkin, 36 Central Park South.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. What is your business address?

Mr. ARKIN. 137 West Forty-eighth Street.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. What is your business, Mr. Arkin?

Mr. ARKIN. I am the booking agent for the Playhouse Theater. I book the shows in the Playhouse.

Senator TOBEY. That is movies?

Mr. ARKIN. No; legitimate theater.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. How long have you been doing that kind of work?

Mr. ARKIN. For the last—since I returned from the Army in 1946.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Is Mr. Ben Marden one of the owners of that theater?

Mr. ARKIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the name of the theater?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Playhouse Theater, a legitimate theater in New York.

What percentage of ownership does Mr. Marden have?

Mr. ARKIN. That I don't know.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Is he the president of the corporation which owns the theater?

Mr. ARKIN. I don't think so. I don't know. I wouldn't know what office he held.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. What is the name of the corporation?

Mr. ARKIN. Playhouse Enterprises, Inc.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. How long have you known Mr. Marden?

Mr. ARKIN. About 25 years.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Have you had business relations with him outside of this Playhouse deal?

Mr. ARKIN. Yes.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. What relations did you have with him?

Mr. ARKIN. Ben Marden's Riviera, from 1933 to 1942.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. What was the nature of the relationship?

Mr. ARKIN. I worked for Ben Marden.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. What did you do?

Mr. ARKIN. I was the maître d'hôte of Ben Marden's Riviera.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Specifically what did that amount to?

Mr. ARKIN. Well, I was in charge of the floor. In other words, I had charge of the cafe floor, in charge of the waiters, in charge of the service.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Then from 1942 to 1946 you were in the Army?

Mr. ARKIN. I was in the Army.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. And now from 1946 on did you go back with Mr. Marden?

Mr. ARKIN. In the Playhouse Theater; yes.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. That has been your sole occupation; is that right?

Mr. ARKIN. That is right, that has been it.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Now directing your attention to last summer, the summer of 1949, I should say, did you and Mr. Marden go to Europe?

Mr. ARKIN. I was over there in 1949.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. On what boat did you go, sir?

Mr. ARKIN. We flew Air France.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Can you place the month?

Mr. ARKIN. April or May of 1949.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. How many people were in your party?

Mr. ARKIN. Five.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. All of you traveling together?

Mr. ARKIN. Yes.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Will you give us the names of those people?

Mr. ARKIN. Alfred McCosker, Robert Hernandez. The other was a Cuban, and was a friend of Bobbie Hernandez, whose name escapes me at the moment. He is Congressman in Habana. He is a Cuban Congressman.

The CHAIRMAN. That is just three.

Mr. ARKIN. Marden and myself.

The CHAIRMAN. I see.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Before you left the States were there any intimations or negotiations pending toward the prospect of purchase of an interest in the Monte Carlo Casino?

Mr. ARKIN. Do you mind giving me that again?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Before you left the States did you have any conversation with anyone on the subject of buying the Monte Carlo Casino?

Mr. ARKIN. No.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. There did come a time in France when the subject of purchasing the casino came up, is that right?

Mr. ARKIN. That is right.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Will you tell us how it came up and who participated in the conversations, and give it to us as chronologically as you can.

The CHAIRMAN. Starting with about the date in France when this started.

Mr. ARKIN. The date would have been in the spring of 1949. Our mission and the purpose and reason for going over to Europe was to acquire a show or shows for the theater. While in Europe, a friend approached us, or it was a broker, I don't remember which—it was a friend of ours, an American living at the hotel in Paris. We then went to the South of France and met the principals of the Monte Carlo Casino.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. You say a friend approached you. Who was that, sir?

Mr. ARKIN. I think it was a fellow by the name of Jack Van Allen.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Where did he live in France?

Mr. ARKIN. At the Ritz Hotel.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. When you say he approached you, did he approach Mr. Marden?

Mr. ARKIN. Yes. I might not have been present the day or the moment that he talked with Marden, but I knew of it soon afterward. In other words, we all proceeded to the South of France where we met the manager of the Monte Carlo Casino.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. You say to the South of France. Which city?

Mr. ARKIN. We went to Cannes.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Where did you stay in Cannes?

Mr. ARKIN. At the Carlton Hotel.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Which of the Monte Carlo people did you meet?

Mr. ARKIN. We met a Mr. Laroux. He is the manager or president of the corporation. I have forgotten which. I rather think the manager of the Monte Carlo Casino Corp.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Anybody else?

Mr. ARKIN. We met the lawyer for the corporation as well, sat in his office there at Monaco and chatted with him for maybe 15 or 20 minutes, which was the one and only time I ever met him.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Is the lawyer's name Caesar Salimito?

Mr. ARKIN. That is right, Salimito.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Anybody else representing the Monaco people?

Mr. ARKIN. Not to my recollection.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Will you give us the substance of those negotiations? What happened?

Mr. ARKIN. At that particular time the Monte Carlo Casino Corp. were interested in adding a new game to Europe, a crap game, an American crap game, and they had sent several of their dealers or men over here to this country to apprise themselves of how the game was run. It was just at that time that we were in Europe. The manager, this Mr. Laroux, was very anxious to have us join forces with them. That was the sum and substance of the whole thing, for us to join forces with them, particularly handling the American crap end of it, crap game. That was it.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Was there any more negotiation? These are the early conferences?

Mr. ARKIN. Yes.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Did the conferences take a turn later to some other kind of a deal?

Mr. ARKIN. Much conversation took place. Much entertaining took place, sure, and it continued on over a period of a month or two.

I think we went back a second time. We weren't particularly interested, or not seriously interested in this Monte Carlo deal, and the reason for that was that there was no deal. We at no time could figure out how we could participate in the Monte Carlo Corp.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Let me see if I can help you. Is it correct that the Monte Carlo Corp. was operating at a pretty bad loss, isn't that so?

Mr. ARKIN. That is right.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Partially because the large gamblers no longer came to Monte Carlo. There weren't many of them around.

Mr. ARKIN. That is right.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Partially because the Prince was exacting a pretty good royalty out of Monte Carlo.

Mr. ARKIN. Not to my knowledge. I don't think that is particularly true. This Prince had just come into power; his grandfather, the former Prince, had died, and he had just come in, the young Prince, the present Prince, had just come into power. I don't think he was exacting anything too great, or he hadn't been taking anything out of the corporation. That was our belief or our understanding at the time. He didn't have time. I think he had just become the Prince within a month or a week, something like that, of the time I speak of.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Did there come a time, however, when there were negotiations looking toward the purchase of the controlling interest in the casino?

Mr. ARKIN. Half-heartedly; yes.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Isn't it a fact that there was a bid made for the stock?

Mr. ARKIN. Not to my knowledge; no.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Does the sum of $5,000,000 mean anything to you in relation to the purchase of the casino?

Mr. ARKIN. The sum of $5,000,000 means a lot to me, but not with reference to that; no. Not even for the record, because it would be a lot of conversation and it is unimportant—

The CHAIRMAN. We think it is interesting, if not important. So go ahead and tell us about it, Mr. Arkin.

Mr. ARKIN. If you have time. We at no time—again I am repeating myself—were seriously interested because there was another group headed by a Parisian banker, I believe he was an Italian but he was a Parisian banker, and he had a group of them, among them a shipping magnate, a Greek, another party was an art connoisseur, from one of the well-known families of France. I say that because we had occasion to be entertained by them. They on the one hand were trying to acquire the stock of the Monte Carlo Casino Corp., while on the other hand the directors and officers of the then Monte Carlo Casino Corp. didn't want to get pushed out. It was to their best interest to stay in. The new prince, the young prince, was anxious to get American interests interested in Monte Carlo, but he had no stock, and this is or was a regular stock corporation, the same as we would have here in this country. If I remember correctly, there were some ninety-odd-thousand stockholders scattered all over the world. At a meeting of the banker and his group they had told us that they had acquired some fifteen or twenty thousand shares of the stock. I have forgotten exactly how many. They, too, were anxious to have us come with them, knowing that we were dealing with the prince and his party. While we never met the prince, we did meet this little lawyer, Salimito.

We finally left there feeling complimented that we had been invited into such a fantastic deal. It involved some seven big hotels in Monte Carlo, together with three casinos. They were beautiful, gorgeous casinos. So we felt flattered, I guess.

Senator TOBEY. What was the price?

Mr. ARKIN. There was no price on it, sir. We had never gotten to a price. We never talked price. This thing is controlled by a corporation. The one side wanted us to come in with them on a stock basis. As I said, they had 15,000 or 20,000 shares. They thought if we could acquire 15,000 or 20,000 shares and added to what they had, we might get control. That was the banking group. The other group that were in power at the time were offering us a management job. When I say management, to take over the crap end of it which they knew nothing about. So we were a bit flattered and complimented.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Let me ask you this, Mr. Arkin. Was there any program suggested by you people whereby you would take over the hotels and fly American tourists in under an arrangement where American tourists would pay about $2 a day for bread and board at hotels and could patronize the casino?

Mr. ARKIN. I don't think we ever boiled it down to $2 a day.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Or thereabouts.

Mr. ARKIN. Not even thereabouts. There certainly was no conversation on that score because that would have been ridiculous. We would have given a good customer board and bread, as you call it, for free rather than charge him $2, so there would have been no such conversation. Sure, we talked of flying people in in the course of conversation with the managers or directors of the Monte Carlo Casino. It was all part of their asking us what we would do if we would run the American crap game. We said it would be to your best interests probably to fly Americans over. Certainly if they were in Europe we would fly them down to the south of France to Monte Carlo.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Did Mr. Marden participate in conversations with Monaco people in which you did not participate? In other words, was his knowledge greater than yours on this?

Mr. ARKIN. He did participate more than I because he did go over a second or third time, to my knowledge not particularly on the Monte Carlo deal, but while there he did further talk about it.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Where is Mr. Marden now?

Mr. ARKIN. He is in Habana, Cuba.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. When is he returning?

Mr. ARKIN. He is due back, I think, next week.
(Off the record.)

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. By the way, could you state where you and Mr. Marden planned to get the money to go into this enterprise in the event anything were worked out?

Mr. ARKIN. Did we state what?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. I say, can you tell us where you and Mr. Marden planned to get the money to go into this enterprise in case things worked out?

Mr. ARKIN. We weren't to need any money. There was no money that we were going to need to go in. They were anxious to have us come in there. We could have been on a percentage basis. It could have been on a management deal. We had never gotten to a point where we talked money. There was no figure set on it. We didn't talk about that. We never got to that.

Senator TOBEY. Why did they want you with them?

Mr. ARKIN. Again, because Europe had—well, sir, if you are interested in listening to a long story, I will give it to you.

Senator TOBEY. I don't want you to make it a long story. Can't you give it to me in a few words?

Mr. ARKIN. No. This is something that took place over a period of a couple of months, just a lot of negotiations, a lot of parties, a lot of entertaining. They were very anxious, as I said, to interest American interests, and American people. Since the war or as a result of the war Monte Carlo became a tenth rate gambling place. There were no people there. You would see elderly people sitting around betting 1 franc at a time, which was 3 cents, or a third of a cent, rather, the last time I was over; 300 francs to the dollar. To the point where the Monte Carlo Casino wasn't making money. They were losing money. The new prince, who is a youngster, was anxious, and his only revenue is through the casinos there—he was anxious to build up some revenue. He was anxious to get some money. After the war the Americans flocked to Europe, so it was only natural that he would like to interest Americans. We happened to be there. He didn't come seeking us. He would have taken anybody. He would have invited you, sir, if you were there. Sure he would.

Senator TOBEY. He wouldn't have invited me.

Mr. ARKIN. It wouldn't make any difference to the Prince of Monaco. We never met him. It wouldn't have made any difference. They are looking for money. They will take it from Mr. Marshall. It doesn't make any difference who they take it from. We went down, and again I tell you, we were flattered with the offer. They were interested in the crap game. We were interested in the show. Our principal reason to go down at that time was to bring back a show, and we did. We brought back Edith Pieff, who has made quite a name for herself here. We brought her back and put her in the Playhouse Theater together with eight or nine French acts that we found in Europe. It was on that particular trip that we were invited to participate in the Monte Carlo deal, but we never made a deal. I don't think we spent $4 in actual expense money on that deal.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. You say Mr. Marden went back after that without you?

Mr. ARKIN. That is right.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. And things may have happened of which you have no first-hand knowledge?

Mr. ARKIN. I have no first-hand knowledge of it.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. I see.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Arkin, when was it that you were the manager of the cafe part of the Riviera?

Mr. ARKIN. From 1933 to 1942.

The CHAIRMAN. Did they have gambling there at that time?

Mr. ARKIN. They did.

The CHAIRMAN. What other restaurants or clubs did you ever handle for Mr. Marden?

Mr. ARKIN. That is the only one. I beg your pardon. Colonial Inn, in Florida, for one season.

The CHAIRMAN. What season was that?

Mr. ARKIN. That was 1939-40.

The CHAIRMAN. Who were Mr. Marden's partners in Colonial Inn? Jake and Meyer Lansky?

Mr. ARKIN. I don't think so.

The CHAIRMAN. Who were they?

Mr. ARKIN. I don't think he had any.

The CHAIRMAN. Who were his partners, if any, in the Riviera?

Mr. ARKIN. None, none that I know of.

The CHAIRMAN. Did he operate a place at Saratoga?

Mr. ARKIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. How did he get protection over across the river at the Riviera? He was never raided that you know of?

Mr. ARKIN. He was closed from time to time or at different times; yes.

The CHAIRMAN. I know, but it operated wide open there so that anybody who came in to eat could go back and gamble.

Mr. ARKIN. No, it was not a wide open gambling casino. It was not a wide open casino.

The CHAIRMAN. There wasn't much difficulty getting in.

Mr. ARKIN. For those who were known probably not.

The CHAIRMAN. And the operation was fairly well known by anybody who really made inquiry; wasn't it?

Mr. ARKIN. It was well known; yes. I would say it was well known.

The CHAIRMAN. How did you get protection? Who did you pay off? What favors did you do for policemen?

Mr. ARKIN. I don't think any. I would say that we were in a small town there.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the town?

Mr. ARKIN. Coyotesville. It was a town of about, I would say, 12 or 15 hundred inhabitants. We were a big factor in that town. We had about 400 employees, something like that, operating a big cafe, with a lot of employees. As a result, we were called on to do many things for the inhabitants, the people of the town. We provided such things as benefits for the unemployed. We had most of our employees who came from the little town. They all worked for us, and were glad to have us.

The CHAIRMAN. Then your idea is that you were an asset to the town, so the mayor and the chief of police and the prosecuting attorney and the law-enforcement officers just didn't bother you. Is that your idea?

Mr. ARKIN. That would have been it, yes; definitely.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was the mayor at that time?

Mr. ARKIN. I can give you his first name, Louis something.

The CHAIRMAN. What is his first name?

Mr. ARKIN. Louis. He had a paint shop there; no, a flower shop. He was a florist. He was the mayor of the little town.

The CHAIRMAN. What year was this, do you say?

Mr. ARKIN. 1933.

The CHAIRMAN. Until when?

Mr. ARKIN. I don't think he was the mayor all the time.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean—

Mr. ARKIN. Until we closed it in 1942.

The CHAIRMAN. It burned during the interim, didn't it?

Mr. ARKIN. That was the old one. We built a new one.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was the district attorney over there or the State's attorney at that time?

Mr. ARKIN. I don't remember. I don't remember who the district attorney was. There were several during our regime. That would be the district attorney of the State? Is that what you are asking?

The CHAIRMAN. The county attorney.

Mr. ARKIN. I think Walter Winne is the present one. Then there was John Bresland. There was a Harry Harper, I think.

The CHAIRMAN. Was Mr. Winne the county prosecutor during the time of this operation?

Mr. ARKIN. I don't think so. I think he came later.

The CHAIRMAN. You closed out. Who did you sell out to?

Mr. ARKIN. We sold to Bill Miller, who presently has it, but we didn't sell it to him until 1946.

The CHAIRMAN. Who did you sell it to in 1942?

Mr. ARKIN. We closed it in 1942. We closed it for the duration of the war.

The CHAIRMAN. Then in 1946 you sold it to Miller?

Mr. ARKIN. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you operate this system of sending automobiles across to New York to bring people over?

Mr. ARKIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. While you were there you didn't do that?

Mr. ARKIN. No. At that time we had an arrangement with the New York cab companies where they would bring the patrons over for a flat fee. I think the fee was $1.50.

The CHAIRMAN. Did the patrons pay the fee?

Mr. ARKIN. Yes, they paid it. We paid all over that. In fact we didn't pay. That was supposedly the deal. We never had to pay. The cab companies those days were anxious and glad to have our type of business or any type of business. The cab business wasn't good those days. So a haul of $1.50 was a pretty good haul for them.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't have any automobiles to send for them?

Mr. ARKIN. No, we never owned automobiles. We had a little placard in each cab in New York announcing the fact that for $1.50 they could ride to Ben Marden's Riviera from any part of Manhattan, Bronx, or Brooklyn.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know whether Mr. Marden operated any place at Saratoga Springs?

Mr. ARKIN. I am sure he didn't. In the many years I have worked for him I would have known it.

The CHAIRMAN. What is his business now?

Mr. ARKIN. Marden is in the real-estate business. He owns and operates real estate. He is the head of some steel or copper company.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything else, Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. Did this business operate in New Jersey?

Mr. ARKIN. Which?

Senator TOBEY. The Riviera.

Mr. ARKIN. That was in New Jersey.

Senator TOBEY. Just over the line here?

Mr. ARKIN. Just across the George Washington Bridge.

Senator TOBEY. It was illegal under the laws of New Jersey?

Mr. ARKIN. That I wouldn't know, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. You didn't know whether it was legal or not?

Mr. ARKIN. That was never my end, sir. I was a cafe man.

Senator TOBEY. But you worked for a concern, and you must have known whether it was in a legal or illegal business. You asked no questions. That didn't interest you at all?

Mr. ARKIN. I was on a salary and it didn't make much difference. I worked on the floor. I was in the cafe part where there was no gambling.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything else?

Mr. HALLEY. Did you own any part of the Riviera yourself?

Mr. ARKIN. No, I never did.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. That is all, thank you, sir. If we need you for anything else we will call you and you remain under subpoena, Mr. Arkin.

Mr. ARKIN. The same subpoena, Senator, holds good, does it?

The CHAIRMAN. All right. You brought some records and books there.

Mr. ARKIN. I planned to bring my lunch and I was going to bring it in here but I didn't do it. I got some papers here that belong to another corporation. If I want to get out of town for a little holiday——

The CHAIRMAN. Will you keep in touch with Mr. Kostelanetz.

Mr. ARKIN. Thank you a lot.

(Off the record.)

The CHAIRMAN. Mrs. Catena, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mrs. CATENA. I do.

TESTIMONY OF MRS. KATHERINE CATENA, SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., ACCOMPANIED BY ANTHONY CALANDRA, NEWARK, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your name, sir?

Mr. CALANDRA. Anthony Calandra, Newark, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mrs. CATENA. Mrs. Katherine Catena.

Mr. HALLEY. You are married to Gerald Catena?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mrs. CATENA. 21 Overhill Road, South Orange.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been married?

Mrs. CATENA. Next month 14 years.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see your husband, Mrs. Catena?

Mrs. CATENA. On the 25th of September.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know where he is now?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he habitually leave home for long periods?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Under what circumstances did he leave on September 25?

Mrs. CATENA. A business trip.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he tell you he was going on a business trip?

Mrs. CATENA. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. He did not tell you where he was going?

Mrs. CATENA. No. He said he would call.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he called?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it your testimony that you have not heard from him in any way at all since September 25?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You have received no telephone call?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. No mail?

Mrs. CATENA. No mail.

Mr. HALLEY. No messages of any kind through anybody else?

Mrs. CATENA. No, no messages.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he have word to your knowledge that this committee was trying to serve a subpoena on him before he left?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And he decided to get out of town? Is that what happened?

Mrs. CATENA. I don't know. He just told me he was going on a business trip.

Mr. HALLEY. Who told him that we were trying to serve him?

Mrs. CATENA. I did.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you find out?

Mrs. CATENA. Mr. Elich.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Elich came to your house?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And said he wanted to serve a subpoena?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was your husband at that time?

Mrs. CATENA. He wasn't home at that time. He was away, too.

Mr. HALLEY. What time of the day was it, Mrs. Catena?

Mrs. CATENA. I think it was around 12 or 1 o'clock. I don't know for sure, but it was in the early part of the day around 12 noon or 1 o'clock. I don't know, some time like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you phone your husband at that time?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get in touch with him?

Mrs. CATENA. I had seen him. He had come home. We went on a trip. I was sick. I had a hay-fever condition and a cold when we were away. We came back on the 23d, which was a Saturday. On the 25th he left, and I haven't seen him since then.

Mr. HALLEY. It was on the 25th Mr. Elich came, is that right?

Mrs. CATENA. No. He came before and after.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he come before the 23d of September?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes; he did.

Mr. HALLEY. Before you and your husband left on the trip, is that right?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you away when you went with your husband?

Mrs. CATENA. About 9 days.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you go?

Mrs. CATENA. We went up to New Hampshire.

Mr. HALLEY. Where?

Mrs. CATENA. New Hampshire.

Mr. HALLEY. What part?

Mrs. CATENA. To Corbin Lodge.

Mr. HALLEY. What part?

Mrs. CATENA. Crawford House.

Mr. HALLEY. You went by automobile?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Before you left on that trip had Mr. Elich come to the house and tried to serve a subpoena?

Mrs. CATENA. Mr. Elich came before Labor Day week end. He had come to the house a few times. He had left me two phone numbers. He instructed me to give them to my husband and tell him to get in touch with him, and I did. I thought my husband got in touch with him, because I had asked him and he said he would take care of it.

Mr. HALLEY. You told him that Mr. Elich was looking for him and trying to serve a subpoena on him, is that right?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes, I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Your husband just said he would take care of it, is that right?

Mrs. CATENA. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Mr. Elich again after the first visit before you went to New Hampshire?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you came back—are you sure of that?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes, I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. You came back from New Hampshire September 25?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. On a Saturday?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And on Monday Mr. Elich came back again, is that correct?

Mrs. CATENA. I don't know if it was Monday. No, it was Tuesday that he came back.

Mr. HALLEY. Tuesday.

Mrs. CATENA. I don't know if it was Tuesday, but he came back after then. I don't know exactly what day it was.

Mr. HALLEY. At this time your husband was still home, is that correct?

Mrs. CATENA. No. He had left that Monday.

Mr. HALLEY. He had left that Monday on another trip?

Mrs. CATENA. No. That was the trip he had left, the business trip that he left on was on that Monday.

Mr. HALLEY. Before Mr. Elich came back?

Mrs. CATENA. That is right, before he came back the second time.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no idea where he went?

Mrs. CATENA. No. He said he would get in touch with me, and he hasn't.

Mr. HALLEY. He hasn't yet?

Mrs. CATENA. Not as yet.

Mr. HALLEY. Has that ever happened before in your married life?

Mrs. CATENA. No. I mean he goes away, you know, on trips once in a while, but no—

Mr. HALLEY. You hear from him generally.

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. If it were not for the fact that you know why he is away you would be quite worried at this point?

Mrs. CATENA. I am worried, very much worried about him.

Senator TOBEY. Have you children?

Mrs. CATENA. I have five children.

Senator TOBEY. Five children. All living at home?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Suppose an accident happened to one of those little children, a tragic accident, how would you get word to your husband?

Mrs. CATENA. I couldn't get word to him. I would have to take care of it myself until I hear from him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he leave you funds? Do you have money?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he leave, cash?

Mrs. CATENA. No. I have checks and I put them in the bank and I write out checks.

Mr. HALLEY. In what bank do you have a checking account?

Mrs. CATENA. It is the South Orange Trust Co.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you also have any cash about the house?

Mrs. CATENA. No. I draw cash out of the bank every week.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't keep cash in the house?

Mrs. CATENA. I put checks in and I draw out some cash.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't have a box or something like that with cash in the house?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your husband?

Mrs. CATENA. No, not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Your husband has certain business interests, has he not?

Mrs. CATENA. I imagine he does. I don't know anything about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of the People's Express Co.?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes, People's Express and Cool Vent Awning.

Mr. HALLEY. The Cool Vent Awning Co.

Mrs. CATENA. Yes, because I get checks from those.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he have an interest in the Marcel Co.?

Mrs. CATENA. I don't know anything about it if he does.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know what that is?

Mrs. CATENA. No, I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know what the Marcel Manufacturing Co. is?

Mrs. CATENA. Marcel, oh, yes; he did have an interest in that before he went into People's Express.

Mr. HALLEY. He gave up the Marcel?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes, he sold out.

Mr. HALLEY. What other business has he got?

Mrs. CATENA. That is all that I know.

Mr. HALLEY. What is Cocuzza & Catena? You don't know anything about that?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Who takes care of your husband's business at this time?

Mrs. CATENA. We have partners.

Mr. HALLEY. The People's Express?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is that?

Mrs. CATENA. Mr. Dameo.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Dameo takes care of the business?

Mrs. CATENA. Dameo takes care of it. My husband takes care of it too.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any idea what kind of business your husband might be away on?

Mrs. CATENA. I don't understand you.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any idea the nature of your husband's business?

Mrs. CATENA. Which, the People's Express?

Mr. HALLEY. No, the business that he is supposed to be attending to on this trip.

Mrs. CATENA. No; I have no idea of it at all. He didn't say.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of the L. & C. Amusement Co.?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know that your husband had any connection with any gambling business?

Mrs. CATENA. No; not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you never heard that?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mr. Willie Moretti?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes; I know Mr. Moretti.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Mr. Moretti?

Mrs. CATENA. Since I married.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know him before that?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Salvatore Moretti?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mrs. CATENA. Since I married.

Mr. HALLEY. Has your husband been in business with Salvatore Moretti?

Mrs. CATENA. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know anything about that?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mr. Zwillman?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes, I do.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mrs. CATENA. Since I married.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he a friend of your husband's?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Has Mr. Zwillman been in your home?

Mrs. CATENA. Occasionally, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Recently?

Mrs. CATENA. No; not recently.

Mr. HALLEY. When would you say would be the last time?

Mrs. CATENA. It must have been about 6 months or so.

Mr. HALLEY. How often does he come, two or three times a year?

Mrs. CATENA. On the average, a few times a year.

Mr. HALLEY. When he comes, is he alone or does he come with others?

Mrs. CATENA. With his wife, a social visit.

Mr. HALLEY. For a social visit.

Mrs. CATENA. For a social visit; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Doto?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mrs. Doto?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known them?

Mrs. CATENA. Since I married.

Mr. HALLEY. You met all these people through your husband; is that right?

Mrs. CATENA. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. They are your husband's friends.

Mrs. CATENA. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes; I met Mr. Costello, too.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he come to you home, too?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been to his home?

Mrs. CATENA. Not recently. No. Yes; I think I was to his home once.

Mr. HALLEY. Which one of his homes?

Mrs. CATENA. Out on Long Island? I was out there one time on a visit.

Mr. HALLEY. How long ago?

Mrs. CATENA. It must have been 5 years ago—3, 4, or 5 years. I don't know exactly, but I was there just that one time.

Mr. HALLEY. He has never been to your home?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes; he has been to my home.

Mr. HALLEY. Frank Costello has?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When was the last time?

Mrs. CATENA. Oh, let me see now. He was in my home when I lived in East Orange. That must have been about 6 or 7 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he been to your home since then?

Mrs. CATENA. Not since then.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else was there at the time Frank Costello came?

Mrs. CATENA. His wife came along, and a few other friends. We were having a little party.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you at the wedding that Willie Moretti had for his daughter a couple of years ago?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes; I was.

Mr. HALLEY. Tell us some of the other guests; would you?

Mrs. CATENA. Almost every one that you mentioned was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Frank Lavorsi there?

Mrs. CATENA. I don't know Frank Lavorsi. There are a lot of people I don't know their names. I may have seen them, but don't know their names.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Bill Giglio there?

Mrs. CATENA. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know either of them?

Mrs. CATENA. No. Maybe I may know them if I see their face, but I don't know them by name, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Erickson?

Mrs. CATENA. I have seen him, but I don't know him.

Mr. HALLEY. Where have you seen him?

Mrs. CATENA. I saw him around one of the, you know, in New York. One night we were out, and I was introduced and I said "Hello," but I don't know him other than that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you meet him at a restaurant?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Which one?

Mrs. CATENA. Well, I don't know. It could have been either Moore's or Shaw's, or Gallagher's, or any one of those places. I don't know which one offhand.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Vincent Profaci?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Longano?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Tony Gizzo?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met him?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Rocco Fischetti?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of him?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes; I have.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never met him?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Anthony Guarini?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Tony Guarini?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know James Rutkin?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mrs. CATENA. Since I married. I met him around that time.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he a friend of your husband's?

Mrs. CATENA. Well, on occasions, you know, I guess he is a friend; I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether your husband has ever been in business with him?

Mrs. CATENA. Not to my knowledge; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Arthur Longano?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jimmie Lynch?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mrs. CATENA. Oh, a couple of years, since I married. I met most of these people through marriage. I don't know just when.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go to a place at Lodi where they had a restaurant and gambling casino?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. And you would see people gambling?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been to any of these gambling places in New Jersey?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You have heard of them I suppose?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You know that there are such places, don't you?

Mrs. CATENA. I hear rumors, but I don't know anything about them; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go to the Riviera?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes; the Riviera I have been to many times.

Mrs. HALLEY. Did you go there before the war?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes; I was there, I think. I was there many times at the Riviera.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the gambling rooms in the Riviera?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Tony Accardo?

Mrs. CATENA. No. The name sounds familiar, but I don't know him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know John Rosselli?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Jack Dragna?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you and your husband go to Florida in the winter-time?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes; I have been to Florida.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the last year you went to Florida?

Mrs. CATENA. Last winter.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you stay?

Mrs. CATENA. We had a house. I rented a house.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was the house?

Mrs. CATENA. On College Avenue and Eighty-seventh or Eighty-ninth Street.

Mr. HALLEY. Did your husband have any business there?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Just vacation?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes. I had the children. He came down two or three times during the season.

Mr. HALLEY. You stayed all year?

Mrs. CATENA. I stayed with the children all winter; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you there the year before?

Mrs. CATENA. I was down there the year before.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Meyer Lansky, who is out in the other room?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Lansky?

Mrs. CATENA. Since I married.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jimmy Alo, Jimmy "Blue Eyes" Alo?

Mrs. CATENA. The name sounds familiar, but I don't recall too clearly.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Little Augie Pissano?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Abe Allenberg at the Boulevard Hotel?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever at the Boulevard Hotel in Miami Beach?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or at the Robert Richter?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Your husband is bound to come home sooner or later; do you think?

Mrs. CATENA. I don't know. I guess so. I hope so.

Mr. HALLEY. He loves you and the children, I presume?

Mrs. CATENA. He loves us very much.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you make it perfectly clear to him that this committee is attempting to serve a subpoena on him?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And upon his return, if the committee is unable to do it, the committee will simply have to take steps to have the subpoena served in some other way.

Senator TOBEY. Wouldn't you amplify that by saying that, no matter how long he stays away, whenever he comes back we will be on the job then and serve subpoena? It is foolish to stay away, because sooner or later he is going to come before us. He might as well come before us and have his family and home life again.

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey.

Senator TOBEY. What was your maiden name?

Mrs. CATENA. Katherine McNalley.

Senator TOBEY. A New York girl?

Mrs. CATENA. A Brooklyn girl, yes.

Senator TOBEY. Weren't you familiar with the fact that these names mentioned here—Doto, Catena, Moretti, Lynch—were all engaged in gambling business in some form or other, Mrs. Catena?

Mrs. CATENA. No. They never gave me any reason to; no, outside of what I have been reading recently in the papers.

Senator TOBEY. That is all I have.

Mrs. CATENA. I have been busy, you know, with the children. When I got married, I had one baby after another, and I have been busy raising them.

Senator TOBEY. How many years have you been married?

Mrs. CATENA. I have been married 14 years next month. After all, I had my first three children in 4 years. I kept having children and running the house.

Senator TOBEY. Yes; I do know.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you do before you got married, Mrs. Catena?

Mrs. CATENA. I didn't do anything.

The CHAIRMAN. You got out of school and got married?

Mrs. CATENA. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. How old is your husband, by the way?

Mrs. CATENA. He is 47 or 48.

The CHAIRMAN. Mrs. Catena, if you had some emergency, is there someone you could get in touch with who could get in touch with your husband?

Mrs. CATENA. Not that I know of.

The CHAIRMAN. Your lawyer or partner in business or somebody?

Mrs. CATENA. No; unless Mr. Dameo could, I don't know anyone, really, anyone at all.

The CHAIRMAN. You have no idea where he is?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Or where he went to?

Mrs. CATENA. No. I have no idea at all.

The CHAIRMAN. No idea in the world. Mrs. Catena. I think it would be well for you to try to get word to your husband that he is just making it a whole lot harder on himself by avoiding service of a subpoena, that he won't get by with it, and the publicity and the scorn that he will be held in by trying to avoid appearing before this committee will just make it that much worse for him. We have an investigation to carry through. He is a necessary witness. He will have to testify sooner or later.

We appreciate your being here to testify today.

Senator TOBEY. You said you knew Mrs. Doto?

Mrs. CATENA. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. When did you see her last?

Mrs. CATENA. Oh, gee, it must be over a year. I know she has been ill.

Senator TOBEY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Mrs. Catena.

Mr. Calandra, what is your first name?

Mr. CALANDRA. Anthony A.

The CHAIRMAN. Just by chance you know where Mr. Catena is and might be in touch with him, I really think you would be doing your client a great service if you told him to get on back here.

Mr. CALANDRA. If he should at any time communicate with me, I shall advise him to accept the subpoena and appear. I can appreciate the legal ramifications that are involved and, of course, I will do that.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you. Thank you, Mrs. Catena.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you represent Mr. Catena?

Mr. CALANDRA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't represent Mr. Catena?

Mr. CALANDRA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know who does?

Mr. CALANDRA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you, Mrs. Catena?

Mrs. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. But you never have?

Mr. CALANDRA. No; I have never represented him on any legal matters.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

(Brief recess.)

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

Mr. Goldstein, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I do.

TESTIMONY OF GEORGE GOLDSTEIN, NEWARK, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. George Goldstein.

Mr. HALLEY. Your residence?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. 14 Van Velso Place, Newark.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your occupation?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Accountant, certified public accountant.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is your office?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. 744 Broad Street, Newark.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a firm?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. I. George Goldstein & Co.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any partners?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I have a partner now, an associate partner, Jack Maurer.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have another firm prior to this one?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. I was partner with Arthur L. Goldfine, from 1945 until 1948, September 1948.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were your offices with Goldfine?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. 175 Fifth Avenue.

Mr. HALLEY. New York?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In New York. And then about a year later we had a Jersey office at 850 Broad Street.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether Arthur Goldfine is related in any way to Alec Goldfine?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, no. I don't know. He is my brother-in-law. I would know if he had an Alec. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know the Alec Goldfine who is connected with the various gambling corporations?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I remember—I don't remember that.

Mr. HALLEY. You do remember the name?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. It stands out. I don't know just exactly where.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know of any relationship?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you certified as a c. p. a. and where?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In 1926 in New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been certified in New Jersey?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes; a few years.

Mr. HALLEY. You have represented the New Jersey gambling partnerships, is that correct?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know whether you would call it representing them. We have made out the tax returns for them.

Mr. HALLEY. Who originally made the contact for you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I can recall the first one we did.

Mr. HALLEY. Which was that?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I think that is G. & R.

Mr. HALLEY. G. & R. Trading Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that in 1945-46?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It started in 1945. The reason I recall it so definitely is because that is when we started our partnership with my partner. I started in business with him at that time. That is when I started with Goldfine. That was one of our first jobs.

Mr. HALLEY. How did that business come to you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It came through Anthony Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. How long had you known Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I didn't know him before that. He came to my house and said he was recommended by somebody. I don't recall the circumstances. I recall some event that started. I just don't know how.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to 1945 where was your office?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I was in business for myself personally under the name of I. George Goldstein, from November or December 1942 until the end of 1944, at 744 Broad Street.

Mr. HALLEY. In Newark?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In Newark; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You moved to New York solely for the partnership with Goldfine?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes; temporarily, although it was always our intention to have a Newark office.

Mr. HALLEY. Was the G. & R. account your account or Goldfine's?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No; it was mine.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to 1942 where was your business?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Prior to 1942 I was with Samuel R. Cohn & Co.

Mr. HALLEY. Located where?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Located at 744 Broad Street.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you a partner?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Only in the name that I shared in the profits. In other words, I shared in the earnings, but I had no interest at all in any of the accounts or good will or business or anything.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you with Cohn & Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That would be from January 1, 1937, I think, around that time, to that December 1942.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your office before then?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Before then I was with J. H. Cohn—no; Cohn & Co.

Mr. HALLEY. At what address?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. 972 Broad Street, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. The two Cohn & Co.'s related in any way?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The first Cohn & Co. consisted of two partners, J. H. Cohn and Samuel R. Cohn, and it was from Cohn & Co. that I went with in 1937.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to working for the first Cohn & Co., where were you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The first Cohn & Co.? That would be close to—let's see. I have to do a little figuring. You mean what firm did I work for?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know the name of the firm. Schier & Herz in New York City.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you work for any other firm?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. That is a long way back. That is about 25 years ago. Nathan L. Janis, c. p. a.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in any other business besides that of being a c. p. a.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. In addition to representing—

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Excuse me. There was some other besides that. There was another firm, but I just don't recall. You see I worked 5 years before I became certified. I know that. I became certified in 1946, so there must have been 5 years of work right there as c. p. a. Janis is one of them. Schier & Herz is another. But there are one or two others.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you provide the committee with a list putting together such a list at your office at your leisure, and mail it to me?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I have my certificate as C. P. A.

Mr. HALLEY. In addition to G. & R. Trading Co., did Guarina bring you the business of L. & C. Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. It started with that Guarini. I believe the name was G. & R. Then there was a lapse of time. I don't recall how much. I think it was a year after that. Then there was that L. & C. Isn't that a 1947 return?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. Then there was B. & T., also in 1947, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes; B. & T. is another one, that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Then there was Pal Trading Co., is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. Then General Trading Co.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know whether it is in that rotation. I think that is the rotation.

Mr. HALLEY. In addition to those companies, have you done any other business for Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. None whatsoever?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you done any other business for Joe Doto, known as Joe Adonis?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Any other business for Salvatore Moretti?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Any for Willie Moretti?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Any for Gerard Catena?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Any for James Rutkin?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Any business for Rutkin?

Mr. HALLEY. Any personal work.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I did his tax return, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. For what year?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. 1942, 1943, 1944, and then he skipped a year or two. The next one I guess was 1948.

Mr. HALLEY. You knew Rutkin before you knew Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Rutkin send Guarini to you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It could have been. I can't be sure of that.

Mr. HALLEY. Rutkin was in this G. & R. with Guarini, was he not?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right. That would be the most likely, but I can't be sure about that.

Mr. HALLEY. You think Rutkin may have sent Guarini to you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. He may have. It sounds logical to me. The only other person I knew was Lansky, which will probably come up later. That is the only person I knew somewhere in the early forties. There were no other people I knew of this type up to that time.

Mr. HALLEY. You knew Longie Zwillman?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I first met him at I believe the end of 1942 or 1943.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you do any other work for James Lynch?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or any other work for Arthur Longano?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. For these people and the companies we have mentioned you drew up partnership returns, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And then did you draw up their individual returns for the years involved?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No; not all of them.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do, certify the income to each partner?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. In other words, if I remember correctly, our office made up a sheet which consists of five copies of balance sheet and profit and loss and distributive share, and each one would get it, five or six or however many partners there were. I want to answer your other question. You asked did I do the tax returns. Some of them. Take Lynch. He came in one year, I don't know when. I would see him only once a year. In 1949 or something like that Lynch, Longano, I recall those two. Mention those other names again, will you, please?

Mr. HALLEY. Adonis.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Doto?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Moretti.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Catena.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Rutkin.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Rutkin, I mentioned Rutkin.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you also do it for the company that operated up at Saratoga, the L. & L. Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You handled their accounts, too?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Let me just say this. The difference between handling an account and doing a tax job is the difference between day and night.

Mr. HALLEY. We will get into that.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You asked if I was doing an accounting job and this is not an accounting job.

Mr. HALLEY. You did draw the tax return for L. & L. Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In each case where you did the return did you supply the partners with a statement of their distributive share?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I am pretty certain, I am reasonably certain, I will put it that way.

Mr. HALLEY. Now let's take the companies one at a time. The first is the G. & R. Co.; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is the one that started in 1945?

Mr. HALLEY. That is the one that started in 1945; I believe, April 11, 1945.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Would you mind telling me when the year ended?

Mr. HALLEY. I believe it ended April 10, 1946.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I wouldn't know. I don't know. That is why I asked you. I don't know the dates.

Mr. HALLEY. You do remember having drawn a tax return for that company?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. From whom did you get the information, Mr. Goldstein?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. It appears it was filed by Gerald Catena. Did you hand the return to Catena?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I couldn't answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you discuss the matter with Catena?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. From whom did you get your facts, just Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Just Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he provide you with books of account?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get your information then?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Here is how that worked. They would submit a daily summary of operations, which would show their gross, I believe, and net per day on one side, and then in the left-hand column would be the expenses, the payroll, rent, and whatever else they paid. All we did in the office, and it was very seldom that I ever did any personal work, it was usually handled by our office. Some of these returns I never even saw. We would accumulate it. Some would accumulate the daily information to a monthly figure, and from the monthly figures they would be summarized into an annual figure.

Mr. HALLEY. Would the daily sheet be brought to you each day?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, no.

Mr. HALLEY. How often would they be brought?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know. Most of the time the end of the month or 10 days after the end of the month, sometimes every 2 months, something like that, you see.

Mr. HALLEY. Then they would bring in a batch.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. They would bring in a whole batch of them, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who would actually bring those in?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. No one else ever?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No one else that I recall. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. You say it could have been Lynch?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It is possible. I don't recall. Sometimes I may not have been in the office when it happened. In other words, he could have come in the office and leave the returns and I wouldn't have been there. I didn't personally handle this, understand.

Mr. HALLEY. With whom did you arrange it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the figure on the G. & R. Trading Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. All of these were round $1,500 a year, approximately.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make any attempt to keep books?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. When I say keep books we tried to set up or somebody in our office tried to set up a general ledger which consisted of the same type of accounts which are in the tax return. In other words, there would be cash accounts and expense accounts, the same things you find in the tax returns, which would support the tax return.

Mr. HALLEY. Who in your office handled that, do you know?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I know the last two or three, the last 3 years, at least the last 3 years. It has been this Eddie—do you want to know the man's name?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Edward Diamond. The last 2 years he did it I think.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was in charge of that before that?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I wouldn't say. We have a lot of men.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you personally see the return?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Sometimes I did.

Mr. HALLEY. You wouldn't file a return under your name without seeing it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean by seeing——

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, reviewing it.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Reviewing it. Most of the time I did. Sometimes I wouldn't. There are many returns in our office that are filed that I don't review.

Mr. HALLEY. Even though your name is on them?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And personally prepared by them.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You have an assistant. You have somebody do it for you. It is impossible to review every tax return that goes through the office.

Mr. HALLEY. You signed them, didn't you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You looked at them, didn't you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I looked at them; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You saw the figures on them.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. I just glanced at them. When you say "reviewing," there is a little difference in my mind between looking and reviewing. I looked at it to see if it looked right.

Mr. HALLEY. As a C. P. A. submitting an income-tax return to the United States of America you agreed with what you were signing, did you not?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, yes, I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Where are the records that you were given for the G. & R. Trading Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The only records we ever had, as I explained before, were those summaries attached to the tax return. Those were taken from us by Guarini, I believe some time this year.

Mr. HALLEY. When did he take them?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Either January, February, or March; something like that this year. This was right before he went to jail.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it my understanding that he took every record in your possession at that time?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. If you call a record a tax return and the information attached to it, that is what he took.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened to the books in which you posted the information?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In some cases—when you ask me about books, they are still the same yellow sheets. We attached them right to the return. There are no written books or anything like that. It is just a yellow sheet that you just type up, and headed the same as you would a general ledger.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it your testimony that you returned them also?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. Everything was attached to the return, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you conceive of yourself, as a certified public accountant, as having no responsibility to keep any files?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes and no, I would like to answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes and no is meaningless.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Responsibility to keep it after you prepare it?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I will give you an illustration. I did do Rutkin's return. I decided a long time ago I am not going to do it any more. Any time he wants it, if he doesn't call for them I am going to ship them over to him, all the returns, lock, stock, and barrel. So if I change accountants or if I want to do anything, I am not required to keep a tax return.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's go back to Guarini.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He called for his papers personally?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I believe it was; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I think I did; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you approved the return of the papers?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. At that time he had been sentenced to a jail term?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know whether he was sentenced or going to be sentenced. He talked about a gambling charge.

Mr. HALLEY. He had been convicted on a gambling charge.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I wouldn't know whether he was convicted. I know there was something about a gambling charge. Either he was being tried or he was convicted or going to be. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. As an accountant with 30 years' experience, you would have good reason to foresee that there might be some need for those records by some agency of the Government?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. If there was any—let me be frank about it. At this present moment I feel now the way I did at that time, if any of this type of work that I had, if I had them and I decided a long time ago not to do it any more, I would return them. There is no responsibility to keep a return on the accountant's part. I will give you an illustration, too.

Mr. HALLEY. Go ahead.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. At the end of the year you have Government agents throughout the country, revenue agents, and all kinds of collectors' agents, who go throughout the country and prepare tax returns. They prepare them. An individual comes in and they make up a tax return. They give them a rent schedule or any other schedule. When they get through they prepare the return and he signs his name and there is no—

Mr. HALLEY. You are not trying to kid us.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No; I am not trying to kid you.

Mr. HALLEY. You want the revenue agent just doing the return.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You asked me for an illustration of what conditions under which you don't keep the return.

Mr. HALLEY. These people brought you their daily record.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Including their expenses for each day.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you set up a set of books in their offices?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Any man with any intelligence would know that you were getting their basic records and that there would be no other record around.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You had them in your office.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. From them you prepared certain work sheets so you could file the return.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right, cumulative work sheets with the return.

Mr. HALLEY. You know very well the work sheets are your own records and not your clients.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course they are.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know that I agree with you. I am sorry.

Mr. HALLEY. They are, and that is a fact.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, it is not a fact. I am sorry to disagree with you. It is not a fact.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in a dispute in which you have had to return certain papers to a client and admitted they were your work papers?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. If I am in a dispute and a man insisted on the working papers in order to pay me I have given him the working papers at any time.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in a position where before being paid you refused to give up your working papers on the position that they were your papers?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, I haven't been in that position, no, but I am telling you that if a client came to me and said to me I want my working papers before I pay you, I would give them to him.

Mr. HALLEY. They are not his papers. They are your working papers that you prepared.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. What we call working papers are based on these particular records. They are sheets that we prepared. As to whose they are, that is a question of opinion.

Mr. HALLEY. It is totally incomprehensible to me that you, as a certified public accountant, could put yourself in the position of returning all these working papers and basic records to a man who is about to go to jail convicted of gambling.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It is very logical to me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did any official of the State of New Jersey or any city or township or county in New Jersey ever ask you or subpoena those records from you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever asked to produce them in connection with Guarini's trial?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Up to the time Guarini went to jail you were never asked for the records; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Was the first occasion on which you were asked for them when this committee and the district attorney of New York County both asked you for your records?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, it wasn't. The first occasion—I don't get that.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were asked for the records of these gambling corporations.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. By whom?

Mr. HALLEY. By any public official.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The only public official I recall in my lifetime was this last Hogan inquiry.

Mr. HALLEY. And this committee also approached you for the records and then it was determined that you would turn them over to Hogan.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know when you approached me. I know you did, yes. It was later than that. It was later than the Hogan inquiry.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right. There was no query before then by any official about these records?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't recall any at all.

Mr. HALLEY. G. & R. Trading Co.—

The CHAIRMAN. When was it he turned them over to Mr. Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Around February or March of this year, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. When was it you were asked for the records first?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I wasn't asked. It just came up, as I recall, and that is that. That is all I recall about it.

Senator TOBEY. If you made out the income tax for this man and put your name on it, under your aegis, and then you knew the Federal Government sometimes checks up recalcitrants or people they have a doubt about, where would you think they were going to get the data from which you made the income tax out if you gave it up to Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Senator, don't you see, if any individual, forget these inquiries, there is no such thing in mind, if any individual's tax return was going to be examined and I had returned it to him, it is his responsibility to get in touch with him and I would decide then what I wanted to do or didn't want to do. It is up to him then.

Senator TOBEY. Did you caution him to keep this on hand intact?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't remember cautioning him.

Senator TOBEY. Did you have any conversation with him about it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Senator TOBEY. Did he tell you he wanted them back so he could get rid of them and destroy all traces of fraud?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, Senator. The information contained in those papers are no different than the tax return. There is nothing different in it. There isn't a single thing that you couldn't get from the tax return that is on those sheets. It is the same information.

Senator TOBEY. Where did he bank?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. There was no bank account.

Senator TOBEY. Did he do everything in cash?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Didn't that make a suspicion that there was crookedness when a man dealt in cash only?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The whole operation is in cash.

Senator TOBEY. He never put anything in cash.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Senator TOBEY. You weren't suspicious of that kind of vermin?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean the propriety of doing that work?

Senator TOBEY. Yes, I do. I want to know the ethics about it. If you are doing business with a crook, why don't you tell him so? You are a citizen of the United States and you are pledged to be a good citizen. Don't you know that when you were doing business with a man who was concealing money in cigar boxes is trying to conceal the facts? You were aiding and abetting him.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. There is no concealment. He just dealt in cash instead of check. If a man wants to do the wrong thing he could do the same thing with checks.

Senator TOBEY. He has to deposit them, doesn't he?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. There is a record then, isn't there?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. There is no record of cash, is there?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Well, all I can tell you, Senator, if I may say this, when we did this work——

Senator TOBEY. Honest men don't do business that way, straight shooters, good citizens don't do business that way.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean the way G. & R. did?

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. There is no question about it.

Senator TOBEY. You knew it, didn't you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Didn't you tell him to "get to hell out of here. I don't want your business, you dirty rat?"

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. All I can say is that my partner was in the Government for 14 years and we made many inquiries and as to the propriety of doing this kind of work from the Federal Government standpoint and they said there is nothing that is improper. You are helping, in other words, the Government to collect taxes. That is the consensus of information we got. Senator, many times we have had examinations, we have met many special agents of the Government, and they all knew. They must have come up where they knew it, that they knew we were representing them in some way or other.

Mr. HALLEY. You know very well that you would have no way of checking on the actual daily receipts.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You were told there was a certain gross that would appear on the sheets.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were told that a certain profit would be made.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is correct; whatever the profits showed.

Mr. HALLEY. For that you would be taking the word of a lot of gamblers; isn't that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In the same way that you take the word of any businessman.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do they have invoices to show?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. They don't have any invoices.

Mr. HALLEY. Do they have sales slips?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do they have canceled vouchers?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do they have the names and list of customers that you can check?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do they have anything that you can test check even to make a 10 percent check or a 1 percent check?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you compare that with any commercial business?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Because if it is in any commercial business, you can have funds that are missing or shortages or anything of that type without the accountant knowing about it. It is the same thing. You have had that same condition during the war.

Mr. HALLEY. I know, but you have no check here whatsoever on anything.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You have no check in many businesses, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Name one other type of business in which you have no check.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In all retail business you have no check.

Mr. HALLEY. They buy merchandise, don't they?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. They buy it, but the Government accepts what they ring up on the cash register.

Mr. HALLEY. But you can check their inventory. You can see how much merchandise they bought.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I disagree with you.

Mr. HALLEY. They have a tape on the cash register.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes; they have the tape listing and you can check their purchases, but there is nobody in the world who can go into a retail store, any retail store, and determine whether they should make 28 percent or 24 percent. They still take all the cash and keep it.

Mr. HALLEY. You can check their purchases.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. All you can do is check the purchases and total them up. But you and I nor anyone can ever tell whether they are not pocketing 5 percent of their receipts or otherwise.

Mr. HALLEY. Don't you have the morality to admit that in a retail store a man buys goods that you can see with your eyes and count, and if you had to check on them you could and that he pays bills that appear in writing?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Mr. Halley, you are asking whether an accountant can tell whether it is correct or not?

Mr. HALLEY. No; but you have some way of checking it.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. A retailer, many wholesalers and many types of business could be just as dishonest if they want to be as this place could be.

Mr. HALLEY. They could be but they don't have nearly the opportunity, do they?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I wouldn't say that.

Mr. HALLEY. Is there anything tangible that you had here that you could count in any way to check up on these people?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Nothing tangible.

Mr. HALLEY. Nothing at all.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No more than any retailer. There is nothing tangible in other lines of business.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's stick to this one.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. Here you had absolutely nothing at all.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. By nothing you mean that there is no way of checking it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you set up any—

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Excuse me a minute. May I bring this out. You are talking about other business with no way of checking. All professional firms have no way of checking. Doctors—

Mr. HALLEY. There is no way of checking?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Don't they keep records?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes; they keep records, but the Government takes—if they want to pocket 90 percent of that they can do so.

Mr. HALLEY. But they keep a report of the name of the patient.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. They keep a record of the charge to the patient.

Mr. HALLEY. They keep a calendar book so you can tell who was in at 2 o'clock and who was in at 3:30.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Please believe me, Mr. Halley, it is a recognized fact in the accounting and tax profession that it is pretty difficult to check to see whether a doctor's return or a dentist's return is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Now let's get back to a gambling place. It is at least possible in the situation of a gambling place to set up a system so that the money is carefully channeled and you can tell how much comes in and how much goes out.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It is impossible, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. You can have locked drawers for the cash.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is up to them. That is their internal system.

Mr. HALLEY. You made no attempt to see that they set up any kind of check.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You couldn't have it. There is no check, Mr. Halley, in any gambling place as far as I know.

Mr. HALLEY. Not even a system that you could explain to the Government and say this is a system we set up so that if they followed the system the report would be honest?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. My answer to that, Mr. Halley, is that the State of Nevada, where they have legalized gambling, there is no way in the world that any Government agency could tell what any table or place could win; no way in the world.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever checked the system of the State of Nevada?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I have seen it. It is published in accounting manuals.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been out there and looked at it and checked the system?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Then I would advise you not to talk about it.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I can——

Mr. HALLEY. I happen to know the system.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I know the system too, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. And it is possible to check it.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Possible to check, Mr. Halley, but 50 percent of the income could be missing and nobody would know it.

Mr. HALLEY. You can steal from any business but at least there is some effort to set up a system of checks and balances. Here you had nothing but the bare word of a man and you didn't even have that. You just had a scrap of paper.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. What does that mean? I don't follow this, Mr. Halley. Because this particular place had a system that you can't check, does that make it automatically more dishonest?

Mr. HALLEY. Let's get to the actual returns, and perhaps you will see.

For G. & R. Trading Co. you filed a return from April 11, 1945, to April 10, 1946; is that correct?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. It shows gross receipts of $488,698; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I wouldn't know. Whatever you say.

Mr. HALLEY. You so filed, did you not?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I will take it for granted every figure you say is correct. You have the return in front of you.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't doubt that the figures that appear on the return are right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you show certain operating expenses totaling $233,426.64; is that right? If it appears on the return that is it; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I will answer the same way.

Mr. HALLEY. And a net income of $255,271.36. If that appears on the return; is that the correct figure?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And of that, you distributed to Rutkin $51,054.27?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The same answer. Whatever figures you call are correct.

Mr. HALLEY. The figures that appear on the return are correct; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Is that the return that I signed? Then every figure you call is the figure reflected in the tax return.

Mr. HALLEY. If that is the figure appearing on the return, is that the correct figure?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. By "correct," you mean what?

Mr. HALLEY. The figure you filed.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Based on the information given you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't say it is the correct figure?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no way of knowing?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You showed $38,290.71 income for Anthony Guarini; is that right? If it so appears, that is what you showed?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And Joe Adonis, alias Joe Doto, $76,581.41?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The same answer. Whatever it shows.

Mr. HALLEY. Catena, $51,054.27?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The same answer.

Mr. HALLEY. And Salvatore Moretti, $38,290.70.

Would you state who gave you the percentages so that you could figure out the partnership distribution?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir. Mr. Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the percentages? Did he state?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean—I don't know. You would have to read it to me.

Mr. HALLEY. It would appear roughly that Rutkin and Catena had 20 percent, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whatever the tax return figures show.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no independent recollection at all?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know. No, I have no recollection. You are asking me to remember one partnership return figure of all the returns we do, for the year 1945.

Mr. HALLEY. But you are willing to swear that if these figures show on the tax returns, they are correct?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That they are correct as submitted to us, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. As submitted to you. You won't vouch for a thing?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Won't vouch. I don't understand that question.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, you wouldn't take the word of these people, would you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. We prepare a tax return based solely on their information. As far as taking word, the same applies to any businessman, for that matter.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's leave businessmen out of this.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You are saying take their word.

Mr. HALLEY. You have a man who comes in and says, "I ran a crap game and last night we made a net of $2,000," is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is true.

Mr. HALLEY. By "gross receipts," you don't mean the gross number of bets? You mean the profit each night?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is the total win, I believe.

Mr. HALLEY. There is no record kept of the total bet at all, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. If the bank roll at the start of a particular night is $10,000, and at the end of the night it is $15,000, the total win for that night is $5,000?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The total net win is $5,000 after all expenses.

Mr. HALLEY. This business, then, running for a year, shows total net wins of approximately $500,000 in a year?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. What would that figure be, the top figure 488? Is that the top figure, the gross figure?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, that is the net win.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you took off certain operating expenses?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did the partners have salaries?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't think so. I don't know. I couldn't say, unless it is indicated there.

Mr. HALLEY. It doesn't show here. Do you know?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. If it doesn't show there, then they didn't. It would be included in their distributive share, I believe. Look at the tax return.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's get on to some of these other companies. The time is going by here.

The second was the L. & C. Amusement Co., is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did that business just flow to you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. As a follow-up on the G. & R.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who brought you the information on L. & C.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The same.

Mr. HALLEY. Who would that be, Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. Did they ever tell you the nature of the business?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I would assume the nature of the business from looking at the sheet.

Mr. HALLEY. You had to know in order to work out the figures at all?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever visit the premises and look at it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I recall many years ago, not in the last 3 or 4 years, I recall going there once with my wife, once or twice. I do recall that.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your fee from the first, from the G. & R.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Approximately $1,500 a year, or $1,800. You see, it was $150 a month, but I don't think they operated a whole year in most instances, so it averaged $1,300 or $1,400 a year.

Mr. HALLEY. And this is for the whole 5-year period, the $150 a month?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. It was never increased?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't think so. It may have gone up to $200. Whatever fee is shown on that statement.

Mr. HALLEY. On L. & C., the second company, which your return shows ran from April 1, 1947, to March 31, 1948, Guarini isn't even a partner. How do you explain his bringing you that information?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know. As far as I can remember—what is that, 1948?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, 1947-48. It started April 1, 1947, and ran through to March of 1948. Of course, you also had B. & T. Trading Co. during that period.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Those two in the same year?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. At the same time, B. & T. ran.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I am pretty certain it was still Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. Where are the premises of the G. & R. Trading Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that the place at Hasbrouck Heights?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know. I couldn't tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is Charles Handler?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Charles Handler is an attorney, a good friend of mine.

Mr. HALLEY. How did he get onto this?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is one of those innocent, probably you call a mistake that I made. I remember I was asked that question by Mr. Elich, and I told him at the time—if you look at the return, if you look at the first return, like G. & R., isn't there the address of a partner? Isn't there?

Mr. HALLEY. G. & R. is 109 Roosevelt Avenue.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. One of those partners lives there.

Mr. HALLEY. That is Guarini, is it not?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Lynch?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whoever it is. Whoever lives at 109.

Mr. HALLEY. Then on L. & C., it became in care of Charles Handler, 790 Broad Street, Newark.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. At that time, that would be in 1947, I think I had an office at 850 Broad Street. I don't know what happened. The best recollection I can give you is that I probably didn't have an address, and I just used the next best address, not wanting mail to come directly to us. He being a friend of mine, I just used it.

It must be understood, too, Mr. Halley, that is not a mailing address. In other words, ordinarily you assume, when you see a man's name in care of a certain person, that mail is sent there and he would get it, but that isn't so. It is very misleading. The only mail that would come there would be three blank returns from the Government for social security and unemployment, and maybe withholding, something like that. I remember telling the secretary as soon as she gets this mail, whenever it comes, to send it to us. That is the best I can recall. Mr. Handler didn't know what the whole thing was about.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Did you do it without his permission?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I didn't think there was anything to it, just to receive mail, just three blanks. It may not sound logical, but that is the honest truth.

I remember his girl called me a few times, "What's this?" And I just told her, "If you get this mail, send it to us."

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. I would like to ask you a few questions to clarify my own mind. How many people worked for your company in 1947, '47, '48, and 49, approximately?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The average number?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. The average number.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I would say an average of 6 or 8, something like that. Eight.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Do you require your employees to file with you time sheets?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. For a good length of time they did not. Then it was installed, and then it was discontinued. We didn't have that type of system. We don't work by hours or anything like that. In other words, if its is a day, it is put in the day book, and that is that.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Do you keep track of the clients that your men work on?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whatever the men work on, yes.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. They file those sheets with your office?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is taken care of by Maurer. I believe right now they make up a slip for expenses, not for the job, showing the day and the amount of the expense, and that would be the amount of money we pay for the expense. It isn't done at all for the purpose of keeping track of the day. That is done from day to day by the girl in the office.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Do you have records in your office showing how much work your men do on the particular jobs?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. I would say so, yes.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Then you would have records showing the amount of work that your men did——

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whatever time was spent by Mr. Diamond would be shown.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. I see. I think we ought to see those records.

Mr. HALLEY. They will be made available to us?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Please don't give them to anybody in the meantime.

For L. & C., between April 1 and March 31, 1948, you reported gross receipts of $590,185, is that right. If that figure is $590,185——

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whatever you call is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the actual win?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It is the net win.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. It is what they had left at the end of each day, in adding up the day's win, for the year?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Are you reading the top figure now?

Mr. HALLEY. The top figure.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is before expenses?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, the net win.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The net meaning—you can have days where there are gains, and some days there are losses. So, technically speaking, the total gain could be $700,000.

Mr. HALLEY. This is gains less losses?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Gains less losses, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you deducted from that, $449,000 in expenses; is that right, if the return so shows? You took that right off the information that you were given by Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You distributed to Lynch $42,128.10?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whatever it shows.

Mr. HALLEY. If that is what it shows?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And a similar amount to Catena?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whatever it shows.

Mr. HALLEY. And a similar amount to Joe Doto, Adonis?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Moretti got $14,042.70 out of that; is that correct?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whatever it shows.

Mr. HALLEY. This, also, you understood to be a gambling business?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it because of any feeling of guilty knowledge that you put a phony address on for L. & C. Amusement Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is not a phony address.

Mr. HALLEY. It certainly is, care of Charles Handler, 790 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I wouldn't call it phoney. You have an address. What address did you have the year before?

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Goldstein, why didn't you put your address on there instead of somebody else's?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Senator, I don't know a particular reason. I just probably felt that I was making up tax returns, and probably we shouldn't get any mail direct. I am just thinking. It is hard for me to realize what I had in mind, because we never get any mail direct on any of these jobs, that I know of. That may have been my reason. I don't know the actual reason, Senator. It may not look proper, but the first address used was 109. That was one of the partner's address. When you say "phony address," that is no different than any other address.

Mr. HALLEY. This is an address that had nothing whatsoever to do with the company. In fact, Handler didn't even know you were using it.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it good accounting practice to take the partnership shares from a man who wasn't even a partner, Guarini?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't understand what you mean.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you got your information from Guarini.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. On the shares to go to each partner; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He wasn't even a partner.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. On the other one, the other company? Which company?

Mr. HALLEY. L. & C.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. From our standpoint, it was proper. We would take it.

Mr. HALLEY. You never attempted to check with any partner?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever get a statement in writing from Guarini as to the partnership share?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You never saw any money? You just got sheets of paper?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right; that is right.

The CHAIRMAN. How did you know these men got these partnership shares?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. All we could do, Senator, was to make up a balance sheet and profit-and-loss statement, and show the distributive shares, and then have them pick it up on their tax return. How would I know whether they did pick it up, you mean? You only let them know that they have such a share coming.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you let them know?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In most cases we would make up, if I remember correctly, we make up a balance sheet and profit-and-loss statement.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do in the case of the L. & C. Amusement Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Made up the statements.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you send a copy to each partner?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know whether it was sent or whether it was delivered to him.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you advise the partners of the income on which they had to pay tax?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It was either sent to them or Guarini took them along in separate envelopes.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's go on to B. & T. Trading Co., 285 Windsor Road, Englewood, N. J.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know. It must be one of the partners there. Will you look at the partnership return and look at some of the addresses?

Mr. HALLEY. You figure it is some of the partners?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It must be.

Mr. HALLEY. We will check that later. That is your best recollection?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. If you will just look at the tax return.

Mr. HALLEY. I don't see it. I don't want to hold it against you. I just don't see it as being anybody's address.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. There is somebody at 285 Windsor.

Mr. HALLEY. But that is your best recollection?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. My best recollection is that it is a partner's address.

Mr. HALLEY. There you reported gross receipts, which would be again net win, in the first line, of $313,531, is that right? You called gross receipts, but it is really net win, isn't that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It is gross receipts, right.

Mr. HALLEY. For the business, I see you stated "Sporting Enterprise," in each case.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. That was the name submitted to us. That is the name we decided to use.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that a fair description of the business?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You can call it anything you want.

Mr. HALLEY. That is in effect what you were doing, just ducking the whole issue?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. There is no ducking.

Mr. HALLEY. Instead of calling it what it was, you called it anything you wanted?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. When the Government comes around, the books will be available for any examination in prior years. We didn't attempt to hide anything.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever examined?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I believe so. I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have a record to show on any examinations?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. We don't keep records.

Mr. HALLEY. For the B. & T., which operated during the same period as the L. & C., from April 1, 1947, to March 31, 1948, you showed a net income of $123,286, is that correct? That would be after deducting $190,000 in expenses from the net win.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whatever the return shows.

Mr. HALLEY. The return shows the following figures, which I will read, and I can presume they are correct?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, you can.

Mr. HALLEY. J. Doto $12,328.60. A. Longano $30,821.50. A. Guarini, $30,821.50. S. Moretti, $49,314.40. Making a total of $123,286 distributed to partners, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any doubt that these fellows kept substantial amounts of cash which were never reported to the Government?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean do I feel——

Mr. HALLEY. From what you know about the nature of the business.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean beyond what they show on the bank roll?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean, do I personally know?

Mr. HALLEY. No, but from what you know of human nature and from what you know of the gambling business.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I couldn't answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you have any doubt that they have kept large amounts of cash?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. They could or could not. I wouldn't know.

Mr. HALLEY. They were in an illegal business to start with, isn't that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Dealing purely in cash?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Giving you such figures as, by their nature, you had no way of checking?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. They count the cash each day and report to you as winnings whatever they put on a piece of paper, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. They made no effort to bank any of the money, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. It all went right into their pockets?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Incidentally, I think at one time they tried to get banking connections. They tried to get banking connections at one time, and couldn't.

Mr. HALLEY. Why can't you get banking connections? Couldn't they have taken their gross receipts——

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It just comes back to me.

Mr. HALLEY. Tell us about that.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. This was brought to the Lincoln National Bank at one time, and they wouldn't accept it. I am pretty sure it was the Lincoln National Bank. Some bank.

Mr. HALLEY. What was brought to them?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Just the idea of whether they could bank there.

Senator TOBEY. In other words, the Lincoln National Bank did not want any fellowship with the gambling fraternity, is that right? They said, "Unclean, unclean, and you are taboo. You can't do business with us," is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know whether that was the reason.

Senator TOBEY. Too bad income-tax men do not do the same thing.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you work it out with the Mercantile Bank to do the check cashing?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Which bank is that?

Mr. HALLEY. The Merchants Banks of New York.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I never heard of them.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Max Stark?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I may have met him once or twice. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, look, this is a serious business.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I know it is a serious thing. I may have met him once. I don't even know whether I met him. I don't know whether he is short or tall. I don't know him.

Mr. HALLEY. He happens to be the man who cashed all the checks for your principals, isn't he?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Your employers.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. If you tell me, yes, that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you may have met him. He would have been an important man to you, would he not?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. He was their banking connection?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. You say so.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't he?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know. I wouldn't know that.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you know that he cashed their checks?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No. Stark? I don't know. I don't know whether I knew or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you or didn't you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. How would I know? Which company is that, L. & C., 1948?

Mr. HALLEY. Any company.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. What do you mean, "any company"? Some companies have no checks. Most of these companies have no checks.

Mr. HALLEY. Players come in and they get credit, and at the end of the night they write out a check.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No. Some of these companies, I think you will find, there are no checks at all.

Mr. HALLEY. In some there are. Let's talk about the ones in which there are.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know which they are. I know the last 2 or 3 years, I think the last two companies were purely cash, no checks at all.

Mr. HALLEY. In the companies that dealt with checks, let's take 1948—

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know whether I would have any reason to know that Stark was cashing checks. I don't know how I would know that.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you know about the Lincoln National Bank attempt to get banking connections?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I think Guarini, or something came up at one time with Guarini about seeing if they could get a bank account.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you suggest it would be wise to have a bank account and deposit the money?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I think I did at one time, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you suggest that to?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The only one I could is this Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you testifying here that you never met any of these other people?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, I didn't say that.

Mr. HALLEY. You could have suggested it to the others?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I had no occasion to suggest it to the others.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you met all the other partners in these companies?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean by "meeting"—I have met Joe Doto a few times. That is in the last 6 years. We are talking about the last 6 years now, the total number of times.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever thank him for the business?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. He probably said hello to me, and "have a drink," or something.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you introduced to him as his accountant? Did he know you were doing his accounting?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I never discussed that.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't there ever any mention made of the accounting or the income taxes?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Not with him. I had no reason to discuss anything with him.

Mr. HALLEY. Never at any time?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How about Salvatore Moretti?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I have met him the same way, maybe twice in my lifetime.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet Moretti?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know where I met him. I know I met him. I don't know just where I met him. I couldn't definitely say, Mr. Halley, where I met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet Doto?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Doto, I know I met in Florida. I think that is the first time I met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you see him in Florida?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. At the Colonial Inn.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him in Jersey?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Jersey where?

Mr. HALLEY. Anywhere.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In Jersey?

Mr. HALLEY. Let's get on with the figures.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It is only a question of whether I met him once or twice. I wanted to be sure.

Mr. HALLEY. We will get on with the figures, and get back to the general matters.

The next company we take is Pal—how did that get its name, do you know?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Who picked the name?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It must have been Guarini. It must have been him.

Mr. HALLEY. You just got figures. Did you pick these names when you filed the returns?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No. I—when the return was filed? No. It had to be established before that time.

Mr. HALLEY. How was it established?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That would be established in the beginning.

Mr. HALLEY. How?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean how was the name picked?

Mr. HALLEY. Why does the name have to be established at the beginning?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Why would it be?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You have to file, there is some return you have to file when you start a company, social security, or something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you file their social-security return?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You kept a list of employees?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And reported to the Social Security?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. On Pal Trading Co., between May 3, 1948, and February 12, 1949—

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Excuse me. What is that, May to February?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. Is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I just wanted to get the dates.

Mr. HALLEY. Are they right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know. I just wanted to hear the dates.

Mr. HALLEY. That is what your return shows.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I want to get it for my recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. Here again, you have in care of Charles Handler, 790 Broad Street. I take it that, again, is fictitious.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is not the proper word. I have given you the circumstances. Whatever the circumstances were at that time, I have explained.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's say it is untrue.

The CHAIRMAN. Unauthorized.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, Senator; that is correct. You can call it unauthorized, if you want to; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Gross receipts, which is the equivalent of net winnings, you reported $183,197. Would that be correct?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You just call them all off.

Mr. HALLEY. Then income, after deducting $110,795 in expenses, would be $72,402?

There you distributed to J. Lynch, $10,860; to J. Doto, $7,240.20; to A. Guarini, $10,860.30; to A. Longano, $7,240.20; to S. Moretti, $36,201. Is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whatever the figures show.

Does this record indicate that that is based on information submitted to us when you say "correct"? I don't know whether that was indicated before. I just want to make sure it is indicated.

Mr. HALLEY. I think you have said that quite clearly. It is information which you neither checked nor had any opportunity to check?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is correct, see.

Mr. HALLEY. Then the next company is General Trading Co., which accounted between July 4, 1949, and January 19, 1950, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. July 1949, to what? January 1950?

Mr. HALLEY. January 19, 1950.

Incidentally, you have mentioned that after 1948, no checks were accepted. Was that the result of the Max Stark indictment?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No; I don't think that had anything to do with it.

Mr. HALLEY. They caught up with Max Stark and indicted him, and finally put him in jail, didn't they?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I am pretty sure there was no relation.

Mr. HALLEY. Why were no checks accepted?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It isn't a question of checks not being accepted. They only dealt in cash.

Mr. HALLEY. Why?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you find out?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. He told me. What I understand of it, there are two types of places: The so-called sawdust place, so people can spit on the floor; and what they call the high-class place. I believe, I am not sure, these two last places were what you would call sawdust places, I have never been in it, but sawdust meaning it is all cash. It couldn't be in check. I don't think there ever has been a check. If any checks are given, they must be cashed somewhere around the place, but they are not part of the betting. The betting is all in cash.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to discuss this matter? I thought all you did was get this sheet of paper.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It was just general information.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you talk to about it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Who told you they weren't accepting any checks in the last 2 years?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I am basing my assumption that the last two places are what they call sawdust places. I am basing on that my assumption there were no checks.

Mr. HALLEY. General Trading Corp., you filed the address as 109 Roosevelt Avenue, Hasbrouck Heights.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That must be one of the partners.

Mr. HALLEY. That is Guarini's address?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You can see that is an indication you don't see Handler any more. It was corrected after that time.

Mr. HALLEY. Your gross receipts, as you reported them, or net wins, $282,553; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You showed expenses of $138,907?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And net income of $143,646?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You distributed to J. Doto, Joe Adonis, $43,093.80; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. If that is what it shows?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whatever it shows. You call them off and I will say, "yes."

Mr. HALLEY. Guarini, $21,546.90; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And to S. Moretti, $50,276.10; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And to Lynch, J. Lynch, $14,364.60?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. To A. Longano, $14,364.60; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Actually, you have no way of knowing if this distribution was made or not? They split up the cash themselves their own way?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. They did it each day?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Split the cash each day?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. They didn't accumulate it for a year?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. They would accumulate it and then they would draw—many times during the period there were drawings. That is what he submitted to us, like $70,000 or $50,000. That was their distribution.

Mr. HALLEY. You would get a list of the drawings as they accumulated the money?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. They would say total drawn this day out of the bank roll. We deducted it from the balance, and there would be a net balance at the end of the day. That is the only way we could cover the drawings.

Mr. HALLEY. Then the L. & L. Co. That is care of Joseph Stacher, Twenty-fifth and Russell Place, Newark, N. J. Is he a real person?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever seen him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Where?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I do his tax-return work.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been doing his tax returns?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It must be from about 1943 on, either 1943 or 1944 on.

Mr. HALLEY. What business has he been in? You say you know him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Sure. He is in the music-box business.

Mr. HALLEY. Jukebox?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Jukebox business.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he have pinball machines?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Pinball? Jukebox machines.

Mr. HALLEY. Pinballs are the little game that you shoot the balls. You have seen pinball machines?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know what you call, I honestly don't know what you mean by pinball.

Mr. HALLEY. They have a lot of balls you shoot around in the box.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. And they light up the numbers light up, yes; those kind.

Mr. HALLEY. He is in that business, too?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes; that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he have slot machines?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know, or the answer is no?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The answer is that I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Who gave you the information on the L. & L. Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. When was that, 1947?

Mr. HALLEY. 1947; the Saratoga operation from August 4, 1947, to September 30, 1948.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, the bookkeeper gave those.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was that?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Seymour Eisen.

Mr. HALLEY. He is the same man who did the bookkeeping for Lansky down in Florida?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Eisen go up to Saratoga?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He kept the records up there?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get daily sheets from him, too?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No. There it was entirely different. He kept a complete set of records himself. He did everything himself.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he give you the records, or just summaries?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It was just summaries. I helped him with the return, and that is all there was to it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see the records?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I believe I did; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that operation, at the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever up there?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. During that summer?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. This is the summer of 1947, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right, 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. And also 1948, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. From August 4, 1947, I think your return shows, it ran to September 30, 1948, but they operated only the one summer?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. They operated only 25 or 26 days.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1947?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. You were in Saratoga?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How many times did you visit the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Two times that summer.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go into the gambling room and gamble?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I rarely ever gamble. I probably stepped in over there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you see there? Did you see Meyer Lansky?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I believe I did; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see James Lynch?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes; I think I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Stacher?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Stacher; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You saw them all up at the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I did.

Mr. HALLEY. They had many of the same employees they had in New Jersey, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I wouldn't know. If you say so, then they have.

Mr. HALLEY. You wouldn't know that?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You showed gross receipts or net wins of $183,634, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And expenses of $174,042, with a net income of only $9,592. Did you ever get an explanation of the small size of the earnings?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I asked about it. That is what the operation was. It was just not a profitable operation, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. You distributed $4,796 to Stacher; $2,398 to Lansky; and $2,398 to Lynch, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. That Arrowhead place ran wide open, didn't it? I mean, you didn't need a card or an introduction, or anything?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You know that.

Mr. HALLEY. You are the witness.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. All those places operated that way up there.

Mr. HALLEY. Up where?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Up at Saratoga. You can go to any of the places and just walk right into them.

Mr. HALLEY. Anybody at any hotel could tell you where you could go to gamble, isn't that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I wouldn't know about that, but I seem to recall the whole place being wide open. You could hear voices on the street telling about the horses and what not, the whole town. The answer to that question is obvious. It is obvious to me. If you walk along—I don't know what street it is—Broadway, you can hear it on the street there, you can hear the results.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first work for Meyer Lansky?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I first began to do his tax work for the year 1946.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you meet Lansky?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know how I met him. I know I knew him a long time ago. I didn't have much dealing with him for many years, but I knew him. I knew him when I was with Cohn.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Louis Roth, an accountant in New York?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. How do you spell it?

Mr. HALLEY. L-o-u-i-s R-o-t-h.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Louis Roth?

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I may have met him. I don't know the name. I have no recollection at all of that name.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't remember who introduced you to Lansky?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You began doing the Colonial Inn work?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean through Lansky?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The first job I did for Lansky in connection with doing his tax work was Beverly Club. That was the first time.

Mr. HALLEY. In New Orleans?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you do the return for the club, or just for Lansky?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I did the tax work for Lansky, but in connection with his share, his income, he wanted me to go down to Beverly.

Mr. HALLEY. And you went down and looked at their books?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He wanted to make sure he was getting a fair deal, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, to make sure his taxes were properly paid.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you worked for Colonial Inn before you worked for Lansky?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he introduce you to the Colonial Inn work? When did you start on Colonial Inn?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That would be in the fall, sometime, in 1946. That was the first time. In other words, the first year that I recall we did the work was for the full year ending in 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it possible that Rutkin introduced you to Lansky? How did you meet all these racketeers?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. How did I meet them? Rutkin, I met—let's go down the line. Rutkin—I met in 1937 when I was with Cohn, when I was with Samuel R. Cohn & Co. I did the Jack Deschie Hotel. I was sent down there to do an assignment. As the man doing the work, I just met him. That was the first man I met.

Lansky, I don't know how I met. I have no recollection of whether I met him in Florida. So that is two.

You say how did I meet all these? I have explained all of these.

Mr. HALLEY. You have done Joe Adonis' work?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean doing tax return as a partner?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. How about his Automotive Conveying Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't do any of his work.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you do that work for his Automobile Conveying Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You do all of Longie Zwillman's work, don't you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you do for Zwillman?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I haven't prepared his tax return. I started to prepare his tax return in 1948, but—

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to Zwillman?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Zwillman and Stacher, I met at one time. That is the first time I ever met the whole group. That is how I got to be in doing what I am now, part of this tax work.

Mr. HALLEY. Tell us about that.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I was asked by Stacher, I believe it was, after I left Sam Cohn I think it was, to represent them in a litigation of claims that they had against Reinfeld. That is where it all started. If it hadn't been for that, I probably would be somewhere else today. That is how it started. That is how I got to know Stacher and Zwillman.

Mr. HALLEY. That is this thing that Rutkin is now involved in a tax case about, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is the thing he is involved in.

Mr. HALLEY. The $250,000 which he got from Reinfeld?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. He got 250, and Zwillman got 358, which you know.

Mr. HALLEY. That goes a way back to the old prohibition days?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Maybe you don't know.

You met them all when?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You asked the question how I got to know all these people.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Really, the first time I ever got to know anybody who amounted to anything was when I represented Zwillman and Stacher in this litigation I just mentioned. That was the start. That was probably my first contact. I was probably 40 years old at the time. I continued to get work from the people that I knew, and I got the work from them in the beginning.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't remember how you met Meyer Lansky?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, that I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever do any work for Mike Lascari?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. He is part of the Public Service Co.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean the Public Service Tobacco Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. For which we do the accounting work. So we automatically do his accounting work.

Mr. HALLEY. That is Zwillman's company, basically, isn't it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. He is a 50-percent partner, and Lascari is a 50-percent partner.

Mr. HALLEY. For Zwillman you take care of Public Service Tobacco Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is one.

Mr. HALLEY. Diamond T?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What is that, General Motors?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It is now General Motors.

Mr. HALLEY. Subsidiary?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. GMC distributor.

Mr. HALLEY. Federal Automatic Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Anything else for Zwillman?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Not that I recall.

Mr. HALLEY. You have been doing that since when?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Public Service when I first met him. I think that was the first job I got.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get Manhattan Cigarette Vending Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Whenever I got that, whatever years, I must have gotten that through Zwillman.

Mr. HALLEY. Mike Lascari is in that; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. He was. He has sold it since.

Mr. HALLEY. Mike Cappola was in that, too?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't he?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Manhattan Cigarette was owned by Lascari up to a point.

Mr. HALLEY. They handled the sale of cigarettes from vending machines; is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the relationship between Mike Cappola and the Manhattan Cigarette Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. We were doing the accounting work for Manhattan Cigarette, and Mike Lascari sold out to two fellows called—they are presently partners, and have been in there a year or 2 years. I don't remember the names of the partners.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't Manhattan Cigarette have a loan from Mike Cappola?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know anything about Mike Cappola?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know who he is?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know. He may have come down there once. I wouldn't know, myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever told what business he was in?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No. I don't know. Was I ever told what business he is in?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you do for Consolidated Television?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. We haven't done that for years, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you do it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know, a couple of years ago we did the work for Consolidated Television, and then they sold out—not sold out, but they lost their money.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was in it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It was Lansky—

Mr. HALLEY. Adonis was in it, too?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. Pokrass.

Mr. HALLEY. Louis Pokrass.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Louis Pokrass and his family. Wolf, who was a trustee for Frank Costello.

Mr. HALLEY. Costello was in that through Wolf?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that George Wolf?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

If you will ask me, I will tell you. I can't recall the others. There are a couple other big ones, not too big. Another salesman in there, a friend of Lansky's. I forget his name.

There is one other person who owned 20 percent in there. He must have owned 20 or 25 percent.

Mr. HALLEY. At least, in Consolidated Television you had Lansky, Adonis, and Costello through Wolf, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is Pokrass?

Mr. HALLEY. Who is Pokrass?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Louis Pokrass. He was formerly, I think he formerly owned the Cabanet Wine & Spirits Co., which was sold.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were they located?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know. They had two big plants. They were big wholesalers in the city.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever do any other work for Costello?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Just the Beverly Club and the Consolidated Television?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Nothing else?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Nothing else.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any other accounts with George Wolf?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or any other business from George Wolf?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What other business have you gotten through Abner Zwillman?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know of any other besides those three.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you still doing business for the Beverly Country Club?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes and no. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last go down there?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The early part of this year.

Mr. HALLEY. What month, March?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. March, February, or March, something like that, 1950.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that in connection with the return for 1949?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I think their fiscal year ends in November 1949. I could have been down there either for their fiscal—it could be the next 3 months. I don't know which. I couldn't tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you do any work for O'Rourke and Erickson on the Boca Raton Club?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever done any work for Erickson?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. None of any nature?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No. That is the tragedy of it. That is where I got my first publicity.

Mr. HALLEY. What was that?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You know, before Hogan's grand jury.

Mr. HALLEY. Tell us.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It was nothing. I was called there as a big witness for Erickson, and I think if he stepped on me he wouldn't know me.

Mr. HALLEY. But it so happened you had in your office tax returns involving a lot of his enterprises?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is right, but it had nothing to do with Erickson.

Mr. HALLEY. It had to do with what, Green Acres?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Green Acres and Colonial.

Mr. HALLEY. Club Boheme?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Boheme; I don't know whether I had any information about Boheme.

Mr. HALLEY. Boheme was a part of Green Acres, wasn't it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Separate.

Mr. HALLEY. Boheme was simply the outlet through which they ran the big, unlimited New York crap game down there, the big crap game that they had at Club Boheme. You have heard of it, haven't you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, I have heard of it.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't the Club Boheme the vehicle through which that was run?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know whether you call it vehicle. They each had part. At one time they were part of Colonial, and at one time they were separate. I can't distinguish them.

Mr. HALLEY. About those Florida enterprises, you got your information from Florida?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Florida, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And then you would make out and file returns?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I wouldn't make it out. I would just assist him, and Ben Eisen, his brother. I believe Ben Eisen worked on it, too.

Mr. HALLEY. But you actually filed it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, no. I assisted in the preparation.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your job?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Just to assist in the tax return, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Eisen had no connection with Beverly Country Club, did he?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't think so. There is another accountant. You mean the accounting firm?

Mr. HALLEY. Who was that, Charles B. Murphy?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is Murphy & Co.

Mr. HALLEY. They are in New Orleans, is that right?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you keep a daily diary for yourself?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, I never did.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you hold any financial interests directly or indirectly for the benefit of Abner Zwillman?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, just one.

Mr. HALLEY. What is that?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In GMC, when they started that company, he was concerned in his franchise, and I believe he felt if he showed it in his name he wouldn't get the franchise. So a trust agreement was drawn by Charles Handler in which I was the nominee for his stock. When all returns were prepared, no matter what the returns state otherwise, his name was listed as the stockholder, and so forth. So there is no attempt in any way to do anything other than what it was, a trust agreement.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the Diamond T Co., is it not?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It is now the GMC.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the distributor for General Motors trucks?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever do any business for the Peoples Trucking Co.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. I think that will be all.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Goldstein, I am interested in this Consolidated Television. Is that in business now?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. What happened, Senator, is that originally Lansky and these other people started it, and they started to manufacture these big sets; you remember the ones that first came out for bars and taverns? They thought they would make a lot of money. So they made them, but they were poorly made. They were the distributors. They would set them up, and they were returned.

The first thing you know, whatever the investment was, was all used up for experimental work, and so forth. There came a time when Pokrass wanted more money. He had to have more money by the individual stockholders, and they wouldn't put up any more.

The CHAIRMAN. Pokrass was the operating man?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, yes, he was the president. His son was the treasurer, or something.

So he went ahead, what he did was to go ahead with another group, some other people entirely different from these people.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know who the other people are that he went ahead with?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The new firm was Tele King Corp. I understand it is doing very well. But that is his company, his and whoever he is with.

The CHAIRMAN. When did this Consolidated Television go out of business?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I believe about 2 years ago, something like that.

The CHAIRMAN. How big an outfit was that? How much money was invested in it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I think about $150,000, something like that, somewhere around that figure.

The CHAIRMAN. $150,000 total?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes. It wasn't enough for that type of business.

The CHAIRMAN. Were they going to manufacture television sets?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, actually manufacture them. They had two engineers who claimed that they had a certain new way of making a television set, different from RCA or somebody like that. Then they discovered, after a length of time, that these two fellows were not what they should be.

The CHAIRMAN. Where was their place of business?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Twenty-sixth Street.

The CHAIRMAN. Twenty-sixth Street in New York?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Near the West Side Highway.

The CHAIRMAN. It was in the city of New York?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. City of New York. It is on a street between the dock and that—what is that, is that Twelfth Avenue? Somewhere near Twelfth Avenue or Eleventh Avenue, that big Terminal Building.

The CHAIRMAN. How much money did Costello, through Wolf, have in this outfit?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I think he had either $12,000 or $16,000, something like that, $18,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Did Costello have an interest in one of the Florida operations and you did the accounting work for them?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Not to my knowledge, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. The Club Boheme?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The Lone Eagle?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Have you met Costello?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I have seen him a few times. I am not what you call friendly with him. I have seen him in public places, something like that. I have seen him once in New Orleans, I believe, and once or twice in New York. That is the extent of my knowledge.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Outside of seeing him at places, did you ever sit down and talk with him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No. In New Orleans we may have set at a table. He never discussed any business with me.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you go to New Orleans for?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. There our firm was representative of Lansky. In connection with his return, he wanted us to go to New Orleans.

The CHAIRMAN. You did the work for the partnership, didn't you, Lansky, Costello? You did the work for the Beverly Country Club?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. We didn't do the work. There were accountants, and so forth. I just went down there.

The CHAIRMAN. You were Costello's accountant in that case?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you work with Mr. Murphy in getting up these tax returns for the Beverly Country Club?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Did Mr. Murphy come up here to see you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't recall Murphy coming up here.

The CHAIRMAN. Has he ever been up here to see you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't think so.

The CHAIRMAN. How many times have you been down to see him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It depends on the year. The first year, in 1946, I may have been down there once or twice. I think I skipped a year. I went down there for another 6 or 8 months. There was one year in which I went about three times.

The CHAIRMAN. When have you been down last?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The early part of this year.

The CHAIRMAN. You knew that Costello had an interest in the Beverly Club?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the portion of interest of the partners, Phil Kastel and Lansky? How much did each of them own, do you know?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Originally, it was a partnership. One of the things I went down there in connection with that tax work was that they converted from a partnership into a corporation.

The CHAIRMAN. Was it an equal partnership, one-third each?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, there were other partners, Senator; a fellow named Rickefor. I don't think I ever met him. I don't know who he is.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was the other partner?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Dudley something, I don't know what his second name is, owned about 3 percent.

The CHAIRMAN. Was Carlos Marcello—

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Was he a partner?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is Carlos Marcello?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know. I have seen him once or twice.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. You say Dudley is a partner where?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In Beverly Country Club.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Do you know Dudley's second name?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It is Giger-something. Gigerman.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Is he related to any of the other people here?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I think he is some relation to Costello. I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. He is a brother-in-law, isn't he, of Costello's?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know his relation.

The CHAIRMAN. When was this partnership wound up in corporation form?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. At the end of the fiscal year 1947, something like that.

The CHAIRMAN. The end of the fiscal year 1947?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes; sometime in 1947, in October.

The CHAIRMAN. Then when the corporation was formed, who were the stockholders of the corporation?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The same ones, except—

The CHAIRMAN. How much of it does Lansky own?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You mean today?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. He is out of it today.

The CHAIRMAN. When did he get out?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. He sold out in 1948, I believe.

The CHAIRMAN. How much of a partner was he during the days of the partnership?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. The tax return would show that. Approximately 20 percent, I think, 20 or 25. I don't know the exact figure.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you do the tax work for this Dudley, whatever his last name is?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Or Rickefor?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything else?

Boris, do you have any questions?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. No.

Mr. HALLEY. We would like to test your personal books and the records of your business.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. What year?

Mr. HALLEY. For the years 1945 to date.

The CHAIRMAN. And, Mr. Goldstein, if we need you any more, the subpoena which has been served on you will be a continuing one without the necessity of serving another one.

Mr. HALLEY. Will the committee instruct the witness that pursuant to that subpoena, he is to produce before the committee his personal books and records, and the records of his business, since 1945?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. By personal, do you mean the partnership?

Mr. HALLEY. And any of your own business records.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I haven't any records.

Mr. HALLEY. Whatever you have.

The CHAIRMAN. That is all right. You are instructed to do that.

When do you want him to do that?

Mr. HALLEY. He can bring them in tomorrow, or we can arrange to have somebody go look at them.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. That is a lot better.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Kostelanetz will let you know who will be there.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Will you let me know a day or two in advance? I have to get these things together. I don't know where they are. Some are in New York.

The CHAIRMAN. What other operations in Saratoga did you make out the tax returns for, besides Mr. Lansky's Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't recall any.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you remember any at all?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No. I don't recall any. I was trying to think.

The CHAIRMAN. Did Mr. Lansky operate up there during the 1949 season?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, no. It would be in his return.

The CHAIRMAN. What?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. It would be in his tax return.

The CHAIRMAN. You made them out, did you not?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. You should remember last year whether he operated.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. You asked me, and I said "No." You asked me whether he operated, and I said "No." It would be in his return if he did.

The CHAIRMAN. When is the last time he operated?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. 1947.

The CHAIRMAN. You made out no Saratoga return since that time?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. How about James Rutkin? What businesses does he have, do you know?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You make out his return?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. He just has stock sales he has had in 1 or 2 years. He has had that profit in 1945, I remember. He skipped a year or two. I don't know what he had in 1948, some miscellaneous income. I don't know exactly. I know there is no business.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is he now?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. In the courtroom being tried, in Newark, for income-tax evasion.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, thank you, Mr. Goldstein.

Mr. ELICH. Make that Tuesday morning, Mr. Goldstein, at 10:30, in your office in Newark.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, sir, we thank you. We are sorry we kept you so late.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lansky, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. LANSKY. I do.

TESTIMONY OF MEYER LANSKY, NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. How old are you, Mr. Lansky?

Mr. LANSKY. Forty-eight.

May I ask you if this is the subpoena? I want it known on the record that I was subpoenaed.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir; that is the subpoena.

May I ask you, did you bring all these books and records we asked for?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. How about it?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline, on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. We might as well get started in the regular way.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. LANSKY. Meyer Lansky.

Mr. HALLEY. Your address?

Mr. LANSKY. 36 East Thirty-sixth Street, New York City.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you lived there?

Mr. LANSKY. One year.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to that, where did you live?

Mr. LANSKY. Prior to that, I lived at 40 Central Park South.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you live there?

Mr. LANSKY. Maybe 2 years. I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to that, where did you live?

Mr. LANSKY. 211 Central Park West.

Mr. HALLEY. For how long?

Mr. LANSKY. Maybe 4 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you married?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any children?

Mr. LANSKY. Three children.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you now have any legitimate business?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Under what law would it tend to incriminate you, Mr. Lansky?

Mr. LANSKY. Well, gentlemen, I am being investigated for income tax, and I feel anything may lead or tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is investigating you for income tax?

Mr. LANSKY. I guess the Treasury Department.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know it or do you suspect it?

Mr. LANSKY. From all the rumors and evidence that I read in the newspapers.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it your position that any answers to questions concerning your business would tend to incriminate you?

Mr. LANSKY. That it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. I advise you that the mere fact that it might tend to incriminate you is not a sufficient answer. If you said it would—

Mr. LANSKY. I guess it would.

Mr. HALLEY. You think it would tend to incriminate you?

Mr. LANSKY. I think so.

The CHAIRMAN. Let us get back now. The question was asked, what business you were in. Did you refuse to answer that question?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. The chairman orders you to answer. Do you refuse to answer?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer for the same reason, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You were ordered, pursuant to this subpoena, to produce certain books and records, is that right?

The CHAIRMAN. Before you get to that.

Who is your lawyer, Mr. Lansky?

Mr. LANSKY. My lawyer is Mr. Polakoff.

The CHAIRMAN. Is he in New York City?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Moe?

Mr. LANSKY. Correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you advised with your lawyer?

Mr. LANSKY. I did, counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. This is Senator Kefauver.

Mr. LANSKY. Pardon me.

The CHAIRMAN. We, of course, give you an opportunity of having your lawyer here if you want to have your lawyer here.

Mr. LANSKY. I don't think it is necessary.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not want to have your lawyer here? I mean, you advised with him and you know what your answers are going to be?

Mr. LANSKY. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. This subpoena orders you to produce certain books and records, is that correct?

Mr. LANSKY. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have books and records?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. I advise you to consult with your attorney, because the law is that you must produce them. You may refuse, having produced them at the hearing room, to allow the committee to see them; but you must produce them in order to begin to assert your privilege.

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know that, counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you consult with your attorney?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The chairman orders you to produce them. Do you refuse to produce them?

Mr. LANSKY. He just told me that I should consult with my attorney.

Mr. HALLEY. Until you have consulted, do you persist in your refusal to produce your books and records?

Mr. LANSKY. You asked me to consult my attorney, or did I consult?

Mr. HALLEY. You were asked first, did you, and you said you did.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You said on the basis of that, you just came in without even bringing with you your books and records?

Mr. LANSKY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You are now asked—

Mr. LANSKY. My attorney told me that I should decline to produce them.

Mr. HALLEY. You are now asked to return, bringing with you the books and records; and then raising the question, after the books and records are physically before this committee, as to whether you must produce them for inspection.

Mr. LANSKY. I see.

Mr. HALLEY. I will ask the committee to instruct you to return with the books and records.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. You have already been instructed. Your subpoena instructs you to produce the books and records. The chairman of the committee will now instruct you again to produce the books and records in the morning at 9:30 when the committee meets.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. LANSKY. Oh, I don't know. Many years.

Mr. HALLEY. More than 10 years?

Mr. LANSKY. I think so. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to him?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. LANSKY. A long time.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Erickson?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jimmie Alo?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Strader?

Mr. LANSKY. I couldn't tell you a lot of people by name. Some people I may know, but I wouldn't remember names.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Charles Fischetti?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Rocco Fischetti?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Tony Accardo?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jack Dragna?

Mr. LANSKY. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know John Rosselli?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Phil Kastel?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Tony Gizzo?

Mr. LANSKY. I may have met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Johnny King?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mike Cappola?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had business dealings with any of these people?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is your accountant today?

Mr. LANSKY. Today?

Mr. HALLEY. Who handles your accounting work?

Mr. LANSKY. Goldstein.

The CHAIRMAN. I did not understand.

Mr. LANSKY. George Goldstein.

Mr. HALLEY. I. George Goldstein. Do Eisen & Eisen, of Florida, handle any of your accounts?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Does an attorney named Murphy handle any of your accounts and work?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Bugsy Siegel?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mickey Cohen?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not know Mickey Cohen?

Mr. LANSKY. No; I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. I believe I asked you if you knew Phil Kastel.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Longie Zwillman?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in a business involving television?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in the gambling business?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in Saratoga Springs, N. Y.?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Even your presence in the city of Saratoga Springs?

Mr. LANSKY. No; but it may lead, just as I say, through my income tax—

Mr. HALLEY. How would it affect your income tax?

Mr. LANSKY. To questions that may tend to incriminate me, directly or indirectly.

Mr. HALLEY. How would it affect your income taxes whether you had ever been in the city of Saratoga Springs?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know, but I just want to reserve my privilege and my right not to incriminate myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Will the chairman please instruct the witness to answer the question?

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lansky, you are instructed to answer these questions. Can we have the understanding that if, in the opinion of the chairman, any question counsel asks you is not a proper question, I will tell you not to answer it? Otherwise, you are instructed to answer every question that is asked you.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You understand that?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have an interest in the Flamingo Hotel at Las Vegas?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in Las Vegas, Nev.?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know James Lynch?

Mr. LANSKY. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. James Lynch.

Mr. LANSKY. Lynch?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joseph Stacher?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a business with James Lynch or Joseph Stacher?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Gerald Catena?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Willie Moretti?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Salvatore Moretti?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Anthony Longano?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know if I know him. I may know him if I see him.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in Chicago?

Mr. LANSKY. Was I ever in Chicago?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the Lexington Hotel in the city of Chicago?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Al Capone?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know if I ever knew him or not. I may have seen him. I couldn't say if I knew him.

Mr. HALLEY. The Lexington Hotel, if I may refresh your memory, was the Capone headquarters in Chicago. Were you ever at the Capone headquarters at the Lexington Hotel in Chicago?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know? You might have been?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know. I decline to answer that question on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. You are fishing for a reason now.

Mr. LANSKY. I am not fishing for any reason.

Mr. HALLEY. The answer is very simple: Were you ever in the Capone headquarters in Chicago?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lansky, the Capone headquarters that we are referring to was back prior to 1935.

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know. All these questions may be leading, and I don't know where——

The CHAIRMAN. Prior to 1935, were you ever in the Capone headquarters in the Lexington Hotel in Chicago?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer, counsel, on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the Wofford Hotel in Miami Beach?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the Boulevard Hotel at Miami Beach?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know. I couldn't say.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Abe Allenberg?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. LANSKY. Maybe about 12 years or so.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the Robert Richter Hotel in Miami Beach?

Mr. LANSKY. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you last there?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know. I may have been there last year.

Mr. HALLEY. In the Robert Richter Hotel?

Mr. LANSKY. Maybe.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you stay at the Robert Richter Hotel?

Mr. LANSKY. I never stayed there.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you stay at Miami Beach? What is the last hotel at which you stayed?

Mr. LANSKY. The last hotel? I didn't stay in any hotel in Miami Beach.

Wait a minute. I stayed at the Last Horizon, or some name like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in business with Anthony Guarini?

Mr. LANSKY. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in business with Anthony Guarini?

Mr. LANSKY. Anthony—

Mr. HALLEY. Guarini.

Mr. LANSKY. Guarini?

Mr. HALLEY. Guarini, G-u-a-r-i-n-i.

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in business with Joseph Stacher?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in business with James Lynch?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. You believe that the mere answers to those questions would involve you in an income-tax charge?

Mr. LANSKY. Maybe.

Mr. HALLEY. The answer must be that you think those answers would tend to incriminate you.

Mr. LANSKY. I think it would.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any basis for asserting that answer, except the mere allegation?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know how to answer that in legal terms.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the premises of the Arrowhead Inn, at Saratoga Springs?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the Arrowhead Inn at Saratoga Springs?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of Saratoga Springs, N. Y.?

Mr. LANSKY. Sure I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

Did you ever hear of the Beverly Club in New Orleans?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the Beverly Club in New Orleans?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Phil Kastel?

Mr. LANSKY. Did I ever see him? Sure, I saw him.

Mr. HALLEY. You know him?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him in the Beverly Club?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. I think, on the record, I have no further questions, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lansky, prior to 1940, 10 years ago, were you in any business transaction with Frank Costello?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Prior to 1940, were you in any gambling business?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have any business at Saratoga Springs prior to 1940?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. The reason I am putting it in 1940, which I think I should explain to you—you can take my word for this—whether it be an income tax case or a gambling case or anything else, any violation prior to 1940, the statute of limitations would have run against it.

On that basis, with that explanation, do you still refuse to answer these questions about what you did prior to 1940?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, Mr. Chairman, I still decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know Charles Fischetti?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever been in any business transactions with him?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever been convicted of any offense?

Mr. LANSKY. Have I?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. When and what?

Mr. LANSKY. I was convicted for the Prohibition Act, possession.

The CHAIRMAN. When was that?

Mr. LANSKY. Away back around 1931 or '32.

The CHAIRMAN. What else?

Mr. LANSKY. I was convicted for a gambling offense. That is all I know, unless you have something different.

The CHAIRMAN. You would know whether you have been or not.

Mr. LANSKY. I mean, it is so far back. I only remember the Prohibition Act.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you been convicted in the past 10 years?

Mr. LANSKY. I was convicted here recently, last month.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean aside from this thing last month.

Mr. LANSKY. All that I remember is possession under the Liquor Act.

The CHAIRMAN. On the basis of your refusal to answer, there is not much use asking you any further questions.

Mr. HALLEY. I would like to suggest that he come tomorrow morning.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will reconvene at 9:30 in the morning, which will give you a further opportunity of again consulting with your lawyer and having him here, if you want to have him here. You have been ordered to bring in the record called for in the subpoena.

Let us give him the subpoena back.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. May I ask him a short question?

The CHAIRMAN. You will be instructed to come back at 9:30, at the same place, with your records, and with your lawyer if you wish to have him.

Mr. Kostelanetz has two or three questions.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Do you know Charles "Lucky" Luciano?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. How long have you known him, sir?

Mr. LANSKY. A long time.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Within the last 2 years, did you have occasion to see him?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Did you go to Italy, sir?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever been to Italy?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you see "Lucky" Luciano last?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Lansky, that is all. We will see you in the morning at 9:30.

(Thereupon, at 8:10 p. m., a recess was taken until 9:30 a. m., Thursday, October 12, 1950.)

INVESTIGATION OF ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1950

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE,
New York, N. Y.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

The committee met, pursuant to recess, at 10 a. m., in room 2804, United States Courthouse, Foley Square, New York, N. Y., Senator Estes Kefauver, chairman of the committee, presiding.

Present: Senators Kefauver and Tobey.

Also present: Rudolph Halley, chief counsel; Boris Kostelanetz, assistant counsel; John F. Elich, Patrick Murray, Thomas E. Myers, and John Murphy, investigators; Nat K. Perlow, of Senator Kefauver's staff; Nathan Frankel, CPA, New York committee staff; and Julius Cahn, administrative assistant to Senator Wiley.

Irving H. Saypol, United States attorney, southern district of New York.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

FURTHER TESTIMONY OF MEYER LANSKY, NEW YORK, N. Y., ACCOMPANIED BY MOSES POLAKOFF, ATTORNEY, NEW YORK, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lansky, you were on the stand yesterday.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And this is?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Moses Polakoff, 475 Fifth Avenue, New York City. The telephone number is Lexington 2-2600.

The CHAIRMAN. I have heard of you. You were in the Luciano case, weren't you?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You were counsel for Luciano?

Mr. POLAKOFF. I was.

Senator TOBEY. How did you become counsel for such a dirty rat as that? Aren't there some ethics in the legal profession?

Mr. POLAKOFF. May I ask who you are, sir?

Senator TOBEY. My name is Senator Tobey. That isn't germane to this hearing but just a question of human interest. There are some men beyond the pale. He is one of them.

Mr. POLAKOFF. May I answer?

Senator TOBEY. Go ahead.

Mr. POLAKOFF. I don't want to get into any controversy with you about that subject at the present time, but under our Constitution every person is entitled to his day in court——

Senator TOBEY. I see.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Whether he is innocent or not. When the day comes that a person becomes beyond the pale of justice, that means our liberty is gone. Minorities and undesirables and persons with bad reputations are more entitled to the protection of the law than are the so-called honorable people. I don't have to apologize to you——

Senator TOBEY. I didn't ask you to.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Or anyone else for whom I represent.

Senator TOBEY. I look upon you in amazement.

Mr. POLAKOFF. I look upon you in amazement, a Senator of the United States, for making such a statement.

Senator TOBEY. Let me say something to you. If I were counsel and that dirty rat came in, I would say, "You are entitled to representation but you can't get it from me. I will have no fellowship with you. Get out of my office and find your representation somewhere else."

Mr. POLAKOFF. That is your privilege.

Senator TOBEY. Exactly.

Mr. POLAKOFF. But it is not your privilege to criticize someone else.

Senator TOBEY. I didn't criticize. I asked you why you did it. I asked simply for information.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Because I thought he was entitled to his day in court, and he had his day in court.

Senator TOBEY. I won't say any more. I reserve my opinion.

The CHAIRMAN. Anyway, Mr. Lansky is the witness. Mr. Polakoff is appearing as counsel.

Yesterday we asked Mr. Lansky several questions, many of which he refused to answer. When we left yesterday afternoon we instructed Mr. Lansky to bring the books and records called for in the subpoena and also suggested that he consult again with his counsel and invited him, if he wished to, to bring his counsel with him this morning. And that is the reason you are here.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Yes, sir. Mr. Lansky so informed me.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Lansky, the subpoena that was served upon you called for the production of certain books and records, and yesterday you were advised by the committee that it was your duty under the terms of that subpoena to produce those books in court, that is, before the committee, and then if you had any questions of constitutional privilege to assert, you might assert them, but the committee is entitled to the physical production of those books before the constitutional privilege can be raised.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Mr. Halley, I wasn't sure of my grounds. Personally, I think you are wrong. I think there is a difference between books of an association, a corporation, and books of an individual who is subpoenaed and who asserts his constitutional right. I didn't have a chance to check the cases between 10 last night and 8:30 this morning. I advised him for the present, until I had a chance to recheck the subject, that he do not produce the books, and I would do that most respectfully. I would like the opportunity of considering the subject for as reasonable time as the committee sees fit, and at the next meeting I would be perfectly willing to make a more definite opinion as to whether he should produce them or not. If I think he should, he will, and he will then raise his constitutional rights. But I am of the opinion, based on my general knowledge of the law, but without having made an immediate check, that he need not produce them. So there is no desire to be in contempt of the committee. It is just a desire to reserve my client's rights. I respectfully ask that you defer that question until a reasonable time, until your next meeting. I tried to read the recent cases this morning, the one the Supreme Court decided this May entitled "U. S. v. Bryan in the 1949 term, and U. S. v. Fleischman." They deal with the very same question, but it didn't cover the subject as an individual. I think under the Wilson case, the old cases, I am right, but I say that with hesitation. I may be wrong.

The CHAIRMAN. The difficulty about the matter is that Mr. Lansky had this subpoena for some time. He was ordered by the subpoena to bring his books in. He didn't do so yesterday. We continued the matter over until this morning. Our hearing in New York is terminating at 3 o'clock or 2:30 this afternoon.

Mr. POLAKOFF. We would be perfectly willing to appear in Washington or any other place.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, I know. On this basis we would never get through. I am sure you appreciate that.

Mr. POLAKOFF. I do, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. So we will just have to take the record at the present time that Mr. Lansky continues his refusal to produce the books and records called for.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Senator, I would like the understanding that there is no intent on the part of Mr. Lansky or myself to impede or delay the investigation. I told Mr. Lansky that I was of the opinion that the subpoena served upon him was an invalid one, if he wanted to stall for time, I think it was invalid. It called for a time when the committee was not in session and it had an indefinite date. However, I told him to honor the telegram. It came all of a sudden. I thought he would get a few days' notice where to appear. We usually leave things to the last minute unfortunately in law practice.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. Mr. Lansky was also asked a number of questions yesterday about business connections he had. Do you continue to refuse to answer those questions?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, sir.

Mr. POLAKOFF. That is on my advice, sir. Anything associated with his business would incriminate him.

Mr. HALLEY. Before we get into that phase of it, I would like to state, Mr. Polakoff, that in my opinion the subpoena may well cover, if such books do exist, the books of associations, informal unincorporated associations.

Mr. POLAKOFF. If such things exist, if he had those books, I think you would be entitled to them.

Mr. HALLEY. In the absence of the production of any books, the committee is not going to inquire as to what books he might produce if he were inclined to bring any in court.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Mr. Halley, if you will look at the subpoena, you will note that the subpoena calls for his personal records and no others.

Mr. HALLEY. His personal records might include the records of certain partnerships and associations.

Mr. POLAKOFF. I think a partnership would be under the same status as an individual.

Mr. HALLEY. You stated you were unprepared to argue the law.

Mr. POLAKOFF. No, I am not.

Mr. HALLEY. We want to make it perfectly clear that your statement excluding possibly from your argument the books of associations and partnerships, you weren't thereby inferentially excluding them from the subpoena.

Mr. POLAKOFF. No. I meant associations such as were investigated by the committee in the Fleischman case.

The CHAIRMAN. I think we understand one another. Are there any other questions, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LANSKY, were you ever in the city of Saratoga, N. Y.?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer.

Mr. POLAKOFF. You can answer that.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the Colonial Inn in the city of Saratoga?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it would incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. I meant the Arrowhead Inn. Were you ever in the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it would incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever stepped inside the premises?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it would incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been to Italy?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you in Italy?

Mr. LANSKY. 1949.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you in Italy?

Mr. LANSKY. I think about 14 days.

Mr. HALLEY. What cities did you visit in Italy?

Mr. LANSKY. I visited Rome, I visited Naples.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you visit any other city?

Mr. LANSKY. No, outside where the boat stopped.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Lucky Luciano in Italy?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it would incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. What law do you have in mind?

The CHAIRMAN. That is all right. He declines to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. You decline to say whether or not you saw Charles Lucky Luciano in Italy?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any business conferences while you were in Italy with anyone?

(Witness and counsel conferring.)

Mr. LANSKY. I didn't have any business conferences with anyone.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you leave the United States in 1949?

Mr. LANSKY. It was late in June. I don't remember the exact date.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you out of the United States?

Mr. LANSKY. Maybe 2 months.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you travel by boat?

Mr. LANSKY. I traveled by boat. I traveled by plane. I came back by boat.

Mr. HALLEY. You crossed the ocean by boat?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was your first stop in Europe?

Mr. LANSKY. The first—where I got off?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LANSKY. I got off at Naples.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay in Naples?

Mr. LANSKY. Oh, just a couple of days.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you visit Sicily?

Mr. LANSKY. No. The boat stopped at Palermo for about 6 hours.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get off the boat?

Mr. LANSKY. I got off the boat and went sightseeing.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you went to Naples. How long did you stay in Naples?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't remember. It was 3 days, or something like that. I went sightseeing with Cook's Tour.

Mr. HALLEY. Capri?

Mr. LANSKY. Capri.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Vesuvius?

Mr. LANSKY. No, Vesuvio was dead.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go to Pompeii?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You went through Pompeii?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When you left Naples where did you go?

Mr. LANSKY. To Rome.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay in Rome?

Mr. LANSKY. Maybe 4 or 5 days. I don't remember. I am not definite. Something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you traveling alone or with somebody?

Mr. LANSKY. With my wife.

Mr. HALLEY. Anyone else?

Mr. LANSKY. No one else.

Mr. HALLEY. From Rome where did you go?

Mr. LANSKY. To Nice.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay in Nice?

Mr. LANSKY. I didn't stay in Nice. I stayed in a town a couple of miles away.

Mr. HALLEY. Cannes?

Mr. LANSKY. You've got me. I think it was in Nice. Cannes is the more popular place. I couldn't get in there. I stayed in the other place.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you there?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know, a week or a couple of days over.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you go from Nice?

Mr. LANSKY. I went to Paris.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay in Paris?

Mr. LANSKY. No, I went to Switzerland for a couple of days, and from Switzerland I went to Paris. I waited there until the boat left.

Mr. HALLEY. From Paris you came to the United States?

Mr. LANSKY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been in communication with Charles Luciano within the last month?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in New Orleans?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer.

Mr. PALAKOFF. You may answer.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you last in New Orleans?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it would incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think we are getting anywhere with this.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's try a few more.

The CHAIRMAN. As I understand it, Mr. Lansky has informed his counsel about the questions he refused to answer on yesterday, and that is your position today, is that right?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Yes, Senator.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. I would simply like to know if you have ever been in the Beverly Club in New Orleans.

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it would incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. I won't ask any other questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you apply for any permit to operate any place at Saratoga Springs, or join in the application for one?

(Witness conferring with counsel.)

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground that it would tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, any further questions, Mr. Kostelanetz?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lansky, you will remain under subpoena for this committee without additional subpoena being served on you. I believe this is the copy you gave us yesterday.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Senator, that is perfectly all right, any time and any place. Just give us 1 day's notice.

The CHAIRMAN. Just let me make it clear that we understand we can notify either Mr. Lansky or his attorney and he will appear.

Mr. POLAKOFF. That is correct, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The subcommittee here, Senator Tobey and the chairman, will recommend to the whole committee that contempt proceedings be instituted against Mr. Lansky.

Mr. POLAKOFF. May I suggest, Senator, unless it is urgent on your part, that you withhold that until the next hearing. I would like to look up the law on the question of the books. I don't mean to be discourteous.

The CHAIRMAN. We would like to give you that opportunity, but, of course, if we ran our inquiry on that kind of basis we would never be finished and we feel we have given Mr. Lansky a very full opportunity, and he has availed himself of it in consulting with his counsel and having his counsel here. So, as matters now stand, we will have to take the record as it is, and on the basis of this record we have no alternative but to make this recommendation.

Mr. POLAKOFF. That is perfectly all right, sir.

Senator TOBEY. I would like to tell you that I was chief of the criminal division of the United States attorney's office away back in 1921 and 1922, and I think if you reflect—I believe you are a lawyer—you will realize that while you have a right to take whoever you wish as a client, I, under the circumstances, have the right to defend anyone that I want.

Senator TOBEY. I quite agree 100 percent on that without casting any reflections.

Mr. POLAKOFF. It so happens that others, despite their reputation, in the United States Government, did seek also to aid Luciano. Sometimes I accept the decision of the court that he was guilty. When I undertook his defense I believed he was innocent of the crime charged. He may have been a scoundrel in a thousand other ways, but being charged with a crime which after my investigation caused me to believe he was entitled to a defense, I feel that I or any other lawyer—

Senator TOBEY. I think you are honest in your opinion but I told you what I would do. I would tell that scum of the earth to "Get the hell out of here and find a lawyer if you want to. I won't touch the case and want no part of you." That is what I would tell him. You can do what you want to.

Mr. POLAKOFF. That is perfectly all right and that is your privilege. Circumstances, conditions, and time of practice all have some weight in a person's determining what to do. I want to tell you that I am not sorry, sir, that I defended him. I want to tell you that I still believe he was innocent of the crime charged, although I accept the rulings of the court.

Senator TOBEY. There are some men who by their conduct and their life become a stench in the nostrils of decent American citizens, and in my judgment, "Lucky" Luciano stands at the head of the list.

Mr. POLAKOFF. That is probably true, but you forget 1935 and other facts before it in 1950. As we look back in retrospect that was 15 years ago.

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. For the record, do you practice alone or are you in a partnership?

Mr. POLAKOFF. I am in partnership with my brother, Milton A. Polakoff.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been practicing law?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Thirty years.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. POLAKOFF. I was assistant United States attorney for the southern district of New York from 1921 to 1925. At the time I quit I was chief of the criminal division. I think I know a little bit about Federal law.

The CHAIRMAN. We are not raising any question about your technical ability.

Mr. POLAKOFF. As long as you asked about me, I wanted to give you a thorough history and if you want to know more about me, you just talk to any judge in the southern district of New York.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

STATEMENTS OF SIDNEY SIMANDL, NEWARK, N. J., AND JACK L. COHN, NEWARK, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. Gentlemen, I am Senator Kefauver, and this is Senator Tobey. What is your name, sir?

Mr. SIMANDL. Sidney Simandl, 24 Brandford Place, Newark.

Mr. COHN. Jack L. Cohn, 835 Broad Street, Newark.

The CHAIRMAN. If you are going to testify, we have a rule of the committee to put all of our witnesses under oath.

Mr. COHN. We have no objection to taking the oath, Senator, but we are rather here to explain the nonappearanace of Mr. Rutkin, who was subpoenaed to appear this morning before the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead, Mr. Halley, and let's see what the situation is. Will you please state the reason.

Mr. COHN. Why yes. Maybe we had better go back to some correspondence which we exchanged with the committee some time ago.

Shortly after this subpoena was served on Mr. Rutkin, Mr. Simandl wrote a letter to the Senator explaining that Mr. Rutkin had been subpoenaed on September 21, that Mr. Rutkin was at that time engaged in the preparation of his defense on an indictment which was pending in the Federal District Court for the District of New Jersey. Actually the trial was scheduled to start on October 10, and it has started. We find ourselves in a very delicate situation which I think the committee can appreciate. We realize that any publicity in connection with Mr. Rutkin's appearance before the committee might very materially damage his position before the jury in that trial which is presently going on. There are already some newspaper reports. I intend to show the committee the local papers, and you will find that the stories were appearing in the column right next to the stories reporting the trial, which obviously will have some effect on the jury. We hope it won't be too bad insofar as it has gone at the present time.

Mr. HALLEY. When did the trial start?

Mr. COHN. It started Tuesday, October 10.

Mr. HALLEY. When was Mr. Rutkin notified of the hearing here for Wednesday, October 11?

Mr. COHN. I think he received a wire on the evening of the 9th.

Mr. HALLEY. When was he served a subpoena?

Mr. COHN. On September 21.

Mr. SIMANDL. He wasn't served personally.

Mr. HALLEY. He accepted service?

Mr. SIMANDL. He accepted service.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the date of the service?

Mr. COHN. September 21.

Mr. SIMANDL. I believe he received a letter back from the chief investigator.

Mr. COHN. Just to give the committee the continuity of that, in response to our letter, we received back a letter under the signature of Mr. H. G. Robinson, representing the committee, in which he acknowledged receipt of our letter and the facts therein set forth and said that the situation which confronts your client, James Rutkin, with respect to the trial in the United States district court in New Jersey, which trial is scheduled to start October 10, has been noted, and consideration with respect thereto will be given at the time the date is established for the committee hearings.

Pursuant to this letter and the situation which arose, we conferred with Judge Meany, who is trying the case, and advised him if we felt his appearance was required before the committee we might be in a position where we would have to ask for a mistrial, depending upon the reports in the press resulting from such interview or appearance.

On Tuesday afternoon at about 4:30 while I was with Judge Van Ripper, who is trial counsel in this matter, we received a call from Mr. Myers, who has some connection with the committee—I am not sure just what it is—and as I understand the conversation he advised the judge that in view of the pending situation the committee would not require Mr. Rutkin's appearance until after the trial had been concluded, at least not this morning, but that he would appreciate it if counsel would come here this morning and explain to the committee the reason for the nonappearance.

Mr. SIMANDL. He is willing to go to any jurisdiction to testify, Mr. Halley. If the hearing weren't set in Newark, or New York, he is willing to go to any district to testify that you might desire to call.

The CHAIRMAN. When will the trial be over?

Mr. SIMANDL. We figure at the latest a week from Friday, at the latest, but we don't know what the Government has yet. The first witness is still on the stand, Mr. Reinfeld, being cross-examined. We still have some cross-examination, the State has redirect, that we know of. Just one witness.

Mr. HALLEY. Does Mr. Rutkin intend to be cooperative in his attitude toward this committee? We are trying to find out about the operation of certain gambling partnerships in which Mr. Rutkin participated. The evidence available to the committee is complete in documentary form in view of the fact that it is no secret to you that we have tax data available to this committee and the committee can use it in a proper way and will.

What I would like to know now, if you can answer the question, is does Mr. Rutkin intend to cooperate with the committee by testifying fully about these matters, or are we going to find him coming in here raising his constitutional privilege, which he may have a right to do, and evading answers and otherwise obstructing the committee's investigation?

Mr. SIMANDL. I couldn't, and I don't think he could predict what you want him for until last night. Look at this [indicating newspaper]. Here is the story of the Rutkin case, and then it says:

Links Rutkin to Lodi game. Senate prober charges Newark man operator of gambling place.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's see the names.

Mr. SIMANDL. Who would give him a fair trial over there?

I say I haven't discussed it with him and didn't know the subject of the subpoena until you just mentioned it. I want to say that in preparing the trial we have witnesses coming in from all over the country, coming in any time and any place, and we have to take up the matter of this present trial. Frankly, I haven't spoken to him about the possibilities of this testimony or what it is about. But since you have told us and since the press has published it, it will give us an opportunity, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. On the basis of this publicity to this point, are you planning to ask for a mistrial in your case in the Federal court in Newark?

MR. SIMANDL. Up until last night Judge Van Ripper and I and Mr. Cohn felt it certainly wasn't proper, but I say to you frankly we feel that we have whipped Reinfeld so badly we feel the admonition of the judge will now go with the jury. You know how it is; there is no way of knowing. I don't think at present that we do intend to make such a motion.

In last night's paper in the first edition this story was listed right next to the picture, up closer to the picture, Senator, so no one could neglect reading it.

THE CHAIRMAN. Gentlemen, we have no intention and no desire to be unfair to anybody or to prevent your client from getting a fair trial.

MR. SIMANDL. You see this is even brought up higher, the Lodi story in here, right next to the picture. It is also in this morning's press.

THE CHAIRMAN. Suppose I submit to you a two-way proposition. We can have Mr. Rutkin here at executive session with the understanding that no information about his testimony will be given to the press, or if you think it would get out that he did appear and that would be injurious to your defense, we will stipulate that we will call him immediately after his trial is finished. We will agree with you on that.

MR. SIMANDL. When you say call him immediately after his trial is completed, did you mean that he was to waive all his rights, if any, he has?

THE CHAIRMAN. We are not asking him to waive his rights. We would like to know whether he is going to be cooperative or not.

MR. SIMANDL. That is all right, Senator, as long as his rights are preserved, immediately after the trial is over and you notify us, I assume you will give us 24 hours' notice at least.

THE CHAIRMAN. Oh, yes.

MR. SIMANDL. He will appear.

THE CHAIRMAN. It will probably be in Washington or perhaps back here or in Philadelphia.

MR. COHN. The geography won't make any difference.

MR. SIMANDL. But his rights will be preserved to him if he desires to take advantage of them?

THE CHAIRMAN. Is that right, Mr. Halley?

MR. HALLEY. Yes.

THE CHAIRMAN. Then we have stipulation that after 24 hours' notice after the conclusion of the present trial—I am not talking about an appeal or anything of that sort.

MR. SIMANDL. That is right.

THE CHAIRMAN. Whether he is found guilty or is let out, you will produce him and he will testify.

MR. SIMANDL. When you say testify, subject of course, Senator to—

THE CHAIRMAN. That is right, but we want to say this: We are not going to put up with any cantankerousness in his refusing to answer questions unless he has a good and constitutional ground for not answering.

MR. SIMANDL. All right, Senator, I appreciate that.

Senator TOBEY. What is he charged with in New Jersey in this pending case?

MR. SIMANDL. Attempting to evade the payment of income tax by filing a fraudulent return.

The CHAIRMAN. For what years is that?

Mr. SIMANDL. 1943. That 1 year. It is just the one count, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, gentlemen, thank you.

Mr. SIMANDL. May we take the papers?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. DAMEO, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give the committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. DAMEO. I do.

TESTIMONY OF PHILIP L. DAMEO, SHORTHILLS, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. DAMEO. Philip L. Dameo.

Mr. HALLEY. Your address?

Mr. DAMEO. 116 Fairfield Drive, Shorthills, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your occupation?

Mr. DAMEO. My occupation is transportation, motor truck.

Mr. HALLEY. Your company is called the People's Express Co.?

Mr. DAMEO. Since June 1, 1946.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that a partnership or corporation?

Mr. DAMEO. It is a corporation.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are the other stockholders?

Mr. DAMEO. The other stockholders are Gerald Catena, Andrew Aldi, and Francis D. Lacort and myself.

Mr. HALLEY. We have had certain discussions with you in the past, that is representatives of the committee have, concerning the offer of the People's Express to lease the Lewis Building.

Mr. DAMEO. No, the Port Authority Building.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you handle those negotiations with the Port Authority?

Mr. DAMEO. I handled nothing at all with the Port Authority. I spoke to Milton Rosenbloom, who in turn spoke to Donald Spence, and we had lunch one day after the casual conversation. Mr. Rosenbloom wrote a letter to the Port Authority. I have never had any direct negotiations with the Port Authority nor anyone from my firm.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever discuss the Port Authority offer or any of its ramifications with Gerald Catena?

Mr. DAMEO. Yes, I did; just casually.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you state what those discussions were?

Mr. DAMEO. The discussion was merely this: That we were growing out of our building and that I was looking for bigger quarters. I told him that I might make an offer to the Port Authority. He said, "Go right ahead."

Mr. HALLEY. Is Spence active in the operation of People's Express?

Mr. DAMEO. Not very active, no. He was spending some time around the place so far as checking some of the drivers was concerned, but other than that he didn't have anything to do with it. We had an understanding when I first went into the business that there would be absolutely no interference so far as the management and operation of the company was concerned.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Catena?

Mr. DAMEO. I have known Catena for approximately 15 or 16 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had a business relationship with him before?

Mr. DAMEO. No; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. What business was he in before he entered the People's Express?

Mr. DAMEO. The only thing that I know that he was in was that he had an interest of some sort with the Marcel Manufacturing Co.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know what that interest was?

Mr. DAMEO. I don't. I think it was roughly 20 or 25 percent.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the Marcel Manufacturing Co.?

Mr. DAMEO. They are still in business, and they are manufacturers of paper napkins and wax paper and paper products.

Mr. HALLEY. How long was Catena connected with them?

Mr. DAMEO. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he connected with them when you made your association?

Mr. DAMEO. No. He had just left them for some reason or other. I don't know what the reason was.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he invest money in your business?

Mr. DAMEO. Yes; he did.

Mr. HALLEY. How much?

Mr. DAMEO. Approximately $20,000 or $22,000.

Mr. HALLEY. He appeared to be a man of substantial means?

Mr. DAMEO. I wouldn't say substantial, because when we were discussing it we thought we were going to need approximately $30,000 to buy it originally and he asked me to try to get better terms if I could, which I was able to do. The balance of the 50 percent I paid over a period of about 15 months.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did you contribute to the capital?

Mr. DAMEO. Fifty percent of the investment, which was approximately twenty or twenty-two thousand dollars.

Mr. HALLEY. The total investment was $22,000?

Mr. DAMEO. No; the total investment for the business was approximately $40,000 or $45,000, between forty and forty-five thousand dollars.

Mr. HALLEY. You invested half and he invested half?

Mr. DAMEO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he give you a check for his $22,000 or did he give you cash?

Mr. DAMEO. I believe there were three or four checks that were given, all in checks.

Mr. HALLEY. All in checks.

Mr. DAMEO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember the bank they were drawn on?

Mr. DAMEO. No; I don't; and I don't have those records with me. I believe it was—I think it was the Hillside Bank.

Mr. HALLEY. Hillside, N. J.?

Mr. DAMEO. Yes; Hillside, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. With the exception of his connection with the Marcel Corp.—

Mr. DAMEO. Yes; Marcel Manufacturing, I believe is the name of the company.

Mr. HALLEY. What other businesses did you know Catena to have been in in the 14 or 15 years you have known him?

Mr. DAMEO. I didn't know him to be in any other business. I just knew him casually up until about 5 or 6 years ago. I became rather friendly with him through playing golf. That is where I became a lot more friendly with him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet him in a gambling establishment?

Mr. DAMEO. You mean originally?

Mr. HALLEY. Ever; at any time. Did you ever see him in one?

Mr. DAMEO. Yes; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Where and when?

Mr. DAMEO. When, I would say it was approximately 4 years ago; 3½ or 4 years ago. The place I don't remember exactly, but I know it was off of Route 6.

Mr. HALLEY. New Jersey?

Mr. DAMEO. In New Jersey

Mr. HALLEY. Bergen County?

Mr. DAMEO. I imagine it was Bergen County. I will tell you how I happened to get there.

Mr. HALLEY. Go ahead.

Mr. DAMEO. I was entertaining some friends in New York, and one of these fellows happened to be from California, and another fellow from Jersey who is a friend of mine. After a few drinks and a little kibitzing around someone suggested finding a place to gamble. I had never known any place, but this fellow from California, who had a lot of friends in New York, knew about it, so we got in his car and drove out there and went into the place. We all had a few drinks, quite a few drinks, as a matter of fact, and I did see Catena at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it a place with which Catena had any connection?

Mr. DAMEO. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is the man from California? What was his name?

Mr. DAMEO. Melvin Rogers.

Mr. HALLEY. In what business is he?

Mr. DAMEO. He was a consulting engineer. He had been out here before for the Lionel Corp. He was out here again on some other consulting engineering business.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know where Catena is now?

Mr. DAMEO. No. I wish I did, because I would like to catch him as well.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your reason?

Mr. DAMEO. I have reason—this publicity has hurt my business and my family and everyone else.

Mr. HALLEY. I should think it would, and I have been wondering whether when you went into business with him you knew his reputation.

Mr. DAMEO. I did not know his reputation at all.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not?

Mr. DAMEO. No, I did not. As a matter of fact, I told Jack Elich that I was surprised to learn of a lot of these things.

Mr. HALLEY. You must have known him fairly well to have approved him for a large investment.

Mr. DAMEO. I knew in our discussions on the golf course that he sold out his interest so far as Marcel manufacturing was concerned, and this proposition came along to purchase the People's Express Co.—I was in the transportation business, and still am, where I operate as an individual and where I have operated as an individual for approximately 11 years. I needed some additional capital. Casually I asked him whether or not he would be interested in going into a business.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you belong to the same golf club?

Mr. DAMEO. I belong to one golf club that he belongs to. We were members of another club together, and I think he is still a member but I am not sure. I resigned from there 2 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. You met him at this golf club you belong to?

Mr. DAMEO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What club is that?

Mr. DAMEO. The Knoll Golf Club.

Mr. HALLEY. Is Catena away on any business involving your company?

Mr. DAMEO. Not involving my company; no.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last hear from him?

Mr. DAMEO. I would say it was approximately 3 weeks ago.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the circumstances?

Mr. DAMEO. The circumstances were merely this: That I told him that Mr. Elich and Mr. Murray were looking for him.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he in the office at the time?

Mr. DAMEO. No; he wasn't in the office.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him or was this a telephone conversation.

Mr. DAMEO. No; I saw him.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you see him?

Mr. DAMEO. I saw him at my home. It was late one Saturday evening, I would say about 9:30 one Saturday evening.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you telephoned him to come to your home or had he communicated with you?

Mr. DAMEO. He called me and I asked him where he was. He said he was in town and I said, "Jerry, I would like to see you. This thing is causing me no end of embarrassment and I think something should be done about it." He said, "All right, I will take care of it."

Mr. HALLEY. Is this the conversation that took place at your home?

Mr. DAMEO. Yes; it did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell him that Mr. Elich was trying to serve a subpoena on him?

Mr. DAMEO. Yes; I did, and I told him I had been served with a subpoena.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have the subpoena at that time?

Mr. DAMEO. Yes; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. All he said was "I will take care of it"?

Mr. DAMEO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell him where he could reach Mr. Elich?

Mr. DAMEO. Yes; I gave him two phone numbers.

Mr. HALLEY. Since then have you heard from him directly or indirectly?

Mr. DAMEO. No; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you. No other questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. No questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Dameo, when did you say this corporation was formed, the People's Express Co.?

Mr. DAMEO. We bought this old corporation. We bought it in June of 1946. The corporation has been in existence for over 50 years.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the capital stock of the corporation, that is, how much is the corporation worth?

Mr. DAMEO. I truthfully couldn't answer that.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your best estimate about whether it is a million and a half—

Mr. DAMEO. No; at the moment I would say it is worth approximately $300,000.

The CHAIRMAN. How much of that does Mr. Catena own?

Mr. DAMEO. Fifty percent of that.

The CHAIRMAN. You own the other 50 percent.

Mr. DAMEO. No. I had 50 percent, and I sold 5 percent to my accountant and gave 10 percent to this nephew of mine through marriage, who runs my Avenel office.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is your accountant?

Mr. DAMEO. Andrew V. Aldi.

The CHAIRMAN. What does Mr. Catena do there?

Mr. DAMEO. Mr. Catena's duties were very limited.

The CHAIRMAN. Is he a full-time operator?

Mr. DAMEO. No. He comes and goes.

Senator TOBEY. He goes, apparently.

Mr. DAMEO. Apparently.

The CHAIRMAN. What is his salary per year?

Mr. DAMEO. $100 a week.

The CHAIRMAN. Plus dividends.

Mr. DAMEO. No; we have declared no dividends at all.

The CHAIRMAN. Surely, Mr. Dameo, since 1946 you must have learned about Mr. Catena's other businesses, haven't you?

Mr. DAMEO. I know that he went into another business at the end of 1948, I believe it was or the beginning of 1949, the Kool-Vent Metal Awning.

The CHAIRMAN. The what?

Mr. DAMEO. The Kool-Vent Metal Awning Co.

The CHAIRMAN. Then you must have known something about his gambling interests, didn't you?

Mr. DAMEO. No; I did not.

The CHAIRMAN. You have never discussed it with him?

Mr. DAMEO. No; I didn't.

The CHAIRMAN. He hasn't called you on the telephone and you haven't been in touch with him in any way?

Mr. DAMEO. No; I haven't.

Senator TOBEY. Did he draw his salary by check or was it paid in cash in the past?

Mr. DAMEO. There is a check made out to him and it is mailed to his home.

Senator TOBEY. Have the checks in the last 2 or 3 weeks come back deposited?

Mr. DAMEO. That I couldn't truthfully answer. I don't know what has happened, but I imagine they have.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything else?

All right, Mr. Dameo.

Mr. DAMEO. I would like to make one request, if I may.

The CHAIRMAN. What is that?

Mr. DAMEO. If there is any possibility of withholding my name from the newspapers I would appreciate it.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Dameo, I think there is no possibility of that because after all, you are his partner and it is our duty to try to be as diligent as we can to try to locate Mr. Catena. I frankly think that a fellow who goes into a corporation with a man of this sort just has to take it on the chin. I don't know what else to do.

Mr. DAMEO. I have been taking it on the chin, and I don't feel as though I should keep taking it on the chin. This thing has hurt me no end, and it is going to hurt me a lot more.

The CHAIRMAN. It is pretty difficult to do business with these fellows and not get hurt, Mr. Dameo. That is one of the evils of organized crime and being in partnership or in a corporation with a fellow who is alleged to be in the rackets. I can say that so far as you personally are concerned, we have no derogatory statement to make about you other than the fact that you are a partner in this corporation with him.

Senator TOBEX. Mr. Dameo, if you do happen to run across Mr. Catena in the street or he gets in touch with you, kindly transmit to him the fact that this committee is going to go on and that he expects to live and sooner or later he is going to come before this committee and they are going to keep the wires hot. We are going to have him before us so he might as well come soon as late.

Mr. DAMEO. I would like to see him come before the committee and I would certainly like to get in touch with him myself because I must make some sort of definite move. I started from scratch and worked like the devil to get where I am and I certainly am not going to jeopardize it now. As well as I know, I am sure that he wouldn't want to do anything to hurt me or to hurt anyone else. I know him that way, as a perfect gentleman. That is the only way I ever want to know him.

The CHAIRMAN. It is very hard on his wife and children for him to be away.

Mr. DAMEO. It is.

The CHAIRMAN. She seems to be a conscientious wife. We were favorably impressed by her.

All right, Mr. Dameo, thank you.

Mr. DAMEO. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mrs. Longano, will you hold up your hand. Will you swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mrs. LONGANO. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Mrs. Longano, this is your attorney appearing with you?

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you tell us your name and address, sir?

Mr. ROSENBERG. Theodore Rosenberg, 5 Colt Street, Paterson, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Halley.

TESTIMONY OF MRS. JEAN LONGANO, INGLEWOOD, N. J., ACCOMPANIED BY THEODORE ROSENBERG, ATTORNEY, PATERSON, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mrs. LONGANO. Jean Longano.

Mr. HALLEY. You are married to Mr. Arthur Longano?

Mrs. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mr. LONGANO. 285 Windsor Road, Englewood, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any business?

Mrs. LONGANO. I am a housewife.

Mr. HALLEY. Does Mr. Longano live there with you?

Mrs. LONGANO. He does; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any children?

Mrs. LONGANO. I am bringing up a niece and a nephew for 9 years.

Mr. HALLEY. They live with you?

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. They are living with you now?

Mrs. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been married?

Mrs. LONGANO. A little over 15 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know where Mr. Longano is?

Mrs. LONGANO. No, I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see him?

Mrs. LONGANO. This is October. It was around the first of September, I believe. It has been over a month.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last hear from him directly or indirectly?

Mrs. LONGANO. When he left the house.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he state with regard to his future whereabouts at the time he left the house?

Mrs. LONGANO. We had had a little upsetment because I too have been—well, not well, and his emotional stability is at a very low ebb. Our nerves got sort of taut and he thought he was tearing me down and we didn't want to shoot one another, so he is fighting it out by himself and has been since January.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he ill at the moment?

Mrs. LONGANO. Very much.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he in a hospital?

Mrs. LONGANO. No; not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Or in a sanitarium?

Mrs. LONGANO. Not that I know of. He might—

Mr. HALLEY. You go ahead.

Mrs. LONGANO. No; I have finished.

Mr. HALLEY. I understood from Mr. Elich that you knew where your husband was but felt that you couldn't reveal his whereabouts because it would be injurious to his health.

Mrs. LONGANO. I didn't only tell Mr. Elich that. I told all my friends the same thing, that I knew where he was when I didn't know.

Mr. HALLEY. In fact, you do not know where he is?

Mrs. LONGANO. I do not know.

Mr. HALLEY. Why would you say a thing like that to Mr. Elich?

Mrs. LONGANO. After all, if I say it to my friends—

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Elich had told you he was an investigator for this committee.

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes; he did.

Mr. HALLEY. He showed you his credentials.

Mrs. LONGANO. No; he didn't.

Mr. HALLEY. He had shown you a subpoena that he had?

Mrs. LONGANO. He hadn't at that time; no.

Mr. HALLEY. He told you he had a subpoena, though?

Mrs. LONGANO. No; he didn't. He said that he wanted to talk to me, to my husband, I believe. He intimated it was in regard to—he wanted to tell me something about the Florida affair.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you say at that time about your husband's whereabouts to Mr. Elich?

Mrs. LONGANO. I told him at that time that I wouldn't tell anyone.

Mr. HALLEY. You said he was under the care of a doctor, I believe.

Mrs. LONGANO. Oh, no; I didn't. He had been under the care of a doctor, yes, and I even sent him to the doctor.

Mr. HALLEY. You referred Mr. Elich to the doctor so he could talk to him.

Mrs. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You now say that you were not telling the truth to Mr. Elich when you said you knew where your husband was.

Mrs. LONGANO. I was not telling the truth to Mr. Elich or my friends.

Mr. HALLEY. I might understand the motive for telling your friends, but Mr. Elich was there on official Government business and you knew that, did you not?

Mrs. LONGANO. No; at the time I told him I did not know.

Mr. HALLEY. He wasn't on a social call, was he?

Mrs. LONGANO. Oh, definitely not.

Mr. HALLEY. He explained to you that it was necessary for him to get in touch with your husband in connection with this Government business, is that right?

Mrs. LONGANO. Frankly I don't remember too much about it because I had just gotten up. I was speaking to him from the window. I know he said he was from this committee, I believe he said that. It was only a few minutes' conversation.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a bank account, Mrs. Longano?

Mrs. LONGANO. No; I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a place in your house where you keep sums of cash?

Mrs. LONGANO. I never have had; no.

Mr. HALLEY. On what have you been living since September 1?

Mrs. LONGANO. On money that I had saved.

Mr. HALLEY. How much money had you saved, how much money did you have on September 1?

Mrs. LONGANO. Well, I don't know how much it was. I think it was a little over—how much? I can't tell you that because I don't remember. It wasn't much, maybe $500 or something around that vicinity.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have it in your pocketbook?

Mrs. LONGANO. I had it in my box.

Mr. HALLEY. Your box?

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. At home?

Mrs. LONGANO. No; in a bank.

Mr. HALLEY. You have a safety deposit box?

Mrs. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What bank?

Mrs. LONGANO. Commonwealth Trust.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is that?

Mrs. LONGANO. Woodcliff.

Mr. HALLEY. In Woodcliff, N. J.

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have access to it alone or does your husband have access to that?

Mrs. LONGANO. Just myself.

Mr. HALLEY. But you have no bank account?

Mrs. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any cash in that box now?

Mrs. LONGANO. No. Maybe about $20 or $25.

Mr. HALLEY. As of about September 1 when your husband left, you had about $500, you say?

Mrs. LONGANO. Well, it must have been more than that because I had some in my bag. I just can't remember until I stop to concentrate, which I couldn't do here, I am sure. I couldn't tell you the exact amount.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your husband have a bank account?

Mrs. LONGANO. No; not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he have a safety deposit box that you know of?

Mrs. LONGANO. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any employment in the last 5 years?

Mrs. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. He has supported you?

Mrs. LONGANO. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he give you money in cash or in checks?

Mrs. LONGANO. In cash.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any servants at home?

Mrs. LONGANO. I have a maid, 1 day a week.

Mr. HALLEY. You have a maid 1 day a week. Do you own an automobile?

Mrs. LONGANO. No. My husband does.

Mr. HALLEY. He owns an automobile?

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he take the automobile with him?

Mrs. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you using it?

Mrs. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of an automobile is it?

Mrs. LONGANO. A Cadillac.

Mr. HALLEY. What year?

Mrs. LONGANO. 1948.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own the house you live in?

Mrs. LONGANO. We are paying for it.

Mr. HALLEY. You are paying for it?

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In whose name is it?

Mrs. LONGANO. Both our names.

Mr. HALLEY. What are the monthly payments on the house?

Mrs. LONGANO. $112.32.

Mr. HALLEY. Are the children in school?

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Are they in public or private school?

Mrs. LONGANO. Public.

Mr. HALLEY. It is your position that you have been living on what little money you have accumulated all this time?

Mrs. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Your husband has made no effort to get any funds to you since you last saw him?

Mrs. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. He just left the house without any word or any arrangements for you?

Mrs. LONGANO. He knew I had a few dollars saved.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell him how much you had saved?

Mrs. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Then he didn't know whether you had $10 saved or $100 or $500 or a thousand; is that right?

Mrs. LONGANO. I don't know what he thought, but I am sure he knew I was all right.

Mr. HALLEY. How would he know you were all right?

Mrs. LONGANO. Because I am the saver.

Mr. HALLEY. Has anybody given you any money since then?

Mrs. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or loaned you any money?

Mrs. LONGANO. No. Well, little loans, but I paid it right back, if I was short or something.

Mr. HALLEY. How much money have you got left?

Mrs. LONGANO. I am at the end of my rope.

Mr. HALLEY. What does that mean?

Mrs. LONGANO. It means I will just have now to find out who my friends are.

Mr. HALLEY. Does that mean that you have not as much as $50 left?

Mrs. LONGANO. Oh, no. I have more than that.

Mr. HALLEY. Does it mean that you have less than $100 left?

Mrs. LONGANO. I don't know because my checking account is all balled up.

Mr. HALLEY. You said a little while ago that you have no bank account.

Mrs. LONGANO. We haven't had a savings account. Is that what you meant?

Mr. HALLEY. No.

Mrs. LONGANO. I misconstrued your question. I am sorry. I have a checking account and have it all balled up.

Mr. HALLEY. In what bank?

Mrs. LONGANO. The same as the box.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you had that checking account?

Mrs. LONGANO. Let's see. About 5 or 6 years, I guess. I can't tell you exactly.

Mr. HALLEY. How much money was in the checking account when your husband left?

Mrs. LONGANO. I can't tell you that either. I don't know exactly.

Mr. HALLEY. You got a statement from the bank at the end of August.

Mrs. LONGANO. That is why I can't tell you, because my checking account is all balled up.

Mr. HALLEY. The bank isn't balled up; is it? You have the statement.

Mrs. LONGANO. I know, but I am fearful that checks haven't come in, and therefore it is over.

Mr. HALLEY. Roughly does your checking account have over a thousand dollars?

Mrs. LONGANO. Oh, no. I think it is something like $246, they told me.

Mr. HALLEY. Two hundred and forty-six dollars.

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes. I think it is something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. You had that plus the cash.

Mrs. LONGANO. That is what the bank told me, but according to my figuring it was much, much less.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you made any effort to find out where your husband is?

Mrs. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You have made no effort to communicate with him?

Mrs. LONGANO. No, I haven't. I have been telling my friends I know, so naturally I wouldn't ask him where he was.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't any of them ask you where he was?

Mrs. LONGANO. They have asked me that since January.

Mr. HALLEY. Your husband was home up until September 1.

Mrs. LONGANO. My husband has been away from home more than he has been at home since January.

Mr. HALLEY. On previous occasions did you not know where he was?

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes. I have been unaware of his whereabouts on previous occasions.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that something that has gone on for years? Is that his habit or is that just a recent thing?

Mrs. LONGANO. I wouldn't say it is a habit, no. It is not a habit exactly.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Gerald Catena?

Mrs. LONGANO. I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mrs. Catena?

Mrs. LONGANO. I met her yesterday out in the waiting room.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Doto?

Mrs. LONGANO. I have met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mrs. Doto?

Mrs. LONGANO. I can't hear you.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mrs. Doto?

Mrs. LONGANO. I have also met her.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know James Lynch?

Mrs. LONGANO. I have met him.

Mr. HALLEY. And Mrs. Lynch?

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mrs. Zwillman?

Mrs. LONGANO. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Zwillman, Abner Zwillman.

Mrs. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not know him?

Mrs. LONGANO. You will have to bear with me. I am a little difficult in my hearing and I am taking eight pain killers a day and so my head isn't quite—so bear with me and speak a little louder if you can, please.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mrs. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How many times have you seen Joe Doto?

Mrs. LONGANO. Oh, I can't tell you that. I ate in the same restaurant as he.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he ever in your home?

Mrs. LONGANO. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in his?

Mrs. LONGANO. No. We are not social acquaintances.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know what business your husband was in?

Mrs. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What business?

Mrs. LONGANO. He was manager for Charlie's Grille for the past—I believe almost—15 years in Little Ferry, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is Charlie's Grille?

Mrs. LONGANO. Since a year and a half ago it was sold to Frank Daly of the Meadowbrook.

Mr. HALLEY. Is your husband still manager?

Mrs. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. When did he give up that work?

Mrs. LONGANO. When it was sold.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he have any other business?

Mrs. LONGANO. Well, he always has been a commission agent, I know that.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of commission agent?

Mrs. LONGANO. Well, I know he sold jewelry and cars.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he ever have an interest in any gambling enterprise?

Mrs. LONGANO. I never heard of such a thing; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a gambling house?

Mrs. LONGANO. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never been in an establishment in which there was gambling?

Mrs. LONGANO. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mrs. LONGANO. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Mrs. Longano, I must say it is very hard to believe that you don't know your husband's whereabouts, particularly when you told Mr. Elich originally that you did, but you simply wouldn't say it. Have you any further explanation?

Mrs. LONGANO. None whatsoever.

Mr. HALLEY. No other questions, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. As I understand it, you told him that a subpoena was out for him before he left?

Mrs. LONGANO. I told who?

The CHAIRMAN. Your husband.

Mrs. LONGANO. I was unaware of any such thing.

The CHAIRMAN. When was the last time you saw him?

Mrs. LONGANO. It was over 4 weeks ago.

The CHAIRMAN. When did Mr. Elich get in touch with you?

Mrs. LONGANO. I can't tell you that date.

The CHAIRMAN. Was it after your husband had left?

Mrs. LONGANO. Oh, definitely.

The CHAIRMAN. Any questions, Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. No questions.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mrs. Longano, thank you.

Mrs. LONGANO. You are quite welcome.

The CHAIRMAN. If you are in touch with your husband I think you might tell him that he is not helping himself by staying away.

Mrs. LONGANO. Well, I am sure he hasn't been evading you since January, and he has been away since January.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you also represent Mr. Longano?

Mr. ROSENBERG. No, I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. You have never represented him?

Mr. ROSENBERG. Once, in the purchase of the home.

The CHAIRMAN. It is just likely you might be in touch with him, and we would be very happy if you would tell him we are looking for him and want him to testify.

Mrs. LYNCH, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mrs. LYNCH. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. Have a seat, Mrs. Lynch, and let the record show that Mr. Theodore Rosenberg, attorney of Paterson, N. J., also represents Mrs. Lynch.

TESTIMONY OF MRS. VIRGINIA LYNCH, PALISADES PARK, N. J., ACCOMPANIED BY THEODORE ROSENBERG, ATTORNEY, PATER-SON, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mrs. LYNCH. 65-B Henry Avenue, Palisades Park, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you lived there?

Mrs. LYNCH. Say about 8 years.

Mr. HALLEY. You are married to James Lynch?

Mrs. LYNCH. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been married?

Mrs. LYNCH. Ten years.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any children.

Mr. LYNCH. One.

Mr. HALLEY. How old?

Mrs. LYNCH. Seventeen months.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see Mr. Lynch?

Mrs. LYNCH. A week ago Wednesday, last Wednesday.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have certain conversations with committee investigators who were seeking to serve a subpoena on Mr. Lynch?

Mrs. LYNCH. No, sir; not at that time, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had since?

Mrs. LYNCH. The following day I did; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You had none prior to Mr. Lynch's departure?

Mrs. LYNCH. No, sir; not whatsoever.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is he, Mrs. Lynch?

Mrs. LYNCH. I really don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he say about his departure? What did he say he was going to do?

Mrs. LYNCH. When we heard from him the last time he said he would be gone from 2 to 3 weeks.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he say where he was going?

Mrs. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he leave you any money?

Mrs. LYNCH. I have money for my household expenses.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a bank account?

Mrs. LYNCH. I have a savings account.

Mr. HALLEY. In what bank?

Mrs. LYNCH. In the National Bank of Palisades Park.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a checking account?

Mrs. LYNCH. That is a checking account, I am sorry.

Mr. HALLEY. It is a checking account.

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes; a personal checking account.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a savings account, too?

Mrs. LYNCH. I don't; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that the only account you have?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a safety deposit box?

Mrs. LYNCH. No, sir; I never had one.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your husband have a bank account?

Mrs. LYNCH. I don't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You just don't know?

Mrs. LYNCH. I really don't know that, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he give you money from time to time for household expenses?

Mrs. LYNCH. Weekly.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he give it to you in cash or by check?

Mrs. LYNCH. In cash.

Mr. HALLEY. How much a week does he give you?

Mrs. LYNCH. Well, it varies, about $100 a week.

Mr. HALLEY. You pay all the household expenses?

Mrs. LYNCH. He takes care of the expenses.

Mr. HALLEY. You just have money for cash outlay around the house?

Mrs. LYNCH. The baby, incidentals that I need.

Mr. HALLEY. Who gives you money for your bank account?

Mrs. LYNCH. That is mine, out of what I can save out of my $100, I can do with as I please.

Mr. HALLEY. When your husband left, how much money did you have in your bank account?

Mrs. LYNCH. Not in my bank account. I haven't made a deposit. I might have about five or six hundred dollars in cash.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he know that?

Mrs. LYNCH. I don't know whether he did or not.

Mr. HALLEY. I am wondering what provision he made for your welfare.

Mrs. LYNCH. He always knows that I have money around the house.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he habitually leave without telling you where he is going?

Mrs. LYNCH. I would never think to question him as to where he was going.

Mr. HALLEY. Suppose something happened to the baby, suppose you became ill.

Mrs. LYNCH. I have a family. I am not alone.

Mr. HALLEY. There are many things for which you would need your husband. The family isn't a substitute. If the baby becomes ill and a very important decision has to be made about an operation or something.

Mrs. LYNCH. Usually I make them regardless.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't think it is ordinary for a husband to leave without any phone call from time to time or post card at least to say where he is? Do you think that is ordinary?

Mrs. LYNCH. I really don't see anything wrong with his leaving. He has been to Florida, and he has been away from me. It is the same thing.

Mr. HALLEY. When he goes to Florida you know where he is going.

Mrs. LYNCH. Not all the time, no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You generally know where you might find him in Florida. You know certain people there.

Mrs. LYNCH. Not all the time, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't even know what State he is in now?

Mrs. LYNCH. Right now? I don't know where he is.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he say he was going on business?

Mrs. LYNCH. The last time I heard, yes, he was.

Mr. HALLEY. The last time you saw him?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he say it had anything to do with avoiding the subpoena of this committee?

Mrs. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What business is your husband in?

Mrs. LYNCH. That I don't know, sir. All I know is he goes to the track as often as he is well enough to go.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean he spends most of his time at the race track?

Mrs. LYNCH. That is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't know whether he has any regular business at all?

Mrs. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been to the race track with him?

Mrs. LYNCH. I have been to the race track, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Adonis, Joe Doto?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mrs. LYNCH. I don't know him that well, to know how long I have known him, but I know him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you meet him through your husband?

Mrs. LYNCH. I don't know. I don't even know how I met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mrs. Doto?

Mrs. LYNCH. To say hello to; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Mrs. Longano?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Before you met her here?

Mrs. LYNCH. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known her?

Mrs. LYNCH. Gee, I don't know, sir. I really don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Anthony Guarini?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Willie Moretti?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mrs. Moretti?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Salvatore Moretti?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know James Rutkin?

Mrs. LYNCH. No.

Mr. HALLEY. R-u-t-k-i-n?

Mrs. LYNCH. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Abner Zwillman?

Mrs. LYNCH. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been in Florida with your husband?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes; 1945, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. 1945?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you stay in Florida, what hotel?

Mrs. LYNCH. I think we stayed at the Wofford.

Mr. HALLEY. At the Wofford Hotel?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. With Mr. Allenberg?

Mrs. LYNCH. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. With Mr. Allenberg? Abe Allenberg?

Mrs. LYNCH. Oh, I don't know. I have stayed at many hotels and never knew the manager.

Mr. HALLEY. Who chose the Wofford Hotel?

Mrs. LYNCH. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Who chose the Wofford Hotel as the place to stay?

Mrs. LYNCH. I don't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Your husband made the arrangements?

Mrs. LYNCH. Oh, yes; I suppose he did.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been to Florida since 1945, Mrs. Lynch?

Mrs. LYNCH. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mrs. LYNCH. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Erickson?

Mrs. LYNCH. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know a man named Bert Griggs?

Mrs. LYNCH. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Frank Strader?

Mrs. LYNCH. No.

Mr. HALLEY. No other questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Any questions, Mr. Kostelanetz or Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. You said you wouldn't think of asking your husband where he was going. Has that been your attitude all through your married life? He would go off alone, and you wouldn't ask him where he was going or show any interest in where he was?

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes, sir; I feel that we have lived that way. He is gone. I mean I trust him enough not to question him as to what he does or where he goes.

Senator TOBEY. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. How old are you, Mrs. Lynch?

Mrs. LYNCH. Thirty-two.

The CHAIRMAN. How old is he?

Mrs. LYNCH. Forty-six, I think.

The CHAIRMAN. You just got out of school when you were married or had you worked before?

Mrs. LYNCH. No; I really had just got out of school. I was quite young when I was married.

The CHAIRMAN. You are a native of what place?

Mrs. LYNCH. New York City.

The CHAIRMAN. Did I understand you to say that you don't know whether he knew that there was a subpoena out for him, or not to appear before this committee?

Mrs. LYNCH. I know exactly as you do, nothing, honestly.

The CHAIRMAN. He just came and said he was leaving and he wasn't going to tell you where he was going?

Mrs. LYNCH. That is exactly so.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ask him where he was going?

Mrs. LYNCH. I didn't question him.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't ask him why he was leaving?

Mrs. LYNCH. No; I didn't, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mrs. Lynch, it is very strange indeed that you would have no idea where your husband went and didn't ask him where he was going. It is a very unusual situation, you will admit, won't you?

Mrs. LYNCH. Not after living this way for 10 years, I shouldn't think so.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose you wanted to get in touch with him very badly about an emergency, who would you call?

Mrs. LYNCH. I just don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mrs. Lynch. Maybe we will want to call you back again to see if you have any further information, so you will remain under subpoena.

Mrs. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. That also goes for Mrs. Longano.

Mr. ROSENBERG. Very well, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. That is all for the present; you are excused.

Mr. Bruno, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. BRUNO. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. Sit down, Mr. Bruno.

TESTIMONY OF ANDREW PATIO BRUNO, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. I understand you run a good restaurant, Mr. Bruno; is that right?

Mr. BRUNO. I do, and I am very proud of it.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the address?

Mr. BRUNO. 24 West Fifty-fifth Street, New York City.

Mr. HALLEY. It is called Patio Bruno?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. BRUNO. Andrew Bruno.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address, your residence address?

Mr. BRUNO. 5 West Sixty-fifth Street.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you had the Patio Bruno?

Mr. BRUNO. I would say 15 months now. I opened last May 14, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who furnished the capital?

Mr. BRUNO. I did, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Solely, all by yourself?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, sir; out of my savings, and I borrowed some money from the boys who are working for me today, say about three or four thousand dollars. Last spring I needed additional capital to refund these loans I had made to these people, so I sold 49 percent of the stock to a very nice gentleman from New York City. I will be glad to tell you the name, but I wish to goodness you would hold it because he is an honorable gentleman and he is an attorney, practicing, and his name is Mr. William Fullen.

Mr. HALLEY. He is an attorney in New York City?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, sir. He is former chairman of the board of transportation or commission of transportation.

Mr. HALLEY. In New York City?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes. I knew him. He liked me a lot and loaned me the money. In other words, he bought the stock. That is the only money I borrowed that is big money.

Mr. HALLEY. How much money did you get from him?

Mr. BRUNO. $7,500.

Mr. HALLEY. $7,500.

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How much of your own money is invested in the restaurant?

Mr. BRUNO. My own money, about $9,000, and I borrowed the additional $3,000 from these fellows.

Mr. HALLEY. From men who work for you?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You got no credit from any other source?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir; no, sir. Credit I could get from all over town as far as groceries and butcher things like that are concerned. I have a very good credit rating, and I didn't need any money. You see, sir, the restaurant was fully equipped when I took it, and the Astor Hotel, who own it leased it to me on a percentage basis. Therefore, it did not require any amount of capital at all. I only wanted to make a few little alterations. I could have opened as it was with everything, dishes, silver, chairs, kitchen, stoves, ice boxes, cooling system. You see it had been in operation by the Union News Co.

Mr. HALLEY. You took it on a lease.

Mr. BRUNO. On lease.

Mr. HALLEY. From whom?

Mr. BRUNO. From Douglas Gibbs & Co.

Mr. HALLEY. Who owns the property?

Mr. BRUNO. William Waldorf Astor, of England, but it is administered by the trustees, the Farmers Trust Co. They are the landlord.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Fullen is not representing any other people in his ownership?

Mr. BRUNO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Absolutely it is his own investment so far as you know?

Mr. BRUNO. So far as I know, yes; because I know perfectly well that it is his money.

Mr. HALLEY. So Patio Bruno has no connection with any of the people you used to work for?

Mr. BRUNO. I am sorry to admit I have been quite a bit humiliated about it and it has hurt my business quite a lot, because I have a very, very wonderful following, and on that basis I opened the restaurant. If I may ask, sir, your kind indulgence not to have my name put in the paper.

Mr. HALLEY. That will depend on the committee and on what the testimony develops.

Mr. BRUNO. I mean, sir, I have nothing to hide. I have voluntarily made my statement. I am more than cooperative. I am open at all times. I have one son, a wife and mother. I only pay $50 a month rent. So I haven't been able to save money. I am not the big shot people think I am. But I like to work, honestly.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you born in Italy?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, sir; in Genoa.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you come to this country?

Mr. BRUNO. I came here about 1923 the first time.

Mr. HALLEY. And you are a citizen?

Mr. BRUNO. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you become a citizen?

Mr. BRUNO. Let's see. I imagine in 1945 or 1946, the final papers.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first apply for citizenship?

Mr. BRUNO. In 1940.

Mr. HALLEY. You started working as a waiter when you came to this country?

Mr. BRUNO. What, sir?

Mr. HALLEY. As a waiter.

Mr. BRUNO. I worked as a waiter.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you do other work?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes; Madison Hotel, I worked at the Waldorf, the Rose Clinton Farm, Bathing and Tennis Club, the Embassy Club in Miami, the Hollywood Beach Hotel in Miami. I built the Riverside for a French concern. I worked at the Park View Hotel, and the Barbizon Plaza 3 years. Where else? Delmonico—

Mr. HALLEY. In 1944 toward the end of the year you went to work for James Lynch, is that right?

Mr. BRUNO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the circumstances?

Mr. BRUNO. I had just finished the season at the Surf Club, Miami Beach, which is one I didn't mention, the best club down there. I came north and I met a man by the name of Sue, that is all I know about.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him previously?

Mr. BRUNO. In front of the Taft Hotel. He said, "What are you doing?" and I said, "Nothing." He said, "All right."

Mr. HALLEY. Had you known him before?

Mr. BRUNO. No, no. I was introduced by another restaurant man by the name of Bruno Trebbe, who no longer is in operation today.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to Sue?

Mr. BRUNO. This fellow Trebbe, Bruno Trebbe.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it by any chance Sue Katz?

Mr. BRUNO. It could be, but I never knew the second name.

This man, Dave High at the golf club they took me to Lodi for about 3 months.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's get back to Sue.

Mr. BRUNO. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. Somebody introduced you to him in front of the Taft Hotel?

Mr. BRUNO. That is right, and he came from Newark. Nothing was said any more, see. I didn't work that summer, I don't think. I am sure I didn't. Around October Dave High contacted me.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you known Dave High?

Mr. BRUNO. I met him along with Sue. He said would I go to Caldwell to open this restaurant. So I took a ride to Caldwell and who did I see but an old maître d'hôtel by the name of Charles Journal. We had known each other before because he used to be a big shot maître d'hôtel here in town. Apparently he was retired. He owned this house. So I said what is going on. He said we are doing the alteration and are going to open a nice first-class restaurant. I understand you are going to be the head waiter. I said I understood so. But apparently they took a club charter without anyone knowing it and signed my name in Trenton. After—I think it was Christmas Eve—we were ordered to close.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1944?

Mr. BRUNO. I think it was 1944, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you running up to that point, a gambling place there?

Mr. BRUNO. No; I was running a dining room.

Mr. HALLEY. Just the dining room?

Mr. BRUNO. Oh, sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Why were you ordered to close?

Mr. BRUNO. Mr. High says, "Tell your waiters and cooks to go home, and we are closing up."

Mr. HALLEY. Who ordered them to close?

Mr. BRUNO. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean they just decided to close?

Mr. BRUNO. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. I see.

Mr. BRUNO. For some reason or other, I don't know. You see, we never were allowed to know anything about those things.

Mr. HALLEY. Then what happened? Did you go back to work there later?

Mr. BRUNO. Oh, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Never again?

Mr. BRUNO. Because I was indicted at Morristown.

Mr. HALLEY. For what?

Mr. BRUNO. For running a gambling room and a disorderly house. Of course nothing surprised me more than that because, gee, I don't know anything about it.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean you never saw any gambling there?

Mr. BRUNO. Not actually because, you see, they have a door on the side and they have a doorman. I saw him here the other day, I mean yesterday.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was that?

Mr. BRUNO. George Keller, I think that is his name. Whether he was at Caldwell or not I don't recall, but he is one of the doormen at Lodi. We never were allowed inside.

Mr. HALLEY. You knew what was in there?

Mr. BRUNO. I imagined what was there, sure. It was a gambling casino, of course. There is no two ways about it, but you see we were never even close to it.

Mr. HALLEY. What connection did you have with James Lynch at Caldwell?

Mr. BRUNO. He told me to run the dining room and feed the croupiers and the kitchen and therefore I did. This man Sue and this man High used to bring the food. They did the buying. I didn't even do that. We did the serving. There were about 65 chairs. We would serve probably 100 dinners at a time.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you charge for the meals?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. That was a strange circumstance, wasn't it?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes; but those were the orders that Mr. Lynch gave us.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were brought to court you pleaded guilty, did you not, to the charges?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir. My attorney took me down to Morristown and I gave myself up immediately, and when the trial came up it was nolle prossed.

Mr. HALLEY. You were nolle prossed?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes. The judge never even questioned me. He knew what the story was.

Mr. HALLEY. You were never convicted?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never been convicted of a crime at no time in your whole life?

Mr. BRUNO. Not in my whole life. There is no reason to convict a man like me, sir. Please believe me, I am an honest man. The strange part, gentlemen, when these jobs came up I was the envy of the whole hotel industry because they thought I had a tremendous job. What the heck was I making, $100 a week, $150 sometimes.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you making at the Caldwell place?

Mr. BRUNO. I believe the salary was $75, I am not sure, $75 or $100. I have the withholding tax slips with me.

Mr. HALLEY. Let me see them.

Mr. BRUNO. Why, sure. These are for a period of several years.

Mr. HALLEY. I will sort them out. Why don't you hand them over?

Mr. BRUNO. Here is the Caldwell (handing documents to Mr. Halley).

There are three more here.

Mr. HALLEY. May I have them all?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You must have some more. All we have here is 3 years.

Mr. BRUNO. There is more than that sir, I think. There is more than that.

Mr. HALLEY. There must be some more.

Mr. BRUNO. Here is another one which is a report for another year. You might take a look at that. Here is a copy of another year, I presume. Here is another one, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Starting with the year 1944, you worked in 1944 for the Surf Club at Miami Beach?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. During the early part of the year.

Mr. BRUNO. You see, that starts, for instance, I left the Madison in 1943, about November, and we opened around December and worked until May 1. That is what 1944 would take care of.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you went to work for the Casino at Spring Lake, N. J.?

Mr. BRUNO. That is the bathing and tennis club, that is right. That is the operating company.

The CHAIRMAN. What sort of country club is that?

Mr. BRUNO. A bathing and tennis club, very high class, a wonderful place.

The CHAIRMAN. No gambling there?

Mr. BRUNO. Oh heavens, no! That has a private membership.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you went to work for James Rutkin, is that right?

Mr. BRUNO. Sir, I didn't work for him. That is the way the office does their bookkeeping.

Mr. HALLEY. Who sent you this withholding receipt for James Rutkin?

Mr. BRUNO. It came by mail.

Mr. HALLEY. And this is for the job you had?

Mr. BRUNO. At Caldwell.

Mr. HALLEY. In the place we have been talking about where you served the free meals?

Mr. BRUNO. That is right, that is it.

Mr. HALLEY. What address is 85 Columbine Avenue, Palisades, N. J.?

Mr. BRUNO. I am sorry, I haven't the slightest idea.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know it?

Mr. BRUNO. No. I have never been there. That is the truth of the matter.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Elich points out that the gambling house may have been located at Lincoln Park.

Mr. BRUNO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that right?

Mr. BRUNO. But it was called Caldwell.

Mr. HALLEY. It was called Caldwell.

Mr. BRUNO. But I believe the township was Lincoln Park.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know the exact address?

Mr. BRUNO. I could take you there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who owned it?

Mr. BRUNO. This gentleman I talked to you about by the name of Charles Journal, and he is just as much victim of circumstances as I am, but I am sure he is available.

Mr. HALLEY. It is near a place known as the Tropics, is that right?

Mr. BRUNO. There are two bridges, I believe. There are two bridges, Passaic River and another river, and they call this corner, this particular corner in Lincoln Park, Two Bridges, but the ordinary word was Caldwell.

Mr. HALLEY. This was a house?

Mr. BRUNO. It was a private house which they turned into a restaurant on one side, and they built an adjacent building on the other side, a sort of rigged-up affair, and that is where they used to gamble.

Mr. HALLEY. At Caldwell, was James Lynch ever in the dining room?

MR. BRUNO. Yes; we have had him in the dining room. I know he was the one who took the money away every night.

MR. HALLEY. He took the money at night?

MR. BRUNO. That I know.

MR. HALLEY. You saw that?

MR. BRUNO. Because I used to go to bed before they did. You see, our business didn't last as long as theirs, so once our duty was accomplished, we washed the dishes and cleaned up—not me particularly but my help—and we would go upstairs to sleep.

MR. HALLEY. Oh, you slept right there?

MR. BRUNO. Slept right there, sir. I used to come home about once or twice a week.

MR. HALLEY. How do you know that Lynch took care of the money?

MR. BRUNO. From hearsay, I know that he was the last person to leave the premises.

MR. HALLEY. He was definitely one of the bosses, is that right?

MR. BRUNO. I would say so; yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Who were some of the other bosses? Was Rutkin there at all?

MR. BRUNO. Rutkin came to dine two or three times during that period of 5 or 6 weeks we operated.

MR. HALLEY. When you got this withholding slip with Rutkin's name on it, did you talk to anybody about why his name should be on it as the employer?

MR. BRUNO. Frankly, no; because I was covered as far as my tax returns were concerned. I just didn't inquire because, as a matter of fact, that caused me so much heartache, I was glad to get away from it.

MR. HALLEY. Was Joe Adonis out there?

MR. BRUNO. Yes; he was there once that I remember, eating, of course.

MR. HALLEY. Did he ever exercise any influence or control over it?

MR. BRUNO. He didn't show any authority around there, not to us.

MR. HALLEY. Did he go into the gambling room?

MR. BRUNO. He did.

MR. HALLEY. Did Rutkin go into the gambling room?

MR. BRUNO. He did; sure.

MR. HALLEY. Did Arthur Longano show up there?

MR. BRUNO. I am sorry, I don't quite know the gentleman. If the name doesn't sound right or something—

MR. HALLEY. You are not sure you know him?

MR. BRUNO. I am not sure if I know him. If I see him, maybe I do. I saw many boys yesterday which I had forgotten completely, and I remembered their names when I saw them.

MR. HALLEY. Do you remember Willie Moretti?

MR. BRUNO. Yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Do you know him when you see him?

MR. BRUNO. Yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Does he have any connection with the place at Caldwell?

MR. BRUNO. I don't believe so because he was never around during my stay there.

MR. HALLEY. He was never there at all?

MR. BRUNO. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Do you know Salvatore Moretti?

MR. BRUNO. No, sir; I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. None whatsoever?

Mr. BRUNO. I don't think so. In other words, nothing was ever said to me about it and he was never there.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't remember seeing Salvatore Moretti at Caldwell?

Mr. BRUNO. I am pretty sure he didn't show up there. Of course, it was 1944, you know, and you are liable——

Mr. HALLEY. Now, turning your attention to Lodi, how did you get your employment at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. I will tell you how. You know it opened during my employment at the Deal Golf and Country Club, which is also a private membership club and a very high-class one.

Mr. HALLEY. Who got you the job at the Deal?

Mr. BRUNO. The chairman of the house committee, Mr. Donald Dickson.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Moretti a member of that club?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir; no chance in the world. Ambassador Gerard, Mr. Woodrow Wilson, and Colonel House used to be members.

Mr. HALLEY. In your business you rub elbows with people at both ends of the social scale.

Mr. BRUNO. You won't believe this. I started originally in the diplomatic service, and I got kicked out by Mussolini in London, so I arrived in this town with the best references a boy 22 could have. I have been sent to Riggleman & Riggleman, who are international lawyers. I just want to tell you this if you don't mind. Bear with me. They interviewed me. I was qualified for everything. They offered me $18 a week. Hell, I couldn't support my mother. Then, of course, I was single. I went to washing cars for $35 a week. It was O. K.; I loved it. Nobody knew me. I did care when they put some colored boys next to me. I wan't used to it, so I quit and became a waiter. That is how I started in this country. Since then I have probably met 25,000 people, most of whom I remember their names. Please believe me, Mr. Halley. I was acquainted with people like Colonel Bradley, of Palm Beach, people who meant something, who were dressed up all the time, like at the Embassy. We wouldn't think of letting people in without evening clothes and all that, you see. But there was a casino there. I had nothing to do with it.

Mr. HALLEY. That is really of great interest, but we must move on.

Mr. BRUNO. All right, sir. Go ahead.

Mr. HALLEY. The next place you went to work was at Lodi.

Mr. BRUNO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get the job at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. Lodi opened before I went there, sir. When I finished the season at Deal this same Dave High came to me and said, Bruno, the dining room is not running correctly. We want you to come down. So I said, I won't be able to come down until I close the club. So I came down and he reshuffled the cuisine, the kitchen, rather, the dining room set-up, put in another captain, a better waiter. I used to stay there once in a while, but not all the time. In other words, you know once the dining room ran, I just left and went home.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Lynch also at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. Lynch was the man who gave all orders.

Mr. HALLEY. Lynch actually ran it?

Mr. BRUNO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Anthony Guarini there?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes; I saw Mr. Guarini quite a bit. In fact, he came once to the Patio Bruno before he went somewhere else.

Mr. HALLEY. Guarini was one of the bosses at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. Well, whether he was one of the bosses or not, I know he gave orders to Dave High.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Salvatore Moretti at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Not at all?

Mr. BRUNO. No. They were never around.

Mr. HALLEY. Neither William nor Salvatore?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Doto there? Joe Doto?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. At Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes. He came three or four times there.

Mr. HALLEY. And went into the gambling place?

Mr. BRUNO. No. He used to have people who dine, probably a party of three or four, people that I knew around town today, and then went home.

Mr. HALLEY. They wouldn't go in to gamble at all, ever?

Mr. BRUNO. Very seldom as far as I know, because as I say I probably would be in the kitchen at a time he might go in or else he had gone out. Many times I would come in the dining room and find he had already gone.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are some of the people that Joe Adonis brought out there to Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. A gentleman I remember was a man by the name of Mr. Town. I imagine that is the way he spelled it. I know it is Town. And somebody else he brought out that I know of. Three or four other occasions I didn't know the people he had with him, but they looked like nice people, you know.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you think of the names of anyone else that you know whom he brought?

Mr. BRUNO. I would think probably a man by the name of Mr. Harris.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know their first names?

Mr. BRUNO. No; I don't, sir. I know he is Mr. Harris to me, don't you know, and that is about all.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Jerry Catena at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. I saw him once there; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Only once?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. He ate there?

Mr. BRUNO. He ate there.

Mr. HALLEY. Walked into the other room?

Mr. BRUNO. I guess he must have, because, as I say, I know that that night he was there, I remember quite clearly, he was talking about a new baby coming or something.

Mr. HALLEY. Just where was the place located at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. Lodi was route 6, Mr. Halley. It is about I would say 6 or 7 miles from the bridge. There was a gasoline station here, this big square place here [indicating], and adjacent to that was another tavern.

Mr. HALLEY. Did the place at Lodi have any sign on the outside of it?

Mr. BRUNO. No signs.

Mr. HALLEY. How would the customers find it?

Mr. BRUNO. They didn't. They were brought there.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean nobody came in there in their own automobiles?

Mr. BRUNO. I don't think so, because they would never have found the place.

Mr. HALLEY. The house had automobiles that went to New York and got the people and brought them out.

Mr. BRUNO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Then at the end of the evening the house would send them home again, is that right?

Mr. BRUNO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have anything to do with their transportation?

Mr. BRUNO. Not a thing.

Mr. HALLEY. How large a dining room was this?

Mr. BRUNO. We had 62 chairs; it was square.

Mr. HALLEY. And was the gambling room right next door?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Any doors between them?

Mr. BRUNO. Oh, yes. There was a sliding door, right next to the coatroom here, like where the picture hangs, and the building came this way and in that corner was a sliding door.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that generally open?

Mr. BRUNO. Generally closed.

Mr. HALLEY. Generally it was closed?

Mr. BRUNO. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't charge any money for the meals at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What other gambling places did you work in? Before we leave Lodi, was Rutkin at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. James Rutkin.

Mr. BRUNO. No. I never saw him there.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked at the Beverly Club, did you not, at New Orleans?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes; I went down there. I didn't work, Mr. Halley. I just went down there to organize the crew. I wasn't particularly anxious to go away from New York anyway. My family lives here.

Mr. HALLEY. Who asked you to go there?

Mr. BRUNO. Mr. Kastel.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him?

Mr. BRUNO. At the Sherry Netherland.

Mr. HALLEY. New York?

Mr. BRUNO. In New York, and Mr. Lansky got me an interview with Mr. Kastel.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Meyer Lansky introduce you to Kastel?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Meyer Lansky?

Mr. BRUNO. Oh, on and off, I would say since 1942 or 1943, somewhere around there.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked at the Beverly Club in 1946?

Mr. BRUNO. That is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. For how long a period?

Mr. BRUNO. I went down in 1945. Then I was stricken with pneumonia and taken to a hotel. Kastel was very kind to pay most of the expenses anyway. Then I came back home. Then Mr. Kastel called me up, long distance, and said come down. We would like your advice on a few things here and there. So I went down again, but I didn't like it. So I stayed probably, I don't know, 3 or 4 months. The withholding slips tell the story. Then I came back to New York City. I didn't like New Orleans a bit.

Mr. HALLEY. How did Lansky get in touch with you?

Mr. BRUNO. He used to come around to the Versailles Hotel where I worked. I used to meet him once at the Sherry Netherland, you know, and like the other night I was there and saw Jim Rutkin there to my great amazement.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you see Jim Rutkin?

Mr. BRUNO. At the Sherry Netherland.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. BRUNO. Oh, I don't know, about 10 or 12 days ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you seen Jerry Catena lately?

Mr. BRUNO. I haven't seen Jerry Catena for years.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Joe Doto?

Mr. BRUNO. No; Joe Doto I saw him the last time in June. He came to my place to eat.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was with him when he came to your restaurant?

Mr. BRUNO. His lawyer.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is that?

Mr. BRUNO. Mr. Harold Corbin. At least I think he is his lawyer.

Mr. HALLEY. Does Frank Costello come to your restaurant to eat?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, sir. He came there, strangely enough, a week before Mr. Murray came to see me. He had a party of nine. They came very early. In fact I found them there. By 7:30 or a quarter of eight they were gone.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was in the party with Costello?

Mr. BRUNO. Two ladies, but I don't know them. Two ladies and two men. One man I think the name could be Sherman, but I can't swear to it. You see it sounds familiar, white hair, combed back, and that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't know either of the men before?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir; I didn't. I know them by sight, but I don't know their names.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1946 you also worked at the Colonial Inn in Florida, is that right?

Mr. BRUNO. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that before or after you worked at the Beverly Club?

Mr. BRUNO. The Beverly Club was the beginning of the season of 1946, followed by a season at the Deal Golf and Country Club. As to that I went down to the Colonial Inn. I worked there I think from December to March 16 or 17.

Mr. HALLEY. Who hired you at the Colonial?

Mr. BRUNO. Mr. Lynch sent me down to see Mr. Jake Lansky.

Mr. HALLEY. Lynch sent you to see Jake Lansky?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes. He told me to go down there and there is a job for you, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. At that time were you working for Lynch up at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to see Lynch?

Mr. BRUNO. He called me at the house. He had my phone number. He used always to call through Dave High, and Dave High would say Mr. Lynch says for you to go down to the Colonial Inn.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Dave High work for Lynch?

Mr. BRUNO. I believe that is the set-up.

The CHAIRMAN. Who did he work for at the Colonial Inn?

Mr. HALLEY. You worked in 1946, is that right?

Mr. BRUNO. That is correct, sir—1946 to the end of 1946 and the beginning of 1947, I left there about March 17.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you work at Lodi? I don't think I have the dates quite right.

Mr. BRUNO. Let's see now. We worked at Lodi, I believe, in between seasons, isn't it, 1946? Yes; November to the end. Mr. Halley, isn't it the fall of 1946?

Mr. HALLEY. I don't know. You haven't brought your withholding certificates for Lodi.

Mr. BRUNO. I believe it is there, one of the red slips.

Mr. HALLEY. One of the red ones?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. This may be it. I am sorry. For 1947 it would be.

Mr. BRUNO. 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right. The L. & C. Amusement Co.; is that right?

Mr. BRUNO. That is right. With all those names down there.

Mr. HALLEY. With James Lynch.

Mr. BRUNO. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. Jerry Catena.

Mr. BRUNO. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. Joe Doto.

Mr. BRUNO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Salvatore Moretti.

Mr. BRUNO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. The ones you saw there were Lynch and——

Mr. BRUNO. And Tony Guarini.

Mr. HALLEY. They both gave orders all the time?

Mr. BRUNO. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. That is Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. I knew it couldn't be 1946 because I couldn't have put the time in there. Because I was at Deal the best part of the summer.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your salary at Lodi?

Mr. BRUNO. $100 a week.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked there then 15 weeks; it shows here $1,500. $1,500.

Mr. BRUNO. That is about right. That would be about right.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your salary down at the Beverly Club?

Mr. BRUNO. $75 a week, I think. I don't think it reached $100. You see, I was not the head waiter. I was not the maitre d'hotel. I was just sort of adviser because I didn't want to stay there. We put in a head waiter from New York City, and the man is working out here at Guy Lombardo's place on Long Island.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your salary at the Colonial Inn?

Mr. BRUNO. I think it was $200 a week, sir. I am not sure, but I believe that is what it was.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever work at Saratoga?

Mr. BRUNO. Never. I have never been to Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever work in any other gambling place?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes; Montauk Point, the year of the hurricane.

Mr. HALLEY. That was about 1938.

Mr. BRUNO. I would say so, in the summer.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you work, the Montauk Club?

Mr. BRUNO. The Montauk Club Island Club.

Mr. HALLEY. Montauk at the tip of Long Island here in New York. Who was your boss there?

Mr. BRUNO. A man by the name of Lou Meyers.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he own the club?

Mr. BRUNO. I think so. A very aged old gentleman, a very old gentleman.

Mr. HALLEY. You more or less specialized, didn't you, in working at these clubs?

Mr. BRUNO. Not necessarily, sir, because I tell you what, most of my time was spent with the bathing and tennis club, Deal Golf Club, the Hollywood Beach Hotel, the Biltmore Hotel in Coral Gables, the Surf Club; I built Versaille and worked there 2 years, and there certainly was no gambling there.

Mr. HALLEY. I would like to show you two pictures and will try to show them to you one at the time and you let us know if you recognize them.

Mr. BRUNO. No; I don't recognize this man.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you remember ever serving him at your clubs or seeing him eating at any of your places where you have worked?

Mr. BRUNO. No; he doesn't look familiar at all, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Try this one.

Mr. BRUNO. This looks more familiar than the first one, but I don't know who this second man is.

Mr. HALLEY. Could you say whether or not you have ever seen the man in the second picture?

Mr. BRUNO. As I say, he looks familiar, but I don't know for sure whether I know him or not. The first one I know definitely I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you say where you have seen the one who looks familiar?

Mr. BRUNO. Probably in my own place or probably in Miami Beach. I wouldn't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Could it possibly be any other place?

Mr. BRUNO. I don't think so, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Mr. Frank Borell, the chief of police of Cliffside?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mr. Michael Orecchio?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met Michael Orecchio?

Mr. BRUNO. Definitely not. I really don't know those people; please believe me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did they ever come into your place?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir. Somebody just asked me here for the address of my place, and I don't know the person at all, in this very room.

Mr. HALLEY. No other questions.

Mr. BRUNO. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Any questions, Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. No. I am sorry I was out during part of the testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Kostelanetz?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. No.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the address of your place of business here?

Mr. BRUNO. 24 West Fifty-fifth, Mr. Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; give us a card. We might come around.

Mr. BRUNO. I would be very honored to have you as my guest. Indeed I would.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ever operate a place at Saratoga Springs?

Mr. BRUNO. No; and I have never been to Saratoga.

The CHAIRMAN. Is Frank Costello a frequent customer of yours?

Mr. BRUNO. No. I have been trying to discourage them from coming, and they have been weeded out gradually. It is no credit to a place to have them come around.

The CHAIRMAN. To have who come around?

Mr. BRUNO. Frank Costello, and Joe Doto, and what not.

The CHAIRMAN. When Frank Costello comes, who does he usually come with?

Mr. BRUNO. As I say, sometimes he comes with two girls, sometimes he comes with somebody I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. Does he come with Joe Doto?

Mr. BRUNO. No, sir; they have never been together.

The CHAIRMAN. With Frank Erickson?

Mr. BRUNO. Yes, he was; the early part of last summer, Mr. Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Did he come several times?

Mr. BRUNO. Twice.

The CHAIRMAN. Who else did he come with?

Mr. BRUNO. I can't remember that now. The persons he comes with, just two or three people I don't know. They are not like Mr. Erickson.

The CHAIRMAN. How about Mr. Lansky and Mr. Catena?

Mr. BRUNO. Mr. Catena does not come.

The CHAIRMAN. And Mr. Moretti. Does Frank Costello come with them?

Mr. BRUNO. No. Mr. Lansky was there a couple of times with Mrs. Lansky and enjoyed his dinner, but they come, they eat, they pay, and they go.

The CHAIRMAN. How about Mayor O'Dwyer, does he come around to your place often?

Mr. BRUNO. No; but I have had the Acting Mayor Impellitteri. I have had the former Chief of Police Ryan.

The CHAIRMAN. They come with Frank Costello?

Mr. BRUNO. Oh, no, please.

The CHAIRMAN. How do you go about discouraging these people?

Mr. BRUNO. You start giving them bad service, and they start to bawl you out and the first thing you know they don't come around.

The CHAIRMAN. You put too much salt in their food?

Mr. BRUNO. There are always nine ways to skin a cat and we know how to do it.

Senator TOBEY. Put a little croton oil in their drink.

Mr. BRUNO. You can't do that because there is a 3-year law against that.

The CHAIRMAN. No more questions. That is all, Mr. Bruno. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, sir.

Senator TOBEY. When did Mr. Adonis come there last?

Mr. BRUNO. The day he came back from Washington I understand, with a gentleman who I think was his lawyer.

Senator TOBEY. From Washington?

Mr. BRUNO. From Washington.

The CHAIRMAN. We want to give you back some of your records.

Mr. BRUNO. All right, Mr. Senator.

Mr. HALLEY. Let the record show that the two we will keep are——

Mr. BRUNO. I lost a set of those things before to the Treasury Department, gentlemen, and I don't want to lose those too.

Mr. HALLEY. We will take good care of them and will keep only two. One is withholding receipt for 1944 from James Rutlin, and the other is withholding statement, 1947, from L. & C. Amusement Co.

Mr. BRUNO. Okay.

The CHAIRMAN. How about the Beverly Club in Miami?

Mr. HALLEY. I don't think we need them now.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is the Madison, Inc.?

Mr. BRUNO. That is one of the nicest hotels in town, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that who paid you here at one time? You worked for them at one time?

Mr. BRUNO. Oh, sure. Also the Waldorf and Delmonico, Barbison.

The CHAIRMAN. Who got your job at the Waldorf?

Mr. BRUNO. The late Mr. Boomer. I knew him very well.

The CHAIRMAN. Did Frank Costello give you a recommendation at the Waldorf?

Mr. BRUNO. For the Waldorf?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. BRUNO. Oh, no, sir. We go through the regular hotel channels for that.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. We have two of your receipts here and you will get the other ones back. Thank you, Mr. Bruno.

Mr. BRUNO. Thank you, gentlemen.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Bernstein, will you hold up your hand and be sworn. Do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES B. BERNSTEIN, JAMAICA, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. You are James B. Bernstein?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. James B. Bernstein.

Mr. HALLEY. Your residence, please?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. 8125 Grand Central Parkway, Jamaica 2, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your occupation?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Vice president of Merchants Bank of New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is that bank located?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. 434 Broadway, New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Does it have a branch?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes. We have branch at 93 Canal Street, New York.

Mr. HALLEY. No other branches?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No other branches.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the capitalization of that bank?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. About half a million dollars surplus, another half million dollars. About a million.

Mr. HALLEY. What are the total deposits?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Approximately $24,000,000.

Mr. HALLEY. How long has the bank been in operation?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I believe about twenty-some-odd years. It formerly was a private bank and then they were able to get a charter for a bank.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is the president?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Arnold Markel.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he the head of a Marcal Co. that deals in napkins or tissues?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he related to the Marcal people?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Not that I know of. I don't know. I know he has one brother.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any customers who are in the paper business, paper napkins?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Manufacturing or jobbing?

Mr. HALLEY. Either.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. We have a couple of jobbers.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have anyone who are called Marcal Co.?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. None.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is the chairman of the board?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Mr. Markel, the president.

Mr. HALLEY. He occupies both positions?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he the dominating figure in the bank?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Max Stark?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. About 17 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he banked with your bank?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he known to Mr. Markel?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Are they good friends?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. What is Stark's business?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. He is in the finance business.

Mr. HALLEY. Check cashing business, too?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go to his place of business?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you on a social basis with him?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I used to be.

Mr. HALLEY. Up to how long ago?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Up to about a year or two ago.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean until he was convicted?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether Mr. Markel was on a social basis with him?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. He was not.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been with the bank?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Seventeen years.

Mr. HALLEY. During all that time has Mr. Markel been the head of the bank?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No. His brother was at the head, a younger brother was the head. He passed away about 3 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Then the present Mr. Markel took over?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Took over.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his first name?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Arnold, A-r-n-o-l-d.

Mr. HALLEY. You started with his brother?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you related to the Markel's in any way?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your original position with the bank?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. When I first started?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Teller.

Mr. HALLEY. You have worked your way up to vice president.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How many vice presidents does the bank have?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. At the present time?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I believe two others, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Stark in 1947 have a conversation with you about the need to cash some checks?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he say? Will you tell the committee all about the transaction? It might save time.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes. He said he had just contracted some kind of deal where he was going to deposit an awful lot of checks.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he say he would deposit them or merely cash them?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Deposit them.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any further conversation?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That he might have to draw an awful lot of cash with his own check. We should see that we give him good service when he appears.

Mr. HALLEY. What he wanted was to be able to cash checks immediately, wasn't it?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right. He was to cash his own check immediately and he used to deposit a string of checks.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, what he would do was deposit a string of checks and then he would draw his own check against that money immediately?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Not against that money. He always carried sufficient balances.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the problem, then? No man would ever have difficulty cashing checks against actual balances, would he?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. You see, he maintained his account in our branch at 93 Canal Street, and as a rule at the branch we didn't carry much cash unless a customer required that much cash. In fact, the routine was to tell the customer to try to let us know a day in advance to keep additional amount of cash. Ordinarily we don't keep so much cash at the branch. We keep most of the cash at the main office.

Mr. HALLEY. How much cash did he require? What was the average?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I would say about $25,000 to $30,000.

Mr. HALLEY. Each day?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I would say about four times a week, on an average.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you arrange this so that he could get that cash?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ask him the source of the checks?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes. I at once asked him where are you getting all these checks? He said he had a contact where he is cashing all these checks for a fee.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he say what the source of the checks was?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. The second time I asked him what was the source of the checks, and he said, Oh, he is cashing them for some person, that he has acquired them from some games in Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he elaborate whether he meant gambling games?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I don't remember whether he elaborated gambling games or not.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't think it was tennis or ping-pong, did you?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you think?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Some kind of games.

Mr. HALLEY. You knew it was gambling by intuition and common sense and business prudence, wouldn't you say it was gambling?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I found that out later.

Mr. HALLEY. It put you on guard at once, didn't it?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You said it was gambling in your heart, didn't you?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. In fact as a banker you knew you might have trouble with some people who gave you checks for gambling, that they might well stop payment on them and be able to defend a lawsuit, isn't that right?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I didn't know that.

Mr. HALLEY. If they were gambling checks, you took a risk with them, did you not?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you given any consideration for taking that risk?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Stark have sufficient balances to cover any that bounced?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did any of these checks ever bounce?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I really don't know because I didn't take care of that end. I didn't bother with that.

Mr. HALLEY. Early in 1948 did you have another talk with Stark about these checks?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I believe I did.

Mr. HALLEY. What was that?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I think on or about that time we had the banking department in, and they were investigating the account. I told the story to the bank examiner at that time. The bank examiner investigated the account. I told Stark, I said, "Look, the banking department is criticizing or is about to criticize that. You will have to stop this business. You will have to find another banking connection."

Mr. HALLEY. On this occasion again did he say he was cashing the check for some games?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right, he was getting them for a fee, and he said he was going to stop doing business with us.

Mr. HALLEY. When he brought the checks in and then wrote out his own check for cash, did he want it in any particular denominations?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't he want it generally clean new $20, $50, and $100 bills?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That I don't know because I do not handle the cash. I was not the teller.

Mr. HALLEY. You were never told that?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Were special facilities made for guarding him when he left the bank with these sums of cash?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No. We didn't make any facilities for guarding him at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he have a guard with him?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. He always had an extra man or two. There was never one person who came in alone.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know the names of any of the people who came in with him?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. One was Philip Brosloffzky.

Mr. HALLEY. Anyone else that you know?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. There is another short, curly-haired fellow. I really don't know what his second name is. I know his first name. He is called Leizer.

Mr. HALLEY. L-i-z-e-r?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. L-e-i-z-e-r.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you known Brosloffzky before?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No. Well, I met him. He was working for Stark. Before he was working for Stark I hadn't known him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go out and take a look at any of these gambling games?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or get any of the free meals they served out there?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You never checked that?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. From the point of view of your bank, it was just an ordinary accommodation to Max Stark?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is all it was; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. There was no extra fee involved?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. It must have been a great deal of trouble.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. It was rather active.

Mr. HALLEY. How many checks on the average would he bring in a day?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I would say about 60 or 70.

Mr. HALLEY. Then he would need about $25,000 or $35,000 in cash.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. $25,000 to $30,000 in cash.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the total amount of money that went through the bank in this way?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I haven't any idea, gentlemen. I never saw the figures on that.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't it over $5,000,000?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. From what I saw in the paper one day, I think it was over that, but I never figured it up.

Mr. HALLEY. This is within a period of about a year; is that right, less than that?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I don't even know the length of time.

The CHAIRMAN. What were the dates, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. He first approached you, did he not, toward the end of 1947?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Some time around that.

Mr. HALLEY. And the banking department began to complain early in March 1948?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. So $5,000,000 in checks must have gone through your bank in a period of less than 6 months.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is about what it sums up.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

Senator TOBEY. Didn't that occasion surprise and raising of the eyebrows of the board of directors of the Merchants Bank to find an obscure fellow, a little fellow, a common fellow, putting $5,000,000 in checks through his bank account, and the bank had to collect them? Didn't that occasion surprise and indignation?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. They never questioned it.

Senator TOBEY. The directors never questioned a man with $5,000,000 going through his bank account within 6 months?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No.

Senator TOBEY. No.

Senator TOBEY. How many other individual depositors do you have who have $5,000,000 go through?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. In checks?

Senator TOBEY. Checks.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. We have several customers.

Senator TOBEY. Individuals?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Here is a $5,000,000 and you didn't question that and weren't surprised at all?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. When they put those checks in how did he credit it to his account?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. The same day.

Senator TOBEY. You credited his account the same day the checks were put in without waiting for collection?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No.

Senator TOBEY. But you didn't need to give it the same day because he already had a sufficient balance you said to give that amount of money, is that right?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Then why did you credit it? Why didn't you protect yourself by waiting for collection?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. We waited 2 days.

Senator TOBEY. You said the same day.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. But there was sufficient money. His account used to be credited but when the account is credited there is a certain symbol made on the sheet what portion of it is uncollected, and if none of that deposit had come back after 2 days, it is automatically collected.

Senator TOBEY. Yes, exactly. They do things that are interesting in New York. I know a little bit about banking but I won't say any more.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Bernstein. The banking department of New York State complained, is that correct?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. They didn't make a written complaint, but the examiner at that time who was looking into the account said something to me about it.

The CHAIRMAN. What was his complaint?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That there is an awful lot of activity on the account.

The CHAIRMAN. Activity is all right on any account, isn't it? He just didn't like the smell of it.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. He didn't like the type of business.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you know what type of business it was?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes; I told him they were checks that he was realizing from some games in Jersey.

The CHAIRMAN. As a matter of fact, Mr. Stark is a substantial stockholder of the bank, isn't he?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Has that been brought out?

Mr. HALLEY. No, it has not.

The CHAIRMAN. How much stock does he own in the bank?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Approximately 2,000 shares.

The CHAIRMAN. How many shares are there?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Twenty thousand.

The CHAIRMAN. So he owns 10 percent.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is he a director?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have the statement of your directors and officers of the bank with you?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir; I haven't.

The CHAIRMAN. What other people like Mr. Stark, who have been engaged in racketeering or gambling own stock in the bank? Does Mr. Meyer Lansky own any stock in the bank?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir; no other that I know of.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have any objection to submitting to the committee a list of your officers, directors, and stockholders?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes. Do you want me to do it from memory now? I will do it the best I can.

The CHAIRMAN. How many stockholders are there?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Stockholders, I can't, but directors and officers.

The CHAIRMAN. You give us a list of the stockholders and the amount of stock they own. Will you do that?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I would have to ask Mr. Markel.

The CHAIRMAN. You ask Mr. Markel if he will supply that to the committee, and Mr. Kostelanetz will take that.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. A list of stockholders.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, that is right. Now give us a list of the officers and directors.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Mr. Arnold Markel, who is president. There is Mr. I. Altman, who is vice president. There is Mr. Fabian Roll. He is a vice president. There is Mr. Morris Sorgen. I think he is assistant vice president. There is Mr. M. Bobrow, assistant cashier. There is Mr. Zeigler, who is assistant cashier. There is a Mr. R. Hertz, assistant cashier. There is a Mr. J. Wagner, an assistant cashier, including myself.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that all?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. How much personnel of the bank did handling this account tie up? That was a pretty big job, was it not?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, just one teller, and the bookkeeper who carries the account with the ordinary ledger of accounts. No additional personnel.

The CHAIRMAN. How much balance did Mr. Stark keep in the bank?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I would say his balances were anywhere between 20, 40, 50, and 60 thousand dollars, average, at that time.

The CHAIRMAN. So he would deposit these checks and simultaneously withdraw about the same amount.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you talk with him about how much commission he got out of this deal?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I didn't talk to him, but he once told me himself, and I think he gets a certain percentage. I don't know whether it was one-half percent of 1 percent for cashing them.

The CHAIRMAN. But he did get a percentage?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Did the bank get any percentage?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you get out of it?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Nothing.

Senator TOBEY. Did you make a service charge?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. Yes, sir; depending upon the activity of the account.

Senator TOBEY. How much was it probably?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I haven't any idea, gentlemen. You see, we base our service charges on the activity, how many checks issued, how many checks deposited, and the average balance is taken into consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. The truth about the matter, Mr. Bernstein, is that you let Mr. Stark do this, which tied up a lot of your personnel and you didn't get anything substantial out of it, because he owned 10 percent of the bank.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is the thing, he was a stockholder. That is one of the reasons.

The CHAIRMAN. That is the principal reason, isn't it?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Does Frank Costello have an account in your bank?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Joe Adonis?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Meyer Lansky?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Any further questions?

Senator TOBEY. Isn't this a pretty good example of what they call kiting checks?

Mr. BERNSTEIN. No, Senator, this is not kiting checks.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Bernstein, you will ask Mr. Markel to supply the list and furnish it to Mr. Kostelanetz, and if we need you any more in connection with this inquiry we will call you, but the subpoena served on you will be continuing.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. O. K., sir.

The CHAIRMAN. That is all for now, Mr. Bernstein.

Mr. BERNSTEIN. I will send that to Mr. Kostelanetz.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Boris Kostelanetz. Send it to this address.

Are you Milton Kessler? Do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

TESTIMONY OF MILTON KESSLER, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. KESSLER. Milton Kessler.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mr. KESSLER. 188 East Ninety-first Street, Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. How old are you?

Mr. KESSLER. Thirty-nine. I will be forty soon.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your occupation?

Mr. KESSLER. Dealer.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of dealer?

Mr. KESSLER. Roulette.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been engaged in that occupation?

Mr. KESSLER. Since 1937, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you working now?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been out of work?

Mr. KESSLER. Since the latter part of February.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1945 you worked for Jimmie La Fontaine in Maryland?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir; in 1944 or 1945.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you work for La Fontaine?

Mr. KESSLER. Oh, I don't know; 4 or 5 months, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the name of his place?

Mr. KESSLER. The Maryland Athletic Club.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else besides Jimmie La Fontaine were your bosses there?

Mr. KESSLER. There was just one that I know of, and that was a fellow by the name of Price.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his first name?

Mr. KESSLER. They just called him Whitey, Whitey Price.

Mr. HALLEY. During that time did you live in Washington?

Mr. KESSLER. I lived in Washington, yes; and after that I got an apartment and lived in Bladensburg, right near there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you work for any other gambling houses in the vicinity of Washington?

Mr. KESSLER. No; that is the only place.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know of any other places?

Mr. KESSLER. I never paid much attention. I think there was another place, but I was never there.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was the other place?

Mr. KESSLER. In Maryland some place.

Mr. HALLEY. Near La Fontaine's?

Mr. KESSLER. No; I don't think there was any place near there that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was the other one, in what area?

Mr. KESSLER. I don't know the directions so well there. I know that sometime after I left there I think this particular place was raided.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean the other place?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. While you were working for Fontaine was his place raided?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know the name of the other place?

Mr. KESSLER. No; I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Or who owned it?

Mr. KESSLER. No; but I think a Myers did.

Mr. HALLEY. M-y-e-r-s?

Mr. KESSLER. I don't know how you spell it, but from the talk, you know, that you would hear.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear that Frank Costello had an interest in Jimmie La Fontaine's place?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him there?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Joe Adonis?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You never saw him there?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Just name some of the other places where you worked prior to 1945; just quickly give the names.

Mr. KESSLER. In 1936 I worked at the Ohio Villa, in Cleveland. I also worked in Florida prior to 1945, at the Plantation. I also worked at the Riviera. I think that was in 1941 that I worked at the Riviera. I was there I would say 3 months or 4 months possibly at the Riviera. Then after that back to Florida again. It was mostly around Florida. After a while, I think it was in 1942 or 1943—1942 I think it was that I went to work in a defense plant in Detroit, Briggs Manufacturing, an airplane defense plant. I worked there until I had mushroom poisoning which brought on a convulsion and I broke my back, and I lost my job because of that. They wouldn't hire me back. That takes me into 1944 when I worked for the Maryland Athletic Club after that.

Then after Jimmie La Fontaine, I think that took me back to Florida again, and then from Florida back to New York, where I went to work in Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have your withholding-tax certificates from 1945 on?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

(Documents produced.)

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you first go to work in Jersey in 1945?

Mr. KESSLER. At this place on Route 6 in Lodi. Let me see, in 1945. No, in 1945 I think the first place I went to work was in Paterson.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get that job?

Mr. KESSLER. Through—well, almost all the fellows that worked there I knew, and I also found out that they were going to open, so I went there to get the job.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are some of the fellows who worked there?

Mr. KESSLER. You mean dealers?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, who was in charge?

Mr. KESSLER. It seemed like Greeno; Tony Greeno.

Mr. HALLEY. Tony Greeno?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He is also known as Guarini?

Mr. KESSLER. That is his name, I think. That is the way you pronounce it, I guess.

Mr. HALLEY. He is the man whose name appears on your withholding receipt; is that right?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You got your orders from him?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And instructions.

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else was there in charge at this first place in Paterson, N. J.?

Mr. KESSLER. There was a fellow by the name of Lynch that worked in the office.

Mr. HALLEY. Jimmie Lynch?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Jerry Catena around there?

Mr. KESSLER. No, I never saw him.

Mr. HALLEY. Joe Adonis?

Mr. KESSLER. I saw him occasionally, like you know he would just come in and then I would look around and he would be gone. I mean I was busy working most of the time anyway.

Mr. HALLEY. He would come in and look around the room where you had the roulette wheel?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, I would look up and see him and continue with my work.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he one of the bosses?

Mr. KESSLER. I don't know whether he was a boss or not. I was never told anything about him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he ever give you any orders or make suggestions?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he ever give any orders or make suggestions at Lodi?

Mr. KESSLER. No. I saw him at Lodi.

Mr. HALLEY. You saw him in both the Paterson place and at Lodi?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Al Goldfine recommend you for that first job?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, I have known Alec for a long time. He had charge of the help.

Mr. HALLEY. Who got you your job in the latter part of 1945 at the Club Greenacres?

Mr. KESSLER. I got that myself because I had worked for Mr. Lanksy before. I got the job with Sammy Brant.

Mr. HALLEY. Sammy Brant actually hired you?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. I knew Sammy when he was a dealer.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Abe Allenberg hang around the Greenacres?

Mr. KESSLER. I don't know him, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know him at all?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose you come back at 1:30, sharp. Can you do that?

Mr. KESSLER. O. K.

Mr. HALLEY. Or 1:15. We are going to take a very short time out for lunch and you can get some lunch now.

Mr. KESSLER. May I make a request? I was told that this would be a closed hearing and that my name would not appear in the paper.

The CHAIRMAN. Who told you that, sir?

Mr. KESSLER. The gentleman when I first made my statement that I signed. Because of my children going to school, you know, in the neighborhood there I would appreciate it very much for their sake if my name wasn't put in the paper. I don't think that I am that important to have it in there. If I didn't have children I wouldn't make the request.

The CHAIRMAN. How many children have you?

Mr. KESSLER. Two. The little boy is nine and the girl is seven.

The CHAIRMAN. What are you doing now?

Mr. KESSLER. Nothing.

The CHAIRMAN. I wish we could grant your request, but I am afraid we can't.

Mr. KESSLER. I am sorry, Senator. I really have nothing else except what is on that paper.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you be back at 1:15?

Mr. KESSLER. Okay. Do I leave my slips here?

The CHAIRMAN. We will take care of them.

(Whereupon, at 12:25 p. m. the committee recessed until 1:15 p. m. the same day.)

AFTER RECESS

(The committee reconvened at 1:50 p. m.)

The CHAIRMAN. The hearing will be in order.

Come around, Mr. Kessler.

FURTHER TESTIMONY OF MILTON KESSLER, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Kessler, for this executive session we have decided not to release your name that you have testified here.

Mr. KESSLER. Thank you very much, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's proceed.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked at Greenacres in 1945?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the place where Lefty Clark ran a crap game?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you went to Las Vegas?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. The Flamingo?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. That wasn't open that early, was it?

Mr. KESSLER. I left for Las Vegas in December.

Mr. HALLEY. Of 1945?

Mr. KESSLER. No, in 1946.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you all through 1946? Were you back in Jersey?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. We have some of your withholding slips here. You do show a withholding statement for the Flamingo.

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1946.

Mr. KESSLER. I went there. I worked there I think 4 days of 1946 going into 1947, until July.

Mr. HALLEY. You also worked at the Greenacres in 1946?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1947, you were back again at the Flamingo?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, until July.

Mr. HALLEY. And at Saratoga.

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir. When I came back from the Flamingo I went to Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked with L. & L. there?

Mr. KESSLER. At the Arrowhead, yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get your job at the Arrowhead?

Mr. KESSLER. When I went up there I heard that Alec was going to be there.

Mr. HALLEY. Alec Goldrine?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir. So I got a job there.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Jimmie Lynch in the office there?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And Schafer was there too?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, he was in charge of the help with Alec. He was the straw boss.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Meyer Lansky up there?

Mr. KESSLER. I saw him up there, yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. At the Arrowhead?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. That is in 1947?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he also give orders around the Arrowhead?

Mr. KESSLER. No, I never saw him give any orders. Like I would be working and then I would look up, I would see him walk in, and then I wouldn't pay any attention to him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he go into the office?

Mr. KESSLER. That I don't know either.

Mr. HALLEY. He was around the place?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, I saw him up there. I saw him in the dining room.

Mr. HALLEY. He didn't behave like an ordinary customer, did he?

Mr. KESSLER. In the dining room he would be sitting there watching the floor show, and we would watch it from the back. I could see him sitting at the table watching the floor show. Then occasionally I would see him in the casino, the game room.

Mr. HALLEY. What would he be doing in the casino?

Mr. KESSLER. He would just walk in. If I was at a particular wheel which faced the door, whenever I had a chance I would look up if I had the time, I would see customers walk in. I would see Mr. Lansky walk in.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know what he did there?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How many weeks did you work at Saratoga?

Mr. KESSLER. It might have been—it was as long as the racing, which I think is about 28 days, about 4 weeks.

Mr. HALLEY. That was a wide open operation at the Arrowhead in Saratoga, wasn't it?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. The doors were open, and it was no problem for the public about getting in at all?

Mr. KESSLER. Not that I know of, sir. They just seemed to walk in.

Mr. HALLEY. After you worked at Saratoga did you work at the baby-carriage factory?

Mr. KESSLER. Then I went back to Jersey; yes, sir. I worked in Jersey again. That is also on Route 6.

Mr. HALLEY. With whom were you there?

Mr. KESSLER. You mean who I worked with?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. KESSLER. Mr. Schafer was there and Alec was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Catena there?

Mr. KESSLER. No; I never saw him, but Mr. Lynch was there.

Mr. HALLEY. He was in the office?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How about Moretti, Salvatore, or Willie?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes; I used to see—that is Solly, isn't it?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. KESSLER. Yes; I used to see him up there. He used to come in.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he give orders?

Mr. KESSLER. No; I never saw him give orders. He never gave me an order. I don't know what orders he would give, but personally he never said anything to me.

Mr. HALLEY. He was around the place?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir; I used to see him around.

Mr. HALLEY. You would get these withholding statements with various names on them. Did you ever ask anybody what they were doing on them?

Mr. KESSLER. No. I just took it for granted that that was the name of the company. From my experience working around gambling places, the importance of a name never seems to come up.

Mr. HALLEY. When you had a withholding statement from 1948 showing the name J. Doto on it, you knew who Doto was?

Mr. KESSLER. I did from the newspapers when he used to get write-ups.

Mr. HALLEY. You know that was Joe Adonis?

Mr. KESSLER. I knew that Joe Adonis was an alias.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask anybody if Adonis was connected with the gambling operation?

Mr. KESSLER. No. As far as I knew, Mr. Lynch worked in the office and Tony would be around on the floor. He would give orders. He would tell you if he wanted, you know, something done, this or that.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Guarini around?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. He also gave orders?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. The people who gave orders, then, had Lynch and Guarini?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. They seemed to be the bosses.

Mr. HALLEY. Alex Goldfine was also there?

Mr. KESSLER. He was there in charge of the help. He was like a hired man.

Mr. HALLEY. You understood that Lynch and Guarini were owners as contrasted to Goldfine, who was an employee?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes; very much so.

Mr. HALLEY. After the carriage factory you went down to the Club Bohemian?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And Green Acres?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who hired you down there?

Mr. KESSLER. I think first I went to work at the Boheme, Mr. Lansky, Jake or Jack—

Senator TOBEY. Is that the same Lansky we had this morning?

Mr. HALLEY. His brother.

Then did you work at Green Acres too?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. I went over to the Green Acres. That was with Sam Brant.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you also handle the roulette?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you returned to New Jersey the next summer, the summer of 1939, and you worked at the Palisades place in 1949?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was there?

Mr. KESSLER. Mr. Greeno and Mr. Lynch.

Mr. HALLEY. The same two people again?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Adonis there?

Mr. KESSLER. No, I didn't see him there. I saw him—I used to see him in that other place.

Mr. HALLEY. Lodi?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, the one on Route 6, farther out.

Mr. HALLEY. During what year did you work at the Lodi place?

Mr. KESSLER. I think that was in the latter part of 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. The Palisades place closed at the end of 1949, is that right?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you work until it closed?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Or was it still going?

Mr. KESSLER. I was there at the finish.

Mr. HALLEY. That was about the end of 1949?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you all went down to Florida, is that right?

Mr. KESSLER. No. I stayed around in New York for a while, and then I went down to Florida to go to work.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you work in Florida?

Mr. KESSLER. This past winter?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. KESSLER. In Broward County at a small place called the Beach Club.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is it?

Mr. KESSLER. That was on the ocean road.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that owned by Carl Smith?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did anybody else have any part of it?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir. I understood that he was the boss. In fact, he was the only one who was ever there, because it was just a small place.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you call a small place?

Mr. KESSLER. Two wheels and one crap table. That is considered small.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you give the committee some idea of the amount of money that passed at, let's take a place like Lodi. How many crap tables and how many wheels were there?

Mr. KESSLER. In Lodi I think there were four wheels and two crap tables.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked at a wheel?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. So you would be most familiar with that?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. The stakes were a minimum of 25 cents for women and 50 cents for men; is that right?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, and you could bet up to $10, which was very seldom.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get a rather big play on these wheels?

Mr. KESSLER. Well, not the kind of play that you get at a resort.

Mr. HALLEY. Did all the wheels operate every night?

Mr. KESSLER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. On what nights did all four wheels operate?

Mr. KESSLER. I would say like a Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday.

Mr. HALLEY. And the other nights how many wheels operated?

Mr. KESSLER. Sometimes two, sometimes just one.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you say would be the total play over a wheel on a Saturday night?

Mr. KESSLER. I don't know. We don't have any way of knowing that. The game is going on, and then a player will sit down and he will buy in some checks, let's say $10 worth of checks. Then the money goes into a drawer. You keep on going and they buy in some more and you throw the money in the drawer. As far as counting it that is almost an impossibility.

Mr. HALLEY. Sitting at the table or standing behind it, how much money would go in the drawer in the course of an evening?

Mr. KESSLER. I would have no way of knowing that.

Mr. HALLEY. Roughly. You would be stuffing money in practically all night, wouldn't you?

Mr. KESSLER. Not necessarily. Sometimes they are lucky enough to sit and play an hour and a half or so with their original buy, and if they lose that they get up and walk away, and they are through.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any estimate, would you say a thousand dollars would be a fair amount at a table?

Mr. KESSLER. No; I don't think it took that much.

Mr. HALLEY. On any night? You wouldn't take in a thousand dollars on any night?

Mr. KESSLER. You mean my own table?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. KESSLER. I don't know. I would have to get an awful lot of play.

Mr. HALLEY. That would be a big play?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. Say $10 buy-ins or $25 buy-ins, there have to be an awful lot of buy-ins.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the point? Was the big money at the crap tables rather than the roulette?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. From my way—from my own observation the crap games are the games where they gamble.

Mr. HALLEY. That is where the money is.

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. The wheels are women. In other words, they sit there and will wait for their husband and lose $10 or $20 or $40. Then they are through.

Mr. HALLEY. They try to string out the chips as long as possible?

Mr. KESSLER. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. That is all I have, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Any questions, Mr. Kostelanetz?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. Do you call yourself a dealer?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You don't deal cards with roulette, do you? You operate the roulette wheel.

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. That isn't a dealer, is it? Do you call that a dealer?

Mr. KESSLER. If you want to be really class, you say croupier.

Senator TOBEY. The question is, are those wheels run on the level?

Mr. KESSLER. Oh, yes.

Senator TOBEY. How does the management make anything on it then?

Mr. KESSLER. They figure a percentage.

Senator TOBEY. They take off so much, like the mutuels?

Mr. KESSLER. It figures the same way, your over-all play. There are 38 numbers on a wheel. You pay 35 to 1. If you get a play on all the numbers, that 55 $\frac{1}{19}$ percent must show. Of course, there is what they call the hidden percentage, where a player won't figure to win as much as he will lose. That is the hidden percentage.

Senator TOBEY. Is it the usual thing for people to go the whole evening maybe without making a cent on roulette?

Mr. KESSLER. You mean is it possible?

Senator TOBEY. Do many of them not make a cent a whole evening?

Mr. KESSLER. Oh, yes. A person might come in and play tonight and lose their $20 and they might come in the next night or two nights later, whichever they happen to come in, and lose again and they might have a streak where they won't win anything for 3 or 4 plays.

Senator TOBEY. You speak of going to these different places, and there are other witnesses who have testified here. Does that justify us in having the feeling that there is a pool account of employees, dealers and others who are available for these different gambling places around the country?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. In other words, they are the faithful, the good employees and they have a list of them?

Mr. KESSLER. It runs this way: You make a reputation for yourself of being honest.

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. KESSLER. By being honest you can get more work than if you have a bad reputation. That also goes for customers. The customers will come into a place and if they see dealers that they know, who have worked in reputable gambling houses, they have more confidence when they play rather than if they walk into a place and see a lot of strangers.

Senator TOBEY. That is understandable. That is human nature; yes.

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. You have been down at Jimmie LaFontaine's and worked there, you said.

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Jimmie never was raided while you worked there?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Do you know why it wasn't?

Mr. KESSLER. No.

Senator TOBEY. Did he buy protection, in your judgment?

Mr. KESSLER. What?

Senator TOBEY. Did he buy protection and get it?

Mr. KESSLER. That I don't know.

Senator TOBEY. Did you ever hear anything that he did?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir. They never talk to the employees about that.

Senator TOBEY. One other question: Did you ever see any Members of Congress in there playing?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir. I don't think I would know them if I saw them.

Senator TOBEY. How many people would attend Jimmie's place in an evening?

Mr. KESSLER. In my particular job on the wheel, the wheel was just open, like we would open the wheel at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and we would usually be finished at 6 or 7 o'clock at night. There seemed to be a lull then and the wheel wouldn't operate at night. It was crap games.

Senator TOBEY. Was that located in Maryland or in the District?

Mr. KESSLER. In Maryland.

Senator TOBEY. Just a little bit over the line.

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir. The line is right on that street there.

Senator TOBEY. Jimmie died, didn't he?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. That is all.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Why haven't you worked since February?

Mr. KESSLER. There hasn't been any work. I keep thinking about it all the time, as my wife does, that we are sorry we ever left Las Vegas. We could have made our home out there where it is legal, and it would be just like—well, it would be like working in a store. You go to sleep at night and you know the next night the place will be open, which is always the constant fear in your mind when you are working where it isn't legal, that you leave there that night and you don't know whether it will be there the next night.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your salary at these different places?

Mr. KESSLER. What?

Mr. HALLEY. What was your salary?

Mr. KESSLER. My salary? In Florida the salary was $225 a week, and here where you figure to work longer and more steady, $100 a week. The reason they pay more money when you go to a resort is that you are maintaining two residences. You have to keep your home up where you left because you know you are going to be down in Florida, you figure to be down there only about 3 months or 4 months at the most. So you are paying rent down there and have your living expenses and you are also maintaining a home.

Mr. HALLEY. What did they pay the operators?

Mr. KESSLER. When I was in Las Vegas I was the pit boss and I got $40 a day.

Mr. HALLEY. What is a pit boss?

Mr. KESSLER. They call it a pit boss out there. In the East they would call it a floorman. I had charge of the wheels, floorman. I was like an overseer to watch the dealers.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you leave if you were getting $40 a day?

Mr. KESSLER. Well, everybody who was out there when I went out, and then the place was sold. I really hadn't made many friends out there when I went out because I just knew these fellows who went out there. When they all left, my wife didn't have anyone out there, and I guess she was getting lonesome for her folks here. So we decided, well, we will come back, thinking, or, in fact, I was practically told that any time I wanted to come back by other bosses out there in other places, because I had a pretty good reputation out there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who got you the job at the Flamingo?

Mr. KESSLER. Manny Schafer.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he know Siegel?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. He got the job through Bugsy Siegel.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet Bugsy Siegel?

Mr. KESSLER. When I was at the Flamingo.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Bugsy Siegel back here in the East?

Mr. KESSLER. No, I never saw him around here.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you there when Siegel was killed?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Whose home was it in?

Mr. KESSLER. Which—you mean in Las Vegas?

Senator TOBEY. Where Bugsy was killed.

Mr. KESSLER. From what I read in the paper, a girl by the name of—

Senator TOBEY. Virginia Hill?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Did you ever see her?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. I would see her around the Flamingo.

Senator TOBEY. She was there a good deal, was she?

Mr. KESSLER. Not too often.

Senator TOBEY. Was he with her, was Bugsy with her when she was there?

Mr. KESSLER. I would see them walking together or something like that.

Senator TOBEY. Who were her other intimates?

Mr. KESSLER. I didn't see any others. She was mostly there alone or with another girl. There would be another girl.

Senator TOBEY. That is in Las Vegas?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. What is the name of the place?

Mr. KESSLER. The Flamingo.

Senator TOBEY. Was she good looking?

Mr. KESSLER. Well, she was, I guess what you would call a type.

Senator TOBEY. She married a man named Hauser?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, that is what I read, a Norwegian or something.

Mr. HALLEY. When Siegel was murdered, the management of the Flamingo changed immediately, didn't it?

Mr. KESSLER. No, it didn't change until we left. I mean, I guess they were negotiating or something. The running of the place just kept on running. Mr. Schafer was the floorman there. He had charge of the casino. It just seemed to run, although we had heard rumors that the place was going to change hands. Usually those places when they change hands they bring in all new help.

Mr. HALLEY. You heard that before Siegel was killed?

Mr. KESSLER. No, this was the talk afterward, that the place was going to be sold.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever find out why Siegel had to send East for a crew to run the Flamingo?

Mr. KESSLER. I think there were only myself and Manny, and I think about two or three other fellows who were out there from the East. The rest were mostly help in Las Vegas because there was always a tremendous lot of fellows coming in and going out.

Mr. HALLEY. You were the top people who were running the floor, is that right?

Mr. KESSLER. I had nothing to do with the floor. Mine was just the wheel. Mr. Schafer had charge of the floor.

Mr. HALLEY. Then the two people in charge of the Flamingo were you and Schafer, is that right?

Mr. KESSLER. No, no.

Mr. HALLEY. You had the wheels. That is gambling, isn't it?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. But I had no say. I had the say over the dealers, but not the actual game itself. I had nothing to do with the money, or anything like that.

Mr. HALLEY. I understand that. Schafer was in charge of the whole thing, is that right?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. There were two shifts out there, eventually it wound up three shifts; three 8-hour shifts around the clock. Mr. Schafer couldn't be there all the time, so he would be there from 8 o'clock in the evening until 4 o'clock. Sometimes in the afternoon he would drop in and look around. Other than that, Mr. Siegel was there almost all the time because he lived in the hotel.

Mr. HALLEY. He actually supervised?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes. He was the boss.

Senator TOBEY. Tell me how far was this—did Virginia own the home? Was it her house?

Mr. KESSLER. That I don't know. According to the papers I think she rented it from somebody.

Senator TOBEY. How far was that from Las Vegas?

Mr. KESSLER. Three hundred miles, I would say. At least it is 300 miles to Los Angeles.

Senator TOBEY. Her home was in Los Angeles, was it?

Mr. KESSLER. In Beverly Hills; yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. People think nothing of driving down 300 miles to go down there?

Mr. KESSLER. Who?

Senator TOBEY. The gamblers think nothing of that 300-mile trip?

Mr. KESSLER. Oh, well, if they took a trip like that they usually stay for the week end.

Senator TOBEY. I see.

The CHAIRMAN. They usually come by plane, too, don't they?

Mr. KESSLER. Yes, sir; and train.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Kessler, isn't there some kind of club or association or union that you gambling operators belong to where you can be found?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't have any kind of organization at all?

Mr. KESSLER. No, sir. While I was out in Las Vegas I heard a story that there was some fellow who wanted to organize the dealers and make a union, but the dealers wouldn't go for it because you can work in a gambling house out there for your entire life if you do your work and don't steal, but if you steal, there isn't any union or anybody who is going to help you keep your job after that.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything else, gentlemen?

Mr. HALLEY. Nothing else.

The CHAIRMAN. That is all, thank you, Mr. Kessler.

Mr. KESSLER. We will return your papers to you.

O. K., thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Orecchio, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I do.

TESTIMONY OF MICHAEL ORECCHIO, FAIRVIEW, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your full name?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Michael Orecchio.

Mr. HALLEY. Your address, please?

Mr. ORECCHIO. 173 Anderson Avenue, Fairview.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your position?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I am chief of the county detectives in the office of the county prosecutor.

Mr. HALLEY. For Bergen County?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you served with a subpoena to bring with you certain records?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I didn't get the subpoena until Mr. Winne called me. I was in Colorado. However, one of my lieutenants had a subpoena and I presumed that mine was the same, so I brought the records that were requested in that subpoena.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you at the convention, the International Association of Chiefs of Police?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right. I flew in this morning at 2:30.

Mr. HALLEY. What records have you produced?

Mr. ORECCHIO. My income taxes from 1945.

Mr. HALLEY. Anything else?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have all canceled checks and bank balances, whatever was asked in the subpoena.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you turn them over to the investigator for the committee?

How long have you been chief of police?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have been chief of county detectives for about 6 years.

Mr. HALLEY. During that time what has been your record with respect to gambling in Bergen County?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't quite get the question, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What has been the condition in Bergen County with reference to gambling?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I would say that the condition in Bergen County, considering its size and complexion, is about the same as it is everywhere else.

Senator TOBEY. That isn't a good enough answer. It is too general.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't quite understand the question.

Senator TOBEY. That isn't a good enough answer to me as one member of the committee. It is too general. We are interested in Bergen County. We have cases of gambling there and you are chief of the county detectives and you dismiss the thing by saying it is the same as everywhere else. That doesn't suit me.

Mr. HALLEY. To your knowledge has there been gambling in Bergen County?

Mr. ORECCHIO. To my knowledge there has been gambling in Bergen County, and in all those cases that I have knowledge of, there have been people arrested and tried.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have knowledge of the operation at Lodi? Was that during your tenure of office?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't know what case you are referring to, but if it is the case that the newspapers are talking about, it was during my tenure, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have knowledge of it?

Mr. ORECCHIO. We had knowledge to the extent that we tried a man and he is now in State prison.

Mr. HALLEY. That is Guarini?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is Guarini; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you tell the committee a little bit about the investigation, just briefly, not any more detailed than necessary, and the conviction of Guarini?

Mr. ORECCHIO. The conviction of Guarini in the Lodi case came about as a result of information that we obtained in the Stark case.

Mr. HALLEY. The Stark case was prosecuted here in New York State.

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right. As a result of that, certain names came up in that case, one was—

Mr. HALLEY. Did Lynch's name come up?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No. Kitty, Frank—I have the names here. I will read them off. That is Milton Frank and Kitty Klein. When they were arrested they implicated Anthony Guarini. And Anthony Guarini surrendered himself and was tried. Rather he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 1 to 3 years in the State prison.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the sentence?

Mr. ORECCHIO. One to three years.

Mr. HALLEY. For what offense?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Maintaining a disorderly house.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make any effort to find out if Guarini had associates in that business?

Mr. ORECCHIO. We certainly did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you find out whether he did have any?

Mr. ORECCHIO. He refused, if he did, to tell us about it. We questioned him for several hours.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask the district attorney in New York County for any checks that Stark cashed?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Mr. Woody, the prosecutor, handled that part of it.

Mr. HALLEY. You never in your investigation tried to find out that?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I am only in law enforcement and not the trial part.

Mr. HALLEY. You are in the investigative end, are you not?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. In the course of your investigation did you ever attempt to see any of the checks which formed the basis of the Stark prosecution?

Mr. ORECCHIO. We went a little further than that, sir. We requested and paid for an entire transcript of the Stark trial.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't the Stark transcript show other names? Did, for instance, the name of James Lynch come up?

Mr. ORECCHIO. As being part owner of this place, sir?

Mr. HALLEY. In any way whatsoever.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't recall. It was between 2 and 3 inches in thickness. I don't remember everything in it.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know James Lynch?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir. I know him by reputation, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet him?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Does the name of Joe Doto come up, alias Joe Adonis, in the course of your investigation?

Mr. ORECCHIO. In the Lodi case?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't think it did, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You never heard of Joe Doto in connection with the Lodi operation?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Not in the Max Stark case.

Mr. HALLEY. You investigated, didn't you, independently of the Max Stark case?

Mr. ORECCHIO. We investigated as a result. Of course the place was closed at that time, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. By the time you got it, it was closed.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Sure.

Mr. HALLEY. You never heard of Joe Doto being connected with that at all?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, I didn't.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Doto?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I know him by reputation only. That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never seen him?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have never met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you hear whether Salvatore Moretti, Solly Moretti, was connected with the Lodi place?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't recall, sir. I would have to have the transcript. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever investigate Salvatore Moretti?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes, I did, about 4 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. In connection with what?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I investigated the place called Duke's Tavern up in Cliffside Park. When we went in there we found the two Moretti brothers in the place. As a matter of fact, it was the first time I had seen him, and it was the last time I ever saw him. Solly and Willie Moretti.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you have never seen them on any other occasion?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have never seen the men on any other occasion.

Mr. HALLEY. Except on one occasion when you went into Duke's place?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right. During the investigation we investigated five or six places, and this was one of them, and we walked in there. I think we were investigating for bookmaking. They were seated in there. We asked them who they were and they gave their names.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Gerald Catena?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You never saw him?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Never saw him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether he had any connection with the Lodi operation?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I do not, sir; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever investigate?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Did I ever investigate Catena?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't believe we ever did. We know he is not a Bergen County man and never operated in Bergen County.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask who filed the income-tax returns for the Lodi operation?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't believe my office did, sir, but that again is in the legal department. I wouldn't handle that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make any attempt to find the records for the Lodi operation?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't know what records you speak of, sir. I am sorry.

Mr. HALLEY. It was a business, was it not?

Mr. ORECCHIO. What do you mean, it was a business?

Mr. HALLEY. What went on at Lodi? What did you send Guarini to jail for?

Mr. ORECCHIO. We sent him to jail for maintaining a disorderly house. He testified that he was conducting there a floating crap game, a hit-and-run game.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make any attempt to find out whether it was a hit-and-run game?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes, we did.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do?

Mr. ORECCHIO. When we got information from New York as a result of the Max Stark case that this house was supposed to be operating in Lodi, we got hold of the Lodi police and we went over there, and for about four blocks each side of this garage we questioned everyone to determine if there had been any activity as mentioned in the Max Stark case in that area. Everyone said that they knew nothing about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you attempt to find any employee of the place?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes, we did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you succeed?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You found no employee?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask Mr. Logan's office for any help?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes; Mr. Woody did that many times.

Mr. HALLEY. And got no leads from Mr. Logan?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I can't answer for Mr. Woody, but it was never turned over to me. I am sure it was not given to him.

Mr. HALLEY. You as the investigator got no leads out of that record that helped you find any employee?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't the record itself say that James Lynch had endorsed practically all these checks?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I believe that was in the record; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you call James Lynch in for questioning?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't recall now whether we did or not. I couldn't say without the office records.

Mr. HALLEY. If you did, it left no impression at the time?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I handle over 2,000 cases a year in my office, and I just can't here and now, without any record—I am sure you will appreciate that, sir, that I just can't on this one case give you all the detail without the office records.

Mr. HALLEY. That was a pretty important case; was it not?

Mr. ORECCHIO. It was an important case. Any case in Bergen County that is of this nature is important to us.

Mr. HALLEY. When you arrested Guarini did you question him?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I certainly did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ask him if he kept any books of account or records?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Mr. Guarini refused to talk, sir. He was questioned by Mr. Depew, the first assistant prosecutor.

Mr. HALLEY. You say he stated he was having a hit-and-run crap game. He gave some testimony.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I meant, sir, beyond that he refused to say. He said that is my game. "I am telling you that is my game. It was a floating crap game. Here I am," and that is that.

Mr. HALLEY. You made no effort to find out if there were any records of income-tax payments, who filed them, what accountant did the work, and nothing of that kind?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't believe an investigation by our office of his income tax was made; no, sir. That again we will have to check with Mr. Woody and the legal department.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't it a fact that you were advised by Vincent O'Connor, of Logan's office, about the Lodi crap game in August of 1948?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I was not advised, sir; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Vincent O'Connor?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I met him twice.

Mr. HALLEY. About the time that the Stark case was tried?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I do not recall whether it was at that time or not, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you don't know Willie Moretti?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I said I knew Willie Moretti. I know those characters that you speak of by reputation. That is my job, to know these people.

Mr. HALLEY. But you don't know him personally?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I saw him once in my life. That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you a man of substantial means?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That all depends on what you consider substantial means.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you live?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Where do I live?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I live in an apartment house.

Mr. HALLEY. Whereabouts?

Mr. ORECCHIO. In Fairview.

Mr. HALLEY. Fairview.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You have an automobile?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes, a county car.

Mr. HALLEY. You use a county automobile?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You have a man to drive it, I suppose.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I drive myself most of the time.

Mr. HALLEY. The rest of the time you have a man to drive you?

Mr. ORECCHIO. If I am going out on an investigation, a man from the office drives me.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your income as chief of the county detectives?

Mr. ORECCHIO. As chief of county detectives, my salary is $4,700.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any other income in the last 5 years?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes, I have.

Mr. HALLEY. What is that?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have several incomes. I have an income from a real estate and insurance office that I have had for 23 years. I used to be secretary or congressional aide in Washington to Congressman Frank C. Osmer, Jr. Maybe the two Senators might remember him.

The CHAIRMAN. Congressional what? Were secretary of what?

Mr. ORECCHIO. We called them congressional aides, Senator, district secretary to the Congressman Frank C. Osmer, Jr.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are your partners in the real estate and insurance business?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have no partners.

Mr. HALLEY. It is your own personal business?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right. Incidentally, I left off there in the middle of the sentence. I want to continue that.

Mr. HALLEY. Surely, go right ahead.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. You said you were district secretary for Congressman Frank C. Osmer, Jr.

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right. I have an income from that of $12,000 that the Congressman owed me in back salary. At one time I was in the plumbing and heating business. I am recognized in the trade as a domestic engineer. I was associated with my brother, and about 3 years ago, about 3½ years ago, we separated, and I sold materials that we had in the warehouse, which went toward my income amounting to about $7,000.

Senator TOBEY. Who appointed you to the chief of county detectives?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Mr. Winne.

Senator TOBEY. What is his position?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I didn't hear you.

Senator TOBEY. What is his position?

Mr. ORECCHIO. He is the prosecutor.

Senator TOBEY. State or county?

Mr. ORECCHIO. He is the county prosecutor.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you filed amended income-tax returns for any of the years that you have brought?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I didn't get the first part of your question.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you filed amended income-tax returns for any of the years from 1946 to 1950?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Well, I have filed for all those years, but the book-keeper takes care of that. Whatever the income was, he took care of it.

Mr. HALLEY. The question is, Have you amended your income-tax returns for any of those years?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I think once or twice, sir, but I don't remember what year, not without looking.

Mr. HALLEY. Would looking at these records help?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't know because the work sheets aren't there.

Mr. HALLEY. Where are the work sheets?

Mr. ORECCHIO. They are in the hands of the accountant.

Mr. HALLEY. You haven't brought in any amended returns, have you?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, I haven't. That is all I have, what I brought here.

Mr. HALLEY. Under what circumstances did you amend any income-tax return?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't remember the circumstances, sir, but I think 1 year it went over the estimated income. I am sure that is what you are asking, isn't it? If it goes over the estimated income, you have to amend it.

Mr. HALLEY. That is one form of amendment.

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is the only one. I don't know of any others.

Mr. HALLEY. You have in mind amending the estimated return?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. The question was, Have you ever amended a final return?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You would know if you had done it, would you not?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I think I would; yes. I don't believe I have.

Mr. HALLEY. You have not had occasion to amend the final income tax return?

Mr. ORECCHIO. If I have, it would show in the record, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you had this insurance and real-estate business?

Mr. ORECCHIO. 24 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Who handles it for you now?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Since 1946 my boy, who was in the Marines, came out and he is working for me. He handles it.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other employees there?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have a secretary, yes, and I have a salesman, real-estate salesman.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you devote any of your time to it?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Not too much. Very little. I can't.

Mr. HALLEY. What other income have you? Do you own any real estate yourself?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No; I own this house that I live in, two-family and one-story apartment house.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you purchase that?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I purchased that 14 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. You have owned it ever since?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have owned it ever since; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any other real estate?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have a couple of lots. They don't amount to anything, about $4,000.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you say was your net worth in terms of cash in the bank or in a box?

Mr. ORECCHIO. You mean as of right now?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is hard to say without the records. I would say around 25 or 30 thousand dollars.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other cash in the form of bills and currency?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have a safe deposit box.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you keep currency in that box?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Surely.

Mr. HALLEY. How much do you have in that box?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have $10,000 in that box.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any particular occasion for needing that sum of money in cash?

Mr. ORECCHIO. It all depends. We like to keep cash on hand, particularly if we have a piece of property that looks good to us that we want to buy we make quick use of the cash, and we do it. As a matter of fact, we haven't done it. I don't think we have touched that. I haven't. I say we. I haven't touched it in I guess a year and a half or 2 years.

Senator TOBEY. Could you draw the cash quicker than you could draw a check?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Not necessarily, sir. It is merely my way of doing business, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you accumulate—

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have a cash account. I have an account. I have a checking account. Here are all my canceled checks. I have a savings account. It is all open. It is all on the record.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any cash in any other place but your safety deposit box?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No; I haven't.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your wife own any property?

Mr. ORECCHIO. My wife has no property.

Mr. HALLEY. I notice here some income from a beauty parlor.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Oh, yes; a couple of years ago I took a share in a beauty parlor, and that income doesn't amount to much, as you can see, a couple of hundred dollars a year.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did that part of the beauty parlor cost?

Mr. ORECCHIO. $2,500.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your income prior to your becoming chief of detectives?

Mr. ORECCHIO. For how long a period, sir?

Mr. HALLEY. Let us see. When did you become chief of detectives?

Mr. ORECCHIO. April of 1944.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to that, did you have any public office?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes. I was chief investigator for the Bergen County Board of Elections.

Mr. HALLEY. For how long?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I think about 5 years, sir; 4 or 5 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to that, did you hold any public office?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. You have not brought your returns prior to 1945?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No. As I say, I went by what the subpoena read for Lieutenant Guidetti.

Mr. HALLEY. That would be right. In 1945, I notice your income from your outside business was $3,264. Is that approximately right?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Whatever is on there, sir. I can't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. It varies considerably from year to year?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. For instance, in 1948, it apparently was somewhat larger. It seems to be $5,837.

Mr. ORECCHIO. The reason for that is the real estate end of it. If we sell more property, naturally we get more commissions.

Mr. HALLEY. What sort of customers do you have for your insurance business?

Mr. ORECCHIO. The general run of clientele, automobile, fire, mercantile, marine. We handle every type of insurance.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have many businessmen in the community who are your customers?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes; we have.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you feel that with an active business of that kind, you can devote enough time to your work as chief of detectives?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I am giving it hardly any time, as I stated a few moments ago. I can't. My boy takes care of that. Most of my time, as a matter of fact all of my time, I have to devote to my duties as chief of the county detectives.

Mr. HALLEY. This committee has been hearing evidence for 2 days about open and notorious operations at Lodi, at the place called the carriage factory, at several other locations, from 1945 right up to the end of 1949. Apparently the only place that you prosecuted at all is the one that grew out of the New York indictment of Max Stark. The only person you prosecuted there was Anthony Guarini, although the evidence was not at all so confined, but he had several partners. Have you any explanation to offer as to why your office was not aware of these conditions and did nothing about them?

Mr. ORECCHIO. May I take a moment, gentlemen, to make the position of my office clear first? I think we could get a better picture.

The office of the prosecutor, who is known as the prosecutor of the pleas, is not a police agency. That was made very emphatic by the prosecutor. The job of policing primarily belongs to the local police. In Bergen County, an area of 500 square miles, with 70 cities and municipalities, 64 organized police departments, you can readily appreciate that it would be a physical impossibility for the prosecutor's office to police, when I have 8 detectives and 6 investigators.

There are 800 policemen in the county, local policemen, who do that job. Our job is to assist. We are the technicians. If the local police need help, they come to us, and we give them that help.

We have experts in every field. My work is criminology. We have experts in ballistics, and so on and so forth. That is primarily our job, not that of policing.

You also have another agency policing Bergen County. The Bergen County police department polices Bergen County. You have another agency in the attorney general, who is here, and he can bear me out that the State police department polices Bergen County. You have another agency that polices Bergen County, the ABC, the alcoholic beverage commission polices Bergen County.

Let us get ourselves straight on one thing, gentlemen. We are not the police of the county. We present cases to the grand jury. We try those cases, and we try the appeals. We render assistance to any local police department that wants it.

Leave it off there for a moment, and I will answer your question, sir, by saying this is not the only case in Bergen County that has been prosecuted for gambling. There have been many cases of gambling prosecuted successfully in Bergen County. When I say "many," I don't mean hundreds, but there have been many cases. The arrests originally were either made by the local police, or they were made by my office. There were many raids instigated out of my office by me. The records in our office will show that.

So it isn't true that this is the only case, and that this case came to us as a result of the New York police or the New York district attorney's office bringing it to our attention, because as a matter of fact, gentlemen, in law enforcement it is good practice, it is common practice, for the police of one State, of one jurisdiction, to give assistance to another. We do it in our investigations. If we find out that there is something of interest to New York City, we turn it over, and as a result of that they may make an arrest. That is the way it works. That is common police practice. It is the best form. That happens all the time.

But I don't want—just a minute, please. I don't want to leave the impression that no arrests are made in Bergen County or no cases tried in Bergen County unless an outside jurisdiction comes in and makes that case for us. That is absolutely an erroneous impression, and I want to clear it on the record right away.

Mr. HALLEY. Right at that point, what we are really trying to find out is why, when you make arrests in Bergen County, do you steer clear of people like Joe Adonis, Salvatore Moretti, Jerry Catena, James Rutkin, James Lynch, and Arthur Longano?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Mr. Counsel, let me tell you something, and the rest of the people around this table. I am one man that doesn't steer clear of anybody.

Mr. HALLEY. How could you have missed these people when the Lodi operation was called to your attention?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I may add, when it comes to prosecution, I will prosecute anyone if the evidence I can get on them will stand up in court.

Mr. HALLEY. Could we stick to concrete facts, and let's assume your good intentions. The concrete fact is that Guarini was indicted and pleaded guilty. When did Guarini plead guilty?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have "Sentenced April 5, 1950," but I don't know when he pleaded guilty. I was not given that record. He was sentenced on April 5, 1950, this year.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know when he was indicted?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Offhand, may I say about a month before that? That is the best recollection I have of it.

Mr. HALLEY. In your efforts to investigate that matter, didn't you first learn about it in 1948?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Do you mean that there was a complaint in 1948 on this particular premise?

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't the Max Stark situation break in 1948?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Oh, no; I don't think so. No; there was a lapse of 2 years, I am sure of that. I wish I had the records here. I haven't got them, gentlemen.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't the first information from Hogan's office in 1948?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't know what information you are referring to, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. The information that they had found these checks being cashed by Max Stark.

Mr. ORECCHIO. In 1948?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, in August. You see, they caught up with Stark in 1948.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I can't give you the dates without the records, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did your investigation of Guarini take?

Mr. ORECCHIO. The actual time taken, consumed by that investigation, again, sir, I would have to have the record. I can't remember whether it was a week, 2 weeks, a month, 3 months, or what.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you get back from Denver?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I got back last night from Denver.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have had no time since then to check the records?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I went to bed this morning at 3:30, and I was up at 6:30 to be here this morning.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't ask any of your staff?

Mr. ORECCHIO. My staff is off today. The office is closed.

Mr. HALLEY. This is in the nature of an unusual situation?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir. I am giving you an answer. There was no one in the office this morning.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you asked your chief assistant to meet you here with some records to refresh your memory so you could show a proper respect for a Senate committee, you might have been in a position to testify about this.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Had I known, sir, that those were the records, Mr. Winne would have asked me to bring them over.

Mr. HALLEY. You couldn't have any doubt what this committee was looking into?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I didn't know, sir. I only went by what was on that subpoena. We have a stack of records over in the office. If you want me to bring all the records over, we will cart them over. They are the records of the prosecutor's office. They are open to inspection any time.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever read in the newspapers, in the spring of this year, that an accountant by the name of Goldstein had been subpoenaed by Mr. Hogan's office, and that, in fact, this committee was seeking to get Goldstein's records bearing on gambling in Jersey?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I read that, sir, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did it occur to you to serve a subpoena on that Goldstein?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is not my job, sir. I am afraid you have my job a little bit mixed up. I don't handle that end of it.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's see what end of it you handle. Not quite so fast, please. Doesn't your office have the job of investigating, for prosecution, cases which have been brought up for indictment?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Within our county?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And the Guarini case was in your office, is that right?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You knew, or had access to knowledge, that Goldstein was the accountant who handled matters for people of Guarini's type, did you not?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. In connection with trying to find out who were Guarini's associates, it might have been possible to subpoena some records from Goldstein and find out from a man who could not have raised any constitutional question, namely, the accountant.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Let me make my position clear again. I am not trying to shirk any responsibility, Mr. Counselor, but again, I think that my position in the office is not quite clear. When a case is in the process of being tried, an assistant prosecutor will outline everything that he wants in that case. Whatever he asks for, he gets. I cannot say exactly what it is, without the records.

Mr. HALLEY. It may be that the buck should be passed. If so, to whom should it be passed?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I will not pass the buck. I am not passing the buck. I am merely stating the facts, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have some figures on that paper?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No. This is the case.

Mr. HALLEY. The Guarini case?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who prepared that for you?

Mr. ORECCHIO. This was given to me by Mr. Winne.

Mr. HALLEY. When did he give you that?

Mr. ORECCHIO. He gave me this this morning.

Mr. HALLEY. So he must have known you were coming over here to testify about that case.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Mr. Winne called me in Denver and told me to be here. I don't know whether he knew I was going to testify about this case or not. This is not the only case on here.

Mr. HALLEY. What information do you have?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Cases on here which we have tried.

Mr. HALLEY. What information do you have on that paper about the Guarini case?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Particularly about the Guarini case?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ORECCHIO. The fact that Milton Frank and Kitty Klein were the ones that were turned up by the Max Stark investigation; that they implicated Guarini; that Guarini and Klein and Frank were tried; that Klein and Frank were given 3 months in the county jail, and Guarini both 1 to 3 years in State's prison and a thousand-dollar fine; the time of the sentence.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Mr. Winne when you came in last night?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or this morning?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I saw him this morning.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you see him, and when?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I saw him at his home.

Mr. HALLEY. And he had that statement ready for you?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. At that time, were you able to refresh your recollection about the other matters I have asked you about?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I haven't refreshed my recollection on anything, sir. I just came over here. I looked at Mr. Guidetti's subpoena. I said, "I guess this is what they want," packed it up in the office, and brought it over. Here I am.

Mr. HALLEY. You made no attempt to check on James Lynch's name which appeared on all the checks?

Mr. ORECCHIO. When?

Mr. HALLEY. In connection with the Guarini investigation.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I can't say that I did not, because I think I did, sir. If I had the records here, I think we could check that.

Mr. HALLEY. If you did, how could you have avoided indicting Lynch?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't handle the indictments. The prosecutor handles that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you present a memorandum of facts to the prosecutor?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I cannot recall whether I did or not, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you be able to check your records and give all the information to this committee?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes, sir, absolutely. Our records are in good order.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you give all that information to Mr. Kostelanetz?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I will be glad to.

Mr. HALLEY. Tomorrow. You can bring it here to New York for him.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Fine.

Mr. HALLEY. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. Just two questions. Do you have some insurance on People's Express?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Catena?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Doto?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir. In the first place—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Rutkin?

Mr. ORECCHIO. In the first place, may I interrupt, please, I wouldn't permit my office to insure any known racketeers or gamblers or anybody like that.

The CHAIRMAN. So you do not think you have any on any known racketeers?

Mr. ORECCHIO. It isn't a question of not thinking. I make that very explicit. We have no insurance on those people.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Goldstein?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. We are just looking for the person whose responsibility it was to do something about these places operating openly and notoriously, with 200 or 300 people in them.

Mr. ORECCHIO. May I say this—

The CHAIRMAN. I am just trying to find out whether it is your responsibility, whether it is the prosecutor's responsibility, or whose it is. Everybody seems to have known they were operating. They had buildings. Some of them had big restaurants.

Senator TOBEY. Everybody but the county chief of detectives' office. They did not seem to realize it.

The CHAIRMAN. Whose responsibility was it? That is the question.

Mr. ORECCHIO. You ask me whose responsibility it was?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I outlined before what the organization table is for the county of Bergen, Senator. I did that for the purpose of giving you a picture of what the police set-up is in the county.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Is it your conception of your job that you are not only to follow suggestions put in your hand by Mr. Winnie or somebody else, but that you, hating unrighteousness and breaking the laws and all, have an obligation as well as duty and privilege to go out and initiate action against these crooks? Is that your conception of your job, to initiate action?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Is it my conception of the job to initiate action?

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. ORECCHIO. It is my job, sir, and my duty, to initiate action wherever we have knowledge that something is going on which is of an illegal nature; and, Senator, we do, and I do.

Senator TOBEY. All right. This Stark trial was going on here, and it was common knowledge in the streets of New York and in professional circles in New York and New Jersey, that Lodi was operating illegally a gambling house. It did not impress you so much that you went out and raided the place and used a fine-tooth comb and put some of these fellows on trial, did it, outside of Guarini? It did not impress you?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Senator, the place was already closed, sir.

Senator TOBEY. When it was running full blast before it was closed, it was known as a gambling place.

Mr. ORECCHIO. It was known as a gambling place?

Senator TOBEY. Yes. We have plenty of testimony here from people who knew about it.

Mr. ORECCHIO. You ask me that question, and then I can say how come the local police didn't see it?

Senator TOBEY. I did not ask you about that. It is your responsibility.

Mr. ORECCHIO. It isn't my responsibility.

Senator TOBEY. It is not your responsibility?

Mr. ORECCHIO. It isn't entirely. I outlined the table of organization.

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. ORECCHIO. It is not my responsibility. I assist the local police. I do not police the county. I cannot police 70 towns with 8 men.

Senator TOBEY. When you hear of a place flagrantly operating, haven't you got the intestinal fortitude and——

Mr. ORECCHIO. I have got more intestinal fortitude, Senator——

Senator TOBEY. Wait until I get through.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Just a minute.

Senator TOBEY. To bring into gear the forces that can do it?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Senator, please. I didn't come here to be insulted.

Senator TOBEY. I have not insulted you.

Mr. ORECCHIO. You don't know my background. You don't know who I am. You talk about intestinal fortitude. I have plenty of it.

Senator TOBEY. All right.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I do my job, and I do it honestly.

Senator TOBEY. When you heard of conditions like this——

MR. ORECCHIO. I went right out after them immediately, and there was nothing there. We made a thorough investigation of Lodi. We even had the police there. We grilled the police, the chief, the people of the town.

SENATOR TOBEY. This committee came here entirely out of the woods from Washington, and in a few short days of preparation we have uncovered a situation in Lodi that is horrible.

MR. ORECCHIO. You have uncovered a situation, sir, where a man went to jail.

SENATOR TOBEY. Yes, I know. He is only one of many.

MR. ORECCHIO. I don't know about the others. I don't agree with you that conditions are as flagrant as that in Bergen County.

SENATOR TOBEY. We know others who are playing the game there.

Another question. How long a time did it take you and from what source did you accumulate $10,000 in cash in your safe-deposit vault?

MR. ORECCHIO. How long a time? I have been working, Senator, since I was 16.

SENATOR TOBEY. I am speaking of the $10,000 that is there. How long has that been in the process of accumulation?

MR. ORECCHIO. I have been working since I was 16 years old. That money is hard earned by the sweat of my brow.

SENATOR TOBEY. Some of it began to be accumulated when you were 16 years of age?

MR. ORECCHIO. I said I have been working since I was 16 years of age. I didn't know life in any mansion. We live frugally at home, my wife and I, and I have saved money. You look in my income-tax return and you will find that by the end of this year I will have reported over $70,000 in 7 years, and it is all there open for everybody to see.

SENATOR TOBEY. When did you first rent this safe deposit box?

MR. ORECCHIO. Three or four years ago.

SENATOR TOBEY. In what bank is it?

MR. ORECCHIO. The United National Bank of Cliffside Park.

SENATOR TOBEY. Cliffside, Fla.?

MR. ORECCHIO. Cliffside Park, sir.

SENATOR TOBEY. I beg you pardon.

MR. ORECCHIO. That money is mine, gentlemen, hard-earned money. Let's get that straight on the record.

MR. HALLEY. Chief—were you finished, Senator Tobey?

SENATOR TOBEY. You may think this is impertinent, also. You have a right to think what you want about it. What special qualification did you have to be put in as chief of the county detectives? Because you have been inspector of ballots some years before that? Is that all?

MR. ORECCHIO. I am afraid, sir, you will have to ask Mr. Winne that, who appointed me.

SENATOR TOBEY. You did not feel any sense of modesty or humility, or perhaps that the values were being overstressed in putting you in that important position?

MR. ORECCHIO. You don't want me to outline my qualifications; do you, Senator?

SENATOR TOBEY. I asked you a question. Were you not surprised when they asked you to take this particular job?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, Senator. For 15 years I have been studying criminology. I have studied medicine. I have studied anthropology, physics, history, everything connected with criminology. As a matter of fact, right now there are only four or five people in the whole world who are studying electroencephalography, its relationship to crime and brain lesion. Mr. Winne thought that I was qualified, and he gave me the job.

Senator TOBEY. That is all I have.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything else?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. With regard to these checks, Chief, do they relate only to your real-estate business?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is everything. That is everything, my personal account, everything is in the one account; everything.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. That is all.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I own the works. That is everything. That is my personal account, my real estate, my salaries.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Did you go to Europe recently?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I went to Europe last year to make a study of police methods and compare them with that of the United States.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Who paid for that trip?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I paid for that trip.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. That is reflected in your accounts?

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is reflected in the accounts.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Did anyone accompany you on the trip?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes. Two lawyers accompanied me on the trip. Mr. Gross and Mr. McDonald.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Would you give us their full names?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Mr. Albert Gross, of Hackensack; and Edward McDonald, also of Hackensack. Mr. McDonald is the clerk of the grand jury.

May I go back, Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I just want to go back a moment, because I do want to get you straightened out, sir. I am extremely touchy on this subject of my finances, because I have worked pretty hard for it. You said how did I accumulate $10,000? I told you at the time that I was in the plumbing and heating business along with the insurance.

Senator TOBEY. I always thought the plumbers were malefactors of great wealth, but go ahead.

Mr. ORECCHIO. You need them, sir.

We had accumulated quite a little stock, as you will in business. As a matter of fact, a couple of people went bankrupt on me. Instead of completing the jobs, we didn't complete the job. In other words, we completed what they call the rough and didn't complete the finish. I had this all in the warehouse, as everybody in my town and county can testify. They knew that. When my brother went his way, I sold that out, sir, to people who came along and bought it, and I got $7,000 for that. That was over a period of 3 or 4 years. That is part of that money.

I received from Mr. Osmer $12,000, which was salary I had coming to me for 4 years at $3,000 a year.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you do for him?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I was district secretary.

The CHAIRMAN. Keeping his political fences in shape?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think the Government ought to pay somebody to keep political fences in shape?

Mr. ORECCHIO. The Government didn't pay me.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Osmer paid you?

Mr. ORECCHIO. This came out of Mr. Osmer's pocket, and not the Government.

The CHAIRMAN. He did not put you on the congressional payroll?

Mr. ORECCHIO. No, sir. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. His name was not Thomas, was it?

Mr. ORECCHIO. He is from my county, too.

The CHAIRMAN. You did not get your check from the United States?

Mr. ORECCHIO. He had a secretary in Washington. He had two girls in Washington. They were on the payroll, and they collected the $5,600, or whatever it was that was allowed at that time. I had an agreement with Mr. Osmer that I would wait until such time as he was financially able to pay me out of his own pocket, which he did. As a matter of fact, the way he paid me that, he sold a farm up at Chatham, N. Y., and he paid me that. You will notice it in my records, Counselor. I get $1,400 a year, that is a second mortgage that I have on that farm up there. I took that as part of the payment.

The CHAIRMAN. Let us move on. Any other questions?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Do you have any objection to one of our investigators going with you to your box tomorrow morning and make an inventory of your box?

Mr. ORECCHIO. As a matter of fact, I would welcome it.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. When were you in the box last, sir?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't know. About a year or a year and a half ago.

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. I see.

The CHAIRMAN. What time would be convenient, 9 o'clock?

Mr. KOSTELANETZ. Nine o'clock is when the bank opens? Can one of your boys make it?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Any time at all. I would welcome it.

The CHAIRMAN. Nine o'clock. That is a date.

Mr. HALLEY. Chief, there has been some statement made by the witnesses that you attended a wedding of Willi Moretti's daughter. Is there any truth in that?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Of course, that is a vicious lie, Mr. Counselor.

Mr. HALLEY. You were not present at that wedding?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I was not. You know, these investigations create a Roman holiday for people who really want to take a whack at you. You know that. They really love it. When the facts come out, I am sure you will find in the Bergen County prosecutors' office we have done a good job.

Mr. HALLEY. It is almost impossible to understand how you just let Guarini take the fall or the rap for the entire crowd and did nothing further.

Mr. ORECCHIO. As I say, that isn't true, and I am sorry that I have had to answer the way I did, because if the records were here and the assistant prosecutor were here, he could answer, too, on his part of it.

The CHAIRMAN. That is all.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't want to leave the impression—may I, please—

Mr. ELICH. Mr. Myers will be with you tomorrow and examine those records tomorrow, and give a full report on it. That will settle the issue rather quickly.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Which records?

Mr. ELICH. About the Guarini indictment, and what investigation was made.

Mr. ORECCHIO. They are in the office, sure. Fine.

Senator TOBEY. Why did you not take some action about Erickson's operation at Cliffside, N. J.?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I didn't know about it, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You saw it in all the papers, sir. I examined Erickson in Washington. You saw the statement come out about Erickson's testimony, did you not?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. It came out about Cliffside in that testimony.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You read that, did you not?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Did you take any action?

Mr. ORECCHIO. I certainly did.

Senator TOBEY. What did you do?

Mr. ORECCHIO. We went right to the place listed there, and there was nothing there.

Senator TOBEY. Mr. Hogan took some action, and put him in jail, did he not?

Mr. ORECCHIO. He did it on what happened in New York, not New Jersey.

Senator TOBEY. He took some action.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I can't be responsible. I can't help what Mr. Hogan does over here with his people here. If we find anything wrong in New Jersey, we will put them in jail, too.

Senator TOBEY. Wasn't Erickson's wire room not very far from your home in New Jersey?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Let's put it that the place mentioned in the newspapers is about a mile and a half away from my home.

Senator TOBEY. 452 Palisades Avenue.

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is about a mile and a half, in another town.

Senator TOBEY. Did you go down there?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Certainly I did, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. What did you find?

Mr. ORECCHIO. Nothing.

Senator TOBEY. Wires all pulled out?

Mr. ORECCHIO. There weren't any wires there. As a matter of fact, it was a party line, just a party line.

Senator TOBEY. I see.

Mr. ORECCHIO. That is all. As I say, I don't know where some of these stories are coming from, but they are really fantastic. Let's get to the facts, and you will find it is a little bit different, believe me; and I am not saying there isn't anything wrong in Bergen County with reference to gambling. You will find that all over, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, sir.

Mr. ORECCHIO. May I have my papers?

Mr. HALLEY. We would like to keep them long enough to have an accountant go through them.

Mr. ORECCHIO. Why can't he do it in my office tomorrow? I will be glad to give him my secretary, my son, somebody. I would like to take them with me.

The CHAIRMAN. We will endeavor to bring the records back to you tomorrow. At least, such parts as we do not, we will give you an inventory of.

Mr. ORECCHIO. I don't know what I have here.

Senator TOBEY. We do not know yet, either.

Mr. HALLEY. Perhaps you should take them into the next room, and Mr. Frankel will make an inventory with you.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Borelli, do you solemnly swear that the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. BORELLI. I do.

TESTIMONY OF FRANK NICHOLAS BORELLI, CLIFFSIDE PARK, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. BORELLI. Frank Nicholas Borelli, Cliffside, N. J., Cliffside Park.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your occupation?

Mr. BORELLI. I am the chief of police of that town.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you had that job?

Mr. BORELLI. I have been chief about 30 years.

Mr. HALLEY. You have been chief for about 30 years?

Mr. BORELLI. About 30.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any other occupation in the last 30 years?

Mr. BORELLI. In what respect?

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other work that you do besides being chief of police?

Mr. BORELLI. No. I am chief of police.

Mr. HALLEY. You do no other work?

Mr. BORELLI. Do you mean do I have other income?

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other job?

Mr. BORELLI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or business?

Mr. BORELLI. Business; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Businesses; yes.

Mr. BORELLI. I have businesses in other business.

Mr. HALLEY. You have brought your financial records called for by the subpoena?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you produce them now and state what you have brought?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes.

I brought the 1946, 1947, 1948, 1949, and 1950 canceled checks; I brought my bank statements; I brought my bank stubs; and I brought my bank books and bank stubs. In two particular banks there was a check drawn to the Internal Revenue where I had no checking account, and they sent a cashier's check. So I wouldn't have anything except this to prove that, in other words.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any income-tax returns with you?

Mr. BORELLI. I have them all here, sir.

I might state the bookkeeper of the place that I am concerned with has my 1947, 1948, and 1949—he wouldn't have the 1950—up to date of all transactions in Palisade Amusement Park. He would have to come in and give you the detail. I can get them or get the records, but I couldn't explain it very thoroughly.

Mr. HALLEY. But you have the returns?

Mr. BORELLI. Everything.

Mr. HALLEY. Right here with you?

Mr. BORELLI. They are outside. The income-tax returns?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BORELLI. I have them.

Mr. HALLEY. We would like them here.

Mr. BORELLI. Yes, sure. Ask for Mr. Russell, George Russell.

What happened with the 1946 return, I was examined and investigated in 1947. There is something wrong about the way the 1946 return is, but I do have the Internal Revenue's report on it, which will be self-explanatory.

Mr. HALLEY. While we are waiting for the records, what other income do you have? First, what is your salary as chief of police?

Mr. BORELLI. What is my salary? About $4,500 a year. It might be $4,550, I am not too sure.

Mr. HALLEY. How long has it been at that rate?

Mr. BORELLI. Not too long. Probably 3 years.

Mr. HALLEY. What was it prior to that?

Mr. BORELLI. Probably $4,200. I think there was a $250 raise, so it might have been $250 less.

Mr. HALLEY. What other income have you had in the last 5 years?

Mr. BORELLI. Five years? I got an income from what you call the Creamer & Dyer, and Palisade Amusement Park. I also have an income from a golf course which belongs to me. I also have an income from the B. & B. Amusement, that is, my wife has. It still goes into my records. It will show in my records, B. & B. Amusement.

Mr. HALLEY. What is B. & B. Amusement?

Mr. BORELLI. It was Borelli and Bennett. The two women got together and built up until the fire. After the fire of 1944, they built up bigger stands. They are not operating now. We rent them out; since 1947, 1948, 1949, and 1950, we rented them out.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you talking about stands at Palisades Park?

Mr. BORELLI. Talking about what?

Mr. HALLEY. Amusement stands at the amusement park.

Mr. BORELLI. That is correct. That is in the B. & B. The others are stands, too, but they are refreshment stands. For instance, beer, lemonade, soda, frankfurters, popcorn, candy, and the like of that.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the B. & B.? What kind of stands are they?

Mr. BORELLI. They are what you call ham stands. They were hot dog stands. Now they are changed into ham stands.

Mr. HALLEY. What is sold at a ham stand?

Mr. BORELLI. Bacon. I wouldn't know too much about it. I know they have eggs, bacon, chicken.

Mr. HALLEY. Chief, as a result of covering Palisades Park rather thoroughly with my children, I thought I knew all about it. But what is the Creamer & Dyer?

Mr. BORELLI. Creamer & Dyer, I just explained, is the refreshment stands in the park. That is Creamer & Dyer.

Mr. HALLEY. That is just the name of the company?

Mr. BORELLI. That is the name of the concern that own it. You see, these are all concessionaries, practically, in the park. Creamer & Dyer have the concession of the frankfurters, the lemonade, soda, candy, popcorn, and so forth.

Mr. HALLEY. What interest have you in Creamer & Dyer?

Mr. BORELLI. I have a 37½-percent interest.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you had that, Chief?

Mr. BORELLI. Probably 18 years.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you first acquire it?

Mr. BORELLI. I paid for it. I bought it.

Mr. HALLEY. What did it cost you?

Mr. BORELLI. Oh, at that time the park was very bad. In fact, we hadn't seen any money there for a period of 3 or 4 years. In fact, nobody was able to pay rent. We just existed and went along. Then when other people came in there and were going to make it better, which didn't develop better, finally they did bring in somebody that did really go on and make a success of it. We were fortunate in that.

Mr. HALLEY. You were fortunate enough to have been in it?

Mr. BORELLI. To hold it until the time. A lot of people walked out. We held on because we had the buildings there. We held on, and these new people came in and they made a success of it.

Mr. HALLEY. How long has the B. & B. Amusement Co. been in Palisades Park?

Mr. BORELLI. I would say about 12 years. Don't hold me to just the years. It might be 13 or 14. It might be 11. It might be 10.

Mr. HALLEY. What are your total assets today, Chief? Do you own a home?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes; I own a home.

Mr. HALLEY. In Palisades?

Mr. BORELLI. No, no. Cliffside.

Mr. HALLEY. Cliffside Park?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own any other real estate, you or your wife?

Mr. BORELLI. I do. I own some bungalows, two bungalows, three bungalows down in South Jersey, small affairs, that I have had for 4 or 5 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own any other real estate?

Mr. BORELLI. I did. I got rid of all of it in 1946.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own any stock or bonds?

Mr. BORELLI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your wife?

Mr. BORELLI. Outside of war bonds, no stock and bonds.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your wife own any stock or bonds?

Mr. BORELLI. Anything she owns, I own. It is practically in both names. It makes no material difference. We never have any discussion about that. If it is in my name or her name, it makes no difference.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you have the businesses at the Palisades Amusement Park?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Creamer & Dyer, and B. & B.?

Mr. BORELLI. That is, I have 37½ percent of that. The golf course belongs to me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that the immense midget golf course in the park?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes; it is a small one.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you acquire that?

Mr. BORELLI. It must be 15 or 16 years ago. Don't hold me to definite times.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you say is your net worth in cash in the bank?

Mr. BORELLI. Today? I can tell you in 5 minutes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do your bank books reflect it all clearly?

Mr. BORELLI. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's just have the approximate amount.

Mr. BORELLI. Approximately $50,000, $60,000, $70,000. It could be $80,000 or so.

Senator TOBEY. I wish I was in position not to know whether it was $80,000 or $90,000.

Mr. BORELLI. If you were chief of police—[laughter]. No insult, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. I think that is a very illuminating answer. You cannot tell how much it might be. It varies with the day.

The CHAIRMAN. Let us get the amount of cash he has.

Mr. BORELLI. You want the amounts? No, take them down as I read it.

The CHAIRMAN. Give us the total.

Mr. BORELLI. I have six or seven books.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your estimate of the amount of cash you have in the bank?

Mr. BORELLI. I think it is around $50,000 or $60,000. I am not sure. I didn't take time to total it.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a safe-deposit box?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any cash in that box?

Mr. BORELLI. No. All I have in there is war bonds.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any cash in any other place?

Mr. BORELLI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How much do you have in war bonds, approximately? Your best estimate.

Mr. BORELLI. Make it around $15,000, probably $17,000.

Senator TOBEY. Do you have any annuities?

Mr. BORELLI. No; $500 insurance.

The CHAIRMAN. $500,000 insurance?

Mr. BORELLI. $500, Senator.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your income during 1949?

Mr. BORELLI. 1949? Didn't that man bring it in? Probably $25,000. I couldn't tell you without looking at this. If you would let my bookkeeper give you this—

Mr. HALLEY. Let us see the returns for the last 5 years.

Mr. BORELLI. Here they are.

Mr. HALLEY. Your income, then, is approximately $4,500 as chief of police, and the remainder of it from these concessions at the Palisades Park?

Mr. BORELLI. Around $18,000, something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any other income or have you had any other income?

Mr. BORELLI. Oh, yes, on rentals.

Mr. HALLEY. Rentals of the bungalows?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes; I have rentals from the bungalows.

Mr. HALLEY. Any other rental?

Mr. BORELLI. No. The buildings I did have, I sold in the year 1946.

Mr. HALLEY. The committee has been looking into the operations of certain gambling places. Some of them seem to have operated in Cliffside Park. We were wondering what you knew about them, Chief.

Mr. BORELLI. You see, it is an unfortunate situation I live in there. It happens that Cliffside Park, all these telephone numbers that are Cliffside, cover five different boroughs, and unless you give the specific phone numbers or addresses, I can't tell you which town they are in. In other words, to clear this up a little better for you, there is Fairview, there is Edgewater, there is Cliffside, there is part of Ridgefield, all under a Cliffside number.

Mr. HALLEY. We are talking about Cliffside now.

Mr. BORELLI. I can't say there is any gambling in Cliffside, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Has there been any in the last 5 years?

Mr. BORELLI. Not to my knowledge; no. I don't say there hasn't been. There is a possibility. It is just like a bookmaker. I could go in any city or town, municipality, and go along, and there is a bookmaker with a phone in an office, and not be detected unless somebody made a report.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of a garage in Cliffside Park in which there was a gambling house operated?

Mr. BORELLI. Not in Cliffside Park. If you give me the address. It might be a Cliffside phone.

Mr. HALLEY. You never arrested anybody for a crap game in Cliffside?

Mr. BORELLI. Oh, no; not in Cliffside.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet Joe Adonis?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes; I know him.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Joe Adonis?

Mr. BORELLI. Well, now, I can go back quite a few years on that. The first time I met him, I guess, was probably 7 or 8 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Jerry Catena?

Mr. BORELLI. I don't know Jerry Catena. I know of him. I don't know him.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been in Joe Adonis' home?

Mr. BORELLI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he been in yours?

Mr. BORELLI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go out together?

Mr. BORELLI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you see him?

Mr. BORELLI. In the restaurant. I used to see him a lot.

Mr. HALLEY. What restaurant?

Mr. BORELLI. Duke's Restaurant.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you go to Duke's often?

Mr. BORELLI. Not so much the last 3 years, due to the fact I can't stand the food. The food is very good, but it is not good for me.

Mr. HALLEY. You used to eat at Duke's a lot, up to 3 years ago?

Mr. BORELLI. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who all would go to Duke's frequently? I understand Joe Adonis and Frank Costello.

Mr. BORELLI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Frank Costello.

Mr. BORELLI. No; I never saw him.

Mr. HALLEY. He wouldn't go there?

Mr. BORELLI. I wouldn't know. He might be there sometime that I wouldn't be.

Mr. HALLEY. Willie Moretti?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Would he be there a lot?

Mr. BORELLI. I would see him there often.

Mr. HALLEY. Salvatore Moretti?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Longie Zwillman?

Mr. BORELLI. No; I don't. Only what I read of him.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met him?

Mr. BORELLI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jerry Catena?

Mr. BORELLI. No. I may have seen him, but to say I am personally acquainted with the man, I can't say I am.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jimmie Lynch?

Mr. BORELLI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he hang out at Duke's?

Mr. BORELLI. He used to.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Lynch?

Mr. BORELLI. That would go over a period of 5 or 6 years, too.

Mr. HALLEY. We won't ask any more questions now, because we have to go. Mr. Kostelanetz or somebody he may send out to see you may have some more questions, and may ask you to come to New York. Will that be all right?

Mr. BORELLI. I will be glad to answer them.

The CHAIRMAN. If you will wait around awhile, we can go over these records and get them back to you later on.

Mr. BORELLI. Today, Senator?

The CHAIRMAN. I do not think we can today.

Mr. BORELLI. Don't leave me on the spot. I would like to get the check book, at least one of the books that I can draw from.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose you wait outside a few minutes, and we will try to release your check book.

(Thereupon, at 3:25 p. m., the hearing was adjourned, subject to call.)

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1950

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE,
Washington, D. C.

The committee met, pursuant to call of the Chairman, at 10:10 a. m., in room 457 Senate Office Building, Senator Estes Kefauver (chairman) presiding.

Present: Senators Kefauver, Tobey, and Wiley.

Also present: Representative Louis B. Heller.

Rudolph Halley, chief counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

This is a continuation of the hearing which the committee had in New York about 2 months ago involving principally gambling transactions in Bergen County, N. J., part of which lapped over and involved New York, the City of New York, New York State; and also the New York hearings involved Saratoga Springs.

At the hearing we had about 2 months ago in New York, we heard certain accountants for the principals involved, certain employees; a great many records were introduced. We had before us some of the customers and people who had frequented and participated in these gambling house transactions.

We also had before us certain law enforcement officials in the counties where the transactions took place.

At that time it was not possible to have certain of the principals in these matters appear and testify because they could not be reached at that time by subpoena.

However, today we do have several of them as witnesses, and this is a continuation of that hearing.

Now, there will probably be other hearings in connection with those transactions and, of course, this is not the entire hearing involving the New York-New Jersey area; it is only one part of it.

Later on, before the committee makes its report, other hearings in connection with New York-New Jersey activities in that part of that country will be prepared.

We want to cooperate as much as possible with the press photographers and anyone else who wants to take pictures. On the other hand, during the time the witnesses are testifying, we do not want the continuity of their thought or their testimony interrupted by too many pictures. I think we had better start out and see how we get along, because we may have to change our rules as we go, but I believe that to start with, if the photographers will take pictures if it is all right with the witness. in the beginning and at the end of his testimony, that will be satisfactory; but during the time of his testimony, let us not interrupt his testimony with flash-bulb pictures.

Let the record show that the distinguished Senators from New Hampshire, Mr. Tobey, and from Wisconsin, Mr. Wiley, are present, and that this hearing is being held subject to and pursuant to the resolution previously adopted by the committee, and that if it is impossible for three Senators to be here, the chairman of the committee will designate one member of the committee to swear witnesses and to take sworn testimony.

Mr. Halley, have you got anything?

Mr. HALLEY. No, not by way of general introduction. I would like to say that one witness is reported to be sick.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Gerald Catena is reported to be ill and unable to be here today. His attorney, Mr. Calandra, is present.

Mr. CALANDRA. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Calandra, will you come around and give us information about your client?

Mr. CALANDRA. Yes. Mr. Chairman and honorable Senators, I am very sorry to report that Mr. Catena is unable to be here. About 6 o'clock this morning I received a telephone call informing me that around 1 o'clock this morning he was attended by his physician, Dr. Bartelo Lombardo, of Newark, N. J., and he informs me—I called the doctor by telephone—and he informs me that he finds this situation.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Calandra, you are a counselor at law at 31 Clinton Street, Newark, N. J.?

Mr. CALANDRA. Yes, sir. My name is Anthony A. Calandra.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you regularly represented Mr. Catena?

Mr. CALANDRA. No, I am appearing for Mr. Catena for the first time in connection with these proceedings.

The CHAIRMAN. What information do you have on this—if you do not object, all of our witnesses are sworn, Mr. Calandra.

Mr. CALANDRA. What is that?

The CHAIRMAN. I say all of our witnesses are sworn. Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. CALANDRA. I have no objection to being sworn.

Yes, sir; I do.

TESTIMONY OF ANTHONY A. CALANDRA, ATTORNEY, NEWARK, N. J., REPRESENTING GERALD CATENA

The CHAIRMAN. As I remember, you were present with Mrs. Catena when she appeared in New York?

Mr. CALANDRA. Yes; I was.

The CHAIRMAN. Keep your seat; it is all right.

And Mrs. Catena, we had her in before the committee, to try to ascertain the whereabouts of your client, Mr. Catena, you recall, and you appeared with her at that time?

Mr. CALANDRA. Yes, sir; I did.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, sir.

What information do you have on his physical condition?

MR. CALANDRA. Dr. Lombardo informed me by telephone this morning that he examined Mr. Catena at his home, and as a result of a complaint by Mr. Catena, that he had a sharp pain under the breast, and he classifies the condition as acute coronary insufficiency due to vaso-spasm. He intends to have a cardiograph or cardiogram taken of Mr. Catena at the earliest moment, and the doctor further informed me that Mr. Catena would be confined to his bed for at least several days.

Dr. Lombardo has his offices at 111 Wilson Avenue in Newark, N. J. The CHAIRMAN. Do you have something in Dr. Lombardo's handwriting, some report from him?

MR. CALANDRA. No; I do not, sir, because we had made arrangements to come to Washington this morning on the 8:20 plane, the 611 flight. When I received this information by telephone I, of course, called the doctor, and he gave me the information which I have related to you gentlemen, and I have no time or I had no time or opportunity, of course, to get a certificate or an affidavit from him, because I did want to be here in behalf of Mr. Catena on time, and for me to have gone down to his offices and prepared such a statement as he would make, of course, would prevent my being here by this hour.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, of course, the committee has had a great deal of difficulty in trying to locate Mr. Catena and in serving a subpoena on him.

We want to be generous in matters of this sort, but I think that we will have to ask that you contact Dr. Lombardo and have him wire the counselor or the chairman of the committee over his name the full details of Mr. Catena's physical condition.

MR. CALANDRA. I shall do that. Do you want that—

The CHAIRMAN. And ask him to have it here by noon.

MR. CALANDRA. I shall be glad to do that. I do want to state that Mr. Catena, on his return to his home, notified the investigators, I think Mr. Elich and Mr. Murray, that he was available for subpoena, and he was served with a subpoena on October 16.

MR. HALLEY. Mr. Calandra, the committee has been attempting to obtain service on Mr. Catena for many months, not only in connection with this matter but also in connection with his relationship with the Peoples Express Co., and the committee's efforts to find your client in connection with that matter go back about 4 months.

Now, I am going to ask the committee to rule that, first, we be permitted to have our own physician see your client as soon as that can be arranged, and, second, I think I should advise you that if it should hereafter appear that your client's condition is not as represented by you I will recommend to the committee that it go ahead with contempt proceedings for his failure to appear this morning.

MR. CALANDRA. I understand.

MR. HALLEY. In other words, the matter will be investigated, and his failure to appear for facts not as stated by you, I think you should know, constitute a contempt.

MR. CALANDRA. I understand that, and I feel that the doctor will cooperate with such physician that this committee will appoint to examine Mr. Catena at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. Can you tell us that the doctor and Mr. Catena will cooperate in the matter of allowing us to have an examination?

Mr. CALANDRA. I have no doubt about that, Senator Kefauver.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the committee will follow the program outlined by Mr. Halley, as counsel, if that is satisfactory. But you may as well inform Mr. Catena, Mr. Calandra, that we are not very well pleased with the delays that we have had in securing his testimony up to this time, and that we are not going to put up with any monkey business in connection with his not being here. If he is genuinely ill—

Mr. CALANDRA. I am firmly convinced that he had every intention to be here.

Is this telegram from the doctor to come to you, Senator, or Mr. Halley?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let it come to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. CALANDRA. Very well, sir; thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Salvatore Moretti, please.

Mr. SELSER. May I address myself to the committee, sir?

The CHAIRMAN. What is your name?

Mr. SELSER. John E. Selser, New Jersey attorney practicing out of Hackensack.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose we swear Mr. Moretti.

Mr. SELSER. We have no objection to that.

The CHAIRMAN. What is that?

Mr. SELSER. It is quite all right, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Moretti, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. MORETTI. I do, sir.

TESTIMONY OF SALVATORE MORETTI, DEMAREST, N. J., ACCOMPANIED BY JOHN E. SELSER, ATTORNEY, HACKENSACK, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, gentlemen, sit down. All right, Mr. Selser, where do you practice law?

Mr. SELSER. I am practicing out of Hackensack. I am an attorney in the State of New Jersey, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your address?

Mr. SELSER. 210 Main Street, Hackensack.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. SELSER. I represent Mr. Moretti in two proceedings presently pending, one in the State of New Jersey, and one in the State of New York.

Presently, Mr. Moretti is under complaint in New Jersey awaiting action of the grand jury in that State in that county. His bail presently is $15,000, and we applied to the court in New Jersey for leave to depart the jurisdiction of the court, modifying the bail accordingly, so that we might appear before this committee today.

I take it that there are certain inquiries to be made by this committee, answers to which may tend to incriminate this defendant, and he, on my advice, will exercise the privileges which are granted him under the fifth amendment to the Constitution, and refuse to answer such questions.

I anticipate, too, that there may be some interrogation with regard to income-tax returns made. These returns, as I am informed, have been made available to this committee by some act of the President.

With regard to these things or matters which were set up in such returns, I shall advise Mr. Moretti not to answer on the ground not only of self-incrimination but, perhaps, on the ground, too, that it is not the function of this committee to inquire into matters relating to income-tax returns or liabilities.

This committee, having been set up by resolution to inquire into crime in interstate commerce and not with regard to the violation of any income-tax obligations, I shall advise my client not to answer.

Now, in the State of New York we are also under charges——

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Selser, let me get the matter of the charges clearly before us. Mr. Moretti is under complaint pending grand jury action——

Mr. SELSER. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN (continuing). In matters growing out of the alleged participation in certain gambling activities in Bergen County, is that correct?

Mr. SELSER. The charge is a conspiracy to violate the antigambling laws of the State of New Jersey.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a copy of the complaint, sir?

Mr. SELSER. I do not have it here, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Does it refer to the Bergen County matter about which this committee has made inquiry?

Mr. SELSER. I beg your pardon, sir?

The CHAIRMAN. Does it refer to the activities in Bergen County about which this committee has made inquiry previously?

Mr. SELSER. I presume so; I am not familiar with the nature of the inquiries up to this time made by the committee, but I am informed by the attorney general, who is prosecuting the matter in Bergen County, that he has been supplied by this committee with testimony given by various witnesses who appeared before the committee, and it is upon the basis of the testimony supplied to him by this committee that he is able to proceed with the prosecution in New Jersey this far.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that Mr. Parsons or Mr. ——

Mr. SELSER. Stamler.

The CHAIRMAN. Stamler.

Mr. SELSER. Stamler is the attorney general especially assigned.

The CHAIRMAN. And the New York complaint is what?

Mr. SELSER. The New York complaint is a conspiracy charging in the first count that Mr. Moretti, with certain others, did conspire to violate the gambling laws of the States other than New York, without in the information designating the States so involved; and that Mr. Moretti and the others named in the information induced residents of New York and other places to attend such institutions for the purpose of gambling therein.

That matter is presently pending, a plea of not guilty having been made. Motions have been directed to the information as to its legal sufficiency, these motions presently pending before the court, and on this Mr. Moretti is presently released on $20,000 bail.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that prosecution being carried on by Mr. Hogan's office in New York?

Mr. SELSER. Yes, sir. Mr. O'Connor is the assistant district attorney in charge.

The CHAIRMAN. Vincent A. D. C. O'Connor?

Mr. SELSER. I think that is his name, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Now the third matter that you raise is about the income-tax investigation. Has any internal revenue or tax case been pending against Mr. Moretti?

Mr. SELSER. Not to my knowledge, although I am informed—well, may I say this: I was informed, but not by any official communication from the Department of Revenue, that the matter of the return of Mr. Moretti is presently being investigated. This information came to me through a Mr. Smith who, I am told, is the person in charge of this and certain other investigations.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any other representations that you wish to make, Mr. Selser?

Mr. SELSER. No; I think not, sir. I think that covers my basic approach to the problem.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Selser, we will proceed with the examination. You make such objections to questions that you wish, and the chairman, for the committee, will endeavor to rule on them as they come along.

The general ruling of the Chair will be that Mr. Moretti has no privilege or immunity from answering questions that concern an alleged violation of the State law; if, in the opinion of the committee the committee feels that the question may violate his rights under the fifth amendment with reference to some Federal matter, the committee will direct Mr. Moretti not to answer such question. But we have, as you know, been anxious to talk with Mr. Moretti about matters over which this committee has jurisdiction, so we will have to proceed, and you make such objection to the questions as you desire.

Mr. SELSER. There will be opportunity for conference with Mr. Moretti, which will be allowed if the need should develop?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; if it does not take too long.

Mr. SELSER. Yes; if we do not make it too long. I think Mr. Moretti and I should be able to reach a quick decision.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. MORETTI. Salvatore Moretti.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you live?

Mr. MORETTI. In Demarest, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the street address?

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the full address?

Mr. MORETTI. Hillside Avenue, Demarest, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. When and where were you born?

Mr. MORETTI. I was born in New York City in 1903.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever convicted of a crime?

Mr. SELSER. I object to that. I do not see that the record of Mr. Moretti can possibly bear upon the subject matter of this Senate committee's investigation.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection will be overruled. Mr. Moretti will be directed to answer the question.

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I have been convicted; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When and where and of what offense?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry; I don't have the records; I can't answer that question.

Mr. HALLEY. You remember having been convicted of a crime?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. In what State?

Mr. MORETTI. In New York State.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the offense?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Can't you even remember the offense?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I am sorry; I don't. I admit that I have been convicted. You asked that question.

Mr. HALLEY. How many times did you say you had been convicted?

Mr. MORETTI. A few times of minor offenses, so minor that I can't remember what the occasion was.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go to jail?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I went to jail.

Mr. HALLEY. For how long?

Mr. SELSER. I object to this line of questioning. I cannot see how this possibly—

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is overruled, Mr. Selser.

Mr. SELSER. I don't see how this can bear—

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Selser, it is apparent to us that you are not familiar with the resolution or with the background of what we want to ask Mr. Moretti about.

Mr. SELSER. I think I am familiar with the resolution, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Anyway, your objection, sir, is overruled. We are glad to have you appear, and we will try to see that the rights of your client are reasonably protected. You make your objections, and the chairman will rule upon them. The question of Mr. Halley is a proper question, and Mr. Moretti is directed to answer it.

Mr. SELSER. You may.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you repeat the question, Mr. Stenographer?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. MORETTI. I believe it was a 6 months' sentence.

Mr. HALLEY. That was in 1933?

Mr. MORETTI. It might have been; I can't remember that far back.

Mr. HALLEY. For contempt of court, was it not?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I can't say; I don't remember what the charges were. I do remember serving time, as I said.

Mr. HALLEY. That was in New York, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever convicted of any other crime?

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been convicted of any other crime?

Mr. MORETTI. No; not that I remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever convicted of running a lottery?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I was not.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you not convicted of participating in a numbers racket in New Jersey?

Mr. MORETTI. I was not; I beg to differ with you; I was not.

If you read—if you have the information in front of you, you will see it is entirely different, as I don't remember ever being arrested for lottery.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you remember it?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember being arrested for a lottery, as you point out.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you arrested for?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Weren't you arrested for aiding and abetting lotteries?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry; I don't remember that.

Mr. HALLEY. And convicted in 1934 in New Jersey, with your brother?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't remember that, sir; I am sorry, I can't remember that.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you get a suspended sentence?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I remember getting a suspended sentence, but I don't remember what it was for. It was for no lottery, as you point out.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you were in the numbers racket at that time, were you not?

Mr. MORETTI. I was not, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You must have gotten arrested and convicted for something.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I remember.

Mr. SELSER. I object to that.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; I—

Mr. HALLEY. What was it?

Mr. SELSER. It is not a question; it is a statement by counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. He asked what he was arrested and convicted for.

Mr. SELSER. And then counsel said, "You must have been arrested for something," which certainly is not a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Selser, he said he remembered getting a suspended sentence, so he is asking him what it was for.

Mr. SELSER. May we identify the place where this was done? Perhaps it was a Passaic County matter, which I think I know about.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we are not asking you to testify at this time.

Mr. SELSER. I appreciate that, but I think there should be some certainty as to the place or time.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Selser, you are here as a guest of the committee. We want to give your client an opportunity of having counsel, but have your seat, and your objection will be overruled. Mr. Moretti will answer. The question is, Of what were you convicted the time when you got a suspended sentence?

Mr. MORETTI. Senator, if I don't remember, and if the gentleman has it there on record, he certainly knows the answer, where I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's see if your counsel can refresh your recollection. This was in Passaic County in 1934. Perhaps your counsel can refresh your recollection.

Mr. MORETTI. Will you repeat that again, please?

Mr. HALLEY. Passaic County in 1934.

Mr. MORETTI. Passaic County in 1934? I know I have got a suspended sentence, more or less around that time, after I got through serving my time in New York, as I have admitted, but I don't remember the specific charges. I was taken out of jail in New York and I was brought in to jail into Passaic County, and in a matter of days this charge was suspended against me.

Now, whatever the charges were, I don't remember.

The CHAIRMAN. What does the record show?

Mr. HALLEY. The record shows aiding and abetting a lottery, and those are the FBI records. If you or your counsel can clarify that, I am sure the committee would be happy to hear any explanation or any clarification.

Mr. MORETTI. Well, suppose we take—suppose you answer the question yourself. It may not be proper, but I don't remember; I can't tell you when I don't remember, can I?

Mr. HALLEY. I think we will have to stand on the record.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't want you to put me in a position where you want me to——

Mr. HALLEY. You were convicted, but you can't remember what for?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I admit that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever know anybody by the name of Golden?

Mr. MORETTI. By the name of what?

Mr. HALLEY. Golden, G-o-l-d-e-n?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. There are two brothers by that name; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. I believe there is; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known them?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, I have known them for a good many years, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What business are they in?

Mr. MORETTI. What business are they in?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MORETTI. I know they were in the laundry business.

Mr. HALLEY. Were they ever in the numbers racket?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of them being in the numbers racket?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I never heard of that.

Mr. HALLEY. Weren't you in the numbers racket with the two Golden brothers in 1933 and 1934?

Mr. MORETTI. We are going back to the same questions, sir; you just answered that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the question is, were you, Mr. Moretti?

Mr. MORETTI. Definitely not, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of a man named Frank Pfahler?

Mr. MORETTI. Frank Pfahler, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He operates a night club in Passaic.

Mr. MORETTI. I believe he does.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Big John Profito?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Big Jim Profito?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I know him.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. I have known him for years.

Mr. HALLEY. Weren't you indicted with Pfahler and Profito in 1934, and your brother?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry I can't answer that because I don't know, as I have answered previously, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You were all in court on one case, don't you recall it?

MR. MORETTI. Well, I don't recall, as I have told you previously, I had just come out of New York jail and brought into Jersey jail. I wasn't familiar with the developments or the happenings, which you have the record of, and which I readily admit whatever the record discloses, I admit to.

MR. HALLEY. Well, the record discloses, aiding and abetting lotteries. Is that what you admit to?

MR. MORETTI. Well, I am afraid to if that is the charges on the chart.

MR. HALLEY. That is what you were convicted of, is that right?

MR. MORETTI. I suppose so.

MR. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that you were convicted at that time, together with your brother and Pfahler and Profito and Harry Cula?

MR. MORETTI. I am not saying that it isn't or it is.

MR. HALLEY. Were you ever in business with Pfahler?

MR. MORETTI. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Were you ever in business with Profito?

MR. MORETTI. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Were you ever in business with Harry Cula?

MR. MORETTI. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. At no time?

MR. MORETTI. At no time.

MR. HALLEY. Were you ever in any gambling business?

MR. SELSER. I object to that. I think the times and places should be specifically stated, and the generalization by counsel is improper, unfair.

THE CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Selser, he would know whether he has been or not.

MR. SELSER. I advise my client not to answer the question on the ground that it may tend to incriminate him.

THE CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer the question, Mr. Moretti.

MR. MORETTI. I take advice of counsel and answer the same as the counselor has, the ground that it may incriminate me; I refuse to answer that question, sir.

THE CHAIRMAN. Very well, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Before the year 1935 did you ever participate in a lottery in the State of New Jersey?

MR. MORETTI. I have never participated in any lottery in any State.

MR. HALLEY. Have you ever participated before the year 1935 in any gambling business in the State of New Jersey?

MR. SELSER. I direct my witness not to answer that question on the ground—

MR. MORETTI. I cannot answer that; it is the same as before. I can't answer the question that I don't know that you are referring to. I have constitutional rights.

THE CHAIRMAN. Just a minute, Mr. Moretti. Of course, the reason the question was asked before 1935 was that any statute of limitations would have run on any offense prior to that.

MR. SELSER. May I most respectfully dispute the Senator's idea of the law?

THE CHAIRMAN. Anyway, the witness will be directed to answer, and he can answer or not, as he wishes.

MR. SELSER. May I make this statement in advance of his answer, on my advice: A conspiracy, sir, is not barred by the statute of limitations though it be originated longer than 2 years ago, if an overt act under that conspiracy has been had within 2 years of the day of a complaint or information and, therefore, the Senator's statement of the law is, in my judgment, erroneous.

I advise my client not to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. I know of no Federal law upon which any gambling activity prior to 1935 in which the statute would have run; that is what we are concerned with.

Mr. SELSER. I most respectfully differ.

The CHAIRMAN. Anyway, the objection is overruled, and you are requested to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I will not answer that on advice of counsel, just as he explained. After all, he is a lawyer, sir, and I am not, and if we have a lawyer here we have to take his advice on certain matters.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, proceed.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Pete Laplace?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Laplace?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I know Joe Laplace.

Mr. HALLEY. Have they ever been in your home?

Mr. MORETTI. They have been in my home; Pete Laplace has; I don't know whether Joe Laplace has. I mean I don't know him that well to say he has or he hasn't.

Mr. HALLEY. Have the Golden brothers ever been in your home?

Mr. MORETTI. The Golden brothers, yes, they have been in my home. I have known them for years, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were they in your home in the month of August 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Were they in your home together in the month of August 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. I'm sorry, I don't remember. I can't answer that truthfully because I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I will ask you specifically on an afternoon during the month of August 1950, was there a meeting in your home at Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., attended by yourself, your brother, Pete Laplace, Joe Laplace, the two Golden brothers, and others?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, but that there positively could not have happened at any time, whether it was in August 1950, or in August 1930.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you explain why it could not have happened?

Mr. MORETTI. It could never have happened.

Mr. HALLEY. Why could it not?

Mr. MORETTI. Because something like that would be fresh in anyone's mind, even in my mind.

Mr. HALLEY. What you mean is that it did not happen; is that what you are trying to say?

Mr. MORETTI. It did not happen; that is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. It could have happened.

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, these people are all alive.

Mr. MORETTI. People are alive, certainly, so are we. We are alive today, if that is what you mean.

Mr. HALLEY. And they could have been in your home and you are just saying that they were not; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right; that is what I am saying.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you recall reading the newspapers or hearing about this subpoena serving—that this committee was serving subpoenas on people who were conducting gambling in an aircraft plant in the State of New Jersey?

Mr. SELSER. I object to that.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't read papers.

Mr. SELSER. Just a moment.

The CHAIRMAN. That is a proper question, Mr. Selser.

Mr. SELSER. What possible bearing—

The CHAIRMAN. You may not know the connection, but it is a proper question.

Mr. SELSER. That he read in newspapers—and are newspapers supposed to be stating—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Selser, I have overruled your objection.

Mr. SELSER. I am sorry, sir.

Mr. MORETTI. Answering the question, I am not a reader; my eyes are bad, which you can see I am wearing glasses, and I don't read the papers.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember ever hearing that this committee was subpoenaing witnesses about gambling in an aircraft company in New Jersey?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I don't remember ever hearing such a thing.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember ever telling anybody to get out of sight and take a vacation so they would not be called upon as witnesses before this Senate committee?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember ever saying anything like that, never remember hearing anyone saying any such thing.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember hearing your brother saying any such thing?

Mr. MORETTI. I do not, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Specifically, do you remember your brother saying it to Johnny Walsh?

Mr. MORETTI. Definitely not; I don't remember ever hearing anyone saying anything like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Johnny Walsh?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; I definitely do.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he ever been in your home?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; he has been in my home.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he in your home in the month of August 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he in your home this summer?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; he has been in my home this summer.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he ever at your home during the afternoon?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. It is possible?

Mr. MORETTI. It is possible; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. That could happen?

Mr. MORETTI. Anything could have happened.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember whether or not at the meeting during the month of August, on an afternoon at your home, with your brother, the Laplacas, the Golden brothers, Robert Neely, and Johnny Walsh, your brother told Johnny Walsh or anyone else that he should give

$2,500 to each and every person who might be called upon to testify before the Senate committee about gambling and to take a vacation and stay out of sight?

Mr. MORETTI. That sounds so ridiculous, sir, I have to answer that by saying it is impossible; nothing like that could ever happen.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you during the month of October and the month of November 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. October and November 1950? I took a little trip for myself, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did that little trip have anything to do with your having heard that this committee was serving subpoenas?

Mr. MORETTI. I am here, ain't I?

Mr. HALLEY. You are here after the heat got so hot that you had to—

Mr. MORETTI. What heat? It's cold weather outside. It is not hot out there; it is cold weather. What heat are you referring to?

Mr. SELSER. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Have a seat, Mr. Selser; we are trying to find out why it was not possible to find Mr. Moretti earlier, so this is a proper inquiry. Your objection will be overruled.

Mr. SELSER. Well, I certainly object to the form of the presentation by counsel.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know of any heat.

Mr. SELSER. I do not think this is a forum for arguments between counsel and the witness.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, in an inquiry of this sort, this is not a court proceeding; we do not go on technical rules. We are trying to find out why he left the State or where he went, and what the reason for it was, so you sit down, Mr. Selser, and we will get along.

Mr. SELSER. I will advise my client not to answer the question on the ground that apparently it is an attempt to get from this man a statement out of which a prosecution against the man may be had by the committee, and I direct him not to answer the question.

The CHAIRMAN. Read the last question.

Mr. HALLEY. May I reframe the question?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you state to the committee where you were between October 1 and October 15, 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. I cannot—

Mr. HALLEY. What State?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't answer that; I can't remember where I have been. I don't keep track of where I travel.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Chairman, may I advise the witness that this committee has in previous cases taken the position that a statement that a witness does not remember when the statement is obviously on its face unbelievable, will be treated by the committee as perjurious.

Now, Mr. Moretti—

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY (continuing). Did you leave the State of New Jersey during the first 2 weeks of October 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon me.

(There was a conference between witness and counsel.)

Mr. MORETTI. I was in Jersey in October; I was home in October.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you recall investigators for this committee coming to your home and attempting to serve subpoenas?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I don't recall that.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember investigators for this committee going to the door of your house and trying to gain entrance?

Mr. MORETTI. Not to my house; no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in your own house?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And it is your contention that investigators of this committee made no effort to find you at your house?

Mr. SELSER. I object to that. How can he know, sir? I object to the question.

The CHAIRMAN. Let us see whether he knows or not, Mr. Selser. You tell us what you know.

Mr. SELSER. Answer you don't know.

Mr. MORETTI. You see, I have moved from one home to another, and you may be confused or I might be confused with the dates, just as I have said before.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you move?

Mr. MORETTI. I moved in the latter part of this year.

Mr. HALLEY. Well; the latter part of which year?

Mr. MORETTI. This year, 1950.

Mr. HALLEY. How long ago? We are still in the latter part of this year.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; that is 2 or 3 months ago.

Mr. HALLEY. You moved 2 or 3 months ago?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. From what address to what address?

Mr. MORETTI. From 269 Springfield Avenue in Hasbrouck Heights, to Demarest, N. J.?

Mr. HALLEY. Demarest, N. J.?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What have you done with the house in Hasbrouck Heights?

Mr. MORETTI. The house in Hasbrouck Heights was sold last month.

Mr. HALLEY. To whom was it sold?

Mr. MORETTI. To Pascal.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the first name?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I don't remember the first name.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you leave a forwarding address at the post office when you moved to Demarest, N. J.?

Mr. MORETTI. We don't have a post office in Hasbrouck Heights.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a post office in Demarest?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, we do.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you receive mail in Demarest?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes. Just Demarest, N. J., that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you receive mail at Hasbrouck Heights?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, how was it addressed to you?

Mr. MORETTI. Whatever mail was addressed to Hasbrouck Heights when I would go there, I would pick it up.

Mr. HALLEY. And you made no effort to have your mail forwarded to Demarest?

Mr. MORETTI. No; didn't make no efforts for the simple reason is the furniture and everything else was still in the home. The home was still being occupied by me.

Mr. HALLEY. During the whole month of October?

Mr. MORETTI. Only I didn't live there.

Mr. HALLEY. During the whole month of October?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I believe so.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, when you moved to Demarest did you buy the house in Demarest?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you purchase it?

Mr. MORETTI. I purchased that last year.

Mr. HALLEY. What time last year are you referring to?

Mr. MORETTI. The early part of last year, I suppose.

Mr. HALLEY. The early part of 1949?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it empty until October of this year?

Mr. MORETTI. No, it was not empty, exactly.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was living in it?

Mr. MORETTI. I was; I moved back and forth.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean you lived in both places?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And starting in the early part of October of this year you closed up the Hasbrouck Heights house; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Locked the doors?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Pulled down the shades?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And went to Demarest; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you stayed in Demarest throughout the first 2 weeks of October 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. I believe so, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know that this committee was trying to serve a subpoena upon you?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know that the committee had asked your brother and your brother's wife and all of your associates where you could be found?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that you moved to Demarest and closed up the Hasbrouck Heights house in an effort to avoid service of this committee?

Mr. MORETTI. It is not so, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go out of the State of New Jersey during the second 2 weeks of October 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I stayed in New York for a while, if that is what you mean.

Mr. HALLEY. Where in New York?

Mr. MORETTI. Let's see—I went over and I stayed with my brother's family—that is, my brother-in-law.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his name?

Mr. MORETTI. His name is Marino.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his full name, please?

Mr. MORETTI. Anthony Marino.

Mr. HALLEY. Where does he live?

Mr. MORETTI. He lives in the Bronx.

Mr. HALLEY. May we have the address?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; 2916 Dudley Avenue, Bronx, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. And you stayed at his home?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, stayed there for a few days and came back home again.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay there?

Mr. MORETTI. A few days; I said a few days.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go anywhere else during the latter part of October 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go to any of your places of business during the first 2 weeks of October of 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. My places of business?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MORETTI. I have no business. I don't know what you are referring to.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no business?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know what you are referring to, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, do you have any business?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I have had businesses.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last have a business?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, this is some time ago.

Mr. HALLEY. A matter of years?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, a matter of years, a matter of 2 or 3 years.

Mr. HALLEY. How many years?

Mr. MORETTI. Two or three years.

Mr. HALLEY. Two or three years?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the last business in which you engaged?

Mr. MORETTI. The last business I was engaged in was in the textile business.

Mr. HALLEY. Where and under what name?

Mr. MORETTI. The Electrosol Dyeing—dyeing business.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that located?

Mr. MORETTI. That was located in Paterson, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any associates in that business?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I had associates.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were they?

Mr. MORETTI. I will have to refer to records, names—I don't remember too well.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you in that business?

Mr. MORETTI. Around 6 months more or less.

Mr. HALLEY. Did it fail or did you sell out? How did you leave it?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I sold out.

Mr. HALLEY. You sold out?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What other businesses have you been in during the last 5 years?

Mr. SELSER. I object to that question, and direct my witness, my client, not to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate him.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer, Mr. Moretti.

Mr. MORETTI. What other business?

The CHAIRMAN. What other businesses have you been in in the last 5 years?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, sir, I will have to take advice of counsel, and refuse to answer the question on grounds it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. What other legitimate businesses have you been in the last 5 years?

Mr. SELSER. I object to it on the same grounds, and direct the witness not to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer, Mr. Moretti.

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I have to take the same position, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was the textile business you have just described a legitimate business?

Mr. SELSER. I object to that and direct the witness not to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer, Mr. Moretti.

Mr. MORETTI. How can I answer a question of that kind, sir?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you can either take the counsel of your lawyer—

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I take the advice of counsel; I cannot answer that question.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know the difference between a legitimate business and an illegitimate business?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't, I am sorry, I don't.

Mr. SELSER. I object—all right.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not know?

Mr. MORETTI. Will you explain it to me?

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a linen supply business?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I never have been.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever connected with the U. S. Linen Supply Co.?

Mr. MORETTI. I have been connected, yes; I have been connected with them.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the nature of your connection?

Mr. MORETTI. Nature of my connection? The nature was to try and get customers.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you connected with them?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, not very long.

The CHAIRMAN. How long? One year or two years?

Mr. MORETTI. About a year, sir; I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you say about 3 years?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember; I am sorry I cannot answer that question?

Mr. HALLEY. Can I refresh your recollection? Was it in 1944, 1945, and 1946?

Mr. MORETTI. It might have been.

Mr. HALLEY. Was your brother connected with that business, too?

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Was your brother also connected with that business?

Mr. MORETTI. With the U. S. Linen, sir?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, he is; he still is connected with it, as far as I know.

Mr. HALLEY. That is a laundry service, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And cleaning?

Mr. MORETTI. Laundry service.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were, in effect, a salesman for them?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; more or less in that capacity.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any other connections with any other businesses in the last 5 years?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I cannot answer that question.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any other connections of any nature with any legitimate businesses in the last 5 years?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry I cannot answer that question, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, were you ever connected with the B & T Trading Co.?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I can't answer that question either.

Mr. HALLEY. May I ask the chairman to direct an answer to that question?

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer were you ever connected with the B & T Trading Co.

Mr. MORETTI. On the advice of counsel, sir, I am sorry, I cannot answer that question for fear it would incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever connected with the L & C Amusement Co.?

Mr. MORETTI. I have to give you the same answer, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse on the advice of counsel on the ground that it may incriminate me, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever connected with the G & R Trading Co.?

Mr. MORETTI. The same answer, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. The same answer, on advice of counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever connected with the Pal Trading Co.?

Mr. MORETTI. The same answer, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse on the ground that it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that from July of 1949 to January of 1950 you had a 35-percent interest in the General Trading Co.?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer the question on grounds that it may incriminate me, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse, sir, on the same grounds.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joseph Doto?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in business with him?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the ground it may incriminate me, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse on the same grounds.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Anthony Guarini?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I do, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. A good many years, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in business with him?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the ground it may incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse on the same grounds, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know James Lynch?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have any business relations with him?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the same grounds.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the ground it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Arthur Longano?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any business relations with him?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the same grounds, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You will be directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the ground it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Gerald Catena?

Mr. MORETTI. I do, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Gerald Catena?

Mr. MORETTI. I have known Mr. Catena for some time.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business relationship with him?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the same, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer that question.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the grounds that it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that between April of 1945 and April of 1946 you received $38,290.70 from the G & R Trading Co.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer, sir, on the ground it may incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You will be directed to answer whether you received that amount or any other amount from G & R Trading Co.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the grounds it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know an accountant named I. George Goldstein?

Mr. MORETTI. I have heard of him, yes; I know him slightly.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he ever filed an income-tax return for any company of which you were a partner or an associate?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the grounds that it might incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, wait a minute, you will be directed to answer that question.

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, sir, I cannot answer that question because it is pertaining to my constitutional rights, and I want to protect myself as much as I possibly can, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that you received $49,000 from the B & T Trading Co. between the years 1947 and 1948?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I refuse to answer the question.

The CHAIRMAN. You will be directed to answer whether you received that amount or any amount from the——

Mr. HALLEY. B & T Trading Co.

The CHAIRMAN (continuing). B & T Trading Co.

Mr. MORETTI. Well, sir, all these questions that you are asking me, if I may say so at this time——

The CHAIRMAN. Do you want to answer it at this time or not?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You understand you have been directed by the committee to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer——

Mr. SELSER. May I say he has been advised by counsel not to answer, sir, on the grounds that it violates his constitutional privilege.

The CHAIRMAN. We understand the reason he gives for not answering, Mr. Selser.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Meyer Lansky?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Stacci?

Mr. MORETTI. Joe who?

Mr. HALLEY. Stacci.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I know Joe Stacci.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with him?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think so; I don't remember; I don't believe I have had.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mike Lascari?

Mr. MORETTI. Mike what?

Mr. HALLEY. Lascari.

Mr. MORETTI. Mike Lascari?

Mr. HALLEY. L-a-s-c-a-r-i.

Mr. MORETTI. I might know him; I do not know, I am not sure. I might know him, I might not.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you ever know a man named Yanowsky, who was murdered in New Jersey, Charley Yanowsky?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't believe I do; no.

Mr. HALLEY. He was murdered July of 1948.

Mr. MORETTI. No; I don't believe I know that name.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not believe you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. You do not believe you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't believe I know him; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I know Frank Costello.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Frank Costello?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, I have known Frank Costello a good number of years.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, I met Mr. Costello around a race track.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Charles Binaggio?

Mr. MORETTI. Charles who?

Mr. HALLEY. Binaggio.

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet Costello?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, a good many years ago, sir, around the race track.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you say at least 20 years?

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Would you say at least 20 years?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I don't believe it is that long.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it longer than 10?

Mr. MORETTI. Around 10, I imagine, yes; around 10.

Mr. HALLEY. And you say you first met him around a race track?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you?

Mr. MORETTI. My brother introduced me to him.

Mr. HALLEY. Your brother Willie?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And have you ever had any business dealings with Frank Costello?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever placed bets with him, or has he ever placed any with you?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Erickson?

Mr. MORETTI. Do I know Frank Erickson? Yes; I know Frank Erickson.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. I have known him for some time.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealing with him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Abner Zwillman?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Zwillman.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I know Mr. Zwillman; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, I know him for 7, 8 years, 10 years probably.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in his home?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he ever been in yours?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jack Dragna?

Mr. MORETTI. Jack who?

Mr. HALLEY. D-r-a-g-n-a.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't believe I do.

Mr. HALLEY. He lives in California.

Mr. MORETTI. No; I don't believe I do, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Tony Gizzo, G-i-z-z-o?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I don't remember that name.

Mr. HALLEY. His home is in Kansas City.

Mr. MORETTI. No; I don't think I remember him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Charles Luciano?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I have known Charles Luciano.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you know Charles Luciano?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, about 10, 12 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you seen him within the last 5 years?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you talked to him on the telephone within the last 5 years?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Tony Accardo from Chicago?

Mr. MORETTI. Tony who?

Mr. HALLEY. Accardo.

Mr. MORETTI. No; I don't think I know that name; no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Charles Fischetti?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I don't think I know that man.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Little Augie Pisano, who is also known as Carfano?

Mr. MORETTI. I think I know him, yes; I think I know him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Vito Genovese?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Vito Genovese.

Mr. MORETTI. Vito Genovese? No; I don't think I know him; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Profaci?

Mr. MORETTI. Joe who?

Mr. HALLEY. Profaci.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I think I know him; yes, I think I do.

Mr. HALLEY. In fact, wasn't he at the wedding that your brother had for his daughter?

Mr. MORETTI. He might have been, I don't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you know Joe Profaci, don't you?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I said I think I know him; I answered that question.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. I may have known him for some time, but I only see him once in a great while.

Mr. HALLEY. But you know him, do you not?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I admit that.

Mr. HALLEY. There is no doubt about that, is there?

Mr. MORETTI. No, there is no doubt about that, no doubt about that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Bugsy Siegel?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Bugsy Siegel.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I had known Bugsy Siegel, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, around the same time, 10, 12 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have any business relationship with Bugsy Siegel?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know what the Mafia is?

Mr. MORETTI. What?

Mr. HALLEY. The Mafia, M-a-f-i-a.

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I don't know what you are talking about.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of the Mafia?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I never have.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard that word before?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I am sorry, I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. You never heard that word before in your life?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you read?

Mr. MORETTI. No, as I says before, I don't read very much on account of my eyes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you had never seen that word in print, M-a-f-i-a?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't believe I have.

Mr. HALLEY. And it has never come to your ears; you have never heard that word?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. MORETTI. Have you ever heard of the Unione Siciliano?

Mr. MORETTI. What?

Mr. HALLEY. The Unione Siciliano.

Mr. MORETTI. No, I am sorry; I never heard of that.

Mr. HALLEY. I had better spell it to make sure we are talking about the same thing, U-n-i-o-n-e S-i-c-i-l-i-a-n-o.

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I never heard of it.

Mr. HALLEY. Never heard of that either at any time in your life?

Mr. MORETTI. Never have.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the Tropics Inn in Mountain View, N. J.?

Mr. MORETTI. The what, sir?

Mr. HALLEY. The Tropics Inn in Mountain View, N. J.?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't believe I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever inside of it?

Mr. MORETTI. Tropics Inn in Mountain View, N. J.?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't believe I have, sir; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a place located at 1205 McBride Avenue, West Paterson, N. J.?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you are directed to answer it.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question on the ground it may incriminate me, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Under what law do you claim that it may incriminate you?

Mr. SELSER. On the advice of counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. To what law are you referring?

Mr. SELSER. I will not refer to the law, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You just claim in a vacuum?

Mr. SELSER. Yes. I claim there is a right to refuse to answer the question, and I am so advising my client.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the question is have you ever been at some place. I do not know what Federal law that may convict him of. Let the record show he has been directed to answer, and he refuses.

Mr. SELSER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a building in Lodi, N. J., in which there was a gambling establishment maintained?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question on advice from counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a place called the Carriage Factory in New Jersey?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer the question on grounds that it may incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. On advice of counsel I take the same position.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know a man named Alex Goldfein?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is whether you know Alex Goldfein or not.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I know Alex Goldfein.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business relationships with him?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not the fact—

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a minute, you are directed to answer that question.

Mr. MORETTI. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer that question in that it may incriminate me, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not the fact that Alex Goldfein was in charge of the help in the gambling rooms maintained by G & R Trading Co., the B & T Trading Co., the L & C Amusement Co., the Pal Trading Co., and the General Trading Co.?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question on advice of counsel, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer, sir.

Mr. MORETTI. On the ground it may incriminate me, I have to take the same position.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the record show that you have been directed and you refuse to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Emanuel Schaefer?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know whether I do or not, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you personally been active in a business in which a crap game was maintained or operated?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer, sir, on advice of counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer, and you refuse?

Mr. MORETTI. On the same ground, sir, I refuse.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Pete Licavoli?

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Pete Licavoli.

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't think I do. I don't remember that name; I don't think I do, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in Tucson, Ariz.?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never been there in your life?

Mr. MORETTI. I never have.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have never been in the State of Arizona?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. How large a company is this linen supply company you worked for, the U. S. Linen Supply?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry I cannot answer that because I left there some time ago and I don't know whether they have made some expansions or not; I can't answer that, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How many people work there, do you remember?

Mr. MORETTI. No. I was the outside man, I don't remember; but a number of employees were there.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you brother do there?

Mr. MORETTI. I was never inside the plant; I don't know. I was an outside man; I don't know what his authority or his duties were.

Senator WILEY. What did you do outside?

Mr. HALLEY. Senator Wiley asked you a question.

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I didn't hear.

Senator WILEY. What were your functions outside?

Mr. MORETTI. I was a salesman, sir.

Senator WILEY. What did you sell?

Mr. MORETTI. I tried to get customers to sell linens, sir.

Senator WILEY. Sell anything else?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Senator WILEY. That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you give up your connection with your company?

Mr. MORETTI. Why, I had just run out of friends, I suppose, and I could not get any more customers; and I wasn't giving them the service, so I figured it is best I would leave.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean it was an unsuccessful venture?

Mr. MORETTI. I mean, yes; so far as I was concerned; I mean I couldn't get any more customers for them.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you invest any money in this textile business you were telling the committee about sometime back?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I believe I have, yes; I have invested some money.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did you invest in it?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry; unfortunately in the moving all my records have been lost, and I can't remember correctly. I have invested some money, but I can't remember what I have invested, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, give us your best estimate, $5,000, $10,000.

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I can't remember, sir; I can't remember. I mean I wouldn't want to say one thing for another.

Mr. HALLEY. How long ago was this?

Mr. MORETTI. I imagine it was 2 or 3 years ago, right after the war.

Mr. HALLEY. When you gave it up did you get any money out of it or did you lose your whole investment?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I didn't lose the whole investment, that is the reason I don't remember.

Senator WILEY. When did you lose your records?

Mr. MORETTI. Just recently, sir.

Senator WILEY. How long ago?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, I would say in the last 5 or 6 months. I looked for them and couldn't find them.

Senator WILEY. What did they consist of, one book, two books, or what?

Mr. MORETTI. Two or three books, sir.

Senator WILEY. Did you keep them yourself?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Senator WILEY. And you have to have three books to keep your records?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I mean, there might have been some other records; that is the reason I say it was two or three books.

Senator WILEY. Have you any recollection as to your approximate worth, as indicated by those books?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I can't remember. The reason I can't remember, as I said previously, that——

Senator WILEY. Do you remember how much your income was during the last year?

Mr. MORETTI. Do I remember what the last income was?

Senator WILEY. Yes.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I do; I imagine so in round figures; I do.

Senator WILEY. How much?

Mr. MORETTI. Around $70,000; something like that.

Senator WILEY. $70,000?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right, sir.

Senator WILEY. How many years have you had an income of $70,000?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I don't remember because of the records being lost, sir.

Senator WILEY. Well, you must, with that income, have some idea as to at least the real estate that you own. You have testified here you own two houses, and you sold one. What other real estate have you got?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't have no other real estate.

Senator WILEY. What is that?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't have any other.

Senator WILEY. What did you do with your $70,000 per year?

Mr. MORETTI. $70,000—pardon? Will you repeat that, please?

Senator WILEY. What did you do with it, with the $70,000 that you earned per year for a while?

Mr. MORETTI. I spent it; I spent it, sir.

Senator WILEY. Put it into an investment, stocks, bonds?

Mr. MORETTI. No, no; I did not. I bought a horse, if that is what you mean; I remember that last venture.

Senator WILEY. How much did the horse cost you?

Mr. MORETTI. $40,000.

Senator WILEY. $40,000?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Senator WILEY. Have you still got it?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I sold it.

Senator WILEY. How much did you sell it for?

Mr. MORETTI. The same amount, sir.

Senator WILEY. You are sure that is all you got for it?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Senator WILEY. What other investment did you make? You did not buy a cow or a calf?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I did not. [Laughter.]

Senator WILEY. Well, the man who makes $70,000 a year ought to have something to show for it. Don't you want to tell us where the rest of the money has gone that you have spent?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I have a home, if that is what you mean, sir; I have a home.

Senator WILEY. How much did your home cost?

Mr. MORETTI. It cost me in the neighborhood of $50,000, $60,000.

Senator WILEY. How much did the one that you sold cost?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know. I sold it for $25,000, sir.

Senator WILEY. I do not think I have any more questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Where do you keep all this money, in a bank?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I keep it in a bank, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What bank do you keep it in?

Mr. MORETTI. I bank in the Woodridge National Bank.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that in a safety-deposit box or in a banking account?

Mr. MORETTI. No; in a bank account.

The CHAIRMAN. In your name?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that the only bank you have?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not keep any money in a box?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you make this money? Have you had in the last 3 years any legitimate sources of income?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry; I refuse to answer on advice of counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the grounds that it may incriminate me, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you state any legal source of any of the $70,000 you say you earned last year?

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I refuse to answer that question, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer the question.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that your actual income in 1949 was $84,000?

Mr. MORETTI. It might be. As I have said, I have lost my records and I can't answer anything truthfully. [Laughter.]

If you have the records there, you could show——

The CHAIRMAN. You mean you have difficulty in answering accurately?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I am sorry, I can't answer accurately, Senator, if I don't have the figures in front of me. You would not want me to say one thing for another. I mean I don't want to.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Moretti, how long had you had these records that you are talking about, keeping them for 25, 30 years?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, no; I don't imagine so.

The CHAIRMAN. How long had you been keeping them?

Mr. MORETTI. I imagine the last 3 or 4 years or so.

The CHAIRMAN. Where did you keep the records?

Mr. MORETTI. They were kept in a drawer in my bedroom.

The CHAIRMAN. And you made all your entries of transactions in those records?

Mr. MORETTI. What entries do you mean, sir?

The CHAIRMAN. I mean you put in there what you made, what you invested in, what your profit was, things of that sort?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, yes and no. I didn't keep—I am not a bookkeeper, sir, I mean, if that is what you mean; I am not a bookkeeper, sir.

Senator WILEY. Who kept the books?

Mr. MORETTI. I kept the books.

Senator WILEY. You mean you made the entries yourself?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Senator WILEY. You did not have anyone else make them?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Senator WILEY. And you had enough business in the last 3 or 4 years so that you—and made enough entries that you had to use three books?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I wouldn't say that. You asked me how many books it was; you didn't say it was for the business or whatever the question was; you asked me how many books there were, and I said there may have been two or three books.

Senator WILEY. Might have been.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Senator WILEY. Two or three?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right; two or three.

Senator WILEY. You are not sure. Was the book the size of this one? [indicating].

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; something like that.

Senator WILEY. How many pages in the book?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, it is not a very large book. It is not a very large book.

Senator WILEY. Well, the book I have in front of me must be 8 by 10, about that size [indicating].

Mr. MORETTI. It was about that size, sir.

Senator WILEY. And you put entries in every day?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, no; definitely not. As I say, I am not a book-keeper.

Senator WILEY. You are not a bookkeeper. What did you keep books for then? Why did you keep the books?

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon?

Senator WILEY. Why did you keep the books if you are not a book-keeper?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, to try and get some amount of moneys that I made, I suppose; I don't know why I kept books. [Laughter.]

I suppose that is the only reason, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Were these books used by you in figuring up your income-tax return to the Federal Government?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; more or less.

Senator TOBEY. In other words, who made out your income tax?

Mr. MORETTI. More or less for that reason, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Who made out your income-tax return? Who makes it out for you?

Mr. MORETTI. Who makes it out for me?

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. MORETTI. A fellow by the name of Greenberg.

Senator TOBEY. What is his first name?

Mr. MORETTI. Abe Greenberg.

Senator TOBEY. Where is he located?

Mr. MORETTI. In Passaic.

Senator TOBEY. In Passaic?

Mr. MORETTI. New Jersey; yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. And do I understand you to mean that you turned these books over to him and he therefrom got your figures for income-tax returns?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. And he returned the books to you?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. Any further questions?

Senator WILEY. Yes. I was just getting into this. Let us get it straight. These were books that you kept yourself; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right, sir.

Senator WILEY. Now, what was the nature of the entries in those books?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer the question.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question on advice of counsel that it may incriminate me, sir.

Senator WILEY. Do you remember how many entries you made in the books, say, in a month's time?

Mr. MORETTI. I suppose two or three, sir.

Senator WILEY. Two or three?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Senator WILEY. What was the reason for two or three books if you only made two or three entries a month?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I can't answer that, because the reason I can't answer that is because I don't have the books here with me.

Senator WILEY. Well, now, you are not as dumb as all that. Let us be frank. If you only made two or three entries a month——

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Senator WILEY (continuing). Why did you need two or three books to take care of your entries or transactions?

Mr. MORETTI. I guess I needed two or three books if I was there—that is about all; I can't answer any other intelligent way, sir.

Senator WILEY. You mean they were duplicates or triplicate entries?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, no; definitely not, sir.

Senator WILEY. Did the books constitute an inventory in any way of your assets?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I would not say that. I wouldn't say it was an inventory, sir.

Senator WILEY. They constituted entries of your business transactions?

Mr. MORETTI. I suppose you could call it that. I mean, just as I says, I would turn these books over to the accountant, and he would make my income tax out of it; that is all.

Senator WILEY. Let us get it straight. Did the books constitute entries of your business transactions?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that, sir; refuse on the ground that it may incriminate me, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer, sir.

Mr. MORETTI. On the same grounds, and on advice of counsel, I refuse to answer, sir.

Senator WILEY. Now, how many sources did you get your moneys from that were entered in the books?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that, sir, on advice of counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. You will be directed to answer it.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse on the same grounds, sir.

Senator WILEY. Did the notations or entries that you put in the books result from cash or result from checks or result from anything else?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question, sir, on the grounds that it may incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer it.

Senator WILEY. Can you give any justifiable reason, if you only made two or three entries a month, why you had to have three or two books?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, there might have been one book. Now that you are making it so obvious, I mean it might have been just one book; I don't remember. I just says two or three books, and I thought that is what it was, and it might still have been two or three books, sir.

Senator WILEY. How old are you?

Mr. MORETTI. I am 46 years of age, sir.

Senator WILEY. Born in America?

Mr. MORETTI. Born in America; yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. What education did you have?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I didn't have very much education, sir. I left school when I was 14 years old.

Senator WILEY. Left school?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. What did you do then?

Mr. MORETTI. I went to work, sir.

Senator WILEY. Where?

Mr. MORETTI. I worked in the Port Newark shipyards, sir.

Senator WILEY. Did you work for your Government?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I did, sir.

Senator WILEY. And you think that these business transactions and these entries that you have been in would injure you with your Government?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know, sir; I can't answer that question; I don't know.

Senator WILEY. You are married?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I am.

Senator WILEY. When you skipped from house to house and from house to New York did your wife go with you?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; my wife was with me.

Senator WILEY. She accompanied you all the time?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Senator WILEY. Did you take your books with you any place?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Senator WILEY. Did she have custody of those books?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; she did not.

Senator WILEY. Where did they disappear from; what house?

Mr. MORETTI. From the Hasbrouck Heights house, sir.

Senator WILEY. Which?

Mr. MORETTI. Hasbrouck Heights house.

Senator WILEY. Is that the one you sold?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Senator WILEY. You have no idea how they disappeared?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I am sorry I don't.

Senator WILEY. You did not think they were of any consequence to you to keep, so that you put them under lock and key anywhere?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, when you are moving and you are running from one house to another, there is a lot of things, I suppose, you forget to do.

Senator WILEY. Did these books reflect the $70,000-a-year income that you had?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I don't know whether they did.

Senator WILEY. What?

Mr. MORETTI. I says I don't know whether they did or did not, sir.

Senator WILEY. And you made the entries and you don't know whether it showed—I think the records show $84,000 now—that they reflect that income?

Mr. MORETTI. I supposed they did; yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. You suppose they did?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I suppose they did.

Senator WILEY. Did it reflect the sources of that income?

Mr. MORETTI. I suppose it did.

Senator WILEY. Did it reflect payments that you made from receipts that you got?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, what do you mean, sir?

Senator WILEY. Did it show receipts and disbursements or receipts and payments that you made?

Mr. MORETTI. I suppose it did.

Senator WILEY. You suppose they did?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. That was accounted for by about three entries a month?

Mr. MORETTI. I suppose so; yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. Well now, you do not think that is a very reasonable statement, do you?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I am sorry if it does not seem reasonable, sir.

Senator WILEY. That is your judgment?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. That is a fair exposition of the facts to this group here?

Mr. MORETTI. I am not trying to insult you people, don't misunderstand me. I am not trying to do anything like that, if that is what you are referring to, Senator.

Senator WILEY. Didn't you keep the books in a safe in your apartment?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Senator WILEY. What?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Senator WILEY. Did you have a safe there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I have a safe.

Senator WILEY. Who had the combination to the safe?

Mr. MORETTI. I have the combination.

Senator WILEY. Anyone else?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Senator WILEY. Well, didn't you consider these books of sufficient significance or importance so they should be kept in a safe?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, at the time I didn't think so, sir.

Senator WILEY. Well, didn't they reflect your business or your transactions?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, they did; yes, they did.

Senator WILEY. Yes.

Now, as a matter of fact, did they just conveniently get lost?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I wouldn't say that, sir.

Senator WILEY. Well, what would you say?

Mr. MORETTI. I have nothing to hide, sir. There is nothing for me to conceal. Why should I conceal anything from your people? [Laughter.]

Senator WILEY. Well, the books are concealed or lost anyway, are they not?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, the books are lost; yes.

Senator WILEY. Do you have any suspicion as to who would have an interest in taking those books?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't imagine anyone should have an interest in taking my books, sir.

Senator TOBEY. If you put an ad in the New York papers something like this, "Lost, strayed, or stolen, three books containing a record of my expenses and income for the last few years; finder will be suitably rewarded by returning same to Salvatore Moretti at the above address"; won't that be a good idea?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't know whether it would be or not. I don't know. It might be, I suppose.

Senator TOBEY. Did you report it to the police?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I did not.

Senator TOBEY. Wasn't it important enough?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I figured that it would show up sometime. I probably may have mislaid them; that is why I did not inform the police about them.

Senator WILEY. Had you ever lost your books before?

Mr. MORETTI. If I have lost my books before? I have, yes; I suppose I have.

Senator WILEY. You suppose you have? Don't you know whether you have or have not lost your books before this?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, the reason I say I suppose I have had is because I have a habit of mislaying things, sir.

Senator WILEY. Just when did you notice that the books were mislaid or lost or conveniently——

Mr. MORETTI. When I sold my home and I checked all my belongings, I found out at that time that the books were missing.

Senator WILEY. Was that about the time a subpoena was out for you?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't think so.

Senator WILEY. Well, let us fix the date. Now, if you can fix the month and the day or the week when you came to the conclusion the books were lost why, perhaps, we can arrive somewhere on that statement.

Now, what day did you say that you first discovered that the books were gone?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I would say about 3 months ago.

Senator WILEY. 3 months ago?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Senator WILEY. When was it that you moved from the one house to the second place?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I have moved from that one house to the other—you mean furniture or what, sir?

Senator WILEY. Back and forth you moved; did you not?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I moved back and forth, and that is the reason I am asking you what do you mean, sir.

Senator WILEY. Well, you can determine yourself—you did not sell that one house until about a month ago, according to your testimony?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Senator WILEY. And consequently I assume you moved the furniture about a month ago, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; it is not right, sir. That is the reason I asked the question again. It is not right, because I renovated the place before I sold the place.

Senator WILEY. When did you move your furniture?

Mr. MORETTI. About 3 months ago.

Senator WILEY. All right.

Then it was that you arrived at the conclusion that the books had been lost?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right; I could not find them.

Senator WILEY. Did you have anything to do with losing them?

Mr. MORETTI. Positively not, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any other questions?

Mr. HALLEY. You say you moved your furniture about 3 months ago?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. I had understood you to say that for about a year you were living at both houses.

Mr. MORETTI. That is right; about a year, I bought the place last year, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you buy it furnished?

Mr. MORETTI. There was some furniture there; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. So there was enough there so that you lived in it?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, yes; definitely.

Mr. HALLEY. During what period did you live in the new house, after you bought it?

Mr. MORETTI. I lived there last summer, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it a summer house, primarily?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. It is not a winter home; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. It is a winter home now, but when I bought it, sir, this was a summer home, and there was furniture there. I lived in there during the summertime.

Mr. HALLEY. You bought it for a summer home?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you decide to shift your permanent residence to your summer home?

Mr. MORETTI. When the family got to like the place, and they said it would be best for us to make that an all-year-around home, which was last year.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that about the same time this committee began to look for you to try to serve a subpoena?

Mr. MORETTI. That was about last year when this all happened.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you say you moved there in the fall.

Mr. MORETTI. We decided to move in there.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you did not move there until this fall.

Mr. MORETTI. That is right. I said when we decided to move there, to make this our all-year-around home, was last summer after the family enjoyed the place, and we says it was best to make it an all-year-around home, and that was last year.

Mr. HALLEY. And you still moved back to your Hasbrouck Heights house and lived there for a while, is that right, after the summer?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, a little while.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you do that?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, to get things straightened out; that is the reason I done that.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you live in Hasbrouck Heights after the summer?

Mr. MORETTI. After the summer? I don't think I lived there very long, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And it was during that period also that you lost your books, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. It was right after that, yes, right after that, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And of course it was during August that this committee first began investigating gambling in New Jersey, isn't that right?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know, sir; I can't answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in Duke's Tavern?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I have been in Duke's Tavern.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is it?

Mr. MORETTI. It is in Cliffside, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. A sort of general hang-out for gamblers in New Jersey, is it not?

Mr. MORETTI. I would not say that, sir; it is a restaurant.

Mr. HALLEY. Not generally open to the public though, is it?

Mr. MORETTI. It certainly is so far as I know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. It is one which was pretty hard to get in unless you were known, isn't that right?

Mr. MORETTI. I wouldn't say that. As I understand, doors are open, and I never had any difficulty getting in and out of the place, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you were known as a gambler in New Jersey, were you not?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Well, gamblers have to eat, do they not?

Mr. SELSER. Is that question seriously asked?

Senator TOBEY. Gamblers have to eat.

Mr. SELSER. Senator, I would not——

Senator TOBEY. That is universal.

Mr. SELSER (continuing). I would not have thought the question was seriously asked.

Senator TOBEY. Well, you can do your own interpreting.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet Frank Costello at Duke's Tavern?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't believe I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet Joe Adonis there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I believe I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet Longy Zwillman there?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't believe I have, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have been there with your brother, of course?

Mr. MORETTI. Not that I know of, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. At Duke's you have never been at Duke's with your brother?

Mr. MORETTI. Not that I know of, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean not that you know of? It is either yes or no.

Mr. MORETTI. I say I don't know. You say that he has; I said I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. I asked you if you had ever been at Duke's restaurant with your brother Willie.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I have been there.

Mr. HALLEY. With your brother, Willie?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I have been there.

Mr. HALLEY. That is what the question was.

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. That is what the question was.

Mr. MORETTI. I am sorry, I misunderstood you.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever at Duke's Tavern with Gerald Catena?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't believe I have ever been there with him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him there?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't believe I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Zwillman there?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I don't believe I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Costello there?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't believe I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Meyer Lansky there?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't believe I have either.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Jack Lansky?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I don't believe I have.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never seen any of them there?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have never eaten there with them?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever seen Erickson there?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I don't believe I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Frank Erickson?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't believe I have, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not believe you have.

Do you know the man who owns Duke's Tavern?

Mr. MORETTI. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know the owner of Duke's Tavern?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Lanio?

Mr. MORETTI. I think that is his name; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. I have known him some time, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever transact business in Duke's Tavern?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever give anybody any money in Duke's Tavern?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I never have.

Mr. HALLEY. Except to pay for a dinner?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever arrange to lend anybody any money in Duke's Tavern?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I never have.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you sure of that?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; I am.

Mr. HALLEY. Did anybody ever approach you in Duke's Tavern to ask you for a loan?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I don't believe they have.

Mr. HALLEY. No further questions.

Senator WILEY. I would like to ask two questions, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Senator.

Senator WILEY. Now, the undisputed testimony seems to be here that you have a very substantial income. You estimate it at $70,000; I think it is conceded that it was last year $84,000.

Did any of that income come from wages?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question.

Senator WILEY. Did any of it come from stocks and bonds?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question.

The CHAIRMAN. Just a minute. I want to direct the witness to answer the two previous questions.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer, on advice of counsel, sir.

Senator WILEY. Did any of it come from rents from real estate?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question.

The CHAIRMAN. You will be directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer on the grounds——

Senator WILEY. Is there any which comes from dividends?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer questions.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer.

Senator WILEY. Did any of it come from any legitimate source?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that question, sir, on advice of counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer, sir.

Senator WILEY. Have you ever made any political contribution, directly or indirectly, to any political candidate for Federal, State or local office, or any office holder, Federal, State or local level?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that on the grounds it may incriminate me, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You will be directed to answer, sir.

Mr. MORETTI. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer.

Senator WILEY. Now, you spoke about, and the evidence seems to be pretty definite, that from house to house you moved, and so forth. Did you intentionally evade the service of subpoenas for some time?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Senator WILEY. Did you ever make any contribution or gift to any officer in the police department of any city or any sheriff or any other law-enforcement official or district attorney?

Mr. MORETTI. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. MORETTI. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer.

Senator WILEY. Did you understand the question? I had asked you whether or not you had made any payment to any law-enforcement officers, policemen, sheriffs, or the district attorney, and now you say you refuse to answer that on the advice of counsel, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Sir, my counsel is here with me, and he is guiding me in these proceedings, and I have to be advised by him how I should answer, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you are directed to answer that question. It is very important to this inquiry.

Mr. MORETTI. Sir, my counsel advises me not to answer, and I have to abide by his decision not to answer the question.

Senator WILEY. I have no further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Michael Auriccio?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Investigator for the district attorney's office? Do you know the district attorney, Mr. Winne?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever made a political contribution?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that on advice of counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer the question.

Mr. MORETTI. On advice of counsel I have refused to answer it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make any political contributions in the year 1950, this year?

Mr. MORETTI. On advice from counsel I have to refuse to answer the question.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer that question.

Mr. MORETTI. On advice of counsel I have to refuse to answer—I have to refuse to answer, right.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Moretti, the three members of the committee have conferred, and it is our opinion that Mr. Moretti has refused to answer certain very pertinent questions in which he could not possibly have any real justification, so that we feel that we should advise you and your witness that we expect to recommend that he be cited for contempt.

Mr. SELSER. Are we detained, or is he detained?

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Moretti will be detained under subpoena, subject to further call. We can either call you or get in touch with you or with Mr. Moretti when we want you for further questioning—when we want him for further questioning.

Mr. SELSER. We should be very glad to come when the committee calls us.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be all now, Mr. Moretti.

Mr. MORETTI. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will have a 5-minute recess. We will resume in 5 minutes.

(Short recess.)

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

The chairman should have stated earlier that we are delighted to have Congressman Heller, of New York, sit with this committee, and we appreciate your interest in the work of this committee, Congressman.

Mr. Joseph Adonis, will you come around, please? Calling Mr. Adonis, please.

Mr. Adonis, are you represented by counsel, or are you here alone?

Mr. DOTO. I have counsel here in the case.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is your counsel?

Mr. DOTO. He is here some place.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Doto, do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. DOTO. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JOSEPH DOTO, ALSO KNOWN AS JOE ADONIS, FORT LEE, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Halley, will you proceed.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you state your full name?

Mr. DOTO. Joseph Doto.

Mr. HALLEY. And are you known by any other name?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is that?

Mr. DOTO. Joe Adonis.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first use the name Joe Adonis?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Many years, though; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the name you are generally known by?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And have you ever used any other names?

Mr. DOTO. Not that I recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever used the name Joe Aroso?

Mr. DOTO. Might have.

Mr. HALLEY. You did, in fact, use it, did you not?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Weren't you, in fact, arrested in Brooklyn under the name of James Aroso and also the name of Joseph Aroso in 1926?

Mr. DOTO. Possibly so.

Mr. HALLEY. In any event, you would not deny that you used that name, would you; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever used any other name?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, didn't you use the name Joseph De Mio?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, in 1931 weren't you convicted of a Prohibition Act violation?

Mr. DOTO. I believe I was.

Mr. HALLEY. And didn't you use in that case the name Joseph De Mio?

Mr. DOTO. Very possibly.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, don't you know?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall; I have used so many names in those minor conflicts.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean in your conflicts with the law you have been accustomed to using aliases?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Spell De Mio.

Mr. HALLEY. Joseph D-e M-i-o is the name that the record shows; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. If you say so.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you say that on many occasions in conflicts with the law you have used other aliases; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. On how many occasions were you convicted of a crime?

Mr. DOTO. On two occasions, sir, as I recall.

Mr. HALLEY. What were they?

Mr. DOTO. One for disorderly conduct.

Senator WILEY. One for what?

Mr. DOTO. Disorderly conduct, $25 fine.

Mr. HALLEY. And that was in Brooklyn?

Mr. DOTO. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. That was back in 1926; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. In around there, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. 1927 is the correct date.

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Then, you were convicted in 1931, were you not, for a prohibition violation, and fined $500?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now the record here shows one other conviction in 1931 for smuggling liquor. It probably was another count in the same offense, I am not sure. Do you think you can straighten that out for us?

Mr. DOTO. (Shaking his head negatively.)

Mr. HALLEY. Well, the record shows that in February of 1931 you were arrested, and then in March convicted for violation of the National Prohibition Act, and that in November of the same year you were convicted of a violation of the Tariff Act, and on the second occasion fined $100.

Mr. DOTO. I don't remember that one.

Mr. HALLEY. They could probably both grow out of the same offense.

Mr. DOTO. Maybe; it is possible.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in the bootlegging business before the repeal of prohibition?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer that question.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. On the ground that it may incriminate me, I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you understand that you are directed to answer the question?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you refuse the direction of the committee?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have been arrested on a great many occasions; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. The record here shows in 1926, as James Aroso for grand larceny. Would that be right?

Mr. DOTO. Dismissed; that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And then in the same year as James Aroso for robbery. It appears to be another offense; it is another officer, another police officer.

The CHAIRMAN. Answer up, Mr. Doto; we cannot hear you. That is correct?

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And both of them were discharged?

Mr. DOTO. Discharged.

Mr. HALLEY. Then, in the same year 1926 for grand larceny, that would appear to be the same offense, and discharged, as Joseph Aroso; then, in 1927 for disorderly-conduct offense, where you were fined $25 as Joseph Adonis; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And then in 1931 two Federal offenses under the name of Joseph De Mio; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. We have been over that.

In 1937 you were charged with assault and robbery; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And in 1940 with, what was that, kidnaping and extortion case; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And that was dismissed as against you?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Your codefendant, I think, was tried and acquitted; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was the codefendant?

Mr. HALLEY. I have it here somewhere. We have it, and we will get to it in some detail later.

Now, Mr. Doto, what is your business?

Mr. DOTO. None at the present.

Mr. HALLEY. None at the present time? What was your last business?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer, Mr. Doto.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your last legitimate business?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you not still connected with the Automotive Conveying Co. of New Jersey?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know what the Automotive Conveying Co. of New Jersey is?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. I refer to a company located at 280 Gorge Road, Cliffside Park, N. J., known as the Automotive Conveying Co. of New Jersey; have you ever heard of it?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer it.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Doto, the committee is trying to make an inquiry here, and we hate to start off your testimony with unbelievable lack of cooperation on your part. We all know that there is such a company. It is listed, a well-known company, and a big company. Your connection with it is quite well known, and you persist in refusing to even answer whether you have heard of it or not.

Mr. DOTO. For reasons better known to me, I refuse to answer that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you are directed to answer the last question.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer the question on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is not the business of that company the conveying of Ford automobiles from the Ford plant in Edgewater, N. J., to various places throughout the East?

Mr. DOTO. Are you finished?

Mr. HALLEY. That is the question.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. You decline to answer that?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you are directed to answer, if you know.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Could you explain to the committee how your connection with the Conveying Co. for the Ford Co. could incriminate you?

Mr. DOTO. Yes; if you want me to give you the reasons.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you, please?

Mr. DOTO. May I read them? I have several reasons.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. DOTO. I wish to state clearly why I feel that I should assert and rely upon my constitutional privileges to refuse to be a witness against myself.

I do this to explain the circumstances of my refusal to answer certain questions and to produce certain books and records.

At the present time criminal charges and investigations are proceeding against me in the State of New Jersey. Such charges have also been presented against me in the State of New York. The Federal Government is engaged in an extensive investigation of my tax returns, and of all income I have from any source.

It has been announced that my tax returns have been made available to this committee, and in turn this committee has, according to statements in the newspapers, published and disclosed numerous figures purporting to be my income. Statements have been repeatedly made by members and representatives of the Federal Government that I am a member of a Nation-wide crime syndicate.

A few months ago the Federal Government issued a statement that every United States attorney in the country had been alerted to compile information to be used against me. The newspapers have carried statements purporting to emanate from the committee that it is the purpose of the committee to get various people by bringing them before this committee and questioning them in such a way that they would either give evidence which could be used against them or subject themselves to prosecution for perjury or contempt.

Under these circumstances, I feel that my presence and testimony here are not sought for any assistance I can give this committee in formulating legislation, but for the purpose of obtaining from me some statements which might be used against me in further prosecution.

For these reasons I respectfully claim the right not to aid the Government directly or indirectly in prosecuting me. That is my reasons.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that prepared by your counsel?

Mr. DOTO. By both.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean, by both?

Mr. DOTO. My counselor and I went over this carefully.

Mr. HALLEY. Your counsel is Mr. Corbin?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is the statement that was prepared by him with your collaboration; is that correct?

Mr. DOTO. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the record show that Mr. Corbin is here present. If he wants to sit with his client, he has a perfect right to do. Where is Mr. Corbin practicing law, where is his office?

Mr. DOTO. 30 Broad Street, New York City.

The CHAIRMAN. 90 Broad Street?

Mr. DOTO. 30 Broad Street.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Twenty-odd years, maybe.

Mr. HALLEY. Twenty-odd years?

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you in any way related to him?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in a business with him?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that you were partners in the Piping Rock Casino at Saratoga Springs from 1941 to 1942?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it would or might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in Saratoga Springs?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been at the Piping Rock Casino?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see gambling in progress at the Piping Rock Casino?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see any people other than yourself gambling at Piping Rock Casino?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in Saratoga Springs in 1941 and 1942?

Mr. DOTO. I believe I was; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is the period during which you say you were in the Piping Rock Casino on some occasions?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. On how many occasions were you in the Piping Rock Casino?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you say on many occasions?

Mr. DOTO. Yes; I would say on many occasions.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know if the Arrowhead Inn is in Saratoga Springs?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business connection or affiliation with the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact—

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a minute. You are directed to answer that question.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer that question on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that you, during the years 1947 and 1948, were affiliated with the Arrowhead Inn in Saratoga Springs?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. You have been at the Arrowhead Inn; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know O. K. Coakley?

Mr. DOTO. The name doesn't mean nothing.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not know it?

Mr. DOTO. The name doesn't register. I might know the person.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know a man named Lefty Clark?

Mr. DOTO. I may have known him.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Lefty Clark?

Mr. DOTO. I would not know; I don't know him that well.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you have been in business with him, have you not?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer that question.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the question?

Mr. HALLEY. Whether he ever was in business with Lefty Clark.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Let us first identify who he really is.

Mr. HALLEY. Lefty Clark comes from Detroit; is that not right?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know where he comes from.

Mr. HALLEY. And you knew him in the Miami area?

Mr. DOTO. I have seen him around Miami; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. His name is William Bischoff, is it not?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know that name.

Mr. HALLEY. You know him as Lefty Clark. Have you ever seen him at the Colonial Inn in Miami?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Wiley, you have some questions at this point you wish to put?

Senator WILEY. Do you know James J. Carroll, of St. Louis?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Senator WILEY. Do you know William Molasky, or William Brown, of the Pioneers News Service of St. Louis?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Senator WILEY. You are acquainted with them?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Senator WILEY. Have you ever done any business with them?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Senator WILEY. What was your income last year?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You will be directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I will decline to answer on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Whatever that income was, did any of it come from bookmaking, slot machines?

Mr. DOTO. Is the question finished?

Senator WILEY. Yes.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Senator WILEY. Does any of it come from dope peddling?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Does any of it come from organized prostitution?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Does any of it come from the numbers racket?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Have you ever made a political contribution, directly or indirectly, to any political candidates for any Federal office or any office holder at Federal, State, or local level?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Doto, you are an intelligent man, apparently. The usual process is that a question is asked, and if the chairman, speaking for the committee, thinks it is a proper question, and you refuse to answer it, then the chairman asks you to answer it, and then you refuse to answer it at the direction of the chairman. I think we can understand, you can understand—your counsel is present in the room—that if a question is asked, and you refuse to answer it, unless the chairman asks that the question be withdrawn, why, you can consider that you have been directed and ordered to answer the question, and that you refuse to do so; is that satisfactory?

Mr. DOTO. I did not get you at that, Senator.

Senator WILEY. Would it not be better, Mr. Chairman, for his counsel to come to the table and advise him?

The CHAIRMAN. We do not want his counsel to come unless his counsel wants to. He was invited to come and sit with his client.

Mr. PAUL CORBIN. I have no objection to coming up, but I think he is well able to take care of himself.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we do not want to order the counsel as to what he may do, and this is apparently their arrangement. If counsel wants to sit in the back of the room and the witness here, that is all right with the committee. We have no authority to tell you what to do, sir.

Very well, let us proceed in the usual fashion.

Senator WILEY. All right, I was talking about—do you want to tell us whether in your income return you showed any legitimate income from stocks?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer that.

The CHAIRMAN. You are ordered to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Did you have any income from wages?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You are ordered to answer.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Or any income from bonds, rent, dividends?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Senator WILEY. You decline—

The CHAIRMAN. As this point, let me say, that when a Senator or counsel asks you a question, and you say you decline to answer, if the chairman thinks it is a proper question, you will be ordered to answer, and then you refuse, well, you understand, and is it agreeable with you, that when a question is asked you, and you refuse to answer, then you will consider that the chairman of the committee has ordered or directed you to answer, and then you still refuse to answer, without having to go through all of the ceremony all the time?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you understand that?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that agreeable with you?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. How old are you, Mr. Adonis?

Mr. DOTO. Forty-nine.

Senator WILEY. Are you married?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. Do you have a family?

Mr. DOTO. Four children.

Senator WILEY. What?

Mr. DOTO. Four children.

Senator WILEY. Four children. Where do you claim your home is?

Mr. DOTO. Palisades, N. J.

Senator WILEY. And were you born in this country?

Mr. DOTO. Passaic, N. J.

Senator WILEY. What education have you had?

Mr. DOTO. Grammar-school education.

Senator WILEY. Did you ever make a contribution or a gift to any officer of a police department up there or any place else?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Senator WILEY. What?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Did you ever make any gift or render any service or favor to any police or sheriff officer or law-enforcement official up there?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer for the same reason.

Senator WILEY. Did you ever make any such gift or payment or contribution to the district attorney of any county in that territory?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. This income that you returned to the Federal Government, did any of it come from extortion?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Do you keep books?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Senator WILEY. Have you got any books showing your income?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. If you have any books, where are they located?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You understand, Mr. Doto, that the chairman is ordering you to answer all of these questions?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Because I think they are proper questions.

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Senator WILEY. I think you said you knew Frank Costello; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. Right.

Senator WILEY. And you knew Frank Erickson?

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Senator WILEY. Have you been in business with either of them?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Do you know Longy Zwillman?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. Have you been in business with him?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Senator WILEY. Do you know Jimmy Lynch?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Senator WILEY. Have you been in business with him?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Do you mean by that that the business that you were engaged in would be illegal under Federal law?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Senator WILEY. You mean it would be illegal under State law?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Senator WILEY. Are your books still intact?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. Have you got custody of your books?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the same grounds.

Senator WILEY. Have you caused them to be lost or destroyed?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator WILEY. That is all so far as I am concerned.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey, do you have any questions?

Senator TOBEY. Not at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. Proceed, Mr. Halley.

Senator Wiley has just had to leave to go to the floor of the Senate, and the chairman, under authority of the resolution, designates Senator Tobey and the chairman as a committee of two to proceed with the examination, and with the chairman having the right to swear the witnesses and to take sworn testimony.

Proceed, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any connection with the Manhattan Cigarette Co.?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of the Manhattan Cigarette Co.?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Michael Lascare?

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you know Michael Lascare?

Mr. DOTO. Many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business relationships with Michael Lascare?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. You understand with respect to each of these questions, that by permitting them to stand on the record, the chairman is understood to be ordering you to answer?

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know George Uffner?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Phil Kastel?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you known them both for many years?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. During the years 1920 to 1930, did you know both Uffner and Kastel?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Costello during those years?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know whether it goes back that far.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, in and around 1930, did you know Frank Costello?

Mr. DOTO. Maybe.

Mr. HALLEY. And in and about that time you knew George Uffner?

Mr. DOTO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Phil Kastel that far back? I am referring now to 1930?

Mr. DOTO. I don't believe I did know him that far back.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Frank Erickson?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1930?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know him in 1932?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't recall whether I did in and around there.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in any business with Frank Erickson?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in any sweepstakes business with Frank Erickson?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in Chicago?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Louis Greenberg?

Mr. DOTO. The name doesn't register with me; I don't know whether I do or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Al Greenberg?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know whether I do or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of the Manhattan Brewery?

Mr. DOTO. It doesn't mean anything to me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been connected with any brewery?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mr. DOTO (shaking his head negatively).

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been connected with any labor union?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any financial dealings with any labor union?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been connected with any trade association?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any financial dealing with any trade association?

Mr. DOTO. Referring to what? Just explain what a trade association means.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I am referring to anything which is known or was known to you as a trade association, a group of people in a business, to form an association; they are generally known as trade associations.

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of the Illinois Trade Association?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with the Illinois Trade Association?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of the Kings County Buick Co.?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with them?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Ralph Conte?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business relationships with Ralph Conte?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that during the postwar years you and Ralph Conte made arrangements for a great many people to receive automobiles from the Kings County Buick Co.?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever recommend to the Kings County Buick Co. that any individual be given the opportunity to purchase a Buick automobile?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds—

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever recommend a customer to the Kings County Buick Co.?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Lucky Luciano?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Charlie "Lucky" Luciano?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Twenty-odd years, I would say.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last talk to him?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had a telephone conversation with Charlie "Lucky" Luciano within the last 2 years?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you talked to him within the last 2 years?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Charlie "Lucky" Luciano in Habana, Cuba?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him in Italy?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When you saw him in Habana, Cuba, what did you talk about?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any business dealings with Luciano?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Jack Lansky? You know him, of course?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir; many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Many years and Meyer Lansky?

Mr. DOTO. Many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been associated with them in businesses?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Willie Moretti?

Mr. DOTO. Many years.

Mr. HALLEY. And Salvatore Moretti?

Mr. DOTO. Many years.

Mr. HALLEY. James Rutkin?

Mr. DOTO. Many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Gerald Catena?

Mr. DOTO. Many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had business relationships with any of them?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Arthur Gruening?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had business relationships with him?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. You know Salvatore Moretti? He just testified, and you have known him for many years?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any business relationships with him?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Arthur Longano?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Ten years about.

Mr. HALLEY. Going back to Luciano, have you ever sent him any sums of money?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mr. DOTO. At no time.

Mr. HALLEY. Directly or indirectly?

Mr. DOTO. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any correspondence with him in the last 3 years?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you written to him?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he written to you?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you sent him messages directly or indirectly through other people?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he sent them to you?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, going on, do you know Abner Zwillman?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Twenty years or better.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he connected with this Manhattan Cigarette Co. now?

Mr. DOTO. I would not know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in any business venture with Abner Zwillman?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jack Dragna?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know as I do or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Bugsy Siegel?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you know him?

Mr. DOTO. Twenty years or so.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have any business relationship with him?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his business?

Mr. DOTO. How would I know?

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry; I did not hear you.

Mr. DOTO. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. He was a gambler, was he not?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mickey Cohen?

Mr. DOTO. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Mickey Cohen.

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Sica?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know whether I do or not. The name doesn't mean anything.

Mr. HALLEY. He lives in California.

Do you know Charley Atratta?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know whether I do or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Charles Fischetti?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Well, we came from Brooklyn together; 35, 40 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you grow up together?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. But you knew him 35 or 40 years ago?

Mr. DOTO. I knew him as a boy around there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know his brothers, too?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Rocco?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Little Augie Pisano?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Oh, a long time.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Virginia Hill?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the Mafia?

Mr. DOTO. I have heard of it.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry; I did not hear you.

Mr. DOTO. I have heard of it.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you tell the committee what it is?

Mr. DOTO. I would not have any idea.

Mr. HALLEY. In what connections have you heard of it?

Mr. DOTO. By reading it in the newspapers.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have any connection with the Mafia yourself?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know what it is.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you read in the newspapers that it is a secret organization?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And have you ever known any persons whom you believed to be members of such a secret organization?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you a member of any secret organization?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever a member of any secret organization?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you believe that such a thing as the Mafia exists?

Mr. DOTO. I am not a judge of that—I am no judge of that; I wouldn't—I don't qualify to answer that question.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, witnesses before this committee have testified, if you don't mind my making a statement——

Mr. DOTO. Go ahead.

Mr. HALLEY (continuing). By way of explanation that in their homes, in various neighborhoods where people of Sicilian descent live, they have heard people talk of the Mafia as an old Sicilian organization. Have you never heard of it?

Mr. DOTO. I am not a Sicilian, so it would not be spoken in my home.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you known people of Sicilian descent?

Mr. DOTO. I have known a lot of Sicilians.

Mr. HALLEY. And have you never heard of the Mafia?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir; outside of what I read in the newspapers in recent years.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it your opinion it is entirely fictitious?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not believe there is any such thing?

Mr. DOTO. I do not believe so; that is my humble opinion.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never heard of it from any person whom you have known, as a friend or an associate?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Would those same answers apply to the Unione Siciliano?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never heard of such an organization either?

Mr. DOTO. Just from reading of it.

Mr. HALLEY. Even as a fraternal organization?

Mr. DOTO. Well, at times it has been referred to as a fraternal organization.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, there is such an organization; is there not?

Mr. DOTO. From the newspapers; I am only quoting from the press.

Mr. HALLEY. Haven't you ever heard of such a fraternal organization in Brooklyn?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Unione Siciliano?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You never belonged to it?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever know anybody who did belong to the Unione Siciliano in Brooklyn?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joseph Profaci?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Many years.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you first meet him?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't recall it.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him? What do you mean by many years?

Mr. DOTO. Maybe 15, 20 years.

Mr. HALLEY. What has been the nature of your relationships?

Mr. DOTO. We have nothing in common; just a slight introduction, casual acquaintance.

Mr. HALLEY. How many times would you say you have seen him in the last 15 years?

Mr. DOTO. I couldn't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. More than once?

Mr. DOTO. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And did you see him at least once a year at least that long?

Mr. DOTO. Maybe that.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you see him more than once a year?

Mr. DOTO. I would not say so.

Mr. HALLEY. You would not say so?

Mr. DOTO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see him?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him in the year 1950?

Mr. DOTO. I believe I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Where?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Search your memory a little bit.

Mr. DOTO. Well, we have nothing in common with this gentleman you speak of, so I don't know where I met him, and how. We have nothing whatsoever in common.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you talk about when you see him?

Mr. DOTO. Greetings of the day.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been alone with him?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have been with other people?

Mr. DOTO. People around.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were some of the people?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall who they have been at present.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, the last once or twice you met him, who were some of the people?

Mr. DOTO. I can't recall them.

Mr. HALLEY. You cannot recall anybody who was with you?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you cannot recall anything that you ever said to him?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in his home?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he ever in your home?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet him in the home of Willie Moretti?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you at the wedding of Mr. Moretti's daughter?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You were?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Mr. Profaci there?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know; there was a lot of people there.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Frank Costello?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know; I believe he was; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Vito Genovese?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Fifteen or twenty years; fifteen or twenty years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any business relationships with him?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any business relationships with Profaci?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Max Stark?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Ten years or better.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had business relationships with him?

Mr. DOTO. I decline on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever give him any checks to cash?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Joe Massei?

Mr. DOTO. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Joe Massei?

Mr. DOTO. The name doesn't mean anything to me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know a man named Mazzeroni?

Mr. DOTO. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know a man by the name of Howard M. Stack?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, slightly.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is he?

Mr. DOTO. He is just a man as far as I am concerned.

Mr. HALLEY. Just a man? Well, what is the nature of your acquaintance with him?

Mr. DOTO. Just slightly.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you meet him?

Mr. DOTO. Mere introduction.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall at the present time.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you meet him?

Mr. DOTO. Several years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you meet him as far back as 1945?

Mr. DOTO. Maybe before then.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know him in 1946?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with him?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever owned any race horses?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever own any through any nominee or indirectly?

Mr. DOTO. What do you mean nominee?

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask anybody else to buy race horses for you?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask Howard M. Stack to purchase race horses for you?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't it a fact that Stack bought 13 race horses from Willie Moretti in 1946? Do you know that?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't he buy those horses for you?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Vincent Aiello?

Mr. DOTO. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Vincent Aiello.

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Twenty years or so.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his business?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know.

MR. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with him?

MR. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

MR. HALLEY. Now, do you know Paul Bonadio?

MR. DOTO. Yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. And is he not the vice president and treasurer of this Automotive Conveying Co. of New Jersey?

MR. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

MR. HALLEY. How long have you known Paul Bonadio?

MR. DOTO. Twenty-five or thirty years.

MR. HALLEY. Have you had any business dealings with him?

MR. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

MR. HALLEY. Do you know Charles Chirri?

MR. DOTO. Yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

MR. DOTO. Yes, sir—20 years or better.

MR. HALLEY. Has he ever worked for you?

MR. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

MR. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with him?

MR. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

MR. HALLEY. Is he not an officer of the Automotive Conveying Co. of New Jersey?

MR. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

MR. HALLEY. Have you not recently suggested to the Ford Motor Co. that you would be willing to sell your stock in the Automotive Conveying Co. of New Jersey?

MR. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

MR. HALLEY. At this point, Mr. Chairman, I desire to put into the record a letter from the Ford Motor Co. signed by John Bugas, vice president in charge of industrial relations.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be made a part of the record.

MR. HALLEY. Dated December 11, and addressed to you.

The CHAIRMAN. It will be so made a part of the record.

(The letter referred to is identified as exhibit No. 7, and reads as follows:)

FORD MOTOR CO.,

Dearborn, Mich., December 11, 1950.

HON. ESTES KEFAUVER,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR KEFAUVER: Referring to our conversation of Friday, I respectfully submit for the consideration of your committee the following information:

For some time it has been a matter of considerable concern to us that Joseph Doto, alias Joe Adonis, is one of the principal stockholders of Automotive Conveying Co. of New Jersey, Inc. This is the trucking company which transports built-up automobiles out of our Edgewater, N. J., plant.

Automotive Conveying Co. has hauled automobiles from Edgewater for at least 15 years. The Ford Motor Co. representatives responsible for the original arrangement are not now employed by our company. Automotive Conveying Co. is certificated as a common carrier by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and is the only motor carrier authorized to convey automobiles into the areas in which our Edgewater vehicles are delivered. It is not feasible to transport our cars by rail in these areas. Therefore, we have no alternative but to do business with Automotive Conveying Co.

We have been discussing with another carrier the possibility of its applying to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to convey automobiles in the Edgewater area. We would, of course, support such an application. Our counsel has discussed this proposal with legal representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission. We are informed, however, that it is not at all certain that the Commission could act favorably upon the application. Under the applicable statutes, rules, and regulations, the Commission must act on the basis of "fitness to provide service" and is not authorized to base its action on the character or reputation of a stockholder of a presently certificated carrier.

There is also the possibility that another carrier might be induced to purchase Automotive Conveying Co. This is under discussion. In this connection, it appears to have come to the attention of the stockholders of Automotive Conveying Co. that we were concerned about the situation. Recently, we were approached by one of the stockholders who stated, apparently with the authority of Mr. Doto, that Mr. Doto would be willing to sell his stock to the other stockholders, and asked whether this would be satisfactory to Ford Motor Co. For obvious reasons, we refused to commit ourselves on this proposal.

For your information, we have discussed this entire problem with officials of the State of New Jersey. We have assured them of our desire to terminate as soon as possible any connection between Ford Motor Co. and Mr. Adonis.

Very truly yours,

JOHN S. BUGAS,
Vice President, Industrial Relations.

Mr. HALLEY. I would like to read the following paragraph :

For some time it has been a matter of considerable concern to us that Joseph Doto, alias Joe Adonis, is one of the principal stockholders of Automotive Conveying Co. of New Jersey, Inc. This is the trucking company which transports built-up automobiles out of our Edgewater, N. J., plant.

Mr. Doto, how do you feel that your connection with the Automotive Conveying Co. can incriminate you?

Mr. DOTO. Well, I gave a reason before in such a statement and I don't care to elaborate on it. Any source of income might incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. That is a legitimate business, is it not?

Mr. DOTO. I believe it is.

Mr. HALLEY. And has it ever been charged that your connection with it is to use strong-arm methods in connection with the delivery of automobiles?

Mr. DOTO. I didn't answer the question; I declined to answer my connection with it.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not want to talk about it at all?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether or not any of the competing automobile trucking companies in New Jersey would care to bid against you for that business?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is Bonadio related to you?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Paul Bandoni—I am sorry, that is Bonadio.

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. He is not related to you?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. There is another letter here from the Ford Motor Co., dated October 20, 1950, addressed to the chief investigator, Mr. H. G. Robinson, which I would offer likewise.

The CHAIRMAN. It will be made a part of the record, following Mr. Doto's testimony.

Mr. HALLEY. And a letter from Automotive Conveying Co. of New Jersey, signed by Paul Banadio, vice president and treasurer.

The CHAIRMAN. It will be made a part of the record.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Harry Bennett of the Ford Motor Co.?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Never met him?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear—I believe you testified that you had heard of the Colonial Inn in Miami Beach; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. What is that?

Mr. HALLEY. Colonial Beach Inn in Miami Beach—that you have heard of it?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you state that you have been in those premises of the Colonial Inn?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And while there, did you ever see Jack Lansky?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. While there did you ever see George Sablo?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Meyer Lansky?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Frank Erickson?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Bert Riggs?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Claude Littoral?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Vincent Aiello?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Or S. L. Bratt, Sammy Bratt?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Richard Melvin?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that they were all partners in the Colonial Inn?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground——

Mr. HALLEY. Including yourself?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that you had a 15-percent interest in the Colonial Inn?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the Club Boheme?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or the Green Acres Club?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And did you ever see Lefty Clark whom we were talking about before there?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Lefty Clark at the Arrowhead Inn at Saratoga?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that you and Lefty Clark were partners in the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that you and Meyer Lansky were partners at the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you a partner at the Green Acres Club?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you a partner at the Club Boheme?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the New York crap game located at the Club Boheme?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't it a fact that was a big crap game that Lefty Clark ran?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. You originally lived in Brooklyn, is that right?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And when did you move to New Jersey?

Mr. DOTO. When? I believe it was 1944.

Mr. HALLEY. 1941?

Mr. DOTO. 1944.

Mr. HALLEY. 1944.

Up to that time you were continuously a resident of Brooklyn?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you known as the rackets boss of Brooklyn?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. You read about that in the papers, though, did you not?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it true?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been connected with any bookmaking activities in Brooklyn?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you earn your living, Mr. Adonis?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any legitimate business?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been engaged in a legitimate business?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer for the same reason.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in the narcotics business?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been connected with it?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever financed anybody who was in the narcotics business?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you move to Jersey?

Mr. DOTO. I like the climate there better. [Laughter.]

Mr. HALLEY. Was it cooler than Brooklyn?

Mr. DOTO. That was about 300 feet above sea level.

Mr. HALLEY. Not quite as hot as in Brooklyn, is that the point you are making?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Well a tree grows there. [Laughter.]

Mr. HALLEY. The authorities were making it rather uncomfortable for you to operate in Brooklyn, is that right?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. After living in Brooklyn though all your life up to 1944 you shifted your activities over to New Jersey.

Mr. DOTO. I moved to New Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you conduct any business in New Jersey?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have any business in Habana?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a gambling business at the Jockey Club in Habana?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. When you moved to New Jersey, you purchased a house?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you owned the house in Brooklyn?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You sold the Brooklyn house?

Mr. DOTO. Sold the Brooklyn house and bought the Jersey house.

Mr. HALLEY. Who handled the transaction in New Jersey, your lawyer?

Mr. DOTO. A fellow by the name of Morini.

Mr. HALLEY. He was the mayor of Cliffside, N. J.?

Mr. DOTO. I do not know who he was; he was just a lawyer recommended by the real-estate agent.

Mr. HALLEY. And turned out to be the mayor?

Mr. DOTO. Unfortunately it did.

Mr. HALLEY. Unfortunately? Why do you say "unfortunately"?

Mr. DOTO. Well, he is not the mayor any more. [Laughter.]

Mr. HALLEY. You mean he was at that time, is that right?

Mr. DOTO. I didn't know it at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did he continue being the mayor?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know; a few years later.

Mr. HALLEY. A few years.

Now, during those years you operated the various gambling establishments we have been talking about, is that not correct?

Mr. DOTO. What is that?

Mr. HALLEY. I say that was the same years during which you operated the various gambling establishments which we have been talking about, is it not?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Let us be specific. Did you ever hear of the G. & R. Trading Co.?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the L. & C. Amusement Co.?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the B. & T. Trading Co.?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the Pal Trading Co.?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the L. & L. Trading Co.?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Doto, when you decline to answer, we will assume that it is on the ground it might tend to incriminate you unless you specify some other ground.

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the Plantation Club in Hallandale, Fla.?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have an interest in that business?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in business there with Vincent Aiello, alias Jimmy Blue Eyes?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that during the years 1944 to 1950 you had interests in various gambling houses in the State of New Jersey and the State of New York and in the State of Florida?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any investments in Las Vegas, Nev.?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in Hot Springs?

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you last there?

Mr. DOTO. Last spring some time.

Mr. HALLEY. This year, you mean?

Mr. DOTO. This year, 1950.

Mr. HALLEY. And you go there pretty much every year?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you there last before that?

Mr. DOTO. Maybe 3, 4 years before that.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you go there for business purposes?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Purely for recreation, rest?

Mr. DOTO. Baths, health.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever attended a business meeting at Hot Springs?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You were not in Hot Springs in 1935?

Mr. DOTO. I would not recall that far back.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever there with Lucky Luciano?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't recall whether I was or not, or been there at the same time; I couldn't recall it.

Mr. HALLEY. Could you recall whether you ever attended a meeting in Hot Springs with Lucky Luciano in 1935?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir; not that I can recall; I never go to meetings of that nature.

Mr. HALLEY. You never go to meetings? Do you recall whether Lucky Luciano called a meeting in 1935 with gamblers from all over the country, and racketeers?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Weren't you there?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You are sure of that?

Mr. DOTO. Positive, now that I am thinking about it. I was not there in 1935.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you think of whether there was such a meeting at any time in 1935, perhaps about a year or so earlier or later?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You think there was no such meeting?

Mr. DOTO. That is my thought.

Mr. HALLEY. You are sure of that?

Mr. DOTO. That is my thought; it is my opinion. There might have been.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't it a fact that Luciano called a meeting that was held at Hot Springs, in which the point was made by Luciano that there was too much disorganization in the various rackets, and they had to be assigned to various people in order to avoid further confusion and warfare among the different gangs?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of such a meeting?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Nobody ever mentioned it to you?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you are quite sure you weren't there?

Mr. DOTO. Positive.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever attend such a meeting at any other place, other than Hot Springs?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or hear of such a meeting?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of a division of territories among the various racketeers and gangsters?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never heard that?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, how does it function, if you know; how do certain bookmakers function in certain areas without a molestation from other—

Mr. DOTO. I would not know, sir; I am not an authority on that.

Mr. HALLEY. You would not know that?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in the bookmaking business?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in the numbers or policy business?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. And you also decline to say whether you have been in a legitimate business; is that right?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. For the same reason?

Mr. DOTO. For the same reasons.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Artie Samish?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he in Hot Springs at the same time you were there this year?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. He occupied the room directly above yours; is that not right?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know; I never went to his room.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you saw him there, did you not?

Mr. DOTO. I saw him in Hot Springs.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any conferences with him?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you there?

Mr. DOTO. About 3 weeks.

Mr. HALLEY. And how long was he there?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know whether he came before or after I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have dinner with him while you were there, any meals?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You talked to him?

Mr. DOTO. Greetings of the day.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any conversations of any longer duration?

Mr. DOTO. Just general talk.

Mr. HALLEY. General talk? When did you first meet Samish?

Mr. DOTO. Four or five years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Under what circumstances?

Mr. DOTO. Strictly social, an introduction.

Mr. HALLEY. And no business relationships at all?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any interest in any liquor business?

Mr. DOTO. Interest in what?

Mr. HALLEY. In any liquor business?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jack Friedlander in Miami?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. DOTO. Not too long, 4 or 5 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had business dealings with him?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have occasion to telephone him while you were in Hot Springs?

Mr. DOTO. Telephone who?

Mr. HALLEY. Friedlander.

Mr. DOTO. Not that I recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was E. McGrath?

Mr. DOTO. He is a friend of mine.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he in Hot Springs with you?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he in any business with you?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. You had a suite together, isn't that right?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any idea what his business and Jack Friedlander's might have been?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Friedlander is a well-known gambler in Miami, is he not?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know whether he is or not.

Mr. HALLEY. You must have some idea of whether he is a gambler or not? Don't you have any idea at all?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Some time ago the chairman asked about the details of this indictment you had in 1932 with Sam Gasberg. Do you remember that?

Mr. DOTO. That wasn't 1932.

Mr. HALLEY. 1937, was it not?

Mr. DOTO. 1939, I believe.

Mr. HALLEY. We can check the record; 1940—you are right, 1939.

Mr. DOTO. 1939, 1940.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the circumstances of that, do you remember?

Mr. DOTO. I was indicted.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you were indicted for an alleged kidnaping and extortion of Isadore Luff.

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Luff?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Had he come to you to settle some dispute?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. And is it not the fact that Luff and a man named Isaac Wapinsky were severely beaten at that time?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know whether it was a fact or not.

Mr. HALLEY. It was so charged, was it not?

Mr. DOTO. It was so charged; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And that they were held in a house for about 3 days, is that right?

Mr. DOTO. That was the charge.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have anything to do with that?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me. The record will speak for itself if you have it before you. I was dismissed—the indictment was dismissed.

Mr. HALLEY. The indictment was dismissed.

Mr. DOTO. That is right, on the request of the prosecutor.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't it a fact that Luff and Wapinsky came to you in an effort to get a dispute settled at about that time?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall these things.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, they were having a dispute with Gasberg, were they not?

Mr. DOTO. Maybe they were; I didn't know anything about it.

Mr. HALLEY. And didn't they come to you to try to get the thing worked out?

Mr. DOTO. Not that I recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did any of them come to you for advice at that time.

Mr. DOTO. It's too far back; those things were immaterial.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, is it not a fact that Luff came to you and sought your help?

Mr. DOTO. Not that I can recall.

Mr. HALLEY. He claimed that Gasberg owed him some money in connection with something?

Mr. DOTO. I can't help what he claimed.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he not?

Mr. DOTO. You would have to ask him.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't he come to you and tell you that?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. He did not?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Weren't you sought to be the arbitrator of the dispute between Luff and Gasberg?

Mr. DOTO. Not that I recall. Any dispute, arbitration, I don't recall any such thing.

Mr. HALLEY. You had known both of them though?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you had been talking to them at about the time of the alleged kidnapping, is that right?

Mr. DOTO. When was that kidnapping that was supposed to have happened?

Mr. HALLEY. I think it was in 1939, was it not?

Mr. DOTO. No; way back before that.

Mr. HALLEY. The arrest was in 1939, but you were a fugitive for some time, were you not?

Mr. DOTO. I was not; never in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, they couldn't find you for some time, could they, for that?

Mr. DOTO. If your record speaks for itself—

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you can answer the question, either you were or you were not.

Mr. DOTO. I was never a fugitive, not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, weren't you out of the State of New York for some period before you were finally picked up on the kidnapping charge?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir. As soon as I heard about it I came in on it.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first hear about it?

Mr. DOTO. A few days before I walked into Mr. Amen's office.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you say that the same thing would apply here, that is, the first time when you heard that this committee's efforts were being expended to serve a subpoena on you, you came in?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. That is not so?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you trying to avoid service of this committee's subpoena?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you during the month of October 1950?

Mr. DOTO. I was around; home all the time.

Mr. HALLEY. Around where?

Mr. DOTO. At my home.

Senator TOBEY. Just a minute. You were speaking of this fall?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Well, your wife came before us in New York and testified to us under oath—

Mr. DOTO. My wife did not come before you, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. I beg your pardon; excuse me, please.

Mr. DOTO. That is all right, Senator.

Mr. HALLEY. We went so far as to subpoena your wife in an effort to get her to tell us where you were, and it turned out she was sick in a neighbor's apartment.

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. All that time, didn't you hear that this committee was trying to serve a subpoena on you?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Why didn't you appear?

Mr. DOTO. I didn't have the subpoena.

Mr. HALLEY. Before that service? You knew that we were sending investigators to your house practically daily to find you?

Mr. DOTO. Oh, no. Unfortunately, we were missing one another. I never ducked them.

Mr. HALLEY. That was not pure accident, though, was it?

Mr. DOTO. It might have been.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you were ducking, were you not?

Mr. DOTO. I was not.

Mr. HALLEY. You never ducked our subpoena server?

Mr. DOTO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not make yourself scarce?

Mr. DOTO. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't I have to negotiate for several weeks even after you were arrested in New Jersey for getting you to come in here and accept the subpoena?

Mr. DOTO. Well, your men couldn't even get me when I walked into the court in the State of New Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, they had their reasons for not doing it there. I spoke to your counsel.

Mr. DOTO. I didn't know their reasons.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't your counsel come to you and say that I was trying to serve a subpoena on you?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And he got word back to me that you did not wish to accept it?

Mr. DOTO. I did not have any desire to appear before this committee then or never.

Mr. HALLEY. Why didn't you desire to appear before this committee?

Mr. DOTO. Because I did not want to be a willing witness.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you are a citizen of the United States?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And this is a Senate committee conducting a lawful inquiry, is it not?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you considered it to be your duty to appear and answer lawful questions?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Why didn't you want to appear?

Mr. DOTO. Because I never got the subpoena.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, we passed that point; you were at the point where your lawyer, and I must say it was not Mr. Corbin—

Mr. DOTO. I told them there would be time enough to get the subpoena.

Mr. HALLEY. The gentleman who represented Mr. Moretti, is that right?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And he told you that we wanted to arrange to serve a subpoena on you?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you said you didn't care to accept service, "Let them catch me if they can," is that right?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you desire to try to avoid the service of this committee's subpoena when you knew it was attempting to serve it?

Mr. DOTO. For no particular reason. I knew that sooner or later I would be here.

Mr. HALLEY. But you preferred it to be very much later, is that it?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Why didn't you want to cooperate and come before this committee and tell them what you properly could?

Mr. DOTO. Well, I don't want to go into that. It was an attitude of your process servers that they went around and harassed me to no end.

Mr. HALLEY. How did they harass you?

Mr. DOTO. Well, they went to the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, they were trying to find you, weren't they?

Mr. DOTO. They couldn't find me through there; they went around making slurring remarks.

Mr. HALLEY. They did go to your home?

Mr. DOTO. Then they started to annoy my wife.

Mr. HALLEY. They went to your home, did they not?

Mr. DOTO. That is right. I didn't happen to be home at that moment; they didn't wait there for me.

Mr. HALLEY. And your wife could have told them when you could have been home, is that right?

Mr. DOTO. She doesn't know my business; she has been sick and has her own troubles with the four kids.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, apparently, the butcher and the baker and the candlestick maker told you that this committee's subpoena servers were looking for you?

Mr. DOTO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And, of course, you knew this harassment would stop once they served you, and you still refused to come in?

Mr. DOTO. The damage had already been done.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you afraid to answer the questions of this committee?

Mr. DOTO. No; I am not afraid of anything.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you afraid to tell this committee the facts with respect to gambling?

Mr. DOTO. I thought I made a statement before for the record that explained everything, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. We won't talk about your gambling now. Let us talk about gambling, in general, in New Jersey. What do you know, if anything, about gambling?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. What have you heard that you can tell this committee that would be of help in assisting this committee in its investigation?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether or not any person engaged in the gambling business operates across State lines and from one State to another?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know anything about the bookmaking business?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard whether or not Frank Erickson is a bookmaker?

Mr. DOTO. Well, I have heard lately; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You have heard?

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether Frank Erickson took lay-off bets?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know that.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether any people take lay-off bets?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know what a lay-off bet is?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know whether I do or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of a lay-off bet?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. I won't ask any more questions.

Senator TOBEY. I have only one comment to make. It is not a question, but it is very clearly evident to me that this gentleman's attorney, Mr. Corbin, who is sitting in the rear of the room, made the truest remark in this room today when he said that Mr. Adonis didn't need any help from him. [Laughter.]

Mr. CORBIN. I think he realizes that we still have a fifth amendment to our Constitution.

Senator TOBEY. Mr. Adonis, in September of 1937 you were arrested by Detectives Maguire and Casey of the safe and loft squad, and you handed over to Detective Maguire a paper containing a list of names and amounts, saying that you did not wish to be questioned about it, and you asked Detective Maguire to hold it for you, is that correct?

Mr. DOTO. I don't recall any such instance, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. Well, Maguire said that you said to Maguire that this would show how you operated. Maguire gave the list to Captain Fennelly, who had a photostat made, and the list was then given back to you. The list was apparently in your handwriting and reads as follows—it is a piece of book concerning one side the "ins," and the other side the "outs," and on the "in" side such items as $54,000 for B. R.; Sally $25,000; Frank C. $26,000; Doc $5,000; Spic. $7,500; Doc $1,500; Frank C. $20,432; Doc $9,000; Frank $10,000; Sart. $25,250; Sart. $22,232.

On the "out," Doc $5,000; legal $750; legal $500; Frankie Gar $1,000; judge $5,000; judge $15,000; up-State $250; Doc $25,000 Louis L. $200; Kenny $100; Doc $15,000; Doc $5,000; Spic. $10,000; up-State $250; judge $3,000; Ben $5,000; up-State $250; Guy $3,000;

Spiro $2,000; George H. $1,000; up-State $450; Ben $15,000; Capital $25,000; George H. $1,000; consular $17,500; Tee $7,500; up-State $225; legal $12,500; legal $3,000; John B. $8,300; Fourteenth Street $500.

Now, the "ins" total $206,283, and the "outs" total $188,425.

Would you be willing to tell the committee whatever that covers the "ins" and "out"—what is the time those items cover?

Mr. Doto. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator TOBEY. Would you care to explain and interpret those names for us as to who they represent?

Mr. Doto. I decline to answer.

Senator TOBEY. Do you recall that memorandum?

Mr. Doto. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Do you recall any of the connections with it?

Mr. Doto. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Do you recall any of those connotations of those names, as connoting something else? You do not recall your being arrested by these two detectives?

Mr. Doto. I recall being arrested.

Senator TOBEY. But you do not recall giving them this memorandum?

Mr. Doto. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Do you know Benny Railroad?

Mr. Doto. Who?

Senator TOBEY. Benny Railroad is his name. Do you know Salvatore Spitalo, now in Sing Sing, or was in Sing Sing?

Mr. Doto. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Is he still in Sing Sing?

Mr. Doto. I wouldn't know, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Well, the initials Sally, do they connote Salvatore Spitalo, in your judgment?

Mr. Doto. I wouldn't know.

Senator TOBEY. Would Frank C. mean Frank Costello?

Mr. Doto. I wouldn't know.

Senator TOBEY. Would "Legal" be Moe Polakoff?

Mr. Doto. I wouldn't know.

Senator TOBEY. Would "Ben" be Big Ben Siegel?

Mr. Doto. I wouldn't know.

Senator TOBEY. Would "Capital" mean Capital Distributors Corp.?

Mr. Doto. I wouldn't know.

Senator TOBEY. Would "Geo. H." mean George Howard?

Mr. Doto. I wouldn't know.

Senator TOBEY. One other question: Did "John B." mean John Brocco?

Mr. Doto. I wouldn't know, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Do those names mean anything to you, sir?

Mr. Doto. Some of them do, some of them don't.

Senator TOBEY. Now, did you go up to New Hampshire at one time, northern New Hampshire, to Dixville Notch and look over the hotel property known as the Balsams?

Mr. Doto. Yes, sir; I was up in the Balsams.

Senator TOBEY. Was Frank Guedera the owner then of that hotel?

Mr. Doto. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Is he still living?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know. I haven't seen him over the last few years.

Senator TOBEY. At that time did you look at it with the possible thought of buying it?

Mr. DOTO. There was some thought.

Senator TOBEY. To make it the center of gambling operations?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Did you tell Frank Guedara that this hotel was adequately suitable for gambling?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir; I don't recall such conversation.

Senator TOBEY. Were there a good many Tammany politicians from New York who frequented the Balsams in the fall of the year each year?

Mr. DOTO. I wouldn't know; I never was there in the fall.

Senator TOBEY. And you do not recall any when you were there—you do not recall any of those who were there when you were there?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. I see. That is all I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Charlie Binaggio?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Never met him?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You testified a few moments ago that you knew Mr. Art Samish of California. Where did you meet him in these instances that you mention?

Mr. DOTO. Somewheres in New York.

Senator TOBEY. In New York?

Mr. DOTO. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Did you ever meet him in California?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Do you know of his operations in California?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you in Hot Springs, Ark., in the last 6 or 8 months?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. This fall?

Mr. DOTO. This spring, this past spring.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you registered in your name? What name were you registered under?

Mr. DOTO. My name.

The CHAIRMAN. Joe Adonis or Joe Doto?

Mr. DOTO. Doto, I believe it was.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you there this fall?

Mr. DOTO. No; I was not there this fall.

The CHAIRMAN. Where do you stay in Florida when you go down?

Mr. DOTO. No place in particular.

The CHAIRMAN. I know, but what hotel do you stay at?

Mr. DOTO. Well, I stayed in a little place called the Hampshire House the last few years at Hallandale, Fla.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you stay at the Wofford any time?

Mr. DOTO. I have stayed there.

The CHAIRMAN. You know Abe Allenberg quite well?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Who do you know connected with the Ford Motor Co., or who used to be connected?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you mind listing a property that you own, real estate you own?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You have a chauffeur or a butler, do you not?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. How would that tend to incriminate you?

Mr. DOTO. Well, I don't have a butler; I don't have anybody.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you have something—you have somebody who drives you around?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Don't you have someone associated with you and who owns a building in Cliffside Park, where the Home Movie Exchange is located? Do you know where the Home Movie Exchange is?

Mr. DOTO. It doesn't mean a thing to me.

The CHAIRMAN. It doesn't mean anything to you at all?

Mr. DOTO (shaking his head in the negative).

The CHAIRMAN. You do not have any interest in it?

Mr. DOTO. Home Movie Exchange?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; the building where it is located.

Mr. DOTO. I don't have any interest in any building.

The CHAIRMAN. In any building?

Will you tell us your net worth as of today?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Neither you nor any member of your family are related to Frank Costello, I believe you said?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have any connection with Plastic Fashions at 651-A Palisades Avenue, Cliffside?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever had?

Mr. DOTO (shaking his head in the negative).

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know this Palisades Specialty Co.?

Mr. DOTO. Who?

The CHAIRMAN. Palisades Specialty Co.?

Mr. DOTO. I don't know of it.

The CHAIRMAN. 498 Anderson Avenue, Palisades, N. J.?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not know where it is?

Mr. DOTO. Well, I have an idea when you mention the address.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you or have you had any interest in it at all?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know anything about Cornell Distributors on State Highway No. 6, Ridgefield Park, N. J.?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a bank account?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is your bank account?

Mr. DOTO. Edgewater National Bank.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that the only one you have?

Mr. DOTO. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you keep money in a box or any amount of money?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You keep all your cash in your bank account?

Mr. DOTO. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that correct?

Mr. DOTO. Correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you own any real estate in New York State?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Or have any interest in any?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Either yourself or through a corporation?

Mr. DOTO. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you tell us how many corporations you own stock in or have an interest in?

Mr. DOTO. I decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not asking you which one; I am asking you how many.

Mr. DOTO. I still decline to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Adonis, you will remain subject to subpoena, so that you will be called when we contact your lawyer, Mr. Corbin, or you; and you are advised, by virtue of your refusal to answer questions, that Senator Tobey and I have decided that we will have no alternative but to recommend to the whole committee that you be cited for contempt of this committee. It is not what we want to do, but our opinion is that you refused to answer a good many questions that have no relevancy to the possibility of incriminating you, so that will be all for the time being, Mr. Adonis.

Mr. DOTO. Thank you.

(The letters previously referred to are identified as exhibit No. 8, and read as follows:)

FORD MOTOR CO.,

Dearborn, Mich., October 20, 1950.

MR. H. G. ROBINSON,

Chief Investigator, United States Senate Special Committee to Investigate Organized Crime in Interstate Commerce, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. ROBINSON: This is in reply to your letter dated September 20, 1950, regarding the E. & L. Transport Co.

E. & L. Transport Co., a Michigan corporation, and E. & L. Transport, Inc., of Indiana, an Indiana corporation, are common carriers. These companies convey automobiles, trucks, and tractors for Ford Motor Co. There is no contractual relationship between these companies and Ford Motor Co. except the ordinary bill of lading which is issued for each shipment. The president and managing head of both of these companies with whom our traffic representatives transact business is Lloyd Lawson. The annual report of E. & L. Transport, Inc., of Indiana, to the Interstate Commerce Commission for the year ended December 31, 1949, shows Lloyd Lawson, Anthony J. D'Anna, and George S. Dixon as directors. The annual report of E. & L. Transport Co. to the Interstate Commerce Commission for the year ended December 31, 1949, shows Lloyd Lawson, Anthony J. D'Anna and Effie M. Lawson as directors. Such reports show Lloyd Lawson as president and treasurer, and Anthony J. D'Anna as vice president and secretary of each company. These reports also show that 150 shares of E. & L. Transport, Inc., of Indiana, stock are outstanding—75 owned by Lloyd Lawson and 75 owned by Anthony J. D'Anna; and 1,500 shares of stock of E. & L. Transport Co. are outstanding—700 owned by Effie M. Lawson, 50 by Lloyd Lawson, and 750 by Anthony J. D'Anna. The names James Baraco and Sam Mocerri do not appear on either of these reports and our traffic representatives say that they have no knowledge of either of these persons being connected with the two corporations.

Automotive Conveying Co. of New Jersey, a New Jersey corporation, is a common carrier, and conveys automobiles for Ford Motor Co. We have no contractual relationship with this company other than the ordinary bill of lading issued on each shipment. Our traffic representatives advise that Joseph Doto does not deal with them as an active representative of this corporation. Joseph Doto does appear in the annual report to the Interstate Commerce Commission for the year ended December 31, 1949, as a director and vice president. This report shows 500 shares of stock outstanding, which is owned as follows: 60 by Paul Bonadio, 110 by Charles Chiri, 100 by Marie Chiri, 110 by Joseph Doto, 100 by Jean Doto, and 20 by Edward F. Farr. This report also shows that compensation of officers and directors during 1949 was as follows:

Paul Bonadio, $14,000 salary, $954 expenses.

Charles Chiri, $14,000 salary, $1,258 expenses.

Joseph Doto, $14,000 salary, $503 expenses.

Edward F. Farr, $7,500 salary, $713 expenses.

Superior Motor Sales, Inc., a Michigan corporation, is a Ford dealer at Wyandotte, Mich. Ford Motor Co. has the usual form of Ford sales agreement with this company. It was entered into January 29, 1941. It is our understanding that the majority of the stock of the corporation is held by William D'Anna, who is also the president of the corporation, and that the remainder of the stock is held by Charles Creed, who is also the vice president and treasurer of the corporation. It is believed that William D'Anna is the brother of Tony D'Anna and that Tony D'Anna owns and rents to the dealership the building in which it operates.

Very sincerely,

MEL B. LINDQUIST,
General Industrial Relations Manager.

AUTOMOTIVE CONVEYING CO. OF NEW JERSEY, INC.,
November 25, 1950.

Mr. R. E. BEISER,
General Manager, National Automobile Transporters Association, 2627 Cadillac Tower, Detroit, Mich.

DEAR DICK: The following information is furnished as per your request made during your recent visit to our office.

We have been automobile transporters since November 1932, and have delivered vehicles into the following States: Virginia, Washington, D. C., Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Vermont.

Upon enactment of the Motor Carrier Act in 1935 this company was granted certificate No. MC-31820 as a common carrier.

This company has delivered approximately 50,000 vehicles yearly with the exception of the war years 1942 to 1944. During this time our facilities were made available to the war effort.

This year we have delivered 83,545 vehicles during the first 10 months.

We have a personnel of about 110 and the total wages for the first 10 months amounted to $372,501.17.

Any additional information you may desire will be gladly furnished upon request.

Very truly yours,

AUTOMOTIVE CONVEYING CO. OF NEW JERSEY, INC.,
PAUL BONADIO, Vice President and Treasurer.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee has determined that, in view of other committee meetings and engagements of members of the committee, we will have to have the next session at 10 o'clock in the morning instead of this afternoon, so the committee will stand in recess until 10 o'clock, and all witnesses are ordered, who have not testified, to report at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Chairman, I am Jack L. Cohen. I represent a witness here who is here in answer to a subpoena, named James Rutkin.

Now, with reference to Mr. Rutkin, he has appeared here today against the advice of his physician, and I was hoping that we could dispose of his testimony today in view of the fact that he has postponed an operation for some time now. I do not know whether the committee feels it will be able to reach him tomorrow morning or not. If there is any chance that he cannot, I would like to see him be able to return and be excused so that he can have that medical attention and come before the committee at some time in the future.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Rutkin will be here in the morning?

Mr. COHEN. Well, his doctor advises him not to be here today either.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the nature of the illness?

Mr. COHEN. An ulcer operation.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your name, sir?

Mr. COHEN. The stenographer has it, Jack L. Cohen.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Cohen, you remember that the committee excused Mr. Rutkin once before.

Mr. COHEN. That is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And at that time you said that if the committee would excuse him he would assure that as soon as the trial he was then in was over he would appear, whether it was in Washington or Philadelphia, and that he would then testify.

Mr. COHEN. In response to your question, Mr. Rutkin is here today, Mr. Halley. We have complied with your request and with our representation at that time. I am merely pointing out, in view of his physical condition, if there is going to be any delay in taking his testimony, we ask that it be an extended one.

The CHAIRMAN. We will put him on as the first witness in the morning at 10 o'clock. Will that be satisfactory?

Mr. COHEN. I think it will.

The CHAIRMAN. If it is not, we will contact Mr. Halley this afternoon and we will see what can be done.

The committee will now stand in recess until 10 o'clock in the morning, unless otherwise called.

(Whereupon, at 1:15 p. m., the hearing was adjourned, to reconvene at 10 a. m. Wednesday, December 13, 1950.)

INVESTIGATION OF ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1950

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE,
Washington, D. C.

The committee met, pursuant to adjournment, at 10:10 a. m. in room 457, Senate Office Building, Senator Estes Kefauver (chairman) presiding.

Present: Senators Kefauver, Tobey, and Hunt.

Also present: Rudolph Halley, chief counsel for the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

Mr. Cohen? Where is Mr. Cohen?

Mr. JACK L. COHEN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You represent Mr. Rutkin, and you have given the committee the telegram of Mr. Rutkin saying that the doctor ordered him to go to bed when he got back last night, and he has not come back this morning?

Mr. COHEN. That is right, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the staff in New York has been directed to have a physician call on Mr. Rutkin today. That will be satisfactory with you?

Mr. COHEN. We have no objection, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. If these findings are not borne out, Mr. Cohen, we are going to take proceedings against Mr. Rutkin, and also Mr. Catena, who it is also ordered that he be examined.

He assured us he would be here this morning.

Mr. COHEN. Senator, I certainly do not think we ought to impute to him any intention not to be here or not to testify in view of the fact that the man was here yesterday in response to your telegram.

Senator TOBEY. Why did he go back to New York just this morning? It is a 4-hour trip back here. Why wouldn't he stay here?

Mr. COHEN. I beg your pardon, sir, it is a 1-hour trip by plane. He was not feeling very well, and he thought he would be able to get home and get medical aid, and it was our understanding that he would be on the early-morning plane, the same as yesterday morning, and I advised the committee yesterday he would be a very sick man. However, his attack may take 2 or 3 days or a week to get over, and whenever the committee is sitting again he will be here.

As a matter of fact, having had the advantage—

The CHAIRMAN. We asked you to let us know if the situation was such that he could not be back this morning. We called a meeting of the committee yesterday afternoon to decide if there was any doubt about it, and we did not hear anything which would indicate trouble from you.

Mr. COHEN. He was here when I spoke to the committee yesterday, and I did not anticipate there would be any difficulty about his appearance this morning. I do not think anybody can predict the course of an illness of that kind. It just took a turn for the worse.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. We are telling you that a physician will be out to see him.

Mr. COHEN. As a matter of fact, sir, I had a phone conversation with him this morning and, having had the advantage of the procedure yesterday, requested that Dr. Luria send the committee a telegram advising what his condition was and advising when he will be able to appear; and that is probably on its way to the committee now.

Is there anything else, sir?

The CHAIRMAN. No; nothing else.

Mr. William Moretti?

Mr. JOHN E. SELSER. I wonder, if the committee please, I might address myself to them for just a moment, not with regard to William Moretti, but with regard to my appearance before the committee yesterday. I believe the committee recalls that I did appear here yesterday as counsel—

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Mr. Selser; we recall.

Mr. SELSER. I wanted to set forth before this committee the bases of my appearance, and the advice that I gave to my client yesterday, and the advice that I shall give to my clients should they be called today, my other clients, presently under charges in New Jersey and New York; and I have prepared a statement which I should like to read to the committee so that there may be no uncertainty as to the remarks I make.

The CHAIRMAN. How long is your statement?

Mr. SELSER. Just about a moment, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right; very well.

Mr. SELSER. I would say 2 minutes at the outside.

At the time I first appeared before this committee, I stated that I would advise my clients that their constitutional right with regard to self-incrimination was being violated, and I intended to advise them not to answer questions accordingly.

I tried to make it clear that this conclusion was reached by reason of the fact, among other things, that the committee was acting as an arm of the State prosecutors of the various States in that all information secured by the committee was delivered into the possession of such prosecuting officers for use by them in the prosecution of my clients.

Mr. Stamler, the deputy attorney general of New Jersey, presently serving as the prosecutor of Bergen County, has made a public statement to the effect that he has arranged with this committee to be supplied a copy of the statement to be made by my clients at this hearing.

It is a fact now established that statements made by my clients are not being sought in good faith for the use of the Senate, but probably for the use of any person or persons who may choose to make use of them.

I so conclude because the committee has made every provision for the comfort of the press and the taking of photographs and the recording of the statements given, and in addition statements of each witness are exposed to any member of the public in or out of law-enforcement circles who may choose to attend the hearing.

I conclude that, since the witnesses are required by the committee to speak before such public, any statement made would be a waiver of their constitutional privilege, and I, of course, desire that such right with regard to self-incrimination may be preserved.

Should this committee set up a program for hearing the statements of my clients so that the record so taken will be limited to the exclusive use of the Senate, within the four walls of the resolution under which this committee was created, then, of course, I would advise my clients very differently with regard to their right to refuse to answer questions.

In short, my advice to my clients is not based upon any desire to keep facts away from the Senate within the four walls of the investigation authorized by the resolution creating the committee, but rather it is a desire to prevent the law-enforcement officers of the various States from doing, through this committee, what they would not under law be privileged to do for themselves as against the rights of my clients.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you finished reading your statement?

Mr. SELSER. Yes; I have finished reading it, and I wanted this to be a part of the record, that the basis—

The CHAIRMAN. It is made part of the record.

You have finished your statement; and, of course, you can reach any conclusion you want to. This is an open hearing; anybody has a right to hear the testimony. We made efforts to get your clients before executive sessions, and for one reason or another they did not appear.

I think, Mr. Selser, the committee is better able to determine what the purposes of the inquiry are and our mode of operation than you are, sir, but we are glad to have your statement.

Call Mr. Moretti, please.

Mr. Moretti, you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. MORETTI. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. We are going to offer Mr. Moretti's testimony, and we do not want any pictures made after his testimony starts.

TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM MORETTI, HASBROUCK HEIGHTS, N. J., ACCOMPANIED BY JOHN T. SULLIVAN, ATTORNEY, NEW YORK,
N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, Mr. Moretti?

Mr. MORETTI. William Moretti.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mr. MORETTI. 201 Bell Avenue, Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. May we have the appearance of counsel?

Mr. SULLIVAN. John T. Sullivan, 70 Pine Street, New York City.

Mr. HALLEY. You are representing Mr. Moretti?

Mr. SULLIVAN. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business, Mr. Moretti?

Mr. MORETTI. U. S. Linen Supply business.

Mr. HALLEY. And the address of that is what?

Mr. MORETTI. I have got it right here. It is a long block, so there are several addresses here; 113 to 137 North First Street, Paterson, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. How old are you, Mr. Moretti?

Mr. MORETTI. I was born June 4, 1894.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you born?

Mr. MORETTI. New York City.

Mr. HALLEY. Where have you resided since then?

Mr. MORETTI. What was the question again?

Mr. HALLEY. Where have you resided since 1894, in what States?

Mr. MORETTI. In New York City, 329 East One Hundred and Ninth Street, where I was born.

Mr. HALLEY. I do not need your precise addresses, but I want to know did you live in New York City continuously?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I lived in New York until around 1915.

Mr. HALLEY. Then where did you move?

Mr. MORETTI. Then I moved around.

Mr. HALLEY. To what States?

Mr. MORETTI. Philadelphia, Pa.; Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. Where else?

Mr. MORETTI. New York State.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever live in California?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or in Chicago?

Mr. MORETTI. Just went there for a vacation once when I was sick. I never lived in Chicago, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been convicted of a crime?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What was that and when?

Mr. MORETTI. In 1913, some barber said I tried to hit him and take money off him, so they charged me with robbery. It was no more robbery than sitting here.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that in New York?

Mr. MORETTI. New York City; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were convicted?

Mr. MORETTI. I was convicted, found guilty of assault in the second degree.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you sentenced to prison?

Mr. MORETTI. Judge Rosalsky sentenced me to Elmira Reformatory.

Mr. HALLEY. For how long?

Mr. MORETTI. For the maximum of 5 years, but I did it in 12 months and 21 days; I still hold my record there.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that because of time off for good behavior?

Mr. MORETTI. No; you could do your time in 12 months and 21 days even if your crime calls for 20 years, you can get out by that time.

Mr. HALLEY. How can you do that?

Mr. MORETTI. By being a good boy, good behavior.

Mr. HALLEY. Good behavior?

Mr. MORETTI. Right, never lost a month.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever convicted for any other offense?

Mr. MORETTI. In 1915 I was convicted for—there was a gun charge of a misdemeanor. I got a 2-year suspended sentence from Judge Rosalsky again, and he made a speech there and he said, "Being I sentenced you to Elmira Reformatory in 1913, and you obeyed my orders, I am going to give you a suspended sentence." He said, "Next time you hear shooting, turn the other way and don't take any guns out of people's pockets."

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Halley, may I interrupt, please?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Moretti has been suffering from a severe illness for many years. Now, however, he is desirous, for the benefit of his family and for the benefit of making—to controvert to some extent some of the statements which have appeared about him, he is anxious to explain what these two things you just referred to were. I do not think that he has given the full explanation. He feels that in neither one of these cases was he guilty of any crime.

Mr. HALLEY. I have gotten that impression and I believe the committee will be happy to hear his explanation.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, with respect to the gun charge——

Mr. SULLIVAN. Go ahead, tell him the story of the gun charge.

Mr. MORETTI. I was at the corner of One Hundred and Seventeenth Street, around 1 o'clock in the afternoon, so I heard some shooting at One Hundred and Sixteenth, so I didn't know where it was, so you know how kids are, they all run when they hear shooting, so I ran to the scene.

There was a fellow lying on the sidewalk; so there was a hospital across the way. I put him on my shoulders and brought him to the hospital. I knew the fellow slightly; so while they were taking the clothes off him a gun fell out of his pocket, so I took the gun and put it in my pocket. The doctors and everybody seen that, so I come out of the hospital to give it to the police department. I got caught coming out of the hospital with a gun in my pocket.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you convicted of that gun charge or of the shooting?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. The gun charge?

Mr. MORETTI. No; they never tried to connect me with the shooting, because the killer was electrocuted.

Mr. HALLEY. I see.

Mr. MORETTI. He was caught the same day.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know the killer?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I never seen him; I heard the shooting a block away.

Mr. HALLEY. But you had never seen the killer before?

Mr. MORETTI. No; it was an Italian boy who was in this country about 6 months. I don't think anybody knew him. That case made history after I found out who he was.

Mr. HALLEY. In fact, your position was that you were convicted simply on a technicality in having the gun?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right, and the doctors and the nurses all became my witnesses before Rosalsky.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I would like to point out, which is shown by the fact that a suspended sentence was given after he had a previous conviction, so actually the actual technicality of having a gun in his pocket after walking out is all it amounted to.

Mr. HALLEY. I must say, as a New Yorker, I never knew that Judge Rosalsky ever had a reputation for handing out suspended or easy sentences.

Were you ever convicted in 1934 for a similar case?

Mr. MORETTI. I was indicted for no reasons at all.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the facts?

Mr. MORETTI. There was an investigation in Passaic County—I think it was in 1933 or 1934. You have it in your records there. So there was some gambling there, and somebody appointed a deputy attorney general. The Democrats always fight the Republicans; the Republicans fight the Democrats. It has gone all over the country. So they appointed a deputy attorney general to get some corruption, so they appointed a fellow by the name of Carpenter, and he sent a lot of people to jail there. The last one to be indicted was me in a blanket indictment, for numbers. I had no more to do with numbers than you did.

So everybody was convicted; so they put 10 disorderly house charges against me. A disorderly house charge in Jersey; I didn't know what it was until I inquired about it. So I spoke to one of my lawyers, which is Mr. Selser, who is here, and he said that means where they pick up numbers in a store.

So, on my own I went to the prosecutor's office. I spoke to Carpenter and the other deputy attorney general. I said, "I have three daughters going to school," and I said, "People may misunderstand this disorderly house business; it may be ill-famed houses." I said, "I don't want to live up to that reputation." So they changed mine to conspiracy. I pleaded guilty to these, and they gave me a suspended sentence again. They found out through records themselves that I was innocent.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you plead guilty?

Mr. MORETTI. Just because I wanted to get it over with. Everybody else went to the can.

Mr. HALLEY. Were your associations in business at that time such that you were implicated even though you were in your opinion innocent?

Mr. MORETTI. No: I still frequent the race track quite often; I still do.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your business in 1934?

Mr. MORETTI. I had no business.

Mr. HALLEY. You were a gambler?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you convicted on any other occasions?

Mr. MORETTI. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. You were arrested once or twice, though, were you not, in addition to that?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember those occasions?

Mr. MORETTI. I think in 1917 they locked me up in Philadelphia. I didn't know for what. I only found out in 1939 before the grand jury in New York what the charge was, and I told them I didn't know anything about it.

Mr. HALLEY. You know the charge was highway robbery, was it not?

MR. MORETTI. I didn't know until then. In 1939 I found that out.

MR. HALLEY. The record says you failed to appear, Mr. Moretti.

MR. MORETTI. Not to my knowledge. The lawyer took care, by the name of Chippie Patterson. He charged me 35 and told me to go home. That is 1917. I don't think laws were so drastic in Philadelphia then.

MR. HALLEY. However, highway robbery was a crime.

MR. MORETTI. I didn't know that until 1939. I made that statement before the grand jury in New York.

MR. HALLEY. In any event, you never showed up, and your lawyer told you not to bother about it?

MR. MORETTI. What—yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. In any event your lawyer told you not to bother about it, and you went home.

MR. MORETTI. Yes; Chippie Patterson.

MR. HALLEY. Were you ever arrested on any other occasion?

MR. MORETTI. I think in New York City. A friend of mine got arrested for burglary, and I went to court to listen to his trial, and some woman in court—the judge told this woman, he says, "Have you seen anybody else? Look around and see any of his friends."

She picks me out of the courtroom, so I stood there. They brought me before the judge. "Guilty or not guilty?" "Not guilty." So they put me under bail.

MR. HALLEY. What year was this?

MR. MORETTI. I don't remember now whether it was 1914 or the early 1915; I don't recollect because when I come out of Elmira in 1914 I had to do a 6-month parole, which I got an absolute release after 6 months, so it must have been in the later part of 1914 or early 1915, I just don't remember.

MR. SULLIVAN. Mr. Halley, you will have to bear with his memory.

THE CHAIRMAN. His memory is very good, Mr. Sullivan.

MR. SULLIVAN. It is good with some things, but it will get confused.

MR. MORETTI. Well, that instance that you are innocent, you have got to remember regardless of how your memory is.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is easy to remember the truth.

MR. HALLEY. Mr. Moretti, what occurred, what was the disposition of that charge?

MR. MORETTI. Thrown out of court by Judge Cotillo. He was my lawyer at the time. He went up there and he said, "This man shouldn't even be indicted." The following day after I was picked up in the courtroom they gave me a hearing, and Cotillo represented my case, which he was a supreme court justice when he died, he was a supreme court justice—he was a very good friend of mine. So he got the minutes of the case and went downtown. I think—I forgot the prosecutor's name at that time—they dismissed the case.

MR. HALLEY. Do you remember any other arrests?

MR. MORETTI. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Well, wasn't there one in New Jersey where I think you were charged with murder, indicted?

MR. MORETTI. 1931.

MR. HALLEY. That is right. And that case was nolle prossed, is that right?

MR. MORETTI. Nolle prossed; that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember the circumstances there?

Mr. MORETTI. Somebody was killed by the name of Brady. He was a good friend of mine. Why they implicated me, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. They went so far as to indict you, did they not?

Mr. MORETTI. I was indicted. Joseph Bongiorno and Anthony Sabio was indicted.

Mr. HALLEY. They are good friends of yours, too?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you do not know why you were charged?

Mr. MORETTI. I come out on bail of $35,000. Bail is permissible in Jersey for murder.

Mr. HALLEY. You never did go to trial?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Mr. Moretti, I take it you lived in New York until after your conviction and your time in the Elmira Reformatory, and then you went to Philadelphia, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. After I got the suspended sentence I asked permission to go to Philadelphia.

Mr. HALLEY. Up to that time in New York you were a young man. Do you remember what you did for a living in those days?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes. I started at 25 cents a week for a milkman when I was 5 years old, and I worked until I was arrested for this case that I just told you about in 1913, and I happened to be a fighter, too, them days, and I had to fight for a living. I was a pinboy. I never stood out of work until 1913 when I got arrested of this charge this barber tried to accuse me, because I didn't go to this barber shop. That is the whole story there. Fighting one time, I knocked out a big colored fellow in Longacres downtown; they handed me a bag with a hundred pennies in it.

Mr. HALLEY. What weight did you fight at?

Mr. MORETTI. I fought over in New York.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your weight?

Mr. MORETTI. Paperweight, 97 pounds, and I quit at 121.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, then, you went to Philadelphia. What did you do there for a living?

Mr. MORETTI. I gambled.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make book?

Mr. MORETTI. Never booked in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of gambling?

Mr. MORETTI. Just shot craps, that's all. In that time in Philadelphia it was not what it is now. I think New York used to be the same way. All kids gambled to make a living.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you could not always win; did you book the game?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I just shot crap; I didn't go to a race track then; that is how I made a living.

Mr. HALLEY. And you had no legitimate business?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay in Philadelphia, Mr. Moretti?

Mr. MORETTI. Up until this Walker fight law; I thought I was arrested for the Walker fight law. I didn't know there was a charge of highway robbery. I think it was in 1917, wasn't it?

Mr. HALLEY. 1918.

Mr. MORETTI. 1918.

Mr. HALLEY. You gave the name John Moretti there at that time. Did you have any reason for doing that?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, Guarino, they couldn't make it, so I said "Make it John."

Mr. HALLEY. Your true name is Guarino?

Mr. MORETTI. Guarino was my baptismal name, so my school teacher, when I went to school, she changed it to William, not me; I didn't even know what William meant.

Mr. HALLEY. And then at Philadelphia you used John when you were arrested on that highway robbery charge.

Mr. MORETTI. I gave William, and if they put John, I couldn't help it. I couldn't identify that because I had to have a registration card; is that right?

Mr. HALLEY. I don't know.

Mr. MORETTI. Well, maybe I am a little older than you are.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have a registration card for the draft at that time?

Mr. MORETTI. You had to. I would have been drafted if Governor Whitman wouldn't have drafted a law that he didn't want any convicts in the Army with the clean-living people.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you register for the draft under the name of John or William?

Mr. MORETTI. Guarino. I have got to register under my baptismal name.

Mr. HALLEY. You also used the name of Moore; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that more recent?

Mr. MORETTI. That is more probably 25 years, maybe 30.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, you left Philadelphia after this charge in 1918?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you go then?

Mr. MORETTI. New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Back to New York?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay in New York after 1918?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember—between New York and Buffalo—and I went all over, Newburgh, traveled around, wherever there was a crap game, I was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Just gambling?

Mr. MORETTI. That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. And no other business?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first move to New Jersey?

Mr. MORETTI. I moved to New Jersey in 1928, I think; I was married in 1927.

Mr. HALLEY. You decided to settle down in New Jersey; is that it?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. In what town in New Jersey did you first live?

Mr. MORETTI. East Paterson.

Mr. HALLEY. East Paterson? At that time did you know Longy Zwillman?

Mr. MORETTI. At that time; no.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. I met him, oh, around the thirties.

Mr. HALLEY. The thirties?

Mr. MORETTI. Met him at a fight.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the liquor business?

Mr. MORETTI. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Never touched that at all?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do for a living after you got married and settled down in New Jersey in 1928?

Mr. MORETTI. Race track.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you gamble there or——

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you own horses at that time?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; never owned horses.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you never owned any horses?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never made book either, you said?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You just would bet your own money on horses?

Mr. MORETTI. That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you always win?

Mr. MORETTI. Most of the time. I got a system of my own.
[Laughter.]

Mr. HALLEY. And your system was your sole source of earning a living; is that right? Would you care to tell the committee what your system is, in general?

Mr. MORETTI. Just play for show; you have got three plays of winning.

Mr. HALLEY. You play for show?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, how do you know which horse to play for show?

Mr. MORETTI. I am a pretty good handicapper.

Mr. HALLEY. You study the racing forms regularly?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever operated any kind of a gambling game?

Mr. MORETTI. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never had any connection with any whatsoever?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. We notice that your brother has had various connections with these gambling houses in Lodi, and Paterson, and Palisades, and so forth, but that you do not appear to have any connection with them.

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any interest, direct or indirect, in those gambling games?

Mr. MORETTI. Only about Tony Guarino.

Mr. HALLEY. Only about Tony Guarino?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you explain what that is?

Mr. MORETTI. He had a crap game in Lodi, probably several places.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MORETTI. He ran gambling.

MR. HALLEY. Did you have any part of his——

MR. MORETTI. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. What was your interest in Tony Guarino?

MR. MORETTI. I stood up for him when he got married.

MR. HALLEY. He is a very close friend of yours, is that right?

MR. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. And did you help him get this crap game in any way?

MR. MORETTI. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. He got that crap game by himself, is that right?

MR. MORETTI. Yes, sir; yes.

MR. HALLEY. And he is now serving a prison sentence for running it?

MR. MORETTI. Right.

MR. HALLEY. How is it that he was the only one—you seem to be pretty well informed on affairs in New Jersey—how is it that he is the only one of six or seven people who ran that crap game who was indicted?

MR. MORETTI. I understand the case, that there was a case in New York City that involved Tony Guarino.

MR. HALLEY. Well, there was a case in New York City involving Max Stark, the man who cashed the checks.

MR. MORETTI. That is right, and some witness took the case against Tony Guarino, as I understand it.

MR. HALLEY. You remember the Max Stark case, as I understand it?

MR. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Do you know Stark?

MR. MORETTI. I know him not too well.

MR. HALLEY. And Stark went to jail for cashing the checks for this crap game?

MR. MORETTI. That is right. I don't know if it was a crap game or not.

MR. HALLEY. Then, Tony Guarino's name came up in that trial, is that right?

MR. MORETTI. I presume so.

MR. HALLEY. Didn't you know——

MR. MORETTI. That is how they got the lead, I think.

MR. HALLEY (continuing). Didn't you know that practically every one of those checks that Max Stark cashed had Jimmy Lynch's signature on the back of it?

MR. MORETTI. I do not know about it.

MR. HALLEY. Would you know if any real deal was made so that Guarino was the only one to go to jail, that he agreed to take the rap for the rest of the boys?

MR. MORETTI. No, sir; I don't think there was a deal made by anybody, and I am pretty well liked in Bergen County, and I should know. It was a legitimate arrest. The landlord squealed on Tony Guarino that he gave in the rent; when they looked up Tony Guarino at home, he went over there, and he got out on bail, and then he went over and confessed the whole deal.

MR. HALLEY. He went to jail, and nobody else got indicted, is that right?

MR. MORETTI. Well, you have got to ask the prosecutor, not me.

Mr. HALLEY. I thought you might know if there was some sort of a deal made.

Mr. MORETTI. No; I don't know of any deal.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Rutkin, Jimmy Rutkin?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. A long time.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, 20 or 30 years?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I wouldn't say that long.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, how long would you say?

Mr. MORETTI. Around 22 or 23 years.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you first meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. I met him at a fight also.

Mr. HALLEY. At a fight?

Mr. MORETTI. He is the one who introduced me to Abe Zwillman.

Mr. HALLEY. Who?

Mr. MORETTI. He is the one that introduced me to Abe Zwillman.

Mr. HALLEY. Zwillman?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And have you been seeing Rutkin recently?

Mr. MORETTI. I seen him here yesterday.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him before that recently?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, not since he had been on trial; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Charley Binaggio?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet with him in any way?

Mr. MORETTI. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever send any message to him about the Rutkin case?

Mr. MORETTI. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in the Essex House Hotel in Newark?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you there last?

Mr. MORETTI. I had my daughters' weddings there.

Mr. HALLEY. Your daughters' weddings?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; both of them.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been there since then?

Mr. MORETTI. Since then? No, not too often, once or twice.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you get there once in a while?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I know the owner very well.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you there this spring, do you know?

Mr. MORETTI. This spring? I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Around March?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Vito Genovese?

Mr. MORETTI. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. And of course you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. MORETTI. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever sit down with Rutkin and any of those gentlemen to talk about his case?

Mr. MORETTI. Whose case?

Mr. HALLEY. Rutkin's case.

Mr. MORETTI. I had no interest.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mr. MORETTI. No time.

Mr. HALLEY. You never made any efforts to try to settle the Rutkin case?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever talk to Rutkin about trying to settle the case?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. And you never talked with or sent any message to Charley Binaggio about an effort to settle the Rutkin case?

Mr. MORETTI. I never sent a message. I don't know him.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, in some way you might have found somebody who did know him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, let us see. You know Frank Costello, of course?

Mr. MORETTI. Very well.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know any of the people who gamble in Chicago like Tony Accardo? Do you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. Slightly.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Charley Fischetti?

Mr. MORETTI. I know him very well, about 20 years or so or more.

Mr. HALLEY. And Rocco Fischetti?

Mr. MORETTI. Rocco, just slightly.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you meet Charley Fischetti?

Mr. MORETTI. On racetracks, Florida.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet Tony Gizzo?

Mr. MORETTI. Don't know him from Adam.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Tony Gizzo?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Lanza?

Mr. MORETTI. Who is Lanza?

Mr. HALLEY. Jack Lanza. You do not know him at all?

Mr. MORETTI. Jack who?

Mr. HALLEY. L-a-n-z-a.

Mr. MORETTI. Jack Lanza? No. Where is he from?

Mr. HALLEY. He is from New York.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know Jack Lanza; do you mean Joe Lanza?

Mr. HALLEY. Joe Lanza.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. I know him very well.

Mr. HALLEY. How long do you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. A long time.

Mr. HALLEY. How long would you say?

Mr. MORETTI. Twenty years.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jack Dragna?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long do you know Jack Dragna?

Mr. MORETTI. Probably 30 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you first meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. In Harlem.

Mr. HALLEY. In Harlem?

Mr. MORETTI. When I lived in Harlem.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he in the gambling business, too?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know what he does.

Mr. HALLEY. When have you last seen him?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, probably 6 months ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you see him 6 months ago?

Mr. MORETTI. In New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you talk to him?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he talk to you about the wire service?

Mr. MORETTI. Don't have to talk to me about no wire service because I don't know anything about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did he mention it to you?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you see him in New York?

Mr. MORETTI. One of the restaurants; I just don't remember what restaurant. I go to several restaurants to eat.

Mr. HALLEY. At Bruno's.

Mr. MORETTI. Probably at the Villanova or one of those restaurants.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you meet him at Bruno's?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think I met him in Bruno's; I went there twice since it opened, two or three times.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you think you might have met him?

Mr. MORETTI. One of the restaurants in New York; I eat all over in New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else was there when you met him?

Mr. MORETTI. I met him alone.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he do? Did he call you up first?

Mr. MORETTI. I didn't know he was there; it was an accidental meeting.

Mr. HALLEY. You were there alone?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. He did not call you first?

Mr. MORETTI. I was there about 10 minutes, because I had an appointment.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Profaci?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. About 15, 20 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Vincent Mangano?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Mangano.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. About 25 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any business dealings with him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were either of them at your daughters' weddings at the Essex House?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Both of them?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Vito Genovese there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Frank Costello there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Joe Adonis ?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Mike Lascari there?

Mr. MORETTI. What?

Mr. HALLEY. Mike Lascari.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; his family—his daughter was one of my daughter's bridesmaids.

Mr. HALLEY. He was there, and she was one of your daughter's bridesmaids?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Longy Zwillman there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; with his wife.

Mr. HALLEY. Are Lascari and Zwillman partners in a tobacco or cigarette vending business?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know; I think they are in a cigarette business together. I am just presuming.

Mr. HALLEY. In this cigarette vending business, isn't that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In New York?

Mr. MORETTI. New York? I don't know anything about New York; I know about Jersey; I don't know anything about New York.

Mr. HALLEY. They are in the cigarette business in New York?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. I think they call it the Public Service Tobacco Co., is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right; I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever know Joseph DiGiovanni?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. DiGiovanni.

Mr. MORETTI. DiGiovanni?

Mr. HALLEY. He lives in Kansas City. He is in the liquor business there, the wholesale liquor business.

Mr. MORETTI. Giovanni?

Mr. HALLEY. DiGiovanni.

Mr. MORETTI. I think you have got the wrong name; you don't mean D'Agostino, he is dead.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. He lived in Kansas City.

Mr. MORETTI. Well, no, this fellow lived in Atlantic City, not Kansas City.

Mr. HALLEY. No, that is not the one I have in mind. I am thinking of a man who lives in Kansas City.

Mr. MORETTI. No; I have never been there.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never been there?

Mr. MORETTI. I have never been to Kansas City.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know anybody by the name of James Bales-trere in Kansas City?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Girolamo Adamo, they sometimes call him Mo Mo Adamo, who works with Jack Dragna?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think I do; probably may know him under a different name.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Sam Parrolla?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Frank Capolla?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Milano?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, 25 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, a long time ago, in New York.

Mr. HALLEY. In what connection?

Mr. MORETTI. No connection whatsoever, just a friendship.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you form it?

Mr. MORETTI. I form it; he comes in the same part of Italy my people come from.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, aren't these people we have been talking about, like Rocco Fischetti and Frank Milano and Joe Adonis and several of the others, what you would call rackets boys? I mean, aren't they fellows who were in the rackets?

Mr. MORETTI. Well I don't know if you would call it rackets.

Mr. HALLEY. How would you put it?

Mr. MORETTI. Jeez, everything is a racket today. [Laughter.]

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what do you mean by that?

Mr. MORETTI. Everybody has a racket of their own.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, some of them are lawful and some are not. Are these fellows in the gambling racket? Would you call it that way?

Mr. MORETTI. If you want to call it a racket, call the race track a racket, too; that is legitimate, isn't it?

Mr. HALLEY. Well we are talking about illegitimate rackets. Let us confine it to illegitimate rackets.

Mr. MORETTI. The stock market is a racket, too.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, it is legal, is it not?

Mr. MORETTI. Well why not make everything legal; let the Government control it.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, that is a proposal you might want to make, but at the moment, you do understand that running a crap game, for instance, is not legal.

Mr. MORETTI. In some parts it is legal; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Except in the State of Nevada.

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. And are the people we have been talking about people who have been known to be fellows who are in the various illegal rackets?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't answer that; I don't ask people's business.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know of any legitimate business any of these people were in, Mr. Moretti?

Mr. MORETTI. Frank Costello claims he is in—owns some buildings on Wall Street.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I had carefully refrained from mentioning his name at that point. Why do you bring him up? Is he in the same group?

Mr. MORETTI. You mentioned his name, too; that is the only one that I know has the building on Wall Street. I don't know what the other ones do.

Mr. HALLEY. I had not mentioned his name in that group, but you think of him automatically, I gather.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I know him so well.

Mr. HALLEY. When I talk about Adonis and these others; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You know Frank Costello pretty well?

Mr. MORETTI. Pretty well.

Mr. HALLEY. And his business is owning buildings, real estate?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, only when you used to battle with the slot machines in New York; everybody knows that.

Mr. HALLEY. He used to be in the slot-machine business?

Mr. MORETTI. You know that, too. You know that if you are from New York.

Mr. HALLEY. He is still in the gambling business in New Orleans?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know that.

Mr. HALLEY. He testified to that.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know that; I have not been in New Orleans in 15 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Phil Kastel?

Mr. MORETTI. I know him pretty well.

Mr. HALLEY. I think it is pretty well known that Phil Kastel and Frank Costello are in the gambling business in the Beverly Club.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know; I can't answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in Florida?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you stay when you go to Florida?

Mr. MORETTI. Different hotels, Versailles, Raleigh, stopped at the Wofford a couple of times.

Mr. HALLEY. In what years did you stop at the Wofford?

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, probably 1946 or 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean when Abe Allenberg was running it?

Mr. MORETTI. No; Abe Allenberg wasn't there, I don't think.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Abe Allenberg?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; slightly.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was owning it at that time, Little Augie Pisano?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know whether he ran it or not.

Mr. HALLEY. He was one of the owners?

Mr. MORETTI. He has been there quite often.

Mr. HALLEY. You know him pretty well?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Johnny King?

Mr. MORETTI. Very well.

Mr. HALLEY. Tell me, do you know Al Polizzi?

Mr. MORETTI. I know him well.

Mr. HALLEY. These people come from a great many different cities around the country; Frank Milano is from Cleveland, Polizzi is from Detroit, Big Boy, they are from Cleveland, and so on down the line. How do you get to meet all of these people from all over the country?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, you go to race tracks and you go to Florida, and you meet them; and a man that is well known meets everybody; you know that.

Mr. HALLEY. Are these people you are thinking of when you are talking about the mob?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, the newspapers calls them the mob. I don't know whether they are right or wrong. If they would be right, everybody would be in jail; is that right?

Mr. HALLEY. Is that what you mean when you say the mob, these fellows that you meet at the race tracks and gambling places?

Mr. MORETTI. People are mobs that makes 6 percent more on the dollar than anybody else does.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry; I just did not hear that.

Mr. MORETTI. They call anybody a mob who makes 6 percent more on money.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean these people are called a mob because they make more money?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right. What would you call them, anything else?

Mr. HALLEY. I do not know. What do you mean when you say they make more money?

Mr. MORETTI. They gamble, they go to the race tracks and go such places; the income tax shows what they file for.

Mr. HALLEY. I am interested in your views, Mr. Moretti, because I think if you spoke to most of the people in this room, you would find that, when they gamble or go to the race track, they expect to lose their money.

Mr. MORETTI. Well, they don't know how to gamble.

Mr. HALLEY. Well then, the men of the mob are the people who know how to gamble; is that what you say?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, what makes lawyers different than others? One is smarter than the other; is that right?

Mr. HALLEY. And you think these fellows are smarter than the other people?

Mr. MORETTI. They try, and they try everything; I don't know what they do.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course, they are outside the law in their activities. That may be one reason why they make more money; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Probably it is one of the reasons, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you considered one of the mob, I mean—you know what I mean?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know what you mean about a mob. I can't understand that mob business.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, for instance, take Duke's Restaurant.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. That is sort of a place where you can go and meet people of the kind we have been talking about, who you would be apt to know and recognize; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I would class Duke's Restaurant like Lindy's on Broadway; there is no difference.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what do you mean by that?

Mr. MORETTI. Because they get good meals there, and you hang around there like every place else does. I go there quite often; probably people come over and see me.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, who do you have in mind who would go there? Wouldn't they be people who expect to see you?

Mr. MORETTI. There is no sign there to put up, "No admittance"; it is an open place.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, where is Duke's located? Is it on a main street?

Mr. MORETTI. It is on Palisades Avenue, across the way from Palisades Park.

Mr. HALLEY. Do they have a big sign there saying "Duke's"?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And it has a big garage there nearby, does it not?

Mr. MORETTI. Not in that street.

Mr. HALLEY. Two doors away, where you can park your car?

Mr. MORETTI. Not in that street. They can park all over there. There is big parking facilities in the park.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you ever eat lunch there?

Mr. MORETTI. Quite often.

Mr. HALLEY. And when you go there for lunch, do you generally meet friends?

Mr. MORETTI. Whoever comes in and looking for somebody, I am there; I am there all the time.

Mr. HALLEY. And there would be a lot of these other people who are smarter than other people and make 6 percent more on their money who are generally there for their lunch; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. How can I answer that? I don't ask people their business.

Mr. HALLEY. Tell me some of the people you meet there for lunch at Duke's Restaurant.

Mr. MORETTI. A lot of people come in there.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you ever meet Jimmy—

Mr. MORETTI. To me they are all legitimate, from the way I look at it.

Mr. HALLEY. That is obvious. I am sure you would not do it if you did not feel that way. But let us see who they are. Do you ever meet Jimmy Rutkin there?

Mr. MORETTI. You mention some of the names there, and I will answer you.

Mr. HALLEY. I just mentioned a name—Jimmy Rutkin.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think he was ever there.

Mr. HALLEY. He was never there?

Mr. MORETTI. Never there.

Mr. HALLEY. Gerry Catena; you have seen him there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Guarino?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have seen him there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever seen Longy Zwillman there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever seen Joe Doto there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And have you seen Vito Genovese there?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, not too often. I think once in awhile.

Mr. HALLEY. Once in awhile?

Mr. MORETTI. After all, this fellow is only back from Italy, I think, in 1947 or 1946; been away from this country about 10 or 12 years.

Mr. HALLEY. He was there before the war, until about 1946 or 1947; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; he was away; was arrested, I think, for murder in Italy, and brought back to Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. You knew Lucky Luciano, I suppose?

Mr. MORETTI. Very well.

Mr. HALLEY. When you say "very well," what do you mean?

Mr. MORETTI. A good friend of mine.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have any business dealings with him?

Mr. MORETTI. No business whatsoever.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his business?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, here is a man you knew very well.

Mr. MORETTI. Well, he is a gambler at the race tracks like everybody else that I know.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you seen him in the last 5 years?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Where?

Mr. MORETTI. Cuba.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go down there to see him?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you go with?

Mr. MORETTI. Myself and two other fellows.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were they?

Mr. MORETTI. Vincent Mangano and Gerry Catena.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay there?

Mr. MORETTI. About 5 or 6 days.

Mr. HALLEY. When you went there, did you see any other people there besides Lucky Luciano?

Mr. MORETTI. No; just a couple of Cubans—couldn't even talk to them.

Mr. HALLEY. No other people from this country were there?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever send or give Lucky Luciano any money?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know if anyone did? Do you know anyone who did?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you go down there to see him?

Mr. MORETTI. Because he is a friend of mine.

Mr. HALLEY. Just friendly?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to go with Vincent Mangano?

Mr. MORETTI. He is a friend of his, too.

Mr. HALLEY. And you and Mangano are very good friends?

Mr. MORETTI. He has a couple of sons, lawyers, Mr. Mangano.

Mr. HALLEY. Where are these lawyers?

Mr. MORETTI. In Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. In Brooklyn?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What was Gerry Catena doing on the trip?

Mr. MORETTI. He knows Lucky well, too. We happened to be in Florida, and I took him along with me. I wanted to see Charlie Lucky, so they volunteered, just on a friendly basis.

Mr. HALLEY. And you never did know what Lucky did for a living?

Mr. MORETTI. At the race tracks, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I see; you think he just gambled?

Mr. MORETTI. Race tracks every day.

Mr. HALLEY. Any slot machines?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know of any slot machines.

Mr. HALLEY. Any numbers or policy?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I don't know about that.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were some of the other people who were at this Duke's? Did Arthur Longano ever go there, Frank Pfahler?

Mr. MORETTI. Now and then.

Mr. HALLEY. Pete Laplace?

Mr. MORETTI. Quite often.

Mr. HALLEY. How about the Golden boys, Ben Golden?

Mr. MORETTI. Now and then.

Mr. HALLEY. Mark Golden?

Mr. MORETTI. Now and then.

Mr. HALLEY. Joe Stacci?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Joe Stacci.

Mr. MORETTI. Who is Joe Stacci?

Mr. HALLEY. Don't you know Joe Stacci?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think so. Maybe I know him under a different name.

Mr. HALLEY. You may know him by the name of Rosen.

Mr. MORETTI. Doc Rosen?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. You know him. Did he ever go there?

Mr. MORETTI. Quite often.

Mr. HALLEY. Does Frank Costello go there?

Mr. MORETTI. Not too often.

Mr. HALLEY. But he is there once in a while; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, what do you people talk about at Duke's? Do you just pass the time of the day or is any business done?

Mr. MORETTI. Just pass the time of day; no business transactions.

Mr. HALLEY. None at all?

Mr. MORETTI. None.

Mr. HALLEY. How often in the course of a week do you go to Duke's ordinarily?

Mr. MORETTI. Three, four times a week probably.

Mr. HALLEY. Around lunch time?

Mr. MORETTI. Maybe earlier.

Mr. HALLEY. And you stay, generally, 2 or 3 hours?

Mr. MORETTI. Probably.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you make bets there?

Mr. MORETTI. If the race track is open there, I would leave there and go to the race track.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you have a bet there with the people there or do you sit around and——

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Just talk with these people?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Are there any other people in that connection with respect to the people we have just been talking about, who frequent Duke's?

Mr. MORETTI. I didn't hear that question.

Mr. HALLEY. Are there any other people that you would like to tell me about who you see at Duke's?

Mr. MORETTI. I think I told you enough. [Laughter.]

Mr. HALLEY. Who was Tony Strolla? Do you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. Tony Strolla?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. They sometimes call him Tony Bender.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I know him well.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. He lives in Cliffside.

Mr. HALLEY. He knew Charlie Binaggio very well?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't answer for him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever talk to him about Charlie Binaggio?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir. Only probably you read in the papers when something happens like that, an outstanding feature, everybody talks about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he go to Duke's, too?

Mr. MORETTI. Charlie Binaggio? I couldn't answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Not Charlie Binaggio; Strolla.

Mr. MORETTI. Tony Bender, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Nick Reginalli go to Duke's?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; not too often.

Mr. HALLEY. Reginalli, from Atlantic City?

Mr. MORETTI. I know him well.

Mr. HALLEY. Would he go to Duke's on occasion?

Mr. MORETTI. Occasionally, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You would see him there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; he is a friend of mine.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, how about Nig Rosen from Philadelphia?

Mr. MORETTI. He has been there quite often.

Mr. HALLEY. He has been to Duke's quite often, too?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And Pat Massey, from Camden?

Mr. MORETTI. Patsy?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. By the way, did you know the other Massey who was in Florida, Joe Massey?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I do.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. About 25 years.

Mr. HALLEY. He originally came from Detroit; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. Florida.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Al Anastasia?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. MORETTI. About 25 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any business dealings with him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his business?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't answer.

Mr. HALLEY. How about Frank Barrata?

Mr. MORETTI. What?

Mr. HALLEY. Frank Barrata, do you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. Frank who?

Mr. HALLEY. B-a-r-r-a-t-a.

Mr. MORETTI. Barrata? I don't get the name.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Paul the Barber; they call him Paul DeLucia, from Chicago?

Mr. MORETTI. Paul——

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. He is sometimes called Paul Ricca, too.

Mr. MORETTI. I think I met him.

Mr. HALLEY. The chairman says it is Paul the Waiter.

Mr. MORETTI. I think I met him once or twice.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. Probably in New York or at a race track. You meet a lot of people at the race track.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have never gone to Chicago, yourself?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; been there a couple of times.

Mr. HALLEY. You have? Did you know Al Capone?

Mr. MORETTI. I knew him very well.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet Al?

Mr. MORETTI. Around 1922 or 1923.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever stop at that hotel that he had his headquarters at?

Mr. MORETTI. Never been there.

Mr. HALLEY. The Lexington Hotel?

Mr. MORETTI. I have never been there.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get to meet Al?

Mr. MORETTI. At a race track.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you?

Mr. MORETTI. Listen, well-charactered people, you don't need introductions; you just meet automatically.

Mr. HALLEY. Let us get this again. Well-charactered people, you say——

Mr. MORETTI. Don't need introductions; they meet automatically.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, if you are a person prominent in the mob, you just meet automatically.

Mr. MORETTI. Don't have to be a mob.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I object. I do not think he said prominent in the mob. Mr. Moretti has tried to be very honest.

Mr. HALLEY. That was a statement, not a question.

Isn't that what it adds up to when you talk about people we have been talking about, you do automatically meet them?

Mr. MORETTI. Automatically, you meet, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And the group of people we have been talking about are in various businesses where they can make a little more money than the next fellow makes; isn't that correct?

Mr. MORETTI. They will have to answer that question for themselves; I only answer for myself.

Mr. HALLEY. I think you said where they can make 6 percent more than anybody else, isn't that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And the businesses generally have to do with gambling or some other type of illegitimate activity?

Mr. MORETTI. That is only my opinion.

Mr. HALLEY. That is good enough.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Halley, I do not think from the testimony of the witness that has been characterized as illegitimate. He has not said that any of these people have carried on illegitimate businesses. He has merely stated they go to the race track and gamble, and that they make their money in manners where they are able by their smartness to go out to the race track or some other form of gambling, and make money. He does not say that it is illegitimate.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you. I think the record will speak for itself. It is a public record, and we can both read it later and see what it says.

Do you know Tony Accardo? I think you mentioned you do.

Mr. MORETTI. I think I mentioned; I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever on his boat down in Florida? He has a yacht down there.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think I know he has got a yacht. If he has got another name, I maybe know him. Has he got another name?

Mr. HALLEY. Tony Accardo—Joe Batters.

Mr. MORETTI. I met him a few times; he has got a boat. George knows everybody.

Mr. HALLEY. He knows you pretty well.

Mr. MORETTI. A good friend of mine.

Mr. HALLEY. And from time to time you talked to George, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. I say "Hello" to him; that is all I can say to him.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, we are talking about George White, for the record; George White is a well-known member of the Narcotics Bureau staff, is he not?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And sometimes he needs information about these people who I have been calling the mob, isn't that right?

Mr. MORETTI. That is his business, not mine.

Mr. HALLEY. And he comes to various people in an effort to get it, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Sometimes; who wants to volunteer it? I know I never volunteered any to him yet.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sure of that; I believe he tried.

Mr. MORETTI. He tries hard, I will tell you that.

Mr. HALLEY. And you are one of the people with whom he tries, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. He has tried, but he was not so successful, because I don't know anything.

Mr. HALLEY. We will say for the record that he has done pretty well, in general.

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You do know Tony Accardo then, Joe Batters?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have seen him a few times?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. In Chicago, too?

Mr. MORETTI. No, never.

Mr. HALLEY. Just from Florida?

Mr. MORETTI. Florida.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in Florida last year?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Harry Russell?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Harry Russell.

Mr. MORETTI. I read about him in the paper; I met so many people, I don't know if I met him in New York.

Mr. HALLEY. He is the bookie in Chicago who went down and got into the S. & G. syndicate.

Mr. MORETTI. Only what I read in the newspapers.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met him?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you ever go to the dog track?

Mr. MORETTI. Now and then.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet Johnston, William Johnston, who runs it?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know John Patton?

Mr. MORETTI. I think I met him once or twice.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. At the dog track, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. He is one of the owners of the dog track?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to Patton?

Mr. MORETTI. I just told you before, a man with character means everything; everybody that is character, they meet one another, automatically they meet.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of character are you referring to?

Mr. MORETTI. They don't need introduction. A man that is well known, they don't need introduction.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of character, good or bad character?

Mr. MORETTI. A man that is well known. How do you get well known, when you get write-ups.

Mr. HALLEY. Just how do you mean? How does it work; can you sort of draw a picture?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't draw a picture there.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, suppose you went to the track and, for instance, let us take somebody from California that you say you have never met, Adamo, for instance, Mo Mo Adamo; suppose you went to the track and he happened to be there. How would you meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. Probably somebody pointing you out, saying, "That's Willie Moore," and he points you out.

Mr. HALLEY. You are pretty well known, so if you go to the track they would surround you?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right; they surround me like they surround Jimmy Durante; they surround me because I win all of the time.

Mr. HALLEY. They surround you because you win most of the time?

Mr. MORETTI. Most of the times I do.

Mr. HALLEY. And you know lots of people?

Mr. MORETTI. I know lots of people.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you got lots of influence in New Jersey? Are you known as a man with influence?

Mr. SULLIVAN. I really don't think he can answer that question, "Are you known as a man of influence in New Jersey," and I don't think he really understands it.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Sullivan, let us say political influence.

Mr. SULLIVAN. We understand that better than just influence.

Mr. MORETTI. Will you ask that question again, please?

Mr. HALLEY. Are you known as somebody with political influence in New Jersey?

Mr. MORETTI. Everybody thinks so, anyhow.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you think so?

Mr. MORETTI. I know a lot of people.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know many politicians?

Mr. MORETTI. A lot of them.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know people who are now in office?

Mr. MORETTI. A lot of them.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, who are some of your friends who are prominent?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't care to reveal their names right at present.

Mr. HALLEY. Let us try. Who are some that you know?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, one I know real well is Congressman Towe who was the deputy attorney general when I was nolle prossed in my murder case; I can't deny knowing him.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, who else do you know very well?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, a lot of other people; I don't care to mention any names.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever known any prosecutors, any district attorneys?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I know Johnny Bashone; he was my lawyer when I had my murder case in Bergen County.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else do you know?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't care to mention any names.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you belong to any political clubs?

Mr. MORETTI. I like to know who doesn't that is well known.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, do you belong to any?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't belong to any; I am a bipartisan.

Mr. HALLEY. You are bipartisan? [Laughter.]

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, you know politicians in both parties; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Both parties, right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you make that a part of your business to do that?

Mr. MORETTI. Part of my character, not business.

Mr. HALLEY. You just like to know politicians?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And it comes in handy to know them, too?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, I don't know; I can't answer that. It ain't so handy when there is a fellow I know real well, he is in the can doing 1 to 3 years on a gambling charge.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean Guarino?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not expect him not to go to the can?

Mr. MORETTI. If I knew somebody I would try to pull a wire.

Mr. HALLEY. How would you expect him not to go to the can after it came out in the New York case?

Mr. MORETTI. That is what I heard, he pleaded guilty.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you think if the case had not been brought up in New York he would never have gone to jail?

Mr. MORETTI. Who knows? He claims he has been running without protection here and there, and a man pays protection can't get arrested, I don't think.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever made any political contributions?

Mr. MORETTI. I refuse to answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, let us make sure we know what we are talking about.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think it has anything to do with this investigation.

Mr. HALLEY. The committee has to make that decision, Mr. Moretti, and I must say, I think you have been trying to answer the questions frankly and fully, and I would not like to see us get into a dispute at this point if we can help it.

Mr. MORETTI. I have been very good to you.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you have not been good to me; you have been good to yourself, just remember that. This is serious business, so let us try to go slowly and think about it.

(Witness confers with counsel.)

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Moretti, tell us how you operate politically.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't operate politically. If I was, I would be a Congressman here, maybe sitting where you are. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. If you are a good operator, you might some day.

Mr. MORETTI. If it was not for my first conviction I would be where you are now. That is how lucky I have been with my life.

The CHAIRMAN. If it had not been for your what?

Mr. MORETTI. My first conviction.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not think your subsequent convictions had anything to do with it?

Mr. SULLIVAN. Senator, he has not had subsequent; there are only two convictions there.

The CHAIRMAN. I beg your pardon.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Moretti really believes, Senator, that if he did not get this start in Harlem—if you know the story of his early life up there in that community, which I think Mr. Halley knows about—that community Mr. Halley knows about—I think Mr. Moretti might have gone far in that fashion.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that is right; I think it is correct that when a fellow gets started in the wrong way it is hard to get back to the track.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, he has gotten back to the right track, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. How difficult is it, Mr. Moretti, when you got a first conviction, and you got associated with the wrong sort of people, to get yourself loose—

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think I associated with the wrong kind of people, Senator; I know all kinds of people.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Halley has read a lot of people that we have heard a lot about. You do not think they were the wrong people?

Mr. MORETTI. In my estimation I think they were all good people.

The CHAIRMAN. Good people?

Mr. MORETTI. I think bad people should be behind bars. They are not behind bars yet.

The CHAIRMAN. I grant you a lot of them are still out, Mr. Moretti.

Now, the question was whether any substantial political contributions that you have made. That is a proper question.

Mr. MORETTI. I never made any.

The CHAIRMAN. Never made any?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever taken part in a political campaign for a political candidate?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, through friendly sources, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You have urged people to vote for one candidate or another?

Mr. MORETTI. People ask my opinion, "Who's the right candidate?" I give them my opinion. A lot of people respect my opinion.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever make small contributions to political campaigns?

Mr. MORETTI. I never made no contributions.

Mr. HALLEY. None at all?

Mr. MORETTI. Only my voice.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you refuse to answer it originally if the answer was that simple?

Mr. MORETTI. The what?

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you originally refuse to answer that question? You could have just said you did not do it.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I do not think he really understood you clearly.

Mr. MORETTI. I didn't understand you. I am hard of hearing a little bit.

Mr. HALLEY. I think you understood me, Mr. Moretti.

Mr. MORETTI. What question is that?

Mr. HALLEY. When I asked you if you had ever made any political contributions and you refused to answer. I really think you understood me.

Mr. MORETTI. I never made no political contributions.

Mr. HALLEY. The present question is, Why did you refuse to answer it originally if you never made any? That would have been a nice, simple answer.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think I refused. Maybe I didn't understand you.

Mr. HALLEY. I think you did.

Mr. MORETTI. Well I have to differ with you.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know a Mr. Van Riper?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Never met him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mr. Marsh?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever make any contributions to him?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Pete Licavoli?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Pete Licavoli.

Mr. MORETTI. The name don't hit me.

Mr. HALLEY. He comes from Detroit.

Mr. MORETTI. I probably do; probably I don't. I know a lot of people.

Mr. HALLEY. He has a ranch in Tucson.

Mr. MORETTI. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You know him?

Mr. MORETTI. I met him a few times; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You have been to his ranch?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; never been in Arizona; only once, in 1943. I was there when I got sick. I was there about 5 or 6 days in a hotel in Arizona. Then I went to California.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been to Hot Springs?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you there last?

Mr. MORETTI. Last time I think I was there in '43, the winter of '43.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you go with?

Mr. MORETTI. Arthur Longano.

Mr. HALLEY. Arthur Longano?

Mr. MORETTI. Arthur Longano. He is sitting right here.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay?

Mr. MORETTI. I think about 30 days.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the Mafia?

Mr. MORETTI. Whom?

Mr. HALLEY. Mafia?

Mr. MORETTI. Read about it.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean in the newspapers?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard about it?

Mr. MORETTI. Just in newspapers.

Mr. HALLEY. Never talked to anybody about it?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know anything about it yourself?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of the Unione Siciliano?

Mr. MORETTI. Just in newspapers.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no knowledge of it yourself?

Mr. MORETTI. The only knowledge I have is what I read in the newspapers, what papers read about it—what they write about it; I read it.

Mr. HALLEY. You are not a member of either the Mafia or the Unione Siciliano?

Mr. MORETTI. What do you mean by a member, carry a card with Mafia on it?

Mr. HALLEY. No. I am not being humorous now.

Mr. MORETTI. I mean to be a member you've got to carry a card. You got to be initiated.

Mr. HALLEY. It is a secret organization. You have read that, haven't you?

Mr. MORETTI. That's all; just in newspapers.

Mr. HALLEY. And I ask you if you belong to such a secret organization.

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And do you know anybody or have you ever known anybody who did?

Mr. MORETTI. How could I know if it don't exist?

Mr. HALLEY. You know nothing about it?

Mr. MORETTI. For my knowledge it don't exist.

Mr. HALLEY. That is your best knowledge?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir. I think I made a statement in 1946 when Williams gave me a bad write-up.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean Williams of the Narcotics Bureau?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir. George White knows him; took George White's place.

Mr. HALLEY. He is a very able man.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes. He gave me a write-up and I answered him right back. He never answered me.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he say about you?

Mr. MORETTI. He said about Mafia, about dope, and everything else.

Mr. HALLEY. Williams is the head of the Narcotics office in New York.

Mr. MORETTI. That is right, and I never met him.

Mr. HALLEY. And did he say you were a leader of the Mafia?

Mr. MORETTI. He put that in the newspapers, so I answered him right back. I don't think there was an organization like that, to my knowledge. I speak for myself, not for anybody else.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he also say that you were connected with dope running?

Mr. MORETTI. He tried to, but he didn't get too far. I'm still here.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never been accused of that?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I don't even know what it looks like.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have never had anything to do with the dope?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I think you said you never operated any kind of a gambling game; is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the Tropic Inn in Mountain View?

Mr. MORETTI. Tropic Inn?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, or the Tropical Inn in Mountain View, N. J.

Mr. MORETTI. It doesn't hit me. Tropic Inn?

Mr. HALLEY. Well you know where Mountain View is?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; a friend of mine has a place there, Jimmy Donohue in Mountain View. I go there quite often.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his place called?

Mr. MORETTI. A big, high-class restaurant, frankfurter, and everything.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the name of it?

Mr. MORETTI. I think they call it Donohue's.

Mr. HALLEY. Donohue's?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. I am talking about a place called the Tropical Inn.

Mr. MORETTI. I have no knowledge of that name at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Maybe you know it as the Tropics Inn?

Mr. MORETTI. It doesn't hit me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever run a gambling establishment there?

Mr. MORETTI. Me? Never.

Mr. HALLEY. You had nothing to do with one?

Mr. MORETTI. I never owned one. I told you I never ran one before.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have a piece of one?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any piece of the place at 1205 McBride Avenue, the West Paterson Lawn and Tennis Club?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You know the place, though?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. You were never in it?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a place at Lodi?

Mr. MORETTI. What?

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a place at Lodi?

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Halley, with respect to that question now, I want to point out to Senator Kefauver that the district attorney, or Mr. Stanler, who is the superseding district attorney in Bergen County, has served a subpoena on Mr. Moretti to appear before the grand jury.

It appears from everything that we can derive from talking to Mr. Selser—of course, I have nothing to do with that case in New Jersey; I am simply appearing in this matter here, but it appears—that they have this indictment where they said some gambling took place up there, and I think that Mr. Moretti should claim his constitutional privilege as to whether or not he has been in such places, because somebody might say, "You are there." and then adding something to another, why, you don't know what is going to happen to him.

Now at this time I would like also, Senator—I will take a minute; I haven't bored you with much interruption—to point out that I believe that your disposition of the objections concerning the right of a witness to refuse to testify and permitting him only to refuse, if a violation of a Federal statute might be involved, it certainly seems to me that every State has a constitution that guarantees people the very same thing that is contained in the Bill of Rights, and it doesn't seem to me proper that you can make a travesty of those constitutions and violate all the rights through the medium of a Senate committee, and indirectly compel a man to testify against himself.

For that reason I am very sincere in urging you, Senator, to have you reconsider that decision with respect to this question for Mr. Moretti, because I don't think it is a right decision.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Moretti has been fairly cooperative with us. We do not ask him any questions that are not proper questions. So far as the decisions are concerned, the present state of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, as we interpret the decisions, are that he only has a right to refuse to answer questions which might convict him of a Federal offense. If we extended that, then, of course, we would never get anywhere in our inquiry.

Then you might extend it to local ordinances or you might extend it so that there could be no question, hardly, that you could ask a witness. Anyway, that is the ruling of the committee. We have discussed the matter at considerable length.

Mr. SULLIVAN. We have a New York decision which holds, if the Senator please, that you may not be compelled to testify in New York about a Federal offense.

You won't be subjected to any prosecution in a New York matter, but the New York courts have held that you cannot be compelled to testify on a matter which might subject you to a Federal, possibility of a Federal prosecution.

Senator KEFAUVER. Some States have the rule and others—

Mr. SULLIVAN. If you could cloak him with immunity, as Mr. Selser has pointed out—

The CHAIRMAN. We will be glad to furnish you with a memorandum and brief which we have on it, which is pretty definite, I think, Mr. Sullivan.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to state that only last week the third circuit court of appeals in the case of Cappy Hoffman took the same position that this committee is taking, that a witness there, before a grand jury holding hearings in Philadelphia, must answer questions even though they might tend to incriminate him under State law.

May I also, Mr. Chairman, while the subject is before the committee, attempt to clarify the recent Blau decision of the Supreme Court, for the benefit of counsel, who I think may have it in mind.

The Blau decision dealt solely with incrimination under Federal law, and in the Blau decision the Supreme Court said very simply that a man does not have to go right up to the step before admitting guilt, that he need not give the step just before the admission of guilt from which guilt could be clearly inferred.

In other words, if a man is accused of being in a conspiracy to overthrow this Government, he does not have to admit he is a Communist when the mere fact of being a Communist is very strong evidence of being in such a conspiracy. That is what the Supreme Court said, as I read the decision, and I would like to point out that they very clearly distinguish a mere imaginary possibility or anything that does not take a man right up to the point of admitting guilt.

Of course, here there is no evidence that anybody has brought forth that Mr. William Moretti had anything to do personally with these gambling houses, and he has not offered any, so that at the present time—

Mr. SULLIVAN. He is subpoenaed.

Mr. HALLEY. He is a witness. His brother had a very prominent part in them. His close associates, Ricca, Catena, and Longano, with whom he has gone to Tucson, Hot Springs, and to Habana, are all involved in it, so that obviously he is an important witness.

Mr. SULLIVAN. But, Mr. Halley, there are many decisions which hold that the Government—you may not compel a witness to forge that last link in a chain. You are familiar with that.

Mr. HALLEY. Link in a chain against other people we are talking about now. There is nothing to show it is a link in a chain against him.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Sullivan, I do not think you contend seriously that even if Mr. Moretti said that he had been in some places, that he is being charged with operating these places. I mean, it is not unlawful for him to go to a restaurant.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Some of the prosecutions that you see sponsored today are really pretty far afield from anything I ever knew about prosecutions in years gone by.

Mr. HALLEY. The question is, Have you ever been in the gambling establishments at Lodi?

Mr. MORETTI. I think I have a right to—go ahead, you answer that. Even if I wasn't in there, somebody put me in there just to elaborate on it. There was a conviction in that Lodi place.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right.

Mr. MORETTI. Is that right? Even if I wasn't in there, people elaborated that I was. Is that right?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, were you there? The question is, Were you?

Mr. MORETTI. Because people like to see anybody with character around. I told you a friend of mine ran the place, and he is convicted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question was, have you been there, Mr. Moretti, and I will say to counsel we are not pursuing the matter, it is not our information that he was tied up with the operations. He will be asked no questions in that regard. The question is, have you been to Lodi, the gambling place in Bergen County.

Mr. MORETTI. I was there once, to talk to Tony Guarino, 7 o'clock at night.

Mr. HALLEY. Just once. Did you ever see James Longano?

Mr. MORETTI. Longano, I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Jerry Catena?

Mr. MORETTI. I did not. I was there the early part of the evening.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Joe Adonis there?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in a gambling establishment in West Paterson, at 1205 McBride Avenue?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember if I was. What year was that?

Mr. HALLEY. That was about 1944 or '45.

Mr. MORETTI. Who knows. People collaborate. I was in there, too, but I don't remember being in there.

Mr. HALLEY. That is your answer?

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. You answer that you remember it. Were you ever in a place called the Carriage Factory just off the George Washington Bridge?

Mr. MORETTI. Carriage Factory?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the All-American Studios, Palisades?

Mr. MORETTI. I have no knowledge of that; never heard of that.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you tell the committee how long you have been connected with the U. S. Linen Supply Co.?

Mr. MORETTI. Since 1936.

Mr. HALLEY. And how did you first make your connection with them?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, Johnny Welsh, Ben Golden, and Mark Golden, which they are my associates in this laundry business, I met them on that indictment of 1934, that blanket indictment. I didn't know them too well until then, and they got sentenced to 6 months.

I got a suspended sentence from Judge Delaney, tougher than Judge Rosalsky, and there's where I got the acquaintance.

When they come out after they did 6 months, we got together. They had a proposition of a linen business. Being I'm well known by everybody, they took me in with them. I think they invested the first time maybe 2 or 3 thousand dollars in 1936, and they made me president of the firm. We called it the U. S. Linen Supply business.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you had any previous experience in that or in any other business?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I had no experience at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you made president because you were a well-known character?

Mr. MORETTI. Just because a lot of people know me and I can get business, that's all.

Mr. HALLEY. Because you have a lot of friends?

Mr. MORETTI. That's right; they know I have and everybody else knows I have.

Mr. HALLEY. And did you get business for them?

Mr. MORETTI. Plenty of business; in a polite way, too.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean by that?

Mr. MORETTI. Because they tried to accuse me that I bulldozed people for the business. I made a statement, if they could prove it, I would dissolve the business immediately.

Mr. HALLEY. How large a company is that?

Mr. MORETTI. Very large company, from $200-a-day business I brought it up to $13,500-a-week business.

Mr. HALLEY. That is its present business?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And what percentage of the company do you own?

Mr. MORETTI. I used to have 20 percent. Now the business that gave me a lot of trouble, the Noxall that I took some business away from because I was——

The CHAIRMAN. I did not understand that, Mr. Moretti.

Mr. MORETTI. The Noxall Linen Supply Co. of Hackensack, a corporation, is a big firm of consolidated laundries. Their president gave me a lot of trouble. They had a big meeting once, and they accused me of taking their business away from them, and they're the ones made the complaint, and I was hit with it in 1939 before the grand jury, so when I was hit there was that question, so I made a statement then at that time that if they could prove of the accusations, I am willing to suffer the consequence and go out of business, so it hasn't been proven yet. I am still in business.

Mr. HALLEY. What is that, what year?

Mr. MORETTI. 1939.

Mr. HALLEY. And they claimed you were using strong-arm methods?

Mr. MORETTI. I used the arm and everything else with them.

Mr. HALLEY. They claimed you were using strong-arm?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What finally happened? Did you make peace with them?

Mr. MORETTI. I tell you what happened. There was a big investigation of the syndicate of the laundries.

Mr. HALLEY. Who made the investigation?

Mr. MORETTI. The Government.

Mr. HALLEY. The State government?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes. No, no; the United States Government.

Mr. HALLEY. The Federal grand jury?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And what happened?

Mr. MORETTI. I think they indicted 61 laundries outside of mine.

Mr. HALLEY. Yours was not indicted?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Noxall indicted?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; they were all indicted. Every one of them was indicted but me.

Mr. HALLEY. What were they indicted for?

Mr. MORETTI. Whatever they did I don't know. You will have to ask them. Big investigation. The Federal department come over and asked me a lot of questions; did they try to knock me out of business. Nobody tried to knock me out of business.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Probably a conspiracy to monopolize business, I think, Mr. Halley. I have never heard of it before, and that is what I think it would be, to clarify his testimony.

Mr. MORETTI. Something like that. It's on records anyhow.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever work for the Noxall Co. or have an interest in it?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir. The Noxall then—this fellow that made all the complaints, he was the president of the Noxall, probably president—he was the president of the association that made all the complaints. Fortunately God helped me and this fellow went horseback riding, fell off the horse, got kicked in the head by a horse and died, so his company became my partners after he died.

Mr. HALLEY. They joined your company?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; and they made me vice president.

Mr. HALLEY. You are now vice president of the Noxall Co.

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Senator TOBEY. How do you spell Noxall?

Mr. SULLIVAN. N-o-x-a-l-l, Senator.

Mr. MORETTI. Linen Supply Corp. They merged with me in 1945, July 1.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your total weekly business now, Mr. Moretti?

Mr. MORETTI. I get $240 a week.

Mr. HALLEY. That is your salary?

Mr. MORETTI. My salary; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. From the two companies?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. One is the U. S. Linen Supply Co. and the other you call U. S. Linen Laundry Service, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. And is the laundry service the combined company that Noxall joined?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; they are in my firm now.

Mr. HALLEY. Doesn't that business pay you any dividends?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, not under conditions now. I got very little dividend out of that, because we got a lot of linens and there's been a war on and we had to stock up with linens. We got a lot of stock.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you must have a large net worth in the company, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. You have been plowing the profits back into the business?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Any appreciation, Mr. Halley, in the real property is really tremendous.

Mr. MORETTI. I have a picture if you want to look at it.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MORETTI. I bought a whole block for $10,000 from Passaic County, the whole block. The building cost about four hundred thousand. I bought it for ten thousand.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you do that?

Mr. SULLIVAN. Hard times, I believe.

Mr. HALLEY. Let him answer.

Mr. SULLIVAN. When did you buy it?

Mr. MORETTI. Depression; just to pay the taxes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you buy it on a tax lien?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; bought it from the county for $10,000.

Mr. HALLEY. On a tax lien, in what year?

Mr. MORETTI. I think in either '40 or '41.

Mr. HALLEY. You say it was worth $400,000?

Mr. MORETTI. I think it's worth—it had a big silk mill there, block square.

Mr. HALLEY. That is in Paterson?

Mr. MORETTI. Paterson, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is still your headquarters?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the total net worth of your two companies, U. S. Linen Supply and U. S. Laundry Service?

Mr. MORETTI. It's worth—I was offered $850,000.

Mr. HALLEY. For your own interest or for the whole thing?

Mr. MORETTI. No; for the whole thing, the whole company.

Mr. HALLEY. And how much of the company do you own?

Mr. MORETTI. I own now probably—well, they become partners, we're seven-handed now, so figure it out.

Mr. HALLEY. You have one-seventh?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. And do all partners work for the company, too? Do all the partners work for the company?

Mr. MORETTI. Every one of them.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you still work for it actively?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; very actively.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you do?

Mr. MORETTI. I go to meetings there probably two, three times a month.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you do anything else?

Mr. MORETTI. When they get complaints and people leave us, somebody that I could talk to, I go and talk to him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did your brother work it for a while?

Mr. MORETTI. While I was sick.

Mr. HALLEY. He took over for you?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He is not in it now, though?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Halley, I think we should get it clear that this building here—

Mr. MORETTI. That is the building; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that the building you bought for $10,000?

Mr. MORETTI. $10,000; yes, sir.

Mr. SULLIVAN. On a tax lien.

The CHAIRMAN. That is 113-137 North First Street.

Senator TOBEY. Under the New Jersey tax laws, if you buy that building on tax lien, how long a period after you purchase can the owner who has owned it replevin it by paying back taxes?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know. I tell you we paid $10,000 for it. I know they lost the building, the people that had it. It belonged to the county. We bought it off the county.

Senator TOBEY. They do not have a period under the law there where they can buy it back?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think so, because I still have it.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I think they have a drastic law there, Senator, that they sell it out very quickly. We are getting one like that in New York, too, where you don't have those periods.

The CHAIRMAN. They had an auction, and you went to the auction and bought it?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember whether it was the auction or not. Bob Neilley was sort of a politician.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is that?

Mr. MORETTI. Bob Neilley.

The CHAIRMAN. What does he do?

Mr. MORETTI. He used to be a Democrat leader in Passaic County, and he is a water commissioner.

The CHAIRMAN. He is the assistant vice president of the Noxall Linen Supply Co.?

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. And he arranged it so you could buy it?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. How much do you expect he could have gotten more than $10,000 for that business?

Mr. MORETTI. Well, at that time you could have bought it for a nickel.

The CHAIRMAN. 1941?

Mr. MORETTI. I think it was 1940 or 1941.

The CHAIRMAN. How long is this building, how many feet? It is a whole square block, but how big a block is that?

Mr. MORETTI. You can look at it there.

Mr. SULLIVAN. What is the size?

The CHAIRMAN. It appears to be several hundred feet long.

Mr. MORETTI. Several hundred; it's more than that.

The CHAIRMAN. Seven hundred what?

Mr. MORETTI. It's more than that.

The CHAIRMAN. I did not understand.

Mr. MORETTI. It must be around probably 300 feet long, I don't know. That's a whole block square.

The CHAIRMAN. I know, but I am trying to find out how big a block it is, three or four hundred feet one way, and how long the other way?

Mr. MORETTI. Maybe 150, 175 feet, maybe more than that. I have two boilers in there that probably cost the people $100,000, one with coal and one with oil.

Mr. SULLIVAN. The silk industry moved out of Paterson, Senator, in those times, with these new inventions of textiles; and Paterson was a ghost town, as I remember it at that time.

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any objection to making this an exhibit?

Mr. SULLIVAN. I don't know what he has got written on that page, Senator. I was just showing it to you. I would like to look at it.

The CHAIRMAN. He has the names of the officers of the various companies on here.

Mr. SULLIVAN. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. If he wants to cut the other off, it is all right.

Mr. SULLIVAN. All right, Senator.

Mr. MORETTI. I just wrote that just to memorize some items that I don't make an error.

The CHAIRMAN. Look at it and see if there is an error on here.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was the partner that arranged the purchase?

Mr. MORETTI. Bob Neilley.

Mr. HALLEY. Bob Neilley. He was formerly the sheriff of Passaic County, was he not?

Mr. MORETTI. Sheriff? Gee, I don't know. He's been on the water commission appointed by the Democrats and Republicans.

Mr. HALLEY. How many of your present partners were indicted with you in 1934?

Mr. MORETTI. Three.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the two Golden brothers?

Mr. MORETTI. They weren't my partners then.

Mr. HALLEY. But they are now?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You say they were never in the numbers racket?

Mr. MORETTI. What?

Mr. HALLEY. You say they were never in the numbers racket?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know that. They pleaded guilty. They must have been.

Mr. HALLEY. You pleaded guilty.

Mr. MORETTI. I pleaded guilty with an understanding.

Mr. HALLEY. They did not plead with any understanding?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. So you think they must have been in the numbers racket?

Mr. MORETTI. They pleaded guilty. I don't know if they were in, but they pleaded guilty.

Mr. HALLEY. Are they in the numbers racket today?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. You are not sure one way or the other?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I am not interested.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is Johnny Welsh?

Mr. MORETTI. My vice president.

Mr. HALLEY. In your company?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he in the numbers racket?

Mr. MORETTI. What did you say?

Mr. HALLEY. Is he in the numbers racket?

Mr. MORETTI. That is the one that pleaded guilty to the numbers.

Mr. HALLEY. With the Golden brothers?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes. They got 6 months apiece, if I remember correctly.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know James Cerce?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I do.

Mr. HALLEY. How long do you know him?

Mr. MORETTI. Probably twenty-some-odd years.

Mr. HALLEY. He lives in Paterson, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his business?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know what's his business. I think he is a gambler too in the race track.

Mr. HALLEY. He is a bookie, is he not?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't answer that. I think so. I can't be sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any business with Cerce?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. No business connections whatsoever?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Only a good friend?

Mr. MORETTI. That's all.

Mr. HALLEY. Does Cerce ever go to Duke's?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever offer anybody $2,500?

Mr. MORETTI. What?

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever offer anybody $2,500 to get out of town so they would not appear before this Senate committee?

Mr. MORETTI. I heard that yesterday while you were questioning my brother. I don't know anything about it.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not think there is anything to that story?

Mr. MORETTI. No. I think that's a story put up for some half-wit, offer somebody $2,500. I should need more credit than that.

Mr. HALLEY. It was said there was a meeting at your brother's home with you and Pete Laplace, Joe Laplace; you know them?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. The Golden brothers, Bob Neilley and Johnny Welsh, and that meeting took place in August one afternoon, and that you told Johnny Welsh to give $2,500 to anybody connected with the numbers racket who might be called upon to testify before this committee, told them to take a vacation and stay out of sight.

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. No truth to that whatsoever?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir, not to my knowledge; no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have a great many friends and seem to have a pretty good idea of what goes on.

Mr. MORETTI. I what?

Mr. HALLEY. I say, you seem to have a pretty good idea of what goes on. Can you explain why for a very long time practically every one of the witnesses sought by this committee just disappeared from sight, could not be found at home, their wives came in and said they could not find them, did not know where their own husbands were?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think any one of them ducked, to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you think it was all just coincidence?

Mr. MORETTI. It wasn't done purposely, if they did.

Mr. HALLEY. For instance, the wives of, I think Jimmy Lynch, I think Jerry Catena's wife came in and said they did not know where their husbands were.

Mr. MORETTI. It happens a lot of times my wife don't know where I am.

Mr. HALLEY. For a period of a month or more?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I wouldn't say a month. Weeks.

Mr. HALLEY. For a period of weeks?

Mr. MORETTI. Everbody's in the same—I call my wife every day no matter where I am. I'm different. I have three children. I have five grandchildren.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, these fellows all have children and their wives seem to be nice women.

Mr. MORETTI. People live different in this world. I live one way. I call my family all the time.

Mr. HALLEY. You think it is just a coincidence?

Mr. MORETTI. And I never duck anything.

Mr. HALLEY. You think it is just a coincidence that anybody had anything to do with that Lodi——

Mr. MORETTI. I can't call it a coincidence and I can't call it purposely.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Al Goldfein?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Al Goldfein.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Manny Schaefer?

Mr. MORETTI. Manny Schaefer? Probably I have met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. In Florida, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. Where?

Mr. MORETTI. In Florida, race track.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him at the Colonial Inn?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember if I did. I have been there, but I don't know if I did or not.

Mr. HALLEY. I don't think I asked you if you knew Meyer Lansky.

Mr. MORETTI. I do. I know him well.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know John Barker?

Mr. MORETTI. John Barker; no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You know Andrew Bruno?

Mr. MORETTI. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Andrew Bruno.

Mr. MORETTI. Who is he?

Mr. HALLEY. The man who owns Bruno's Restaurant.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know him when he worked at Lodi's?

Mr. MORETTI. I know him quite some time. I don't know if he worked there or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't he ever serve you a meal at Lodi's?

Mr. MORETTI. Me? I don't remember if he did or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he ever serve you a meal at any gambling place?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Kitty Klein?

Mr. MORETTI. Kitty Klein; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is he?

Mr. MORETTI. You tell me who he is, and I'll answer you.

Mr. HALLEY. I'll tell you. He was a credit man at all of these gambling joints. Do you know who he is?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know if he run a gambling joint or not.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his business?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't tell you that.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you first meet him?

Mr. MORETTI. In Florida.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him in New Jersey?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him in Saratoga?

Mr. MORETTI. I haven't been in Saratoga since it opened.

Mr. HALLEY. Since what opened?

Mr. MORETTI. Since the last time it opened, I haven't been there.

Mr. HALLEY. I do not understand. What opened?

Mr. MORETTI. Saratoga opened up the race track when? Three years ago? I haven't been there.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean since the gambling opened up?

Mr. MORETTI. It was closed during the war, you know.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right. And then the Arrowhead opened up.

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know anything about it.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not know anything about the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have had no connection with it?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What has been your income from gambling? I think you mentioned that you made $240 a week from your linen business.

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you make last year, do you remember?

Mr. MORETTI. Last year is when?

Mr. HALLEY. 1949.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Would that be the '48 income, or the '49?

Mr. HALLEY. Let us take '49 first.

MR. MORETTI. I think I filed for $31,800. Is that right? You have it there.

MR. HALLEY. You filed for gambling of $20,800, plus your $240 a week. Is that right?

MR. MORETTI. That's right. I won at the race track in the mutuel machines.

MR. HALLEY. You won it right at the race track?

MR. MORETTI. Yes.

MR. HALLEY. You never gambled with any bookies at the track?

MR. MORETTI. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. You just put it right in the machine?

MR. MORETTI. Right.

MR. HALLEY. How much did you win gambling in 1948?

MR. MORETTI. In '48?

MR. HALLEY. $31,200; is that right?

MR. MORETTI. I didn't win too much on horses that year, but I had a sure thing going for me that year. I had President Truman going for me that year.

MR. HALLEY. How much did you win on President Truman's election?

MR. MORETTI. About $25,000. I win two ways in that election. I win $10,000 on that Dewey don't carry New York City by 640,000, even money. I thought they were crazy, and I bet that with Lou Clayton.

MR. HALLEY. Lou Clayton?

MR. MORETTI. Clayton and Durante; yes.

MR. HALLEY. And what did you get the rest of your money on?

MR. MORETTI. I took 16 to 1 for a thousand dollars from Clayton on Truman. I could have got a hundred the last day. Clayton robbed me. I think he laid my thousand to somebody else. I got 16 to 1, and he closed 100 to 1.

MR. HALLEY. You had 16 to 1?

MR. MORETTI. I had 16 to 1.

MR. HALLEY. And did you bet on any other candidates that year?

MR. MORETTI. No. I bet Dewey and Truman.

MR. HALLEY. Who did you bet this year?

MR. MORETTI. This year on who?

MR. HALLEY. Did you bet this year?

MR. MORETTI. There's no outstanding candidate this year, is there?

MR. HALLEY. You did not bet on anyone this year?

MR. MORETTI. I don't think so: just the race track this year.

MR. HALLEY. How do you keep a record of your bets?

MR. MORETTI. Just on a slip of paper.

MR. HALLEY. Do you have your records, for instance, for 1950 here?

MR. MORETTI. No.

MR. HALLEY. Where is your record for 1950?

MR. MORETTI. This 1950, I had about $11,000 so far. I think the Federal Department will be stuck this year.

MR. HALLEY. Have you been a little preoccupied with other things?

MR. MORETTI. I've been occupied with this here committee, subpenas from all angles; don't give me a chance to go to the race track.

MR. HALLEY. It has interfered with your making a living?

MR. MORETTI. Well, I don't know. Maybe before the year closes I may win yet.

Mr. HALLEY. I am interested in knowing how you keep your records of your wins and losses.

Mr. MORETTI. Just I keep the program.

Mr. HALLEY. You keep the program?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. From the track?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; and then after I file for it, and after 2 or 3—months, I destroy them.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you record it after 2 or 3 months when you destroy them?

Mr. MORETTI. What I put down.

Mr. HALLEY. What have you got down for 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. About $11,000 so far.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is it? Do you have the record here?

Mr. MORETTI. No; in my mind.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean you keep this in your mind?

Mr. MORETTI. Most of it; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Each year you keep it in your mind?

Mr. MORETTI. Not all the time; no. I told you before I keep it on my program.

Mr. HALLEY. This is a good year for us to talk about because it is just about over, and you are going to have to file your income tax this year. This committee has always been curious about how gamblers file returns so that they are accurate. Perhaps you can help this committee understand how you are going to file your return for 1950 accurately.

Mr. MORETTI. I can only answer for myself how I make my own living.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you keep a record of your wins and losses for 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. I told you—with the program.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, where are the programs?

Mr. MORETTI. I have some home.

Mr. HALLEY. For 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. I think so, if I look them over. I've pieces of paper.

Mr. HALLEY. Going how far back?

Mr. MORETTI. Just the year of 1950, that's all.

Mr. HALLEY. And what kind of programs have you?

Mr. MORETTI. Racing programs.

Mr. HALLEY. For what tracks?

Mr. MORETTI. Aqueduct, Belmont, Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. Any others?

Mr. MORETTI. That's all I went to this year.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever bet on the Florida tracks?

Mr. MORETTI. On the where?

Mr. HALLEY. The Florida tracks.

Mr. MORETTI. When I go to Florida; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you last in Florida?

Mr. MORETTI. Last year.

Mr. HALLEY. For how long were you there?

Mr. MORETTI. I think a couple of weeks.

Mr. HALLEY. And at what hotel did you stay?

Mr. MORETTI. Last year? Let's see. Last year I was at the new hotel, I think it's—had my daughter and wife there. She got sick in college, and I took her for a 2 weeks' vacation in Florida. I only stood there about 11 days, I think. That new hotel there. It's got a kind of peculiar name.

Mr. HALLEY. One of the big new ones?

Mr. MORETTI. Next to the—what's that?—Sherry Frontenac? Next to the Sherry Frontenac.

Mr. HALLEY. Sans Souci?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Saxony?

Mr. MORETTI. At the Penn House. It cost me, I think, $75 a day.

Mr. HALLEY. $75 a day, and how long were you there?

Mr. MORETTI. About 11 days.

Mr. HALLEY. 10 days?

Mr. MORETTI. About 11 days, something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you do any other traveling this year?

Mr. MORETTI. Any what?

Mr. HALLEY. Any other traveling this year?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own your own home?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did it cost you?

Mr. MORETTI. Which, my present home?

Mr. HALLEY. Your present home.

Mr. MORETTI. $45,000.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you buy it?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; I had it built.

Mr. HALLEY. How long ago?

Mr. MORETTI. In 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. And do you have an automobile?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind is that?

Mr. MORETTI. Cadillac.

Mr. HALLEY. What year?

Mr. MORETTI. '48. I have a Lincoln '49.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other automobile?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your wife or your family?

Mr. MORETTI. My daughter has. I gave her a Cadillac for a present on graduation of her college.

Mr. HALLEY. Two Cadillacs and a Lincoln in your family?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And how many children have you?

Mr. MORETTI. Three.

Mr. HALLEY. Three. Do any of the others go to college?

Mr. MORETTI. They all went to college.

Mr. HALLEY. They all went to college?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes. Two married, and one single.

Mr. HALLEY. And have you been able to do all of that on the income that you report each year?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have also built up this linen business; is that right.

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your net worth today, Mr. Moretti?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't say.

Mr. HALLEY. You have this linen business. Do you have any cash, bank account?

Mr. MORETTI. I have no bank account.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not have any bank at all?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your wife, or your children?

Mr. MORETTI. My wife has a bank account and a checking account.

Mr. HALLEY. Are they substantial accounts?

Mr. MORETTI. I pay my taxes on my wife's checking account.

Mr. HALLEY. In what bank is your wife's account?

Mr. MORETTI. Woodridge National Bank.

Mr. HALLEY. Are both accounts in that bank?

Mr. MORETTI. Right. I have one checking account in the Asbury-Ocean Grove Bank in Asbury Park.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a home there, too?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; in Deal, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. That is a second home you have?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; I have two homes.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you acquire your Deal home?

Mr. MORETTI. In 1940.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did that one cost you?

Mr. MORETTI. $16,250. The house was worth $400,000.

Mr. HALLEY. That house was worth $400,000?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you buy that from?

Mr. MORETTI. I was offered $250,000 last year. I wouldn't sell it.

Mr. HALLEY. You refused to sell it for $250,000?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you buy it from?

Mr. MORETTI. I bought it from the Lincoln National Bank of Newark.

Mr. HALLEY. On a foreclosure?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir. Also taxes, I think. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. How many servants staff those two houses.

Mr. MORETTI. Two.

Mr. HALLEY. Two. And how much money do you have in cash?

Mr. MORETTI. About $30,000.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own real estate, Mr. Moretti?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is your cash, by the way? Do you keep it in a box?

Mr. MORETTI. In my home.

Mr. HALLEY. In a box?

Mr. MORETTI. No; in my home.

Mr. HALLEY. In a safe?

Mr. MORETTI. I have no safe.

Mr. HALLEY. You just keep it around your house?

Mr. MORETTI. That's all.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not own any real estate?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any interest in any construction business?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir. Let me tell you about the real estate. Now don't get me wrong there. My son-in-law put up a store in Hasbrouck Heights, so I bought the building for them. I paid $30,000 for the building, so he couldn't make it go, and he closed it up.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. MORETTI. Just recently, lost about $3,000, an ice-cream parlor and confectionery store, so I sold the building to the same people I bought it from. I sold it for $35,000 about a month and a half ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other real estate?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your family?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir. I have a lot in Florida.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you buy that?

Mr. MORETTI. I think it was 1948, 1949, I am not sure. I paid $18,000 for it, 300 by 250, bay front, on Biscayne Bay.

Mr. HALLEY. I am curious to know what kind of financial records you have.

Mr. MORETTI. Just about $30,000 in cash; that's all.

Mr. HALLEY. No; I am talking now about your records. The committee did subpoena your records, did it not?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, but I have no records.

Mr. HALLEY. You must have some records.

Mr. MORETTI. I told you a sheet of paper.

Mr. HALLEY. Let us see it.

Mr. MORETTI. I haven't got it with me.

Mr. HALLEY. What are you holding in your hand?

Mr. MORETTI. This is a record of my income tax.

Mr. HALLEY. Just the income tax? Income taxes paid?

Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who prepared your income taxes?

Mr. MORETTI. Abe Greenberg.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Halley, these questions pertaining to income taxes and pertaining to net worth, and this sort of thing might well be the foundation of some sort of a claim or prosecution. I really do not think there is any possibility of it, so probably I am arguing against myself in that respect, but I think I ought to note an objection in the record with respect to any questioning about his particular financial assets. I can't see how it is relevant under this resolution.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Sullivan, I do not want you to be misled, so I think I should tell you that if the witness wants to claim his privilege at this point, he must personally claim it. You cannot claim it for him. Perhaps you want to consult him.

Mr. MORETTI. I'll answer him.

Mr. SULLIVAN. He is very anxious to answer. Mr. Moretti is a man who wants to answer questions.

Mr. HALLEY. I am a man who wants to ask them.

Mr. MORETTI. My answer should be on paper.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a second. Mr. Sullivan, is there any contention that his income is under investigation?

Mr. SULLIVAN. I do not know of any. I heard yesterday—of course, I do not know whether it is or not. I am not in touch with the internal revenue on the matter, but I suppose it would be the duty of a man in the Internal Revenue if you see a lot of publicity in newspapers about somebody, to go and make an investigation, and I understand, I heard counsel say yesterday that some sort of investigation is in progress, and that he had been told by an internal revenue man that such was the case.

Mr. MORETTI. I haven't been told yet.

Mr. HALLEY. Let us ask a few more questions, and if he wants to assert his own privileges, I am sure the chairman will rule on it. You have no records whatsoever of your own financial transactions?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any?

Mr. MORETTI. The only record I can tell you, here, my laundry, my accountants take care of that.

Mr. HALLEY. That is easy, because you get $240 a week.

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And that does not require much in the way of recording.

Mr. MORETTI. That's right. It's by check.

Mr. HALLEY. What I am concerned with is the following: In 1946 you reported for commissions, brokerage, betting, and handicapping $20,800. In 1948, $31,200. In '47, $25,000 even for yourself and $15,000 for your wife.

Mr. MORETTI. $25,000; you've got that wrong.

Mr. HALLEY. That is what I have got for '47, a total of $40,000, divided between you and your wife. Is that wrong?

Mr. MORETTI. In '47?

Mr. HALLEY. '47.

Mr. MORETTI. No. It's $50,000 between me and my wife.

Mr. HALLEY. Fifty thousand. How does it break up as you have it?

Mr. MORETTI. She happened to be at the track with me, and she won $15,000.

Mr. HALLEY. But I mean, she has $15,000 and you have what? Thirty-five?

Mr. MORETTI. I want to know, after you pay the Government, what have you got left?

Mr. HALLEY. In 1947. Are you sure you are talking only about the betting? I am not talking about your salaries, commissions, from United States Linen. For the betting, it seems to me your return shows $25,000 for '47, and some additional income from your linen company, which would bring it up to around—

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, I filed for $35,000, my wife filed for $15,000.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right, but of your $35,000, $10,670—

Mr. MORETTI. In '47, it was only $200 a week; right?

Mr. HALLEY. No. It shows the same as it does in '49.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, but the raise just come now, $240, this year, 20 percent raise on our wages.

Mr. HALLEY. It shows $6,500, Mr. Moretti, from United States Linens, and $3,900 from United States Linen Laundry.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. So we take that off the $35,000, then you have got dividends and interest of $270, you take that off, and you get $25,000 even.

Mr. MORETTI. Right.

Mr. HALLEY. From betting?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes; that's right.

Mr. HALLEY. I am talking about the betting income now.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. So I guess we are in agreement.

Mr. MORETTI. I probably won that much, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Then in 1946 from betting you show $28,600, and in 1945 for betting you show $38,000.

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And in 1944, for betting you show $30,000 even.

Mr. MORETTI. It is $33,830.

Mr. HALLEY. No. The $3,830 is from your Linen Supply and dividends and interest.

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. But the betting is $30,000 even.

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And then in 1945, your wife also had $15,600.

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. The question is, what records do you have to show this income from commissions, brokerage, betting?

Mr. MORETTI. These I don't have. After I pay my income tax, after 3 or 4 months I don't get no notice from the income tax, I might destroy them, that's all.

Mr. HALLEY. But you have no paid income tax for 1950, and I am asking you now what records you have.

Mr. MORETTI. I have a piece of paper home what I won this year, about $11,000, to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. But that piece of paper was subpoenaed by this committee. Your subpoena asked you to bring your financial record, did it not?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't know why I did it for. I can't answer that. I haven't got it here. I only can tell you what I know mentally.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Halley, I want to point out that a man who goes to the race track like Mr. Moretti does every day, it may be that they do not keep bookkeeping records like you would in a business or in a law office.

Mr. HALLEY. I want—

The CHAIRMAN. That is what we are inquiring about, Mr. Sullivan. Just what sort of records does he keep?

Mr. HALLEY. A fellow who works for a living all day is sort of tired at the end of the evening, and he has to keep a pretty good record.

Mr. SULLIVAN. That is pretty hard work at a race track. They are tired at the end of the day.

Mr. HALLEY. I am wondering if it is such hard work that they can't keep a record equivalent to what any honest working man has to keep.

Mr. MORETTI. Are you trying to tell me I try to violate the principles of this committee by not bringing the record?

Mr. HALLEY. You certainly did not respond to your subpoena.

Mr. MORETTI. I have a pretty good memory.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry?

Mr. MORETTI. I have a pretty good memory.

Mr. HALLEY. Exactly, then, what do your records show?

Mr. MORETTI. About $11,000, to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. How does it break down? What does it show, say, for the month of November, last month?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't go by the months. I go by day.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what does it show for November 1, 1950?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't answer. From the first of the year till the last time I was at the track, I'm ahead about $11,000.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a breakdown showing what you lost on January 1, and what you won on January 2?

Mr. MORETTI. This year I didn't lose anything.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not lose anything?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I won every time I went to the race track.

Mr. HALLEY. How many times were you at the race track this year?

Mr. MORETTI. Probably 15, 20 times.

Mr. HALLEY. At what tracks?

Mr. MORETTI. The three tracks.

Mr. HALLEY. Aqueduct?

Mr. MORETTI. Aqueduct, Belmont, and also down the shore, Jersey, I was there pretty near every day.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go down to the Atlantic City track?

Mr. MORETTI. I was there twice, I think, this year.

Mr. HALLEY. And what other track along the shore?

Mr. MORETTI. Monmouth Park.

Mr. HALLEY. You were down there almost every day?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes. It's right near my home. They built a track right near my home; more convenient.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the track next to your home?

Mr. MORETTI. The Monmouth Park.

Mr. HALLEY. The Monmouth Park. That is near your Deal home?

Mr. MORETTI. I had a deposit on that property during the depression. I bought $350,000 land for $11,000. I had a deposit and forgot about it. If I had held it, I could have sold it for $100,000.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did you get from them?

Mr. MORETTI. I didn't buy it. I had a deposit, and I took it back. That also was bought from the city.

Mr. HALLEY. But you did not keep that?

Mr. MORETTI. I didn't go through with it; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Why not? Was somebody fighting you on it? They had a little political pressure, too?

Mr. MORETTI. Who could see futures? Could you predict a war? Look at the home I bought down in Deal for $16,250. That's why I've got a big reputation on paper. They see my beautiful home down there. It's a millionaire's home.

Mr. HALLEY. It costs a lot of money to keep it up, does it not?

Mr. MORETTI. It don't cost too much. I do pretty good at the race track, pays it off.

Mr. HALLEY. I am wondering; for instance in 1949, your total income was $31,000. You have got all of these automobiles, and two homes, and you go to Florida and pay $75 a day. How do you do it?

Mr. MORETTI. I do it pretty good.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you manage it? How does the arithmetic work?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. Of $31,000, you had to pay in taxes $6,000, so you had $25,000 left.

Mr. MORETTI. You have $25,000 left after you pay the Government?

Mr. HALLEY. You have no Jersey State tax, do you?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You manage pretty well on your $25,000.

Mr. MORETTI. I manage to live on about $200 a week.

Mr. HALLEY. What are these records? Let us get back to them. They are really the thing I am trying to find out about.

Mr. MORETTI. This record, I will call up the house, and let somebody fly them down here.

Mr. HALLEY. How many pieces of paper is it?

Mr. MORETTI. Just a piece of paper.

Mr. HALLEY. One piece of paper?

Mr. MORETTI. A piece of paper, and I used to keep those, what do you call them, programs, from the track.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any programs right now?

Mr. MORETTI. No, I haven't.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no programs?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any at home?

Mr. MORETTI. I may have some at home, yet.

Mr. HALLEY. You may have some?

Mr. MORETTI. I may.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know how many you have at home?

Mr. MORETTI. I can't tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. But you have a piece of paper at home?

Mr. MORETTI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that one piece or more than one piece?

Mr. MORETTI. No. As I get a sheet, I put down day by day. I don't go to the track every day. When I put it down——

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of paper is it? Is it a big piece of paper?

Mr. MORETTI. A piece of paper.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it as big as those yellow sheets you have right there?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, that's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Does it have lines on it?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't remember if there is lines or not.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't remember if it has lines or not?

Mr. MORETTI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it white paper or yellow paper?

Mr. MORETTI. White paper.

Mr. HALLEY. White paper?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you write on it in pencil, or in ink?

Mr. MORETTI. Sometimes pencil and ink.

Mr. HALLEY. Sometimes pencil and sometimes ink?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, you have had that piece of paper all year?

Mr. MORETTI. During the race track, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, you started writing on that piece of paper back last spring, is that right?

Mr. MORETTI. Probably, yes.

MR. HALLEY. And you have been making notations right along, down to now?

MR. MORETTI. Yes.

MR. HALLEY. Have you filled up one side of the paper?

MR. MORETTI. It's only about maybe about 20 days, that's all.

MR. HALLEY. Only about 20 days?

MR. MORETTI. About 20 days at the track.

MR. HALLEY. You have not lost at all this year?

MR. MORETTI. No, sir; I haven't lost a penny this year.

MR. HALLEY. You think you have only won though about $12,000?

MR. MORETTI. That is right; about $11,000.

MR. HALLEY. $11,000; and how many different entries are on this piece of paper?

MR. MORETTI. How many what?

MR. HALLEY. How many different entries on this piece of paper?

MR. MORETTI. I can't tell right now.

MR. HALLEY. Would you be willing to deliver it to a committee investigator the minute you get back to your home?

MR. MORETTI. Yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. When are you going home?

MR. MORETTI. When you let me loose.

MR. HALLEY. Would you be willing to meet a committee investigator in New York and take him out to your house, and hand him the paper right away, showing your records for this year?

MR. MORETTI. Maybe, if I can find it right away, I'll give it to him.

MR. HALLEY. Where is it? Where do you keep this record?

MR. MORETTI. I've got to look for it in one of the drawers. I've got grandchildren, you know. They crash in all my drawers. A lot of times I don't even find any shirts and ties.

MR. HALLEY. Sometimes you lose this record?

MR. MORETTI. I haven't lost any record.

MR. HALLEY. You are really sure you have such a record?

MR. MORETTI. Yes; I'm positive I have.

MR. HALLEY. Then if we have somebody meet you when you get to New York, you think you can turn it over?

MR. MORETTI. Is it that important?

MR. HALLEY. Yes.

MR. MORETTI. If you say so, I will.

MR. HALLEY. I will ask you to arrange that with Mr. Murray as soon as he finishes testifying.

MR. MORETTI. I never met Mr. Murray.

MR. HALLEY. Have you met Mr. Murray? He is right there.

MR. MORETTI. I have—

The CHAIRMAN. We do not want to keep your record, but we will make a photostat of it.

Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. No questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Moretti, the main thing is, Do you have a ledger book where you keep any amounts that you lose as well as what you win on these various betting days?

MR. MORETTI. Sometimes I do, sometimes I don't.

The CHAIRMAN. When you come home, you just put down the amount you have won, or the net amount you have lost, on this piece of paper; is that it?

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. And then sometimes you keep some of the programs to show what races you have won on, and what races you have lost on, what the odds were?

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. Sometimes you don't?

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. Then when you go to your auditor to have him fix up the tax returns you show him the piece of paper, or you just tell him what the amounts are?

Mr. MORETTI. Just tell him.

The CHAIRMAN. Just tell him?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. And you keep the record yourself?

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. I did not understand when you bought this house that you have been offered $250,000 for, for sixteen-thousand-and-some-odd dollars. Did you handle that yourself, or did someone handle it for you?

Mr. MORETTI. The agent.

The CHAIRMAN. What agent?

Mr. MORETTI. Let's see, now; he's in Long Branch, Meyer Bros.

The CHAIRMAN. Meyer Bros.?

Mr. MORETTI. Meyer Bros.; yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have to get in touch with anybody in order to make any sort of deal to buy this house at that price?

Mr. MORETTI. When I seen the house it was astonishing. He told me it was $15,000 first, so I gave him $1,000 cash deposit right away. I thought he was kidding me. And about 3 days after he called me, and said, "I have to see you. There is some of the bank officials in the Lincoln National Bank." I said, "What happened?" "Oh, nothing," he said, "just we want to see you." So I was living in Brighton Avenue at that time, in a rented home, so he come with two officials from the bank.

So I gave them lunch, and during their waiting for lunch they said, "Mr. Moretti, we're sorry to come here because the agent made a mistake with quoting the price." I says, "Here's where I lose something that I've been looking for." I said, "What is the difference?" "The difference," he said, "he quoted $15,000 instead of $16,250." I said, "Forget about it. Make it $16,250."

The CHAIRMAN. When was this, Mr. Moretti? How long ago has this been?

Mr. MORETTI. 1940.

The CHAIRMAN. And when did you get offered $250,000?

Mr. MORETTI. For the same house.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, what year?

Mr. MORETTI. 1947 and 1948.

The CHAIRMAN. The bank had a mortgage on the house, and had to foreclose it?

Mr. MORETTI. You mean, how I have it now? It's all paid.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that the day you got it?

Mr. MORETTI. I got it, yes, from the bank.

The CHAIRMAN. The bank apparently had a mortgage, and foreclosed the mortgage?

Mr. MORETTI. I had a mortgage of $10,000. I paid $8,000, and the rest on mortgage.

The CHAIRMAN. Did your attorney handle the matter for you?

Mr. MORETTI. No; the agent did.

The CHAIRMAN. You said this building—here is your card and picture of the building. Let this be filed as an exhibit.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 9, and is on file with the committee.)

Mr. MORETTI. Here's my building down the shore, if you want to look at it. That's why they say I'm a millionaire. I may sell it now.

The CHAIRMAN. I did not understand.

Mr. MORETTI. That's my building down there.

Mr. SULLIVAN. He has a picture of his home. It is a rather indistinct picture.

The CHAIRMAN. I would like to see it myself.

Mr. MORETTI. Give it to him. Let him look at it. Maybe wants to come down for dinner sometime.

The CHAIRMAN. I imagine you would have a good meal.

This picture has at the top of it, "The Moretti estate." That is the one you paid $16,000 for. It is a beautiful home.

Mr. MORETTI. Six acres of land there, too. I have a lake there.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be filed also as an exhibit.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I will take the picture off, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not mind us having the picture, do you?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, you can take the picture. Just give me my records.

Mr. SULLIVAN. He has got his notations of his income tax on the back of it.

Mr. MORETTI. Take the picture right off. That is sort of a postal card.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Now, Mr. Sullivan, the list on that letterhead, where you have the directors of the various corporations and officers—

Mr. SULLIVAN. Do you want that, Senator?

The CHAIRMAN. Can that be filed?

Mr. MORETTI. No; I have no objection whatsoever.

Mr. SULLIVAN. He has got some notations here. These, I suppose are just something to refresh his recollection.

Mr. MORETTI. That's all my recollection. This don't mean anything.

The CHAIRMAN. Just let him mark the notations off.

Mr. MORETTI. I can give it to him. I'll take this here, and they can have the rest.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 10, and is on file with the committee.)

The CHAIRMAN. Now, there is one other matter I did not understand. That has been filed as exhibit No. 10.

Mr. Moretti, about this Noxall Linen Supply Co., as I understand it they made a complaint in 1939, and there was an investigation?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that correct?

Mr. MORETTI. The president of that firm, he was the president of the association, the Consolidated Laundries. They're all indicted. Sixty-one of them were indicted here in Washington.

The CHAIRMAN. That was in 1939. Then you said while the matter was pending that he was killed?

Mr. MORETTI. No, no. I don't know if it was in 1939, what day they got indicted. I don't know. They got indicted maybe in 1938. They gave me that before the grand jury in New York, the Federal grand jury.

The CHAIRMAN. What was this president's name?

Mr. MORETTI. Gee, I don't know. I don't remember what's his name.

The CHAIRMAN. You say in 1945 he was riding a horse and was killed?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't say 1945. I don't remember the year he rode a horse, but he died before 1945, or they wouldn't have become my partners.

The CHAIRMAN. Anyway, sometime before 1945 he was riding a horse and got killed?

Mr. MORETTI. He died. He fell off a horse, and the horse kicked him in the head.

The CHAIRMAN. That is when you then merged, took over this company that merged with your company; is that correct?

Mr. MORETTI. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the U. S. Linen Supply Co. have an operation where you have these coin boxes in apartments where you can put a quarter in and get some laundry worked on? Is that your operation?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You operate a regular laundry?

Mr. MORETTI. Regular laundry, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Get the laundry, bring it in to your place?

Mr. MORETTI. Regular laundry.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not have any coin machines?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Don't you have some contract with some of the large apartment companies out there?

Mr. MORETTI. Large contracts of what?

The CHAIRMAN. With some of the apartments to do their laundry?

Mr. MORETTI. Hospitals and apartment houses. Most of my business is just restaurants and hotels and hospitals.

The CHAIRMAN. Is most of it in New Jersey?

Mr. MORETTI. Yes, sir; northern New Jersey. I have got a few in New York.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have an interest, or some connection with any labor union activity?

Mr. MORETTI. What?

The CHAIRMAN. Any labor union activity?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir; never did.

The CHAIRMAN. In connection with building buildings, or a trade association?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Never did?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ever handle any fight promotions?

Mr. MORETTI. Fight promotions? I once backed Jack Kearns.

The CHAIRMAN. Jack who?

Mr. MORETTI. Jack Kearns, Jack Dempsey's manager. I backed him up, matched Pat Comiskey.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you mean, you backed him up?

Mr. MORETTI. I backed him up.

The CHAIRMAN. You had a piece of him?

Mr. MORETTI. He had no money. He was broke, a broken-down bum, and I backed him up. From a millionaire, to a bum.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean you financed him?

Mr. MORETTI. I financed it; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Got him trained up?

Mr. MORETTI. I had no interest at all. I just put up $30,000 for him to go through with the match.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you get back?

Mr. MORETTI. My $30,000; that's all I wanted, and I borrowed it.

The CHAIRMAN. You did not get any profit out of it?

Mr. MORETTI. No, sir. There was about $7,800 profit, and they split it between themselves.

The CHAIRMAN. About how much?

Mr. MORETTI. About $7,800 profit, I think they made, and they split it between themselves.

The CHAIRMAN. Seventy-eight thousand profit?

Mr. MORETTI. Seventy-eight hundred. They had a house of about 78,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have anything you wanted to add to what you have told the committee?

Mr. MORETTI. I said all I could.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Just to express his appreciation, that's all, for your consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Moretti, I think, has talked forthrightly, and has given the committee information which I do not think incriminates him. He has his records here, and he has been of considerable value to the committee.

Senator TOBEY. I think, Mr. Chairman, it is rather refreshing to find a witness who has been as frank as this man has been.

The CHAIRMAN. That is all.

Mr. MORETTI. Thank you very much. Don't forget my home in Deal if you are down the shore. You are invited.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have inside tips on these horses?

Mr. MORETTI. I am a pretty good handicapper myself.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have an opportunity of talking with the jockeys, the owners, before you bet on these horses?

Mr. MORETTI. I don't.

The CHAIRMAN. You just look over the form?

Mr. MORETTI. That's all, over the form. Of course, tips go around the race track, like if you listen to everybody, you got to go broke, so I have a great following. Follow me and see what I do.

The CHAIRMAN. You use your own judgment. All right.

Mr. SULLIVAN. May we have that record?

Mr. MORETTI. You can have the one with the house on it. Just take the sheet.

The CHAIRMAN. We have another picture of your house.

Mr. SULLIVAN. You don't need it?

Mr. HALLEY. No. I just want to get the answer to one question.

As you know, the telephone companies keep records of long-distance calls, Mr. Moretti, and we have a number of records, and this is a question that slipped my mind.

It shows in September of 1947, you received some collect telephone calls from somebody named Halley, and I just wanted to get the record clear.

Mr. MORETTI. He is a horse owner.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is he?

Mr. MORETTI. A horse owner. Everybody thought it was you.

Mr. HALLEY. I just wanted to make sure. It is not me, is it?

Mr. MORETTI. No; it's not you.

Mr. HALLEY. It is a horse owner?

Mr. MORETTI. A horse owner, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He must have been at the track, then?

Mr. MORETTI. He has got about 10 or 15 horses.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will stand in recess until 2:30 this afternoon.

(Whereupon, at 12:30 p. m., a recess was taken, to reconvene at 2:30 p. m., of the same day.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

The chairman for a while this afternoon will be engaged with other members of the Committee on Armed Services in marking up the civil-defense bill. Senator Hunt has been designated as acting chairman, and chairman of the subcommittee of one, with power to swear witnesses and to take sworn testimony. Other members of the special committee will join him in the proceedings later this afternoon.

Go ahead, Senator Hunt.

Senator HUNT. For the benefit of the press, I wish to make a brief opening statement.

A subpoena to testify before this committee was served in San Francisco this morning on Mr. Martin H. Hartman of San Francisco and Las Vegas. Mr. Hartman is one of the witnesses the committee has been very anxious to place under subpoena. His name is on the list of those upon whom warrants of arrest were asked by the Senate committee some time ago. We expect to have him before us at some later day to testify about what he knows of the Mountain City Consolidated Copper Co. and the sale of its stock. Service of the committee's subpoena on Mr. Hartman reduces the list of missing witnesses now to seven. While the resolution sponsored by the committee is under consideration by the Senate Judiciary Committee the search for these seven wanted witnesses will continue with intensity.

Mr. James Lynch, will you take the witness chair, please.

Mr. Lynch, do you swear the testimony you are about to give this committee is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Senator HUNT. You may be seated.

All right, Mr. Halley.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES LYNCH, PALISADES PARK, N. J., ACCOMPANIED BY JOHN E. SELSER, ATTORNEY, HACKENSACK, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, Mr. Lynch?

Mr. LYNCH. James Lynch.

Mr. HALLEY. And what is your address?

Mr. LYNCH. 85-B Henry Avenue, Palisades Park.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a business address?

Mr. LYNCH. No business address.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any business?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. This committee made very intensive efforts to serve a subpoena on you during the month of October 1950. Would you mind telling me where you were from October 1 to October 15, 1950?

Mr. LYNCH. October 1?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LYNCH. I was at my home in October.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you married to Virginia Lynch?

Mr. LYNCH. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. She appeared as a witness before this committee on October 12 and said that about a week prior to that time you had left home.

Mr. LYNCH. That is right; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. About October 5?

Mr. LYNCH. Around that time, somewhere around that time.

Mr. HALLEY. And where did you go?

Mr. LYNCH. I went to my mother's house.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is that?

Mr. LYNCH. Jersey City.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you do that?

Mr. LYNCH. I was in a run-down condition. I was very sick at the time and I didn't want to disturb my Mrs., and let her worry about me.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't even tell her where you were?

Mr. LYNCH. That is right; I didn't want her to know where I was.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not want her to know where you were?

Mr. LYNCH. I just didn't want her to worry about me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you not know that this committee was trying to serve a subpoena upon you?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell her that you were going to take a trip?

Mr. LYNCH. I told her I was going away. I didn't want her to know where I was at.

Mr. HALLEY. And you went away as far as Jersey City?

Mr. LYNCH. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you stayed away until this committee's hearings were over, is that right?

Mr. LYNCH. No, I was back. I come back when I found out my wife had got subpoenaed.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. LYNCH. I read it in the papers.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. LYNCH. Well, while I was at my mother's house, I picked the paper up and read it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make any efforts to come in before the committee and say you were now present?

Mr. LYNCH. Not at that time, no, but I never run away from no subpoena or anything else.

Mr. HALLEY. You made no effort to spare your wife the problem of appearing before this committee?

Mr. LYNCH. I didn't know she was subpoenaed.

Mr. HALLEY. And the embarrassment attendant thereto.

Mr. LYNCH. I said I did not know she had it.

Mr. HALLEY. It was in the newspapers.

Mr. LYNCH. A day or so before. I think the same day I read the paper was when she had to be in New York.

Mr. HALLEY. And you did not make any effort to come and appear yourself?

Mr. LYNCH. I didn't know they were looking for me.

Mr. HALLEY. It said so in all the newspapers, Mr. Lynch. Didn't you see that in the newspapers?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir. I would never duck nobody. I have never been away from any place.

Mr. HALLEY. You ducked the service of this committee's subpoena, did you not?

Mr. LYNCH. I am here now, Your Honor.

Mr. HALLEY. My name is Halley. There is no reason to call me "Your Honor."

Mr. LYNCH. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you under a doctor's care while at your mother's house?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir; I was not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you stay there or go out to attend to business?

Mr. LYNCH. I didn't have any business at that time. I just went there to relax and rest myself. I was in a run-down condition. I have lost 30 pounds since October. I still feel the effects of it.

Mr. HALLEY. But you had no doctor to take care of you?

Mr. LYNCH. Not at that time; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Mr. Lynch, you say you have no business?

Mr. LYNCH. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last have a business?

Mr. LYNCH. On advice of my counsel I refuse to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had a legitimate business?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have not?

Mr. LYNCH. No.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How old are you, Mr. Lynch?

Mr. LYNCH. Forty-six.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you born?

Mr. LYNCH. Jersey City, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have lived in New Jersey ever since?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never lived in any other State?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And where did you go to school?

Mr. LYNCH. Jersey City.

Mr. HALLEY. Through what grades in school did you attend?

Mr. LYNCH. Seventh grade.

Mr. HALLEY. And then what did you do?

Mr. LYNCH. Well, I went to work as an office boy.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever arrested?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You were?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. On what charges?

Mr. LYNCH. On a robbery charge.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that, do you remember?

Mr. LYNCH. 1922.

Mr. HALLEY. And were you convicted?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go to jail?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you serve?

Mr. LYNCH. Seven years and six months.

Mr. HALLEY. Seven years?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you serve that?

Mr. LYNCH. Trenton State Prison, New Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. And you got out in 1929?

Mr. LYNCH. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you convicted of any crime after that?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get a 6-month sentence in Trenton in 1937?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you arrested in 1933 in Trenton for aiding and abetting a lottery?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you were not arrested for that at all?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you take the position that that one arrest in 1922 is the only arrest?

Mr. LYNCH. Outside of a disorderly person.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you arrested for being a disorderly person?

Mr. LYNCH. After I come out of prison.

Mr. HALLEY. How long after that?

Mr. LYNCH. A couple of months.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened then?

Mr. LYNCH. Well, I was given 90 days for disorderly person's case.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that?

Mr. LYNCH. In Hoboken, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. Hoboken?

Mr. LYNCH. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And were you ever arrested after that?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you not arrested for being a disorderly person in Trenton in May of 1937 and given 6 months?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. If the record shows that, it would be a mistake?

Mr. LYNCH. I guess it is.

Mr. HALLEY. I have an FBI record in front of me.

Mr. LYNCH. That must be a mistake. I was never arrested.

Mr. HALLEY. You referred to two convictions. Have you ever been convicted on any other occasion?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the disorderly person conviction?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now after you were convicted as a disorderly person what business were you in?

Mr. LYNCH. On advice of my counsel I refuse to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any legitimate business?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You never have had one?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Mr. Lynch, when your wife testified before the committee she testified that you were supporting her, and your family lived reasonably comfortably, had reasonable amounts of money for food and shelter, clothing, and such. Is it not a fact that you do support your family?

Mr. LYNCH. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you do have some sort of income. Would that be true?

Mr. LYNCH. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Lynch, do you know Anthony Guarini?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know a Max Stark?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Max Stark?

Mr. LYNCH. I would say about a year or so.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask Max Stark to cash a check for you?

Mr. LYNCH. I can't answer that question.

Mr. SELSER. May I make a statement to the committee with regard to this witness?

I represent him in proceedings now pending in the States of New Jersey and New York, charges having been made against him alleging conspiracy with relation to certain alleged gambling activities in those States and in other places. The matters are now pending. He is presently under bail, having joined issue with the State, at the present phase of the proceedings.

In addition to this, I have been informed that his income-tax returns are now being investigated by the Internal Revenue Department with a view to inquiring into whether or not there has been a fraud in returns made, so as to lay the foundation for complaints against him under the Federal law for income-tax evasion. For this reason, I am advising my client not to make answers to questions which in my judgment he is privileged not to answer on the ground that to do so might be to testify against himself. And I claim his privilege under the fifth amendment to the Constitution of the United States and like provisions under the Constitutions of the States of New York and New Jersey.

I have already made a statement before the committee that this being an open session to which all persons are invited, his admissions would be used, if admissions were made, would be used in proceedings against him. I have said in my formal statement that if the committee will set up a program by which this man may give them information within the four corners of the resolution for the exclusive use of the committee, or of the Senate, within the four walls of the resolution under which the committee is created, I should advise my clients very differently as to the need for answering such questions.

Now if the committee be sincerely interested in desiring information for the use of the Senate and not to have the committee used as an arm of the prosecuting officers of the various States and other law-enforcement agencies, if they will do this sort of thing, then, of course, we are very glad to cooperate with the Senate committee, and give them all the information for its use only under such a program. If questions are to be propounded which may be answered by counsel in written form after consultation, I should be very glad to cooperate with the committee and the Senate as a whole.

Now, on the basis of this reasoning I am advising my client not to answer these questions.

Senator HUNT. The counsel for the committee will proceed. My opinion as acting chairman, at least, is that any information we are entitled to privately we are entitled to publicly.

You may proceed.

Mr. HALLEY. Now the question was, Did you ever give Max Stark a check to cash?

Mr. LYNCH. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman requests the witness to answer "Yes" or "No."

Mr. LYNCH. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer on the ground that I don't want to incriminate myself.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs and orders the witness to answer "Yes" or "No."

Mr. SELSER. I have advised him, sir, not to answer at all.

Senator HUNT. Allow the witness to make his own statement, please, if you will, counsel.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. At that point, Mr. Chairman, counsel desires to offer in evidence a check drawn on the Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co. in the amount of $350, dated February 24, 1948. I request, because this is an open record, that when this check goes into the record the committee staff be instructed to clip out the name of the signer of the check, the drawer of the check, whose name the committee has been requested to keep confidential until such a time as the committee deems it proper to make it available publicly.

The endorsement on the check, Mr. Chairman, is James Lynch, and under his endorsement is "Max Stark special," and it shows that it was deposited in the Mercantile Bank of New York. I offer this in evidence.

Senator HUNT. It will be received into the records, and under what exhibit number?

Mr. HALLEY. Exhibit No. 11.

Mr. SELSER. May I be heard in behalf of my client in this regard, sir?

Senator HUNT. You may.

Mr. SELSER. I consider that this is a violation of my client's constitutional right and is an attempt to do that for the prosecuting officials of the State which they might not have done for themselves, and I must respectfully ask that this be not made a part of the public record.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman will rule it shall now be received as exhibit No. 11 for the record.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 11, and is on file with the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Nellis, will you take the photostatic copy of the reverse side of this separate endorsement and show it to Mr. Lynch and ask him if the signature "James Lynch" which appears thereon is his signature?

Mr. NELLIS (showing document to witness). Is this your signature?

Mr. LYNCH. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman of the committee directs the witness to answer the question "Yes" or "No".

Mr. LYNCH. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer the question.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer in evidence as exhibit 2 for this witness a check in the amount of $500 dated September 26, 1947, drawn on the Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co., endorsed "James Lynch," second endorsement "Max Stark special," and deposited in the Mercantile Bank of New York. I would like to state in both cases what is being offered is a photostatic copy rather than the original. That applies to exhibit 1 as well as this one.

Senator HUNT. The exhibit will be received and entered in the record as exhibit No. 12.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 12, and is on file with the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. May the record show that the testimony before the committee at a closed session was that a total of $5,000,000 in such checks was deposited in the Mercantile Bank of New York during 5 months beginning in 1947 and ending in 1948.

Mr. Lynch, were you ever connected directly or indirectly with the G & R Trading Co.?

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the grounds I might incriminate myself.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question "Yes" or "No".

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever connected directly or indirectly with the L & L Co. of Saratoga, N. Y.?

Mr. LYNCH. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever connected with the L & C Amusement Co.?

Mr. LYNCH. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the questions just asked "Yes" or "No".

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the ground that I may incriminate myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in Saratoga, N. Y.?

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. Yes: I was in Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the Arrowhead Inn in Saratoga, N. Y.?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in the Arrowhead Inn during the years of 1947 and 1948?

Mr. LYNCH. On advice of my counsel I refuse to answer. I may incriminate myself.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether or not there was operated in the Arrowhead Inn at Saratoga, N. Y., in the years 1947 and 1948 a gambling game?

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. On the grounds of self-incrimination I refuse to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact, Mr. Lynch, that starting in 1945 with the G & R Trading Co. and through 1946, 1947, 1948, 1949, and 1950 you were part owner and an active operator of gambling games in the State of New Jersey and in Saratoga, N. Y.?

Mr. LYNCH. On advice of counsel I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the grounds of incriminating myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that you were the office manager for L & C Amusement Co.?

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the grounds that I may incriminate myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that during the years 1946 to 1948 you received from the L & C Amusement Co. $42,128 in profits?

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question "Yes" or "No."

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse on the grounds I may incriminate myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Alex Goldfine?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. LYNCH. Four or five years, I guess.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see him?

Mr. LYNCH. Just about a year ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that?

Mr. LYNCH. New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Whereabouts?

Mr. LYNCH. I think I met him on Seventh Avenue.

Mr. HALLEY. Just accidentally?

Mr. LYNCH. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him in New Jersey?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where?

Mr. LYNCH. Well, I refuse to answer that on the ground that I may incriminate myself.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that he was the straw boss for the gambling games operated by you and your associates in New Jersey?

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the grounds that I may incriminate myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Emanuel Schafer?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see him?

Mr. LYNCH. I don't know. Around the same time, I imagine.

Mr. HALLEY. Whereabouts?

Mr. LYNCH. I think it was in Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. Jersey?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where?

Mr. LYNCH. I just don't recall. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him in a gambling house?

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the grounds that I may incriminate myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know what business Emanuel Schafer was in?

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the grounds that I may incriminate myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mike Lascari?

Mr. LYNCH. I don't think I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Andrew Bruno?

Mr. LYNCH. I know of a Bruno.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know him?

Mr. LYNCH. I know a Bruno.

Mr. HALLEY. A Bruno who runs a hotel?

Mr. LYNCH. What?

Mr. HALLEY. Who runs a restaurant?

Mr. LYNCH. Bruno's restaurant?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LYNCH. In New York?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LYNCH. Yes; I know him.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a restaurant he had in New Jersey?

Mr. LYNCH. New Jersey?

Mr. HALLEY. In New Jersey.

Mr. LYNCH. In New Jersey?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LYNCH. Whereabouts in New Jersey?

Mr. HALLEY. Lodi.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer that question.

Senator HUNT. You have refused to answer perhaps 15 or 20 questions so far, Mr. Witness. If you are taking a chance of incriminating yourself to the extent of 15 or 20 times, you are in a rather bad way, are you not?

The chair directs that the witness answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the grounds I may incriminate myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know John W. Barker?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I offer in evidence withholding statement, 1947, John W. Barker, for Federal income tax withheld, and the employer stated in this income tax withholding statement is James Lynch, Gerald Catena, Joseph Doto, and Salvatore Moretti, L & C Amusement Co., care of Charles Handler, 790 Broad Street, Newark, N. J., as exhibit No. 13.

Senator HUNT. The exhibit will be received.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 13, and is on file with the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. And I offer as exhibit No. 14 a similar withholding statement to John W. Barker for Federal income tax withheld by L & L Co., R. F. D. No. 1, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Senator HUNT. The exhibit will be received.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 14, and is on file with the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mr. Milton Kessler?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I offer in evidence withholding receipt for the year 1945 of Milton Kessler for Federal income tax withheld. The employer is listed as Anthony Guarini, G & R Trading Co., 109 Roosevelt Avenue, Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.

Senator HUNT. The exhibit will be received.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 15, and is on file with the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. I offer in evidence withholding statement for the year 1948 of Milton Kessler for Federal income tax withheld. The employers are listed as J. Lynch, G. Catena, J. Doto, S. Moretti, doing business as L. & C. Amusement Co.

Senator HUNT. The exhibit will be received.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 16, and is on file with the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. The amount of the tax here is $136.50 on a salary of $1,300.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer in evidence as the next exhibit withholding statement for the year 1948 of Milton Kessler for Federal income tax in the amount of $115.50 on a total wage of $1,500, and the employer is listed as J. Lynch, J. Doto, A. Guarini, et al., doing business as Pal Trading Co.

Senator HUNT. The exhibit will be received.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 17, and is on file with the committee.)

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Meyer Lansky?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you know him?

Mr. LYNCH. About 6 or 7 years, I imagine.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in business with him?

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the grounds that I may incriminate myself.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question yes or no.

Mr. LYNCH. I refuse to answer on the grounds that I may incriminate myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mr. LYNCH. Slightly.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know him well?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean when you say you know him slightly?

Mr. LYNCH. Well, I have never been around the fellow. I never saw him. I see him now and then; as far as knowing him, I don't know anything about him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever eat at Toots' Restaurant?

Mr. LYNCH. Once in a while.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him there?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Willie Moretti there?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Arosa, Joe Bailey?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And did you know Charles Luciano?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Longy Zwillman?

Mr. LYNCH. I know of him, but I don't know him.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met him?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Little Augie?

Mr. LYNCH. I met Little Augie in Florida one time.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever stay at the Wofford Hotel in Florida?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir; that is where I met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Abe Allenberg?

Mr. LYNCH. I don't think I do.

Mr. HALLEY. He ran the place.

Mr. LYNCH. I don't think I do. I checked into the Wofford, and I didn't know who was their owners, or anybody else.

Mr. HALLEY. What year did you stay there?

Mr. LYNCH. I think it was in the year—about 5 years ago, I imagine, 4 or 5 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Johnny King?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Erickson?

Mr. LYNCH. I know of him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know him?

Mr. LYNCH. Never met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Bugsy Siegel?

Mr. LYNCH. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Salvatore Moretti?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you know Arthur Longano?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And I think you testified you know Anthony Guarini?

Mr. LYNCH. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Gerry Catena?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no other questions, Mr. Chairman.

Before the witness is excused, Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer in evidence a withholding statement of Milton Kessler, who has previously been identified, from the Nevada Project Corp., doing business as the Flamingo, Las Vegas, Nev., for total wages of $6,720, Federal tax withheld $1,058.40. This is for the year 1947.

Senator HUNT. The exhibit will be received.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 18, and is on file with the committee.)

Senator HUNT. The witness is excused.

Mr. LYNCH. Thank you.

Senator HUNT. Mr. Arthur Longano, will you please take the witness chair.

Do you swear the testimony you are about to give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth?

Mr. LONGANO. I do.

Mr. SELSER. Mr. Chairman, may the record show that I represent also this witness in the proceedings in New York and New Jersey, and with regard to the current investigation I am informed is being conducted into his income-tax returns. And may the grounds which I have heretofore expressed with regard to the other witnesses for whom I have appeared be considered as having been repeated without the need for again repeating them verbatim?

Senator HUNT. The record will show your statement. The chairman understands it.

Mr. SELSER. Thank you, sir.

Senator HUNT. The witness may be seated.

TESTIMONY OF ARTHUR LONGANO, ENGLEWOOD, N. J., ACCOMPANIED BY JOHN E. SELSER, ATTORNEY, HACKENSACK, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, Mr. Longano?

Mr. LONGANO. Arthur Longano?

Mr. HALLEY. And where do you live?

Mr. LONGANO. 285 Windsor Road, Englewood, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any business?

Mr. LONGANO. No, I haven't.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you born?

Mr. LONGANO. February 2, 1904.

Mr. HALLEY. And where were you born?

Mr. LONGANO. West New York, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you lived in New Jersey ever since?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes, sir, I have.

Mr. HALLEY. And did you go to school?

Mr. LONGANO. I did.

Mr. HALLEY. How far did you go through school?

Mr. LONGANO. Sixth grade.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been arrested?

Mr. LONGANO. I have a record.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you tell the committee whether you have ever been convicted?

Mr. LONGANO. I have.

Mr. HALLEY. And of what offenses have you been convicted?

Mr. LONGANO. Well, I have a very bad memory, and I think the Senator has my record there. I think it would be better if he read it out to me and I will answer it.

Mr. HALLEY. You were first convicted at the age of 18; were you not?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And that was as a disorderly person?

Mr. LONGANO. Disorderly person?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LONGANO. I think they got it mixed up.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you think it was? Maybe your memory is better than the record.

Mr. LONGANO. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. The record is sometimes wrong, so give us your best recollection.

Mr. LONGANO. I think my first conviction was when I was 17 years, so I don't see how you got 18 there for disorderly person.

Mr. HALLEY. For what?

Mr. LONGANO. You said for disorderly person.

Mr. HALLEY. And what was it for?

Mr. LONGANO. Well, you have it there.

Mr. HALLEY. Please tell me. I am not playing games.

Mr. LONGANO. Highway robbery.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the answer. Is that the offense for which you were given 10 to 15 years; is that right?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. The record I have shows an arrest before that, with a fine for being a disorderly person. Is it possible you have just forgotten that? Just a fine, you did not go to jail.

Mr. LONGANO. I must have forgotten it.

Mr. HALLEY. Then were you given 10 to 15 years the next year for highway robbery; is that right?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you serve?

Mr. LONGANO. I served 6 years, I think; 6 or 7 years; I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. And have you been convicted of any other offenses since then?

Mr. LONGANO. I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you convicted of carrying concealed weapons?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And have you been convicted of liquor offenses?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And I believe you have been arrested twice in New York on charges of carrying a gun; is that right?

Mr. LONGANO. In New York?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, where was it?

Mr. LONGANO. It might have been Jersey, but never New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you on two occasions receive suspended sentences for carrying a gun?

Mr. LONGANO. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Never?

Mr. LONGANO. Never received a suspended sentence.

Mr. HALLEY. Never received a suspended sentence?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you go to jail for carrying a gun?

Mr. LONGANO. I did.

Mr. HALLEY. When and where was that?

Mr. LONGANO. The Senator will save time if he gives me dates, and I will admit to them. I am not going to deny my record.

Mr. HALLEY. Please just believe that I have a reason for asking the questions the way I am doing it. Do the best you can, and nobody is trying to build a perjury rap against you on your record. Give us the approximate date, if you can.

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it about 1941?

Mr. LONGANO. Pardon me. I can't hear you.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it around 1941?

Mr. LONGANO. It could have been.

Mr. HALLEY. I mean 1931. I am sorry.

Mr. LONGANO. Thirty-one. It could have been around that time.

Mr. HALLEY. And another time in 1934?

Mr. LONGANO. It could have been, Senator.

Senator HUNT. Let me suggest to the witness, please don't be evasive in your answers. If you do know the answer, just simply say, "Yes, it was 1934." or, "It wasn't 1934, it was 1935."

Mr. SELSER. Senator, I don't think he is being evasive because he asked me if I had any idea of the year. I am certain you are going to find that this record of A. Longano is a different person, just as the record of Lynch is a different person. I already investigated the Lynch record and I know that is an entirely different Lynch.

Mr. HALLEY. We are in agreement that the highway robbery is your own record?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. SELSER. That is right. He was 17 when he was sent away for 15 years.

Senator TOBEY. Then, do I understand, Mr. Witness, that at 17 you were given this 15-year sentence, of which you served about 5 years, and it was after that that you were arrested on the charge of carrying a gun?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. And was the gun used in the old highway robbery?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. And this is no personal feeling. I am just asking to get the record clear. I am just asking for the record. Were you given one sentence for carrying the gun?

Mr. LONGANO. No; I think it was all in one.

Senator TOBEY. You were sentenced on the highway robbery to 10 to 15 years?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Subsequently you were arrested for carrying a gun; is that right?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. What sentence was given there?

Mr. LONGANO. I was given a year in the county jail.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right. The record shows in 1933 1 year for possession of firearms; is that right, Hudson County jail?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. We will take it offense by offense and tie it down that way.

In 1932 you were convicted for a prohibition violation, were you not?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you got a 4-month sentence?

Mr. LONGANO. Suspended.

Mr. HALLEY. Suspended?

Mr. LONGANO. With a fine.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were also accused of violating your parole at that time; is that right?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you also given a suspended sentence on that charge, or did you get 4 months for that?

Mr. LONGANO. I think that all come under the Hudson County jail sentence. That all combined into one.

Mr. HALLEY. And for the whole thing you went to jail for 1 year?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. For having a revolver in your possession; is that right?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, then, in 1934 you were convicted, were you not, in New York?

Mr. LONGANO. I was never convicted in New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, this may not be yours. I must say in fairness the 1934 conviction conceivably could—however, it is an FBI fingerprint record. It is under the name of Albert Latelli. Did you ever use that name?

Mr. LONGANO. I don't remember ever having used that name.

Mr. HALLEY. You never used that name?

Mr. LONGANO. I don't think I have.

Senator HUNT. The witness knows whether he has ever used that name or whether he has not used that name. Now, answer the question, yes you have, or no you have not. Let's get this record straight.

Mr. LONGANO. Will the Senator say what he said before that so I will understand this? He said something before that about Latelli.

Mr. HALLEY. The question is: Did you ever use the name Albert Latelli?

Mr. LONGANO. Didn't you connect that with something before that?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. I was asking you if you had ever been convicted in New York in 1934.

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. And then I pointed out to you that your FBI fingerprint record apparently shows such a conviction, however, under a name of Albert Latelli. I then asked you if you ever used the name Albert Latelli.

Mr. SELSER. May I ask you whether or not the record indicates that the record is supported by fingerprint records?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. SELSER. Usually returns indicate, and back in the thirties they were not properly supported by records.

Mr. HALLEY. There have been mistakes in the records. There is no question about that. We have not had a chance to check.

Mr. SELSER. The man says he never has been convicted in New York.

Mr. HALLEY. If he says so, on due consideration I believe the committee will accept his statement. It is easy enough to check. I want to get the facts.

Senator HUNT. Now the answer to the direct question: Were you ever known by the name of Albert Latelli? Did you ever use that name?

Mr. LONGANO. Where was this name supposed to be used?

Senator HUNT. Did you ever use it any place at any time? That is the question.

Mr. LONGANO. Well, I don't remember. I can't. Just my honest answer is I don't remember.

Senator TOBEY. Have you ever used any aliases?

Mr. LONGANO. I might have.

Senator TOBEY. What were they that you used?

Mr. LONGANO. I used the name of Devito.

Senator TOBEY. As a last name?

Mr. LONGANO. Or Laurie.

Senator TOBEY. Is that the first name or second?

Mr. LONGANO. Al.

Senator TOBEY. Allen?

Mr. LONGANO. Al Devito.

Senator TOBEY. And what is Laurie's first name?

Mr. LONGANO. Al Laurie. They are the only names I ever remember.

Senator TOBEY. Any other aliases?

Mr. LONGANO. That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Haven't you ever been known to the New York police as Albert Latelli?

Mr. LONGANO. I don't think I have ever been in trouble in New York or any other places.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you were arrested in Miami, Fla., this year, were you not?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes, I was.

Mr. HALLEY. January 19, 1950?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What was that for?

Mr. LONGANO. Questioning on the Brink's robbery.

Mr. HALLEY. Connected with the Boston robbery?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And were you discharged?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right. The FBI was satisfied.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you doing in Miami in January?

Mr. LONGANO. I went for a vacation.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you stay?

Mr. LONGANO. I am trying to think of the hotel now. I just can't think of the name of the hotel, but it isn't that I don't want to tell the name of the hotel.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it on the beach?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you there?

Mr. LONGANO. In Hollywood?

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you there?

Mr. LONGANO. Well, I didn't stay long because after all the publicity I had and everything, I was disgusted and come back.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you there?

Mr. LONGANO. Maybe a week, not even a week I don't think.

Mr. HALLEY. Was your name in the papers when you were arrested?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go down alone or was your family with you?

Mr. LONGANO. I just went down alone.

Mr. HALLEY. Was the General Trading Co. closed up when you were down there?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer. It might tend to incriminate me.

Senator HUNT. The vice chairman directs the witness to answer "Yes" or "No."

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer. It might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. The record shows that the General Trading Co. at Hasbrouck Heights closed its business on January 19, 1950. Was there any connection between your being arrested in Miami and the closing up of the General Trading Co.?

Mr. SELSER. May I object to the form of this question? How could he possibly know what was in the minds of those who made the arrest? This question calls for him to attempt to determine why he was arrested?

Mr. HALLEY. I think he can answer it. Why don't you let him try?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer. It might tend to incriminate me.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question.

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Mr. Longano, have you ever been in a legitimate business?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have not?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the Cole Engineering Co., Lodi, N. J.?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the ground it might incriminate me.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question.

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in Charlie's Grill at Little Ferry, N. J.?

Mr. LONGANO. I was.

Mr. HALLEY. And what was the business of Charlie's Grill at Little Ferry, N. J.?

Mr. LONGANO. It was a restaurant.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever connected with it in any way?

Mr. LONGANO. I worked there.

Mr. HALLEY. In what capacity?

Mr. LONGANO. As assistant to Charles Koslow.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any gambling at Charlie's Grill?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there gambling in any building close to Charlie's Grill or connected with it in any way?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mr. LONGANO. At no time.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, that was a legitimate job you had then, was it not?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You should not be shy about that. Did you ever have any other legitimate job?

Mr. SELSER. He said—

Mr. HALLEY. He testified he never had a legitimate job.

Mr. SELSER. Not a business. These folks seem to think it is not a business unless they are bosses, not employees.

Mr. HALLEY. I will clarify that now. Thank you.

Have you ever had a legitimate job?

Mr. LONGANO. Off and on.

Mr. HALLEY. What were they?

Mr. LONGANO. I have been a salesman for a vegetable firm.

Mr. HALLEY. How long ago was that?

Mr. LONGANO. That was just recently. I had it for awhile. It looked like a good thing. It looked like a good job and it didn't materialize.

Mr. HALLEY. You got no income out of it?

Mr. LONGANO. What?

Mr. HALLEY. You got no income out of it?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Looking at your own tax record from the year 1944 to date, I find the following sources of income listed. Would you state which, if any, are legitimate sources? Cole Engineering, Inc.?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the ground it may incriminate me.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question.

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. The second is called just "commission." Could you tell the committee what you mean by commission?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question.

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. It is noted that in 1949 you reported a commission of $7,750. Could you state what the source of that $7,750 was?

Mr. LONGANO. Repeat that, please.

Mr. HALLEY. You reported commission in 1949 of $7,750. Where did that money come from?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question.

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. You do show income from Charlie's Grill. That was a legitimate job; is that right?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And that was in the amount of $3,136 in 1945; $3,066 in 1946; $3,125 in 1947, and $2,496 in 1948. Is that right?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on advice of counsel.

Senator TOBEY. What is the job he had at Charlie's?

Mr. HALLEY. He said he was assistant manager.

Senator TOBEY. A legitimate eating place, is it?

Mr. SELSER. Senator, his income-tax report is the subject of investigation, and I advise him not to testify to any matters shown on his income-tax reports at this time while this investigation is pending.

Senator TOBEY. Is that an excuse or a reason?

Mr. SELSER. That is a reason, sir, and in my judgment it is the effective reason, as it shall hereafter be determined.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman directs the witness to answer the question.

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Longano, the next item of income is N. & T. Trading Co. Will you state what that was?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on advice of counsel.

Senator TOBEY. Cannot you just tell us what it was?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer it. It might incriminate me.

Senator TOBEY. You mean it might incriminate you to tell us what the business was?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Senator TOBEY. I do wish we had something to make you answer. I think it is an outrage to a committee of the Senate of the United States to have these witnesses come up here and play dumb and curl up and die before us and say, "We won't answer."

Who is running this country? If there is the power in this country I think there is, we will get the answers out of you somehow, in some way, and maybe with interest.

You come before us with a record of the hold-up game, getting money from criminal procedures, and being sentenced for carrying a gun, and when we try to uncover these things by asking civil questions, what do we get? What do we get? A dumb answer, refuse to answer, and won't tell us how you got $30,000, what the business was at all.

I cannot understand the counsel's reasoning that just telling those would affect his test case before the Federal Government, and I do not believe it would. That is his opinion and he has a right to it.

Here is a committee trying to do a conscientious job, and someone is putting rocks on the track, and I am sick of it.

Mr. SELSER. I have already said that if this Senate will adopt a procedure which will permit the disclosure of the information for Senate use—my quarrel is not with the giving of the information but giving it under the program which is here set up, making it evidential to all persons who may seek to use it. Now if the Senate wants to set up a program which will give us the right to disclose this information to the Senate for its use, then please, sir, understand I shall cooperate with the Senate and not advise my client as I am advising him here in this proceeding under these conditions.

Senator HUNT. The Chair would say to the counsel that is not the way we do business, under the table, in the United States Senate.

Mr. SELSER. I am not asking—

Senator HUNT. What we do is open and above board for public information.

Mr. SELSER. I am not asking for anything under the table. I am asking for no favors, but I am refusing in public to discuss matters which in my judgment can be used against this witness. It amounts to compelling him to testify against himself.

Senator HUNT. The advice you are giving to your clients is preventing the Government of the United States from getting information that it is rightfully entitled to.

Mr. SELSER. And I am perfectly willing to see to it that the Government gets its information if it will be done in such manner that this man will not be subjected to these prosecutions.

Now I am not trying to defy the dignity of the Senate at all. I am as loyal a citizen as anybody who lives in this country today. So far as I am concerned, sir, I stand by my record of loyalty to the country.

Senator HUNT. The acting chairman of this committee would like to say that it is interference of counsel like yourself that is preventing the Government from getting a lot of this information, and it is also activity on the part of counsel that is responsible for the continuation of a lot of this gambling and crookedness throughout the United States.

Mr. SELSER. I am very sorry the Senator feels that way, but, of course, I suppose it would serve no purpose for us to exchange views. I am trying to do a job for which I am employed in the representation of my client, and I am doing it as best I can, sir.

My loyalty to my country I am willing to debate with anybody, any time, any place under the proper circumstances.

Senator HUNT. It is a question of ethics as I see the situation.

Senator TOBEY. Here is the State of New Jersey, a strong State and a fine State, which seems to be a hot bed of illegality going on in connection with these operations. Here is testimony that has gone into the record today that $5,000,000 in 5 months was played within these joints.

We have had hearings in New York that covered New Jersey before. I cannot help wondering why the authorities in New Jersey do not watch these things a little more carefully, and where the men with criminal records are operating these places and getting an income of $32,000, why they never at least raise their eyebrows to see the reason why. So the great mad game to get money, the great mad game to get rich goes on, and the law comes in disrepute and democracy is threatened, as I see it. And the young people growing up who see these things happening say, "What is the use of being straight?"

It is a pretty serious thing in all these things, and any State in this Union, and any city in this Nation that has got men in charge of the authorities that are right themselves and want to stop these things, they can stop them pronto. You know it and I know it.

We found it in California, a disreputable situation out there. Things went on in Los Angeles under a pro forma sheriff's office. We found it in connection with politics in California, where a man named Samish rules like a law divine and has more power than the Governor has in some things, and dictates what bills can go through.

And in New Jersey gambling hordes are carrying on, ex-convicts making such money at 34 or 40 or 50 thousand dollars a year de novo and won't tell us where it came from, what the business is.

I again say that any sovereign State in this Nation can stop it tomorrow morning if they want to decide to do it, unless there is some collusion, some protection being paid along the line. That is what we ought to be uncovering in this country. We ought to be indicting some public officials, saying, "Why didn't you do it?" Let the American people once get mad enough and these things will happen, heads will drop, I tell you, and it's about time we did in this country. That is speaking from experience across the country.

Mr. SELSER. May I say to the Senator that it is my belief that persons more brilliant than I ever hope to be brought into being the fifth amendment to the Constitution.

Senator TOBEY. I am not arguing about the fifth amendment to the Constitution at all. There it stands. I am not speaking about that. I am speaking about the prevalence of gambling and crime across this country where officials who have no backbone any more than a chocolate éclair do not enforce a law and do not try to knock heads together and clean house. And I say we found it in California, we found it in New Jersey, we found it in Chicago. We are going to find it some other places before we get through.

Mr. SELSER. I am glad to hear that, sir; and I feel that——

Senator TOBEY. I don't want to forget Florida. I wouldn't slight Florida for the world. We will be there next week.

Mr. SELSER. I think the Senator has given me a sufficient public spanking and I am sinarting under——

Senator TOBEY. I am not spanking you at all. All I am spanking is the apathy and indifference of the public and the inefficiency and lack of desire to enforce the laws of public officials. It has nothing to do with you, sir.

Mr. SELSER. I am sorry I made the remark.

Senator TOBEY. Don't you agree with me?

Mr. SELSER. Yes; I agree with you. As a matter of fact, I was as strong a crusader against these things in public office myself for a period of time, sufficiently long, and have advocated exactly the things you speak about.

Senator TOBEY. I shake hands with you across the table.

Mr. SELSER. But today, sir, I stand in the capacity——

Senator TOBEY. I know what your capacity is. I am not trying to discriminate against you at all. I was making observations about the specific ills in this country of ours.

Mr. SELSER. Let the Senate then set up a program——

Senator TOBEY. We are in it right now.

Mr. SELSER. By which I can give you the information you seek without violating a duty I owe to my clients, and you will have my cooperation. I resent very much the manner in which this thing is being done.

Senator TOBEY. What thing?

Mr. SELSER. This investigation here the last 2 days, which exposes before the public matters which the prosecutors themselves could not do.

This is the way I feel about it, sir, and I feel very keenly, not because I am getting a fair fee, but because I consider I am a member of an honored profession, duty bound to perform duties under the ethics of that profession, and I am doing it.

Senator TOBEY. Now let me state to you in all kindness that you are making this storm yourself. I was not referring to you in any way, in any shape or in any manner. All I said was indicting the supineness of public officials in enforcing laws across the country, and also on the part of the public of not getting mad about these things. And I made the statement, and I repeat it, and you join with me I think—

Mr. SELSER. Yes; I do.

Senator TOBEY. That any State or any Government or subdivision of Government that wants to clean up these ills in the body politic can do it in 24 hours provided there is a desire to do it. There is law enough in this country to do it.

Mr. SELSER. I wish the noble State of New Jersey would put me in a position from which I might exercise some of the powers that the proper officials have.

Senator HUNT. Counsel, you had power, did you not, when one of your clients was evading our subpoena?

Mr. SELSER. Beg your pardon?

Senator HUNT. I say you had some of that power when the previous witness, your client, was evading the subpoena?

Mr. SELSER. That client never evaded the subpoena, Senator.

Senator HUNT. We will not discuss it any further. That is your opinion he didn't.

Mr. SELSER. I know he didn't.

Senator HUNT. This is my opinion, and I know he did.

Mr. SELSER. May I finish my answer to the Senator who opened up an issue which to me is quite touchy?

Senator HUNT. We are all consuming too much time here in exploiting theories. We will proceed with the examination of the witness.

Go ahead, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Longano, is it not a fact that in the year 1948 you received income in the amount of $30,821.50 from the N. & T. Trading Co.?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Senator HUNT. The witness is directed to answer the question.

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Longano, your income tax returns also show income from the Pal Trading Co. What is the Pal Trading Co. Is that a legitimate business?

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel.

Senator HUNT. The witness is directed to answer the question.

Mr. LONGANO. I refuse to answer on advice of counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Longy Zwillman?

Mr. LONGANO. I know him.

Mr. HALLEY. How long?

Mr. LONGANO. I just know him to say hello to; that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever worked for him?

Mr. LONGANO. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been associated with him in any business?

Mr. LONGANO. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Willie Moretti?

Mr. LONGANO. Oh, I know Willie 20 years or more.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever worked for him?

Mr. LONGANO. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. You have not been associated with him?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. He testified, I believe, he took a trip West with you.

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. LONGANO. When he went to California when he was sick. I just don't know the exact date.

Mr. HALLEY. A few years ago?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who went on that trip?

Mr. LONGANO. Who was on that trip?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LONGANO. Myself and him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go by automobile or by some other means?

Mr. LONGANO. We went by train.

Mr. HALLEY. Went by train?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you pay your own expenses, or did he pay yours?

Mr. LONGANO. Well, I guess we both.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean? Did he pay some of your expenses?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you pay any of his expenses?

Mr. LONGANO. No; I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you stop on your way to California, at what places?

Mr. LONGANO. I think at a home—I know a home the Two Black Crows had up there, the Two Black Crows rented it out. I think they call it that on the radio or something.

Senator TOBEX. Moran and something?

Mr. HALLEY. Moran and Mack.

Senator TOBEX. They were good, too.

Mr. LONGANO. It was their estate. It was in Newhawk, Calif.

Mr. HALLEY. Newhawk, Calif.?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make any stops before you got to California?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't stop anywhere?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make any stops on the way back?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You just went straight out and came straight back?

Mr. LONGANO. I come back myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Willie stay there?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay before you came back?

Mr. LONGANO. About a month, I guess it was.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you just vacation in California?

Mr. LONGANO. I rubbed him. You know his legs needed rubbing, and I used to rub for him.

Mr. HALLEY. You acted as sort of a trainer?

Mr. LONGANO. Sort of a masseur.

Mr. HALLEY. You were not the bodyguard, were you?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make any stops yourself on the way back?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Whom did you meet while you were out in California? Did you meet Jack Dragna?

Mr. LONGANO. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you meet John Fischetti?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever met either of those two?

Mr. LONGANO. I might have seen Jack Dragna, not for sure. I don't remember names or faces.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't recall actually meeting him; is that right?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mo Mo Adamo?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir; don't know him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you meet Joe Sica?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Sica?

Mr. LONGANO. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Vincent Mangano?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Of New York?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joseph Profaci?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Vito Genovese?

Mr. LONGANO. I think I met him once. I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him?

Mr. LONGANO. I think at a wedding.

Mr. HALLEY. At Willie Moretti's daughter's wedding?

Mr. LONGANO. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Albert Anastasia?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes; I know Albert.

Mr. HALLEY. You do?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you know him?

Mr. LONGANO. Not long.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Little Augie Pisano?

Mr. LONGANO. Not to talk to.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you met him?

Mr. LONGANO. What?

Mr. HALLEY. You have met him?

Mr. LONGANO. I have met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Salvatore Moretti?

Mr. LONGANO. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jerry Catena?

Mr. LONGANO. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Ralph Conte?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. LONGANO. I know Joe.

Mr. HALLEY. You know Joe?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Joe?

Mr. LONGANO. Maybe. I should say, about 8 years, 8 or 9 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Massei?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Rocco Faschetti?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Milano?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Frank Costello?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Frank Costello?

Mr. LONGANO. I think I was introduced to him at the wedding.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Charley Binaggio?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet him?

Mr. LONGANO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own an automobile?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind?

Mr. LONGANO. Cadillac.

Mr. HALLEY. What model and what year?

Mr. LONGANO. Forty-eight.

Mr. HALLEY. Forty-eight?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What model?

Mr. LONGANO. Sedan.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your wife own an automobile?

Mr. LONGANO. She uses that.

Mr. HALLEY. She uses that?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other automobile?

Mr. LONGANO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever used any other Cadillacs that do not belong to you?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Whose cars do you use?

Mr. LONGANO. I have a friend in the City Motors that have cars there I borrow once in a while.

Mr. HALLEY. Gus Piscale?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he sometimes lend you a green Cadillac convertible?

Mr. LONGANO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Any other Cadillac?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes; they have a Cadillac on the lot there I use a lot.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind is that?

Mr. LONGANO. Cadillac Fleetwood.

Mr. HALLEY. Fleetwood?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Those two are both 1950's, are they not?

Mr. LONGANO. No, I don't think so. Yes; I think one is a '50, and the other is a '46 or something.

Mr. HALLEY. Forty-six?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes; '46 I guess it is.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever use James Cospido's Cadillac?

Mr. LONGANO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I have been wondering why, if you care to say, you have need to borrow those automobiles when you own one of your own?

Mr. LONGANO. Well, my wife is very sickly and I don't want to leave her without a car, and I leave the car with her most of the time.

Mr. HALLEY. I do not think I have any other questions.

Senator HUNT. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. No questions.

Senator HUNT. The witness is excused.

Mr. SELSER. May I address myself to Mr. Halley?

Senator TOBEY. Just a minute. May I say for the record that in my denunciation of different communities into which we have gone and visited and which have showed up rather unfavorably, with criminal interests surrounding them, and lack of proper enforcement of law, I would not want to forget anyone. I mention the situation in St. Louis and Kansas City, which I visited.

Mr. SELSER. If I may with the Senator's permission address Mr. Halley, I should like to purchase from the stenographer a complete record of the proceedings which have been had yesterday and today.

Mr. HALLEY. They are open hearings and the record is available to anybody that wants to buy them.

Mr. SELSER. I had assumed that was so, and may I here and now leave my order with the stenographer for a copy of the record.

Mr. HALLEY. There is no restriction whatsoever on the purchase of the record of open hearings.

Mr. SELSER. I do not intend to return and I thought I might impose on the good nature of Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Just make your arrangements with the stenographer.

Senator HUNT. I might say to the witness he understands he is still under subpoena.

Mr. SELSER. They all do, and that applies equally to Lynch. He understands his subpoena continues.

Senator HUNT. The next witness will be heard in executive session, so we will need to promptly clear the room, please.

(Whereupon, the committee proceeded into executive session, at 4 p. m.)

INVESTIGATION OF ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1951

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE,
New York City, N. Y.

EXECUTIVE SESSION—CONFIDENTIAL

The committee met, pursuant to call of the chairman, at 10 a. m. in room 2832, United States Courthouse Building, Foley Square, Senator Estes Kefauver (chairman) presiding.

Present: Senators Kefauver and Tobey.

Also present: Rudolph Halley, chief counsel.

James Walsh, special counsel; Arnold L. Fein, special counsel; and David Shivitz, assistant counsel.

Patrick Murray, investigator; Lawrence Goddard, investigator; and Howard Brand, investigator, of the special committee staff.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

Let the record show that Senator Tobey and Senator Kefauver are present, and that this meeting is being held subject to a resolution adopted by the full committee authorizing a subcommittee of one or more to hold hearings in New York City.

Senator Tobey is sitting with the chairman today as a member of the subcommittee.

This resolution will be made a part of the record.

I am glad to be here with our distinguished chief counsel, and with our associate and assistant counsel. They have been working very hard up here. Senator Tobey, in order to get things lined up.

Senator TOBEY. I am sure they have.

The CHAIRMAN. Who will be our first witness, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Frank Costello.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Let us have Frank Costello here.

(The testimony of Frank Costello, at this executive session, has been eliminated because it is virtually completely duplicated in the testimony given in the public hearings included in this publication, which were held in New York City on March 13, 14, 15, 16, 19, 20, and 21, 1951.

(The testimony of Mr. Costello in this executive session is on file with the committee and is available for examination by any interested parties.)

The CHAIRMAN. Who is your next witness, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Charles LaForge.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you have Mr. LaForge brought in, please?

Are you Mr. LaForge, sir?

Mr. LAForge. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Sit right over here. First, will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please?

Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. LAForge. I do.

TESTIMONY OF CHARLES LaForge, INSPECTOR, NEW YORK STATE POLICE, TROY, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Halley, let us proceed.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. LAForge. Charles LaForge.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your position?

Mr. LAForge. Inspector of New York State police.

Mr. HALLEY. Where are you stationed, sir?

Mr. LAForge. Troy, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have jurisdiction over Saratoga?

Mr. LAForge. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had?

Mr. LAForge. Jurisdiction?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, have you ever had—is Saratoga, let us say, in your territory?

Mr. LAForge. Saratoga County?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LAForge. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Is the city of Saratoga within your territory?

Mr. LAForge. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the relation with regard to cities as applies to the State police?

Mr. LAForge. Well, according to the executive law of the State of New York, we do not take action in a city, unless we are called in by the mayor, or district attorney, or are ordered to do so by the Governor of the State of New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Saratoga is a city?

Mr. LAForge. May I add to that?

Mr. HALLEY. Go right ahead.

Mr. LAForge. In other words, we may serve a warrant any place without such authority.

Mr. HALLEY. But you make an investigation and arrests within the city, or if you do, you must wait until you are called in by the local authorities, or ordered in by the governor of the State; is that right?

Mr. LAForge. That is our policy.

Senator TOBEY. Is it the policy or the law?

Mr. LAForge. It is according to executive law of the State of New York.

Senator TOBEY. It is the law?

Mr. LAForge. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever ordered to make a survey of gambling conditions in Saratoga City?

Mr. LaFORGE. I made a physical survey of Saratoga; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you make it?

Mr. LaFORGE. 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. During what period?

Mr. LaFORGE. The month of August.

Mr. HALLEY. Pursuant to what instruction or order did you make that survey?

Mr. LaFORGE. By instructions from my chief inspector, Francis McGarvey.

Mr. HALLEY. What were those instructions, do you know?

Mr. LaFORGE. To make a physical survey to find out if gambling was in progress in the city of Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make such a survey?

Mr. LaFORGE. I did.

Mr. HALLEY. I show you a document which I will have marked as exhibit No. 19 for identification.

(The document referred to was marked exhibit No. 19, and appears in the appendix on p. 1727.)

Mr. HALLEY. I will show you this document which has been marked as "Exhibit No. 19." Will you state whether that is a copy of the survey made by you.

Mr. LaFORGE. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The document marked "Exhibit No. 19" will be made a part of the record and part of the testimony of this witness.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you. Would you explain to the committee the conditions you found at Saratoga when you made your survey.

Mr. LaFORGE. I observed that gambling was in progress in all of these places mentioned there [indicating].

Mr. HALLEY. The places mentioned in your report consisted of restaurants with casinos, for the most part, is that right?

Mr. LaFORGE. Night clubs with casinos, that is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. And you found extensive gambling in all of them?

Mr. LaFORGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And it was wide open?

Mr. LaFORGE. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. There was no attempt at concealment, is that right?

Mr. LaFORGE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What further investigation did you make of conditions in Saratoga?

Mr. LaFORGE. What further investigations?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LaFORGE. That is about all, just the gambling.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you talk to any of the local police about the gambling?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or to anybody else about it?

Mr. LaFORGE. To my superiors.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you attempt to ascertain why the gambling had not been closed down at Saratoga by the local authorities?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know a man named Rox?

Mr. LaFORGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is he?

Mr. LaFORGE. Chief of police.

Mr. HALLEY. Of Saratoga?

Mr. LaFORGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. His full name is Patrick Rox? It is spelled R-o-x; is that right?

Mr. LaFORGE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever talked to him?

Mr. LaFORGE. Oh, yes; many times.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever discussed with him the gambling situation in Saratoga?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I have the impression, and not intending to be technical at all, that you had called one of the investigators for our committee, or that you told one of the investigators for our committee that Rox told you that the gambling situation was one that he did not want to talk to you about.

Mr. LaFORGE. Do you mind repeating your question?

Mr. HALLEY. Certainly. I had the impression that you told one of our investigators that Rox took the position that gambling was just something he did not want to talk about at all to you.

Mr. LaFORGE. Why, not to me personally, but if we wanted to execute a warrant or secure any criminal in Saratoga, we asked Patrick Rox if he knew where the man might be, and if he would help us, and so forth, and he was wholly cooperative. But so far as gambling is concerned, I will say no, we never approached the subject.

Mr. HALLEY. You never approached him on that subject?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I don't understand what you mean when you say you did not approach the subject. You mean you did not talk about it?

Mr. LaFORGE. We did not discuss gambling.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you not discuss it with Rox?

Mr. LaFORGE. Well, I guess I did not feel as if we should. Maybe we could not trust him.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, would you elaborate on that for the committee? We are trying to get as much information now about the situation up there as we can. What was the local police situation with respect to gambling up there?

Mr. LaFORGE. Well, I don't know, I cannot tell you too much about that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, we see that when you were ordered in there, you went in and made a thorough survey and described the thing quite accurately. Did you feel that the local police were doing their duty?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you elaborate on why you felt they were not doing their duty? Did you have any information at all?

Mr. LaFORGE. Well, in my own opinion I thought maybe they may have been politically controlled, but I had no way of knowing that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what was the basis for your opinion? The committee will regard it strictly as an opinion. Where would the political control have come from?

Mr. LaFORGE. Well, I assume from the police commissioner.

Mr. HALLEY. At Saratoga?

Mr. LAFORGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his name?

Mr. LAFORGE. Dr. Leonard.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he have any political position?

Mr. LAFORGE. I believe—I am not certain—but I believe that he may be the Democratic leader there, I am not certain.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is the mayor of Saratoga?

Mr. LAFORGE. I do not know.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the position of Mr. Leary?

Mr. LAFORGE. I only know him as an attorney, and he may be the Democratic leader, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Does the sheriff of the county have any jurisdiction over Saratoga?

Mr. LAFORGE. Yes; he does.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you think he would be able to step in there and do something about the gambling?

Mr. LAFORGE. Yes, sir; I believe he would.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any idea of why the sheriff did nothing about it?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever talk to the chief of police about it, about the political set-up?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you talk to Dr. Leonard?

Mr. LAFORGE. I only talked to Dr. Leonard about twice in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know James Leary?

Mr. LAFORGE. I talked to him about two or three times in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do with your report when you completed it?

Mr. LAFORGE. My report was submitted through channels, and it eventually reached the desk of the chief inspector, McGarvey.

Mr. HALLEY. Who had requested the report?

Mr. LAFORGE. Well, my reports were just sent through channels.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, we understood that your report was requested by the governor's office.

Mr. LAFORGE. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it sent through channels to the governor's office?

Mr. LAFORGE. That I would not know.

Mr. HALLEY. Who specifically asked you to make the report? How did the request come to you?

Mr. LAFORGE. Chief Inspector McGarvey.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he say for whom it was or in what connection?

Mr. LAFORGE. It was probably made for ourselves, for information.

Mr. HALLEY. And when you completed it, you sent it to McGarvey; is that right?

Mr. LAFORGE. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell him what you were going to do with it, or did he tell you what he was going to do with it, rather?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have authority without instructions from the governor's office to make informational studies of a place like Saratoga?

Mr. LAFORGE. We have the authority if we get the instructions from our superiors; yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Well, do the State police have authority to go into a city and make a survey of the type you made?

MR. LAFORGE. If we want to find out what is going on around there.

MR. HALLEY. You can do that?

MR. LAFORGE. For our own information.

MR. HALLEY. You can do that, whether or not you act on it?

MR. LAFORGE. Yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Did you make any recommendations to your superior for action?

MR. LAFORGE. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Were you asked for any recommendation?

MR. LAFORGE. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Were you ever instructed to go into Saratoga and take action?

MR. LAFORGE. Yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. When were you instructed to do that?

MR. LAFORGE. Last year.

MR. HALLEY. When was that?

MR. LAFORGE. In the year 1950.

MR. HALLEY. In the year 1950?

MR. LAFORGE. Yes.

MR. HALLEY. On what date?

MR. LAFORGE. Well, I could not tell you the exact date, but it was before Saratoga season opened.

MR. HALLEY. Are you familiar—roughly it would be just at the time of the opening?

MR. LAFORGE. Yes; around the end of July.

MR. HALLEY. At that time what action was taken and where did the orders come from?

MR. LAFORGE. My instructions came from Chief Inspector McGarvey, F. S. McGarvey, and we assigned various men to make a survey, and if anything was in progress we should take immediate action.

MR. HALLEY. What did you do when you got there? Did you take any action?

MR. LAFORGE. There was no action to take.

MR. HALLEY. They just did not open up the place?

MR. LAFORGE. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. At the time you got there were there any indications that they had been planning to open?

MR. LAFORGE. Well, there were rumors to that effect.

MR. HALLEY. Were they the ordinary and usual gambling establishments that were up there? By the way, what was the usual time that gambling started?

MR. LAFORGE. I believe in the beginning of the season.

MR. HALLEY. The usual gambling group was there?

MR. LAFORGE. I believe at the beginning of the season.

MR. HALLEY. And they were all there apparently for some reason; is that right?

MR. LAFORGE. That is right.

MR. HALLEY. And then when the State police appeared on the scene they just did not open?

MR. LAFORGE. They just did not open at all.

MR. HALLEY. Now, in 1949, did you take any action in Saratoga?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did the State police take any action, that you know of, aside from any you may have personally taken?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1949 were you in charge of the area?

Mr. LaFORGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been in charge of that area?

Mr. LaFORGE. Since June 1945.

Mr. HALLEY. Up to August of 1950, did you on any other occasion take any action to close down gambling establishments in the city of Saratoga?

Mr. LaFORGE. Up until 1950, you say?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any action taken in 1949?

Mr. LaFORGE. There may have been in the latter part of 1949, perhaps maybe the month of October or November of that year, I am not certain.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you have records that would show it?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, I have no records of that.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there anything done during the season, the racing season, in 1949?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. If anything was done it would be done at your direction?

Mr. LaFORGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How many troopers are under your command?

Mr. LaFORGE. Well, right now we have about 22 plainclothesmen.

Mr. HALLEY. And the barracks are in Troy?

Mr. LaFORGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How large an area do you cover?

Mr. LaFORGE. 11½ counties.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know of your own knowledge whether there is gambling in any place in the counties that are under your control, besides Saratoga, such as Mechanicsville and Gloversville?

Mr. LaFORGE. This was in Mechanicsville, I think we cleaned that out pretty well.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. LaFORGE. I believe in 1948. That is in Saratoga County.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the name of the place?

Mr. LaFORGE. Oh, we made a wholesale clean-up of all the slot machines and horse rooms there.

Mr. HALLEY. Were there any dice and roulette games?

Mr. LaFORGE. There was. We cleaned out a gambling room, but it was not in operation. We took all of the equipment. It was a place known as Slicky Joyce's.

Mr. HALLEY. Are there any other gambling establishments that you know of under your jurisdiction?

Mr. LaFORGE. Not under my jurisdiction.

Mr. HALLEY. In any of the cities?

Mr. LaFORGE. There may be, but not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you heard rumors? Have you had information that there are such places?

Mr. LaFORGE. Well, we have information that there are probably horse rooms in the cities of Albany, Gloversville, Johnstown, the city of Amsterdam, and we cleaned out the city of Hudson last year.

Mr. HALLEY. What determination is made as to whether to ask the Governor's permission to go into a city or not?

Mr. LaFORGE. The district attorney requests it.

Mr. HALLEY. Suppose no request was made locally?

Mr. LaFORGE. Then nothing is done about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, the Governor has the power to order something to be done, if you recommend it to him, does he not?

Mr. LaFORGE. Well, I would not recommend it to the Governor. I have no contact with the Governor whatsoever.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever filed information or reports to your superiors on these other cities, other than Saratoga?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir; outside of the city of Hudson last year.

Mr. HALLEY. How did the clean-up in Hudson come about?

Mr. LaFORGE. The district attorney requested it through our superintendent, John A. Gaffney.

Mr. HALLEY. And then did you make a survey?

Mr. LaFORGE. We made a survey and took action.

Mr. HALLEY. Were arrests made?

Mr. LaFORGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, just to get the record absolutely clear on the present survey that we are talking about now in Saratoga, when you completed it you turned it over to Mr. McGarvey?

Mr. LaFORGE. I turned my reports, that went through channels, through the mail, to the chief inspector, Francis McGarvey.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is he located?

Mr. LaFORGE. At Albany, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know what he did with it?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever discussed it with him or with any of your superiors?

Mr. LaFORGE. About the gambling?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LaFORGE. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have discussed your report?

Mr. LaFORGE. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Since you made it?

Mr. LaFORGE. Oh, yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any discussion of what action could or should be taken about the report?

Mr. LaFORGE. Well, we were prepared with the information that we had, in the event we had a complaint from the district attorney in their city, we have had enough of a physical set-up to take action. The reason we made this survey is that Saratoga only opens for 28 days, and if you receive a complaint on a minute's notice, we would like to know about it.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the 28-day period in Saratoga?

Mr. LaFORGE. It varies. That is the racing season.

Mr. HALLEY. It is the racing season.

Mr. LAFORGE. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Generally from the beginning of August up to about——

Mr. LAFORGE. Sometimes it is a few days after the beginning of August until a few days in September. It varies. Sometimes it starts in July and ends at the end of August.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, when you talked to your superiors about the gambling situation in Saratoga, was the suggestion ever made that the situation should be called to the Governor's attention?

Mr. LAFORGE. Will you repeat that?

Mr. HALLEY. In discussing the Saratoga situation with your superiors, was the suggestion ever made that the matter be called to the attention of the Governor?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, wouldn't that be one way to get authority to go in and enforce the laws of the State of New York?

Mr. LAFORGE. Well, after all, we are just a small force of men. We have plenty to do outside of the cities, which are not controlled by local police; it would not be up to us to suggest whether any city should be cleaned out.

Mr. HALLEY. In any event, you made no such suggestion?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. When you made this report to Mr. McGarvey, nothing was done about it, was there, the 1947 report?

Mr. LAFORGE. Nothing was done with regard to action in the city of Saratoga.

Senator TOBEY. Your report shows that there were gambling houses. What action was taken based upon that report of yours?

Mr. LAFORGE. No action.

Senator TOBEY. Who was it up to to take action; was it up to Mr. McGarvey?

Mr. LAFORGE. I don't think we would take action unless there was a complaint.

Senator TOBEY. Well, the fact remains that you discovered these hellholes out there, didn't you?

Mr. LAFORGE. I did.

Senator TOBEY. And then as you went along in your work as a policeman and a citizen, you found out that there was not a darn thing done about it?

Mr. LAFORGE. No.

Senator TOBEY. Why didn't you go to McGarvey and say, "What are you going to do about it?"

Why didn't you say, "If you don't do anything about it, I will go up to the Governor"?

Mr. LAFORGE. That is not up to me to do that.

Senator TOBEY. Oh, yes, it is.

Mr. LAFORGE. No; it is not.

Senator TOBEY. Why not?

Mr. LAFORGE. Because it is not.

Senator TOBEY. Well, the organization of the police is no stronger than its weakest link, and you certainly were a weak link, or rather, you had a weak link there.

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. In McGarvey.

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. The man did not do a "darn" thing about it; did he?

Mr. LAFORGE. He did not take any action on that, because we did not have the authority.

Senator TOBEY. But you had the power to bring it to the attention of those in authority.

Mr. LAFORGE. I did bring it to the attention of my superior.

Senator TOBEY. And he did not do a thing about it; did he?

Mr. LAFORGE. No.

Senator TOBEY. Then what did you do, just sit quiescent?

Mr. LAFORGE. I suppose if you want to call it that.

Senator TOBEY. Why didn't you, as a public-spirited citizen and policeman, say, "I will go to the Governor about it"?

Mr. LAFORGE. We just don't do those things.

Senator TOBEY. Why not?

Mr. LAFORGE. (No answer.)

Senator TOBEY. If there was a man who was crooked in his heart, and had no interest in the public welfare, you would just sit supinely by and say, "I have done my part and made my investigation"?

Mr. LAFORGE. Let me tell you something about Chief McGarvey. He is a well-respected man and an upright citizen. I would like to straighten you out on that.

Senator TOBEY. Well, he didn't do a thing about it; did he?

Mr. LAFORGE. He did not have the authority to do anything.

Senator TOBEY. What did he do, just put the report in his desk and pigeonhole it?

Mr. LAFORGE. You would have to ask him about that.

Senator TOBEY. Do you know what he did with it?

Mr. LAFORGE. No.

Senator TOBEY. Did you ask him?

Mr. LAFORGE. No.

Senator TOBEY. So you just let it drop?

Mr. LAFORGE. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Well, we have so many men drawing salaries in the State and Nation who just do what they have to do, and do nothing further to show up a public menace. Don't you think that you have a duty beyond drawing your pay and holding your job, and when a McGarvey, or a Smith, or a Jones doesn't do anything about it, then is it not incumbent upon you as a citizen to show him up and prod him along, get him into the press and get publicity on it?

Mr. LAFORGE. We just don't do those things.

Senator TOBEY. I see. You don't?

Mr. LAFORGE. No.

Senator TOBEY. Then I am asking you why?

Mr. LAFORGE. Because——

Senator TOBEY. The public welfare is bigger than your interest or McGarvey's interest.

Mr. LAFORGE. Well, that is your opinion, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. That is my opinion. You are not aiding us or abetting us in any way. You do nothing, you just sit supinely back and still hold your job.

Mr. LAFORGE. That is correct.

Senator TOBEY. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. May I ask, in this 1947 report that you made, and the places that are listed here, were they eating and drinking and gambling places, did eating, drinking, and gambling take place all in the same places there?

Mr. LAForge. No; they had separate rooms for gambling.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, you would just go through another door into the gambling part, would you not?

Mr. LAForge. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. It was all under the same roof?

Mr. LAForge. All under the same roof; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. They could not get along very well, could they, without a liquor permit? These gambling places all served liquor, didn't they?

Mr. LAForge. Yes; they all served liquor.

The CHAIRMAN. I notice here, sir, that here for instance is a State liquor-authority release, October 4, 1950, in which it tells about revocations, and that they had gotten revocations on the grounds of permitting gambling in licensed premises. That is a ground for revocation, apparently.

But do you know of any of those liquor permits at Saratoga being revoked?

Mr. LAForge. I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. Does that come under your jurisdiction?

Mr. LAForge. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. If they revoked a liquor permit they would have a hard time operating, wouldn't they?

Mr. LAForge. I believe so.

The CHAIRMAN. You have to have food and drinking as a necessary part of the gambling establishment, isn't that right?

Mr. LAForge. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. That is true from your experience?

Mr. LAForge. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. In this report of yours of 1947, in two pages, you mention the word "operators." What does an operator mean? Is that the man who runs the roulette wheels and runs the tables?

Mr. LAForge. The owners of the concession, I believe; the gambling concession.

Senator TOBEY. In this case operators are owners?

Mr. LAForge. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. I notice that you have Joe Adonis as an operator and I wondered whether he handled the dice tables or the finances.

Mr. LAForge. The financial end, I believe.

The CHAIRMAN. Just for identification and not to be copied into the record, as it is too lengthy, we will place in as an exhibit the document I was referring to. What will that be, exhibit No. 20?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, exhibit No. 20.

(The document referred to was marked as exhibit No. 20, and is on file with the committee.)

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have anything else, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes; two things.

First, do you make any reports to the State liquor authority on the basis of your information?

Mr. LAForge. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Is there no procedure set up for such a report?

Mr. LAForge. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When was the last raid made in Saratoga on any gambling house before 1950 and, of course, in 1950 you did not have to raid them; they just did not open?

Mr. LAForge. I could not tell you that, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there one in 1941?

Mr. LAForge. I was not stationed there then.

Mr. HALLEY. None were made since you became the officer in charge?

Mr. LAForge. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you. I have nothing else.

The CHAIRMAN. Do any of you gentlemen have any questions? All right, thank you very much, sir.

Mr. LAForge. You are welcome, sir.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Will you call your next witness, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes; we will call Mr. Gaffney.

The CHAIRMAN. Good morning, Mr. Gaffney. Will you raise your right hand, please.

Do you solemnly swear to the testimony you give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JOHN A. GAFFNEY, SUPERINTENDENT, NEW YORK STATE POLICE

Mr. HALLEY. Will you state your full name, please.

Mr. GAFFNEY. John A. Gaffney.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your title, please?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Superintendent of the New York State Police.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you held that position?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Since December 1943.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to that, what was your position?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I was the deputy superintendent from July 1943 until December 1943. Before that, I was captain of Troop K at Hawthorne.

Mr. HALLEY. For how long.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Seven years.

Mr. HALLEY. As a New Yorker, I would like to say at the outset of your testimony that I personally have had the highest regards for the State police, and particularly did I have affection for Troop K of Hawthorne which, during my stay at the United States attorney's office, repeatedly brought in prohibition and still cases and worked with us very effectively.

The CHAIRMAN. You look like an awfully young man to have had so much experience. How old are you, sir?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I am 50.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Gaffney, what we are interested in primarily is the Saratoga gambling picture. A survey of gambling was made by the State police in Saratoga; is that correct?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that made?

Mr. GAFFNEY. In 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. Under whose direction was that made?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Mine.

Mr. HALLEY. Under what circumstances did you order the survey made?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, for the reason that I wanted to have some idea of what was going on, in case we had a complaint from the district attorney or the people in authority there.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you asked to make that survey by any other agency of the State government?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. No such request came from the office of the Governor?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And such a survey was made, however?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. It was primarily your own idea and it was done on your own initiative?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Before ordering the survey made, did you discuss it with anyone else?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you order to make the survey?

Mr. GAFFNEY. The chief inspector, McGarvey.

Mr. HALLEY. Who actually made the survey?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think it was done under the direction of LaForge of that district.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is the district with headquarters at Troy?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a copy of that survey, sir?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you present it to the committee, please?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Certainly [handing document to counsel].

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we don't want to take your original, if this is the original.

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is a copy of it.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. I will offer this as exhibit of Witness Gaffney.

The CHAIRMAN. It will be marked and received.

(See exhibit No. 19, appendix, p. 1727.)

Mr. HALLEY. I note that this survey is dated August 6, 1947. Would that be immediately after the opening of the so-called season at Saratoga?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, do you remember when you received the survey?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I would say it was a day or so after that date, whatever it is, the 6th or 7th.

Mr. HALLEY. And from whom did you receive it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. The chief inspector.

Mr. HALLEY. McGarvey?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do with it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I put it in my desk.

Mr. HALLEY. You just filed it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you convey the information to anyone else?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it within your power to do anything about the conditions revealed by this survey?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Looking at the survey, exhibit No. 19, I notice for instance that at Smith's Interlochen at Saratoga Spa there is a description of gambling equipment consisting of four roulette wheels, three crap tables, one large wheel, silver dollars placed on numbers, card tables, blackjack dealer, and one bird cage.

With information like that before you, didn't you have any authority to take any action?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what were the limitations upon your authority?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is a city, Saratoga. They have an organized police department there.

Mr. HALLEY. Under the circumstances, what is the law of the State of New York regarding your powers within a city?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Upon request of the mayor or order of the Governor, is the law.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, you are an appointee of the Governor, is that correct?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you transmit this report or any summary of it to the Governor or anybody on his immediate staff?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you not do so?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, we just do not ever do anything like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, why not?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That was just for my own information, and I kept it. There was not any reason for me to give it to anybody else.

Mr. HALLEY. You are the head of the State police; is that right?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is an enforcement arm of the State government, is that it, a law-enforcement arm?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Not in cities.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, even in the cities if the Governor so orders.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think the law read only expressly on order or request of the mayor, is the way the law reads, so far as the State police is concerned.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't it also on request of the Governor?

Mr. GAFFNEY. By order of the Governor.

Mr. HALLEY. He does not need a riot to order you in if he wants to order you in?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No; I would say not.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't it occur to you that the Governor would be interested in knowing of this condition, and that for his own protection he should know it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I never felt that way; no.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you reason that; from the viewpoint of this committee the Governor certainly is just one man with many duties, and he relies on the heads of his various departments? If the State police do not tell him what is going on in the State, who would?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I did not tell him, I know that.

Mr. HALLEY. With whom did you ever discuss the gambling situation in Saratoga?

Mr. GAFFNEY. With members of the division.

Mr. HALLEY. For instance, just going through this at random, it is obvious that in approximately seven places—seven places are described here in which gambling seemed to be in progress.

I find another place, the Arrowhead, at Saratoga Spa, N. Y., operated by Joe Adonis, Charles Nanni, J. A. Coakley, alias O. K. Coakley, and Lefty Clark, of Detroit.

Now, in the operation of this Arrowhead Inn there were some very well known and infamous gangland characters; is that not so?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I would say "Yes."

Mr. HALLEY. Certainly Adonis has a record which is well known.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And I presume that as an efficient law-enforcement officer you would know that Lefty Clark of Detroit is the same man whose alias is William Bischoff, who operates gambling establishments in other parts of the country?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Under those circumstances did you not discuss this condition with anybody in the executive branch of the government of the State of New York?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you think that the Governor would be interested?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I cannot answer that, as to whether he would or not.

Mr. HALLEY. How often do you see the Governor of the State of New York?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Not very often.

Mr. HALLEY. Once a month?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How often do you see his executive secretary?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, that varies. Sometimes a couple of times a week, sometimes not for a couple of months.

Mr. HALLEY. There are various State police matters that you discuss at the executive mansion; is that right?

Mr. GAFFNEY. At the mansion?

Mr. HALLEY. Or at the capitol?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, at the executive chambers?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What, for instance, would be of more significance to the Governor, or to his immediate staff, than this condition at Saratoga?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, Saratoga is no secret, so far as I am concerned. It has been going on that way for years, so that everybody knows about it.

MR. HALLEY. What do you mean when you say everybody knows about it?

MR. GAFFNEY. Well, I think all the people that go there know about it. They say that there are 50,000 people at the track, and they frequent those other places, so there is no secret as to what is going on there.

MR. HALLEY. You mean that most informed people in the State know about it?

MR. GAFFNEY. I should think so, yes.

MR. HALLEY. Did you just presume that the people of the executive offices must have known about it?

MR. GAFFNEY. I should imagine they did.

MR. HALLEY. You would find it hard to understand how they could help knowing about it; is that right?

MR. GAFFNEY. Well, I should think they would know about it.

MR. HALLEY. Now, you made the report, I gather, so that in the event of a complaint you would know just what the situation was, and you would be ready to act; is that correct?

MR. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Did you make any effort to ascertain the situation which resulted in the failure of the local Saratoga authorities to do anything about the gambling picture in Saratoga?

MR. GAFFNEY. No, I never did.

MR. HALLEY. Can you state your reasons for that?

MR. GAFFNEY. I did not think it was my duty to do so.

MR. HALLEY. Well, there was obviously a breakdown of law enforcement in the locality, was there not? Wouldn't that be correct?

MR. GAFFNEY. Apparently, yes.

MR. HALLEY. Would it not be your duty to find out the reasons for it, in the event that you suddenly became charged with the duty of enforcing the law?

MR. GAFFNEY. I think that was up to the local authority, the district attorney or the mayor, or somebody else like that.

MR. HALLEY. When, for the first time, did the State troopers take action in Saratoga?

MR. GAFFNEY. I think it was in September of 1949.

MR. HALLEY. What date in September?

MR. GAFFNEY. What date?

MR. HALLEY. Yes.

MR. GAFFNEY. Well, I could not give you the actual date, but somewhere in September or the first part of October.

MR. HALLEY. Now, at that time the Governor ordered the troopers to go into Saratoga and suppress gambling; is that right?

MR. GAFFNEY. Yes.

MR. HALLEY. Do you know the occasion for that order?

MR. GAFFNEY. I think it was the result of this fellow Weiss' wife being sore about his being clipped up there for a considerable amount of money, and she made a complaint.

MR. HALLEY. In fact, she brought a lawsuit to require the attorney general, I believe, of New York State, to enforce the law; is that not right?

MR. GAFFNEY. I am not sure of that. I think there was some suit in the supreme court up there. As to what it was, I am not sure about that.

Mr. HALLEY. It received a fairly large amount of publicity, did it not?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes; it was in the papers.

Mr. HALLEY. That lawsuit was brought during the spring of 1949, was it not?

Mr. GAFFNEY. In the spring of 1949?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. When was it brought?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think it must have been sometime after August 1949, at least.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the basis for your belief?

Mr. GAFFNEY. What is that?

Mr. HALLEY. What is the basis for your belief?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think the holler was that he was clipped during the 1949 operations in Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. As a matter of fact, the lawsuit was filed in 1948, when on August 17, 1948, a motion for a temporary action was brought. The motion was denied and an appeal was filed, still in August of 1948.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I am not sure of the date. I thought it was 1949.

Mr. HALLEY. As a New Yorker I had read it as having been early, I remembered it as having been earlier than the 1949 season.

Well, would the Governor's office not be able to act on the basis of the report you just furnished the committee? Suppose you had transmitted that to the Governor's office, would he have been able to act on that and order you in?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think that he would; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. It would certainly be at least as effective as the Weiss lawsuit?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes; I would say so.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to September or October 1949—and for the record I will state it was after the close of the season in 1949—prior to that date when did the New York State police last do anything about Saratoga?

Mr. GAFFNEY. How far back are you going?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, as far as you have to go to find out the last action taken at Saratoga City by the New York State police.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I think in 1939 they sent up a detail of men to close the places. Prior to that I cannot remember anything.

Mr. HALLEY. And in 1941 there was, I believe, the last raid on Piping Rock?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, in 1941 I was not up there. I was down this way.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1939 did they actually close any places?

Mr. GAFFNEY. They were closed by the time we got there.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that if the local authorities know that the State police intend to act, that they just close down?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. That is what happened, in fact, in 1950, is it not?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. But we made some arrests there.

Mr. HALLEY. In which year?

Mr. GAFFNEY. 1950.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you make arrests?

Mr. GAFFNEY. On slot machines and horse rooms.

Mr. HALLEY. But the large gambling places just did not open?

Mr. GAFFNEY. They did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Evidently word had gotten around that the State police were going to act; is that right?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Apparently.

Senator TOBEY. Who tipped them off?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I do not have the slightest idea, Senator. We made two arrests, as soon as we found slot machines there and convicted them, and I guess the word went out that we were working in there from that.

Mr. HALLEY. Where else besides Saratoga do you have information in your official capacity that open gambling is going on in the State of New York, or was going on during the year 1950?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That I have in writing, you mean?

Mr. HALLEY. In writing or otherwise, formally or informally.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Do you mean in other cities?

Mr. HALLEY. Cities, counties, villages, and the open country, anything at all.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I guess there is gambling all over.

Mr. HALLEY. I mean wide-open gambling on a large scale, let's put it that way.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Right now?

Mr. HALLEY. No. Say anytime during 1950.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I don't know of any particular place in the last 6 months.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's go back to the summer of 1950.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I don't know of any place particularly.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the Montauk?

Mr. GAFFNEY. In Suffolk County. The Star Island Casino some years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Tell the committee about the Star Island Casino.

Mr. GAFFNEY. That was when I was captain of K troop some years ago. I have not heard anything recently.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you heard that Nassau County was running gambling wide open this summer?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, I did not. Well, I will take that back. I did hear there was some gambling going on out there, and I sent an officer out there in July or August of last year, and he reported back that there wasn't anything out that way.

Mr. HALLEY. When did he go, in July or August?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. It was one of those summer months.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether there was any gambling in the Frank Breede Restaurant at Smithtown, Long Island, this summer?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think there were some pictures in the newspaper from down there, that there was actual gambling, and I think there was an arrest made by the district attorney's man. I don't think we were in on that.

Mr. HALLEY. You took no action?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I don't think we were in on it; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Is there any place else that you know of where gambling was going on wide open throughout the State of New York?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. At Albany, for instance?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No. Of course, you do hear rumors that there are various places.

Mr. HALLEY. Have there been horse parlors in Albany?

Mr. GAFFNEY. What is that?

Mr. HALLEY. Have there been horse parlors in Albany?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Is there any gambling, or has there been, in the last 3 or, let us say, 4 years at Mechanicsville?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes; we clipped some slot machines there.

Mr. HALLEY. Has there been any gambling establishments, dice games?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Horse room.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you close the horse room?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were there any dice games?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No. Cohoes is a dice game.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you close that?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you close that?

Mr. GAFFNEY. About a year and a half ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Is Cohoes a city?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And on whose authority did you go into Cohoes?

Mr. GAFFNEY. The district attorney of Albany County.

Mr. HALLEY. Is there any gambling that you know of in Gloversville?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No; not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Or in Buffalo?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Rochester?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No. I guess there are horse rooms in some of those cities that you mention, but to my knowledge and personal information, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course, Montauk is not in any city; you would have complete authority to go out there?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is Smithtown a city?

Mr. GAFFNEY. They have town police there; the town of Smithtown.

Mr. HALLEY. Therefore, you would not be able to go in there?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, we would. We do. We go in towns.

Mr. HALLEY. It is only cities that you do not go into?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. So if that restaurant in Smithtown had wide-open gambling you would have had authority to close it; is that right?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And if the Montauk Inn had wide-open gambling, you would have authority to close that?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. The committee has considerable information that these places were running. Is that a surprise to you?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When I say they were running, I mean during the year 1950; is that a surprise?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, it is.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you get a rumor about Montauk Inn?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think I read it in the column of one of the New York papers. It said that gambling was flourishing on the east end of Long Island.

Mr. HALLEY. You asked the State troopers to go in there and take a look?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. It was my understanding that the district attorney was apprised of it, too.

Mr. HALLEY. And they found nothing?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Returning to Saratoga, it is extremely difficult for me to understand why you would not call such conditions as your 1947 report disclosed to the Governor's attention. I just don't understand that.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I don't think it was my duty to do so, and furthermore, if I did, I would probably be out of a job, because it was not my responsibility.

Mr. HALLEY. Why would you be out of a job if you reported that?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Because if I was falling down on the job that I was supposed to be doing, I would not be there.

Mr. HALLEY. How would you be falling down on the job? I thought you said you had no authority to go into a city.

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is why I would not go to them.

Mr. HALLEY. What does that have to do with it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. If I went to the Governor and said that I was falling down on the job I was supposed to do, I would not be there.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you were not supposed to do that job unless he told you to.

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is true.

Mr. HALLEY. As head of the State police, wouldn't it be your duty to, say, in the city of Saratoga, say to the Governor that the city of Saratoga's law-enforcement agency had fallen down, and that gambling was running wide open, and that it was in the hands of a bunch of well-known crooks operating all over the country, wouldn't it be your duty to ask him to authorize the State police to go in and do something about it? Wouldn't that be a perfectly reasonable position for you to take?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes; I suppose it would.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you offer any other reason for not doing this, other than you just did not think of it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I won't say that I did not think of it. I knew that the condition was there. I did not do it. That is all I can say.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you tell the committee why you did not do it?

The committee is, naturally, very anxious to find out whether the political pressures, for instance, in Saratoga were such that it would be just something you thought unwise for you to do.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, that is pretty hard to answer. I did not do it, that is about all I can say. It is a condition that has been there for 25 years, to my knowledge, and it is not any secret to anybody, so therefore I assume that everybody knew it, and it was not my position to tell anybody what was going on there.

Mr. HALLEY. You thought enough of it to cite chapter and verse; isn't that right?

Mr. GAFFNEY. What is that?

Mr. HALLEY. You thought enough of it to get it down in writing and make a pretty detailed report.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. It is one thing to know there is wide-open gambling in the place, and another thing to go in and count the dice tables and roulette wheels, and find out that Joe Adonis is in one joint, and Meyer Lansky is another joint, and so on down the line?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And when you see these fellows from all over the country with bad reputations in there, that gets to be a really serious situation, don't you think?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes: I would say that it did, but that report—may I explain to you, that when I asked them to make a report I don't expect them to come up with how many dice tables or who owns it. As a matter of fact, I don't know whether they could prove who owned it. That was just information that my men picked up.

Mr. HALLEY. I might say that we did not ask the man who made the inspection, but my guess is that if he just took off his coat and hat and strolled through the place in a civilian suit, that he could do it by just counting on the fingers of his left hand the number of dice tables, and nobody would pay any attention to a man walking into those joints during the season, they were so full, I understand.

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is true.

Mr. HALLEY. So that I should think the proof would be whoever did the counting could get on the witness stand and raise his right hand and say, "I counted six tables, guys were shooting craps, I saw it."

Mr. GAFFNEY. I don't know whether he could or not.

Another thing, Mr. Halley, if there was an order to raid that place, you know, they have a short time of about 24 days of actual operation, and you have to have a pretty good line-up on what you are going to hit, and what the set-up is, if you expect to get to work.

Mr. HALLEY. All you have to do, if there are 7 joints, if you took 14 men and just went in and grabbed what you could in each joint, you would have a pretty good case; wouldn't you?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Not from my information, the way those places were patronized, you would have had a hell of a time getting in with so many people in the place.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean it would be so jammed that the troopers could not get in because of the crush?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, that is facetious. You are just being facetious; aren't you?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I mean, to get into the place before things are thrown out of the window before you can get at them.

Mr. HALLEY. You have authority to act in plain clothes; do you not?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You could just walk in and take a look.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. But I am talking about an actual raid.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, it was not necessary to raid these joints. A raid is only necessary when a door is locked, there is a steel door, and then you have to break it down.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. All you would have to do would be to go in there with a few troopers and some deputies, each one armed with a warrant, and serve a warrant on four dealers, and walk in to the cashier and serve him with a warrant, and you are through, you have made your raid.

To me, as an amateur, it looks like something that a kindergarten class could do.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes; they probably could.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there a political situation in Saratoga that resulted in the protection of these people; do you know?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I would not know.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, from your experience as a law-enforcement officer, and as the head of a body of police for whom I personally have the highest regard, wouldn't you say that the only way that an operation like that could continue would be with the full connivance of the local authorities?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Absolutely. They don't go unless they are all right.

Mr. HALLEY. When you say they don't go unless they are all right, you mean they must have some understanding with the local authorities that they will not be molested?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And that too much of an investment is involved in opening a place like, say, the Arrowhead Inn, if you are going to be closed down the next day?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, they don't take a clip like that, unless they are all right.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no more questions.

Senator TOBEY. Mr. Gaffney, have you talked to Mr. LaForge today?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Have you talked to him since we adjourned this morning?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. What did he tell you?

Mr. GAFFNEY. He just said that they asked about the report, and why the law was not enforced in Saratoga.

Senator TOBEY. Anything else?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, he said he had a hard time.

Senator TOBEY. Well, you are appointed by the Governor; is that right?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Then it is a fair comment to make that having been appointed by the Governor you are answerable to the Governor primarily?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. In other words, below the Governor is Mr. Gaffney, the chief of the State police?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I did not get the question.

Senator TOBEY. Well, suppose we made a chart, there would be the Governor at the top, and below that is Mr. Gaffney, the superintendent of State police?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. And you had your man LaForge go in in 1947, and make a survey, and he gave a pretty comprehensive report that is now in evidence, citing the details of the gambling that was going on. He said that was given to McGarvey.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Do you know him?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir; of course.

Senator TOBEY. And McGarvey got the report.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I am the superintendent, and Chief McGarvey is under me, and LaForge is under him.

Senator TOBEY. That is what I am getting at. When Mr. LaForge filed his report he filed it with Mr. McGarvey; is that correct?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. And did McGarvey bring it to your attention then?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. What did you do with it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I looked it over and put it in my desk.

Senator TOBEY. Do you mean to say that you just placed it in a pigeonhole?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I would not say I placed it in a pigeonhole.

Senator TOBEY. What did you do, lay it out there flat open, upward to see?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I guess many people could.

Senator TOBEY. What action did you take on the report you had of the vice and illegality that was going on there?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I did not take any action.

Senator TOBEY. Why not?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Because we don't operate in the cities.

Senator TOBEY. What is that?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Because we don't operate in the cities.

Senator TOBEY. Let me get this clear now. You have no jurisdiction in the cities?

Mr. GAFFNEY. We have jurisdiction under certain conditions.

Senator TOBEY. Well, you had jurisdiction to send a man in to make a survey and a report, didn't you?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. And he came back and reported that crime was going on, didn't he?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. And if you were superintendent of State police, you would not have that job unless in your heart you had a hatred of all wrongdoing.

Accepting that as a power on you, how could you not do anything about it? Wouldn't you naturally as an A-No. 1 citizen and a good chief of police, appointed by the Governor, by Governor Dewey, wouldn't you walk in and say, "Here are the conditions. They are illegal. They are flaunting the law. They are figuratively thumbing their nose at the law, and it is up to you, Mr. Governor"?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I did not do that.

Senator TOBEY. Why didn't you do that?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Because I did not think it was my responsibility to do so.

Senator TOBEY. Whose responsibility was it to stop crime in that city?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think it is the duty of the elected authorities.

Senator TOBEY. Who do you mean by that?

Mr. GAFFNEY. The district attorney or the mayor.

Senator TOBEY. Did you take it up with the district attorney?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Did you take it up with the mayor?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You just didn't take it up with anybody?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. In other words, the thing was just in a comatose state, and it was a dead document?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You put it in storage and did nothing about it at all, and you are chief of police of the State of New York, and people look to you with confidence to protect them from illegality, and all you did was to put it in your desk and file it away?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir. I am not responsible to the cities.

Senator TOBEY. Who are you responsible to?

Mr. GAFFNEY. To the State taxpayers and the taxpayers in the rural areas.

Senator TOBEY. You are responsible to the Governor, aren't you?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Do you think he would condone circumstances such as existed there?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Senator TOBEY. You know what kind of a man he is?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. The record is that he hates illegality and crime. You know that is his record, don't you?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Well, if you saw Tom Dewey and said, "This is a rotten condition, what shall I do, Mr. Governor?" what do you suppose he would say?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Go in and clean it up.

Senator TOBEY. Didn't you hate it yourself? Didn't you feel a sense of outraged dignity seeing these things going on?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Well, you were in a position where you were acting pro bono publico, and you were sworn to uphold the law, from your own testimony, and you just ignore a document like this and put it in cold storage. When you were asked what you thought the Governor would do about it if he knew it, you said you thought the Governor would clean it up, and then you did not bring it to his attention. You just did not do a thing about it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Well, what good are you, if you have a report showing illegality before you and you pay no attention to it, and just put it away in cold storage?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is not my responsibility.

Senator TOBEY. Of course, it is your responsibility.

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is your opinion.

Senator TOBEY. Every time you say that, you just indict yourself. How do you think it would look tomorrow in the papers if we said that you said it was not your responsibility? Suppose it said in the paper that you said that, "I am appointed by the Governor and I am responsible to him. My deputies brought in evidence of illegal actions and crime"—

Mr. GAFFNEY. Can you hold me responsible for the gambling in the cities?

Senator TOBEY. I hold you responsible for doing nothing about it after it was called to your attention that gambling was going on.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I suppose gambling goes on in Buffalo, Rochester, and Syracuse.

Senator TOBEY. Just let us talk about Saratoga. Your own deputies brought the information to you.

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. You certainly would look like a plugged nickel to me as superintendent of State police.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Thank you very much.

Senator TOBEY. What do you suppose the public at large would think of a man who did not report illegal doings to the Governor, after he had sworn to uphold the law? What hope is there to keep crime down in this country, if the law-enforcement officers do not function properly?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, sir, I do not like to be abused. I am an honest man and I resent that.

Senator TOBEY. I am not abusing you. I am just telling you the facts.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I resent it.

Senator TOBEY. Well, you can resent it until that well-known place freezes over. The country will want to know what kind of a plugged nickel you are.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I am not a plugged nickel.

Senator TOBEY. You are no good in my judgment, you are below par, and you are a counterfeit of what a good law-enforcement officer should be. Just look at a picture of yourself, just look at yourself, and search your own conscience.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I am an honest man, I will have you understand that.

Senator TOBEY. You are a passive man.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I am not.

Senator TOBEY. As a law-enforcement officer you are no good.

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is an awful remark for you to make, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. I am giving it to you straight with no compound interest. You indict yourself. "Out of their own mouths they indict themselves."

Out of his own mouth the chief of the State police condemns himself and says he doesn't like it. Of course you don't like it. No man likes to be found incompetent. That is what you have proved to be here today.

I am through, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Gaffney, was it because the situation was getting worse in 1950 that you all finally did do something about it, or what was the change of circumstances that forced you to act?

Mr. GAFFNEY. It was this Weiss thing, this fellow complaining about losing the money up in the gambling joints.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, he filed that action in 1948, didn't he?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I thought it was 1949.

The CHAIRMAN. Wasn't it 1948?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. And it ran in 1949, but did not open in 1950. I wondered what happened that made it any worse that caused you to move in.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think there was a complaint to the Governor's office about it.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you cause any similar survey to be made in any other year than in 1947?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. In 1948, I think. There was nothing in writing, because at that time our information was that they were not going to operate, it came back to us that way. In 1948 we conducted quite a large lottery investigation, and a lot of it went into a lot of counties, taking in Schenectady, Saratoga, and so forth.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Is it your information that in 1948 the large places did not open in Saratoga?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Not in the beginning; no, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. But they ultimately did?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir; I think so.

Mr. SHIVITZ. In 1949 did you cause another survey to be made?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No; I did not.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And prior to 1947 did you ever ask for a survey on the Saratoga situation?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. I went in there in 1943, and I think it was in 1946—there was nothing in writing—but it was just to find out what was going on, if there was any gambling going on.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You were made aware as a result of an inquiry of conditions which existed there in 1946?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And in 1948 and 1949?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, can you tell us what the practice of your organization is when you or your organization obtain information of the existence of crimes other than gambling in municipal areas?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I don't quite get that question.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You stated that the reason you did not take any positive action, and affirmative action, was because this took place in a city, the existence of these crimes was in a city.

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Let us assume that your organization, or you, had information with respect to the operation of an arson ring, or a prostitution ring, or any other illegal ring in a city such as Saratoga, would you also have taken the action which you took when you received exhibit 1?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes; I would say so, unless we had a complaint.

Mr. SHIVITZ. So that if it came to your attention as head of the State police or superintendent of State police that there was an arson ring operating in Saratoga, and you received a full report and detailed statements evidencing the existence of such a criminal ring, do you mean to say that you would take no action and bring it to the attention of neither the local authorities nor the Governor?

MR. GAFFNEY. We would probably bring it to the attention of the district attorney of the county; yes.

MR. SHIVITZ. But you did not do so because of the nature of the crime? Is that what distinguishes it?

MR. GAFFNEY. You are talking about Saratoga?

MR. SHIVITZ. That is correct.

MR. GAFFNEY. No; I did not bring it to the attention of the district attorney, no.

MR. SHIVITZ. And the distinction was that this was just a crime of gambling that was going on as against a supposed crime of arson. Is that what would make a difference in your mind?

MR. GAFFNEY. Well, I think the district attorney in Saratoga knew the conditions in Saratoga. He might not know of an arson ring operating.

MR. SHIVITZ. Let us assume that you knew an arson ring was operating, and you assumed that the district attorney knew about it, but took no action, would you then take any action to bring it to the attention of any responsible authority or official?

MR. GAFFNEY. No; I don't think I could, if he did not take any action, the district attorney.

MR. SHIVITZ. Are you serious about that, Mr. Gaffney?

MR. GAFFNEY. I am a little confused here.

MR. SHIVITZ. Let me ask you another question. You say that when your people went in in 1949 in Saratoga they closed a couple of handbooks, and that was the tip-off to the big places not to open up, if I understood your testimony?

MR. GAFFNEY. Yes.

MR. SHIVITZ. Now, let us assume that you wanted to get the large operators, the people who were operating Piping Rock, Arrowhead, and so forth, how would you have gone about it?

MR. GAFFNEY. You mean the gambling places?

MR. SHIVITZ. That is right.

MR. GAFFNEY. Well, just get the evidence and lock them up.

MR. SHIVITZ. But you did not attempt to do that even in 1949?

MR. GAFFNEY. In 1949?

MR. SHIVITZ. Yes.

MR. GAFFNEY. No, 1950 is when we went in there.

MR. SHIVITZ. You did not attempt to do that in 1950?

MR. GAFFNEY. We did not have any evidence. We had men working there from October 1949 right through 1950.

MR. SHIVITZ. Now, if it was your desire and serious intent of apprehending those who ran the big places——

MR. GAFFNEY. Yes.

MR. SHIVITZ (continuing). You would not have gone in and picked up the little fellows, would you? That would have been an immediate tip-off, wouldn't it?

MR. GAFFNEY. Well, I don't know. It probably would; yes.

MR. SHIVITZ. You would pick up the little fellows first, or would you leave them alone and get the big fish?

MR. GAFFNEY. Just a minute. As soon as we discovered these things we made an arrest.

Mr. SHIVITZ. I think you understand my question and you are not answering it. Assuming you were after the big fellows in 1950, would you tip your hand off by going in and picking up the small fry first, or would you leave them alone and wait until the big fellows were in swing?

Mr. GAFFNEY. All I had was an order that there be no gambling, and we started in October, that meant that we were in there all that time, and we would arrest anything that turned up.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And yours was a preventive action, then?

Mr. GAFFNEY. To stop gambling; yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Before it got under way?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did I understand you to say that in 1948 there was very little gambling going on at Saratoga?

Mr. GAFFNEY. At the beginning of August, I am told.

Mr. HALLEY. And then it picked up and they had a real good season?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And the gambling houses got going in fine shape in 1948, did they not?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, they did.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Gaffney, have you within the last 10 days had a conference with anybody concerning your proposed appearance before this committee?

Mr. GAFFNEY. In the last 10 days?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you at any time had a conference concerning your proposed appearance before this committee?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you discussed your appearance before this committee with anybody representing the Governor, or with the Governor himself?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I told the Governor I was coming here; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you tell the Governor?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I only got a call Saturday, I think it was Saturday afternoon.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see the Governor?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You spoke to him over the telephone?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see or talk to anybody else connected with the Governor's office or the executive branch of the State government?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No; I have been down here.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have at no time discussed your proposed testimony that was to be given here?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. With anybody?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you discuss it with anybody, did you discuss the appearance of your subordinates before this committee?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I discussed it with them, with LaForge and with McGarvey yesterday, I met them in Hawthorne.

Mr. HALLEY. And at that time did you discuss the question of going with LaForge, or rather, with LaForge about his going into Saratoga in 1947 to make a survey?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes; we talked about the report.

Mr. HALLEY. Did either of them mention to you that they understood the order came from the Governor's office?

Mr. GAFFNEY. What order, for this check here?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Did I discuss that with them?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I may have, but I don't remember talking about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember talking to them about whether or not the check at Saratoga in 1947 was ordered by the Governor's office?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes; I think we did talk about that.

Mr. HALLEY. How did that come about?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, because of this report, this 1947 report.

Mr. HALLEY. How did the question of whether the Governor's office had anything to do with it come up? Who raised that question?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I don't know whether I did or they did, or what.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what was said about it? Can you give the substance of the conversation, to your best recollection?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No; I don't remember what was said. It was just that I told them that I requested that report as I did other times, and that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. They knew you requested it, there was no question about that. Now, how did the question come up, about whether the Governor's office had requested it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I don't know whether LaForge mentioned that or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you think that he brought the question up, or did you bring it up?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Maybe I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, how do you remember it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, I think we were talking about our appearance here and that report.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you bring it up? What did you say?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I just said that it came to me, and that is about all.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you say about the Governor's office?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I don't recall anything about the Governor's office, so far as that report is concerned.

Mr. HALLEY. I thought your testimony just in the last few minutes was to the effect that maybe you brought up the question of whether that report was ordered by the Governor's office or not.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I guess probably I did; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you say?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I probably said that the report came to me and it did not go any place else.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you say that?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I don't know whether there was some mention about it having gone to the Governor's office or not, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Who mentioned it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I probably did.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you do that? Your previous testimony was that it would not ordinarily go to the Governor's office, or be expected to go. In fact, you said that you would have been doing the wrong thing if you sent it to the Governor's office.

Under those circumstances why would you find it necessary to raise a question and tell your subordinates that it did not go to the Governor's office?

MR. GAFFNEY. I don't know whether we were talking about it, but LaForge mentioned it, whether he mentioned it to Mr. Murray or not, I don't know. I think we were talking about——

MR. HALLEY. You mean that LaForge said he told that to Murray?

MR. GAFFNEY. I am not sure whether he said that or not. He may have said that to Mr. Murray in their talk, I don't know whether he did not.

MR. HALLEY. Well, why did you raise the question then?

MR. GAFFNEY. As I say, I think LaForge mentioned it, and he and I talked about it.

MR. HALLEY. You asked LaForge what he told Murray?

MR. GAFFNEY. I think I did; yes.

MR. HALLEY. And he said he had told Murray about the report——

MR. GAFFNEY. He said he was not sure whether he mentioned it or not. He just talked in generalities.

MR. HALLEY. Did you go to the capital, the State capital, to discuss this matter of your testimony before this committee?

MR. GAFFNEY. No.

MR. HALLEY. And you talked to no member of the Governor's staff?

MR. GAFFNEY. The deputy superintendent did, I think he talked to Mr. Walsh.

MR. HALLEY. Who is Mr. Walsh?

MR. GAFFNEY. The Governor's counsel.

MR. HALLEY. When did he go there?

MR. GAFFNEY. I think it was Saturday, after we were notified to appear here.

MR. HALLEY. And who is the deputy superintendent?

MR. GAFFNEY. George M. Searle.

MR. HALLEY. He is not here today, is he?

MR. GAFFNEY. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. What did Searle tell you when he returned about this conference with Mr. Walsh?

MR. GAFFNEY. To appear down here and give you that report.

MR. HALLEY. Did he have any other instructions?

MR. GAFFNEY. No; only something about that report being police information, and that it was not to be given to the public, or something like that. I don't know whether that was discussed or not.

MR. HALLEY. That would, of course, be silly, because you know very well these places were open, isn't that right?

MR. GAFFNEY. I should think so; yes.

MR. HALLEY. Did you at this conference review the testimony given by McGarvey and LaForge, for the purpose of making sure that the testimony given by everybody who appeared here today would jibe?

MR. GAFFNEY. Oh, absolutely not. I have nothing to hide here.

SENATOR TOBEY. Only the report.

MR. HALLEY. No; in all fairness, Senator Tobey, the report was made fully available to the committee by this witness when he was asked for it. He had it in his pocket and did not intend to hide it, apparently. I have no doubt that he produced it voluntarily.

The only question is why it was not made available to the Governor so that the Governor could have taken some action on it.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Gaffney, let's see if we can get right down to this thing.

You first stated that the thing had been going on for twenty-odd years, and I think maybe it has been longer than that. There were some instructions to you, were there, that this was a thing you were supposed to sort of lay off of, in Saratoga, so far as those inns or casinos are concerned, that that is a political situation up there in Saratoga, and in the absence of some great complaint or something, why, you just were not supposed to have anything to do with it? There must be some explanation besides what we have gotten from you.

I mean, was Saratoga sort of set aside by the officials as sacrosanct and not to be touched upon?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think so.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, is that your understanding about it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How did you get that understanding, Mr. Gaffney?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, from my experience in the division, it was always that way. We never had anything to do with Saratoga.

The CHAIRMAN. You just understood that was not a place you were supposed to have anything to do with?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think that the fact that this committee had investigators up there before, when the season began last year, had anything to do with a change of mind about closing it down?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I should think that it did have; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you find that out, that we did have people up there?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No, sir; I never heard that.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, the truth is, Mr. Gaffney, if there had not been sort of a general effort, both in the Senate and throughout the country, to help put the heat on to expose these interstate operations, it probably would have run on up through there last year, wouldn't it, so far as you were concerned?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir; I would say so; yes.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that is all. Do you have any other questions, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. That is all, Mr. Gaffney. Thank you, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you, Mr. Gaffney.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Are you going to keep that report?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes; it is a copy, I take it?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is your next witness?

Mr. HALLEY. We are going to call Mr. La Forge again.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. La Forge, you realize you are still under oath?

Mr. LAForge. Yes.

FURTHER TESTIMONY OF CHARLES LaFORGE

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. LaForge, before coming to testify here did you have a conference with Mr. Gaffney and others concerning the question of your testimony here?

Mr. LaFORGE. Yes; I had a conference with Mr. Gaffney.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else was present?

Mr. LaFORGE. The chief inspector.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his name?

Mr. LaFORGE. Francis McGarvey.

Mr. HALLEY. Did the question come up at that conference as to whether or not the report had been submitted to the Governor's office?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir; absolutely not.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I would not want you to be in a difficult position. You have been cooperative, and it was just testified by Mr. Gaffney that the question did come up. He testified to it quite unequivocally.

Mr. LaFORGE. Not to my recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's have one thing clear. Did you tell Mr. Gaffney that you had told Mr. Murray that a report had been submitted to the Governor's office?

Mr. LaFORGE. Did I tell Mr. Gaffney?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LaFORGE. That a report had been submitted to the Governor's office?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or that you thought it had been.

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You are sure you did not tell that to Mr. Gaffney?

Mr. LaFORGE. I am positive, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, I think I should tell you that Mr. Gaffney has testified just 2 minutes ago in the presence of two United States Senators, one of whom is a Democrat, and the other of whom is a Republican, and in the presence of three counsel of this committee, one of whom is a Republican, that there was such a conference with you and Mr. McGarvey, and that he thought he raised the question of whether or not the report had been submitted to the Governor's office, and he thought he advised you and Mr. McGarvey that it had not.

When I asked him why he raised the question he said possibly it was because you had said at the conference that you told Mr. Murray that you thought the report had been submitted to the Governor's office.

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the "No, sir" you refer to? You had better be specific.

Mr. LaFORGE. I don't recall any conversation with reference to the Governor whatsoever.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any discussion in your conference with Mr. McGarvey and Mr. Gaffney about whether the report was initiated by the Governor's office?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. None whatsoever?

Mr. LaFORGE. We discussed the initiation of the investigation. Is that what you are referring to?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LAForge. That was instituted primarily for our own information in the event that we were called.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, how did that subject matter come up in your conversation?

Mr. LAForge. That I could not recollect.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you raise the question of how it was initiated?

Mr. LAForge. I could not tell you, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. When you talked to Mr. Murray, when you were visiting with him, you did tell him, did you not, that you thought the report had been requested by the Governor's office?

Mr. LAForge. I don't believe so.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell him that the report in your opinion had been submitted through channels to the Governor's office?

Mr. LAForge. I told him it went through channels, our report.

Mr. HALLEY. But you did not mention the Governor's office?

Mr. LAForge. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Murray is right here. Will you state for the record your recollection of the conversation, and to refresh your recollection I will give you your memorandum.

Mr. MURRAY. As I understood, at the time we talked about the survey or the report, it had been requested through channels, through your superior, from the Governor's office.

Mr. LAForge. I would not know that, Mr. Murray.

Mr. MURRAY. After the completion of the survey, when it had been finished and turned in by you, your understanding, of course, was that it went up to the Governor's office, but you could not prove it; so far as you were concerned it went to your immediate superior, and up through the channels.

Mr. LAForge. I told you so far as I was concerned my report went to the chief inspector, and subsequently I imagine it went up through channels.

Mr. HALLEY. Through channels where?

Mr. LAForge. To the superintendent.

Mr. HALLEY. For the record, Mr. Murray, will you state this: Did the witness specifically mention the Governor's office, or is that something you created out of your own mind?

Mr. MURRAY. The specific words were used, "to the Governor's office," qualified by "through channels to Mr. McGarvey," your immediate superior, thence to Mr. Gaffney, and to the Governor's office.

Mr. LAForge. I would not say that, because I could not prove it.

Mr. MURRAY. There is no question about proof.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that what you told Mr. Murray?

Mr. LAForge. I don't believe so.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, why would Mr. Gaffney testify that he thought you told him, and you told it to Mr. Murray?

Mr. LAForge. I don't recall talking with Mr. Gaffney about that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, there is a situation developing which is not only embarrassing to the committee in this regard, but it must be embarrassing to everybody, because we cannot get a simple, straightforward story from the New York State police on this subject. I would like to warn you that I think you would be best advised to be very straightforward and specific with the committee about this.

Mr. LAFORGE. Well, I am, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Mr. Murray is an experienced investigator, and he would have no reason at all to invent this. Nor would Mr. Gaffney have had any reason at all to suggest that it was you who might have told him that you so told Mr. Murray, because nobody suggested it to Mr. Gaffney. He said that himself.

Now, the committee intends to get to the bottom of it, and I hope we can do it without undue embarrassment and cross-examination of you.

Did you not tell Mr. Murray something about the Governor's office?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you mention it at all?

Mr. LAFORGE. Not to my recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. You never mentioned the Governor's office at all?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir; not to my recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it possible you might have done it and not recalled it?

Mr. LAFORGE. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, you would not deny that you might have done it and forgotten about it?

Mr. LAFORGE. All I remember is speaking with Mr. Murray, it had to do with generalities of Saratoga, and particularly about some lottery investigation.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, look, I don't like to have to probe this deeply, but you know very well that the committee obtained a copy of a report that you told Mr. Murray about, and you were somewhat embarrassed about our having it, and you asked me not to let your superiors know that we had it, but to get a copy that they had.

Now, there is just more here than you are telling the committee about, and the committee intends to get to the bottom of it. Why don't you be frank with us so that we can work in cooperation?

Mr. LAFORGE. I am frank. I don't know just what you are driving at.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, two people, first your superior has said that he felt you told Mr. Murray that the report went to the Governor's office, and Mr. Murray has so stated for the record, and as soon as you leave the room he will be asked to testify under oath as to what you told him and put in evidence the notes he made at that time. It seems to me that if you told him that, and you think it was a mistake, you should say so, but if you told him that you should admit that you told him that.

Mr. LAFORGE. I don't believe that I told him that.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't admit you mentioned the Governor's office at all?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Walsh, the Governor's secretary?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir; I don't even know Mr. Walsh.

The CHAIRMAN. Was he the Governor's secretary?

Mr. HALLEY. No; the Government counsel.

Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Searles?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have not talked to him about your testimony at all?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't recall having been told at your conference with Mr. Gaffney that the report was one that just went to him for information only, and that it did not go into the Governor's office?

Mr. LAFORGE. I had a conversation with the superintendent; is that whom you mean?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LAFORGE. And I told Mr. Murray, I believe, that our report was made for our information, in the event that we did make a raid on Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. That is what you told Mr. Gaffney?

Mr. LAFORGE. And Mr. Murray, too.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell it also to Mr. Gaffney?

Mr. LAFORGE. No; it was not necessary for me to tell it to Mr. Gaffney.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't he ask you what you told Murray?

Mr. LAFORGE. Yes, sir; he did.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you tell him you told him that?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any talk with Mr. Gaffney about whether or not the report had gone to the Governor's office?

Mr. LAFORGE. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. There was no conversation with him about whether or not the report had been requested by the Governor's office?

Mr. LAFORGE. Not to my recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. If Mr. Murray states under oath, as he has stated on the record, that you told him the report was one requested by the Governor's office, and, two, was after completion forwarded through channels, to the best of your belief, to the Governor's office, then would you say that Mr. Murray is mistaken?

Mr. LAFORGE. I believe so; yes, sir. Might I correct you on this, Mr. Halley? It is possible that Mr. Murray asked me when we would go into Saratoga, and it is possible then I said that we would go through on the Governor's orders, or through a complaint of the district attorney or the mayor of the city. The Governor's name may have come into it at that time, but that would be the only time.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, Mr. Murray, are you specific on the question? Can you speak specifically just what you were told, again; tell us about that. If you have your notes, you may read from your notes.

Mr. MURRAY. We were discussing the matter of the gambling activities in Saratoga, and the fact that no raids or action had ever been taken by the State police in connection with them, with the exception of one instance in 1947, when the subject survey was made. That was on an order which came to the Troy Barracks, to you from your superior, from the Governor's office, through channels from the Governor's office, rather, through channels.

A survey was made and written up, which showed the various places in operation, the equipment in the places, and the possible gamblers controlling the various joints.

When the survey was completed it was sent back to your superior destined, so far as you knew, for the Governor's office. It was understood in our conversation that you could not prove that the survey came out of the Governor's office, the request for it, or the submission to it. All you knew was that it came through channels to you.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you remember it that way?

Mr. LaFORGE. No, sir; I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Let's get on. Do you have anything else?

Mr. HALLEY. Nothing else.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Are you going to call Mr. McGarvey in?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Then I should like to have this witness remain in the room.

The CHAIRMAN. Who are you calling?

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. McGarvey.

The CHAIRMAN. Good morning, sir.

Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. McGARVEY. I do.

TESTIMONY OF FRANCIS S. MCGARVEY, CHIEF INSPECTOR, NEW YORK STATE POLICE

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, please?

Mr. MCGARVEY. Francis S. McGarvey.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your position?

Mr. MCGARVEY. Chief inspector.

Mr. HALLEY. Of the New York State Police?

Mr. MCGARVEY. Of the New York State Police.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you held that position?

Mr. MCGARVEY. Since July 1, 1944.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your position prior to 1944?

Mr. MCGARVEY. Captain.

Mr. HALLEY. Of what troop?

Mr. MCGARVEY. Troop B, Malone.

Mr. HALLEY. How long had you held that position?

Mr. MCGARVEY. Three years; three and a half years.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to that what had been your position?

Mr. MCGARVEY. I was in the inspector's office from 1936 to 1939.

Mr. HALLEY. What are your duties as chief inspector?

Mr. MCGARVEY. As chief inspector?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MCGARVEY. To conduct investigations for the superintendent and correlate any information and submit reports to the superintendent.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you deputy superintendent?

Mr. MCGARVEY. No; I am chief inspector.

Mr. HALLEY. I see.

Mr. MCGARVEY. We do have a deputy superintendent.

Mr. HALLEY. But you do not occupy that position?

Mr. MCGARVEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you the third man in line?

Mr. MCGARVEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, with regard to Saratoga, the city of Saratoga, are you familiar with a report that was made on gambling in Saratoga in 1947?

Mr. McGARVEY. I am.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the circumstances leading up to the initiation of that report?

Mr. McGARVEY. Well, I was instructed to have a survey conducted as to the gambling operations in Saratoga. At that time I instructed Inspector LaForge to carry out the survey. He submitted a report to me, which I in turn submitted to the superintendent.

Mr. HALLEY. And where did you get your instructions?

Mr. McGARVEY. From the superintendent.

Mr. HALLEY. Directly?

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When he gave you your instructions, did he give you any reasons for making the survey?

Mr. McGARVEY. No. I presume it was rumors of gambling that came to his attention.

Mr. HALLEY. The State police have no authority to make arrests or to take action within a city, except at the request of local authorities, such as the district attorney or the Governor?

Mr. McGARVEY. We go in with the district attorney or chief of police, or on instructions of the Governor.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you have authority to make a survey without such instructions?

Mr. McGARVEY. Oh, yes; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. So that your limitations on authority just have to do with any action such as a raid and the serving of warrants?

Mr. McGARVEY. It has been a policy set up by the State police not to originate any investigations in a community where they have an organized police department.

Mr. HALLEY. Why was the policy changed in 1947?

Mr. McGARVEY. Well, that was a survey; it was not an investigation.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the difference between a survey and an investigation?

Mr. McGARVEY. Well, on an investigation there would have been action taken, but the survey we made was to find out what did exist at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, after being asked by Mr. Gaffney to have a survey made, you then communicated that instruction to whom?

Mr. McGARVEY. I submitted it to Superintendent Gaffney.

Mr. HALLEY. You submitted, you mean, the survey?

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes; the report.

Mr. HALLEY. To whom did you convey the instructions to make the survey?

Mr. McGARVEY. Inspector LaForge.

Mr. HALLEY. And in due time he presented you with a survey?

Mr. McGARVEY. With a report; that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, I show you exhibit 1 of Superintendent Gaffney, and I will ask you to look at it and state whether or not that is the survey [handing document to witness].

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, did you receive this survey directly from Mr. LaForge?

Mr. McGARVEY. To the best of my recollection, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He handed it to you?

Mr. McGARVEY. I believe he did.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do with it?

Mr. McGARVEY. I made that résumé that is on the fourth sheet, and submitted it to the superintendent.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any understanding of what the superintendent would do with it?

Mr. McGARVEY. Oh, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you within the last few days have a conference with the superintendent and Mr. LaForge?

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes; yesterday.

Mr. HALLEY. Did that have to do with your appearance here?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any discussion about whether or not the survey had been ordered by the Governor's office, or was to be given to the Governor's office?

Mr. McGARVEY. No; on this 1947 survey, no; that survey, so far as I know, came directly from the superintendent.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any discussion of that question?

Mr. McGARVEY. From the Governor's office?

Mr. HALLEY. No; between you and the superintendent and Mr. LaForge yesterday.

Mr. McGARVEY. No; not in my presence there wasn't any.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you and the superintendent and Mr. LaForge had any other discussions concerning your testimony before this committee?

Mr. McGARVEY. Only yesterday, when we came down, I met the superintendent at Hawthorne.

Mr. HALLEY. You had no other discussions?

Mr. McGARVEY. No, sir. Sometime in December Mr. Murray came to our office, and he spoke about a certain person, if we knew him, and I discussed with Mr. Murray the condition that existed, which did not have to do with this survey, and that is the last I have talked about this until Inspector LaForge advised me on Saturday that he was called to come down here.

Mr. HALLEY. How did he advise you, by telephone?

Mr. McGARVEY. By telephone, of which I was immediately advised by Mr. Murray after that phone call.

Mr. HALLEY. In your phone conversation with Mr. Gaffney, what was the discussion?

Mr. McGARVEY. On Saturday?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. McGARVEY. I advised him that Mr. Murray was trying to get in touch with him, and also that I was to come down here to this committee meeting, and that he also was, and that he was to bring the 1947 survey report with him. That was the context of our conversation.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, in yesterday's talk was there any discussion whatsoever as to why the survey was ordered?

Mr. McGARVEY. None that I recall, outside of gambling that existed at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any discussion of whether or not the survey had been asked for by the Governor's office?

Mr. McGARVEY. Not at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any discussion of whether or not the survey was to be submitted to the Governor's office?

Mr. McGARVEY. There was not any discussion on that at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any discussion as to whether or not Mr. LaForge had told Mr. Murray that the Governor's office had ordered the survey, and that the survey was sent to the Governor's office?

Mr. McGARVEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or any of those points?

Mr. McGARVEY. Nothing at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Nothing you can touch upon?

Mr. McGARVEY. Nothing at all along that line.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether or not the survey was requested by the Governor's office?

Mr. McGARVEY. No, I don't; but I assume, so far as I am concerned, that it came right from the superintendent, which was the general rumors that gambling was existing at that time in Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. Why would the superintendent initiate such a survey in 1947, and not in any other year?

Mr. McGARVEY. Well, previous to that time the track was not open, and there was not any gambling during the war years.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, this survey we have right here, is this a copy or is that the original?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is the original.

Mr. HALLEY. This is the original survey?

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, the first few pages appear to be a carbon copy.

Mr. McGARVEY. That is a résumé that I submitted to the superintendent.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is the original of your résumé?

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever looked into the Saratoga picture yourself?

Mr. McGARVEY. I did not understand your question.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any personal knowledge of the Saratoga gambling picture?

Mr. McGARVEY. No; I do not, outside of that report.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether there have been gambling houses in operation elsewhere in New York State and Saratoga during the year 1950?

Mr. McGARVEY. No; I have no knowledge of them.

Mr. HALLEY. Was the Montauk Inn in operation?

Mr. McGARVEY. In Saratoga at that time?

Mr. HALLEY. No; at Montauk Point, N. Y.

Mr. McGARVEY. Oh, no; I don't have any knowledge of that.

Mr. HALLEY. As chief inspector, is it your job to correlate that type of information?

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have no knowledge of whether or not the Montauk Inn was open?

Mr. McGARVEY. Nothing came to my attention.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you cause any investigation to be made at the Montauk Inn?

Mr. McGARVEY. No; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. The superintendent said he did. Could that be done without your knowledge?

Mr. McGARVEY. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean that he would go over your head?

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes; he can refer the matter to any one of the troop commanders.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that customary?

Mr. McGARVEY. Oh, yes; in many instances.

Mr. HALLEY. Would there be a special reason for it?

Mr. McGARVEY. Oh, I don't think so, aside from the fact that perhaps I might be involved in something else, and he would send the information to some troop commander.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether or not there was gambling going on in a place known as Frank Breed's at Smithtown?

Mr. McGARVEY. Any particular time?

Mr. HALLEY. 1950.

Mr. McGARVEY. No; I don't. I know he was arrested for operating a horse room some years back there.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether there has been any open gambling there in the last 3 years?

Mr. McGARVEY. No; I do not; I have not heard.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. Just a second until I collect my thoughts. You may go ahead first, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. In the ordinary course of things, when you make a survey of this sort, of course, the superintendent gets the survey, but in the ordinary course of things don't you send one to the State's attorney so he can look into the matter?

Mr. McGARVEY. Not through my office.

The CHAIRMAN. I know, but it seems to me that with something as revealing as this survey, it automatically should be sent on just as a matter of course to the Governor's office or to the State's attorney or to somebody, so that they could proceed further with it.

Mr. McGARVEY. My assumption on this is that the anticipation of a complaint being made by the authorities was the reason for us taking this survey, so that we would be in a position to take immediate action.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. McGARVEY. And on all those places; but generally speaking, if a complaint comes in, and if a complaint came to our attention about gambling in any community, the district attorney would be advised, if he was not the person who made the complaint.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, he did not make the complaint in this case; did he?

Mr. McGARVEY. No; that is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you advise the district attorney in this case?

Mr. McGARVEY. No; we did not.

The CHAIRMAN. I wonder why.

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, just to get down to it, there has been, for some reason or other, political or otherwise, the fact that Saratoga has been left separate and apart insofar as enforcing the gambling laws is concerned. Wasn't that the situation over the course of years?

Mr. McGARVEY. I believe it was. I made an investigation of Saratoga some years ago, back in 1930.

The CHAIRMAN. 1930?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. And over all these years nothing was ever done about it?

Mr. McGARVEY. So far as I know, no.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Senator TOBEY. You passed this survey report on to Superintendent Gaffney; is that correct?

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Excuse me, please. That is correct; isn't it?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. With a letter of transmittal, or did you just pass it on personally?

Mr. McGARVEY. That résumé that is on there.

Senator TOBEY. Is it a letter of transmittal saying, "I herewith transmit you a report"?

Mr. McGARVEY. Just a memorandum.

Senator TOBEY. When he received it did he talk it over with you?

Mr. McGARVEY. Well, to the best of my knowledge, he went over it and said that it looked like a pretty good-sized operation, and he said, "I think from the contents of this report, that should we be called in to investigate, we will have to have a sizable detail to handle it, because of the size of the resorts."

Senator TOBEY. So he was impressed with the enormity of the thing, and he said that there was a sizable operation there?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. So he was impressed with it?

Mr. McGARVEY. I believe so.

Senator TOBEY. What did he do with the report?

Mr. McGARVEY. Well, I don't know whether he put it in the confidential file, or what; I don't know.

Senator TOBEY. Do you know whether or not he transmitted it to the Governor?

Mr. McGARVEY. I have not the slightest idea.

Senator TOBEY. When you say he put it in a confidential file——

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes; his own confidential file.

Senator TOBEY. Do you mean that it was there to repose——

Mr. McGARVEY. I believe so.

Senator TOBEY (continuing). And gather dust, "where moths and rust corrupt"?

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know what happened to it.

Senator TOBEY. Are there a number of instances where you have sent on reports up to your chief, Mr. Gaffney, and it would be put in a confidential file and no action be taken?

Mr. McGARVEY. I only recall other reports where we did take action; where complaints were made after the survey was made.

Senator TOBEY. So in those cases you are speaking of now they did take action?

Mr. McGARVEY. Oh, yes.

Senator TOBEY. So this bears out like a rara avis, a white elephant; no action was taken on this report?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. What, in your judgment as a thoughtful man, and an official of the State of New York, was the reason for the extenuating circumstances, if any, that caused this report which made him raise his eyebrows and say that it was a sizable thing, then to have him put it in his confidential file and seal it up—what would be your idea for the reason of that treatment of the report?

Mr. McGARVEY. The only reason I can give you is that no complaint was made against gambling in Saratoga.

Senator TOBEY. The only complaint made against it was the report itself; was it not?

Mr. McGARVEY. That was just our report.

Senator TOBEY. The report itself showed a breaking of the law; did it not?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. And you had sworn to uphold the law; had you not?

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Therefore, by acting in a negative manner, and putting it in a confidential file, you broke your oath of office to enforce the law?

Mr. McGARVEY. I take my orders from the superintendent.

Senator TOBEY. Then he broke his oath of office; didn't he?

Mr. McGARVEY. Well—

Senator TOBEY. Now, what do you think?

Mr. McGARVEY. Well, the jurisdiction in Saratoga County is a local matter, and we never originated any complaints in any cities, where there was an organized police department.

Senator TOBEY. But in this case you sent Mr. LaForge in there, and he made an exhaustive investigation and report, and made a good report, and it is comprehensive. It is so comprehensive and so damning in its import and content that the chief of the police said in effect that "this is some report," and you agreed with him?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Then he took the report, and you think he put it in his confidential file?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Now, when a man did that in his position, who swore to uphold the law in the State of New York, then he puts a report like that in a confidential file, do you think he was doing his duty?

Mr. McGARVEY. I would say it would depend upon what complaints he had.

Senator TOBEY. Forget about the complaint. If there was no complaint at all, then what? The very fact that you yourself instituted this investigation, and you found out certain facts, and when they came to the attention of you and your chief, then they just go into a file and are closed up: is that correct?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is so far as I know.

Senator TOBEY. What I am asking you is, What hope do the people of a great State have when the chief of the State police, and you, the chief inspector, and this man LaForge, produce a report showing conditions breaking the law, when they simply put it in an envelope and seal it up and take no action on it? Wouldn't that report, if the men were good officials as they ought to be, arouse in their souls a righteous indignation and have them say, "Hold on, we have got a man as Governor of this State, and this certainly would be repugnant to him, who has taken the oath to enforce the laws. Pass it on to him and let him accept a responsibility"? Would that not be a fair and wise thing to do?

Mr. McGARVEY. I say that he probably followed a policy where they had not taken any action where they had an organized police department.

Senator TOBEY. You are going around, sir; you are circumnavigating around. What I am asking you is, don't you think when your Chief Inspector Gaffney says these conditions existed from the report, that something should have been done about it, instead of just putting it in the archives?

Mr. McGARVEY. Well, I think you are right.

Senator TOBEY. All right. Then the natural thing to do would be for Gaffney to take it to the man who appointed him, and the man who is solely responsible, the Governor of the State?

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know who suggested the survey.

Senator TOBEY. It doesn't make any difference. There were the facts before you so damning that you say this man Gaffney raised his eyebrows and said that it was some report. It must have been quite a report, and instead of doing anything about it he just said, "We will seal it up in an envelope and put it in the confidential file"; is that correct?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Isn't a man who does that and keeps that from coming to the light of day and the public knowing this thing, the sort of a man that you should think would naturally take it to the Governor of the State, who is in full charge of the law of the State, when the law is being violated, according to your own investigator's report?

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know what his purpose was.

Senator TOBEY. Gaffney's purpose.

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know.

Senator TOBEY. You know he should uphold the laws of the State. That is his sole purpose.

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know whether he goes to see the Governor at all.

Senator TOBEY. I did not ask you that. Shouldn't he take it to the Governor, in your judgment?

Mr. McGARVEY. No.

Senator TOBEY. Do you think he should put it in a file marked confidential?

Mr. McGARVEY. I think he should take what action he decided to take that was necessary.

Senator TOBEY. Well, he just decided to take no action. Do you think that was a wise procedure?

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know what he did after I gave him the report.

Senator TOBEY. He did nothing, so he has testified.

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know that.

Senator TOBEY. I am telling you now, and you can take my word for it, it is on the record. You say yourself that you think he put it in a confidential file, which is doing nothing. Don't you think he should have taken it up to the Governor?

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know.

Senator TOBEY. Well, it is evident you don't want to answer the question. I should think that you as an American citizen would feel the same sense of hatred that the rest of us do around the table toward these people, and that you would say, "We were just weak, and it was not worth it."

Why don't you just get somebody clean, to go there and not hide behind the berry bushes in the pastures all the time? Your chief didn't do anything. You said he didn't do anything and he said it. I am asking you, you won't incriminate Gaffney, why don't you come out and say that he didn't measure up to his job? You know he didn't, don't you?

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know what he did with the report.

Senator TOBEY. You know you told me he put it in the confidential file.

Mr. McGARVEY. That is all I know.

Senator TOBEY. You know what he did with the report.

Mr. McGARVEY. I have not heard or seen anything of it until the other day.

Senator TOBEY. You said it, and he testified to it; I am asking you if he was not derelict in his duty by not taking it up with the Governor.

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know what he does.

Senator TOBEY. Well, you were all going around the opposite barn. You don't see the straight line. You are trying to make a devious one, and you have a right to do it, but you certainly don't make yourself look any better in the opinion of this committee. All I have got to say is that it is a sad commentary.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have any other questions?

Mr. HALLEY. I have a couple that I would like to ask.

Again, I would like to have you look at Gaffney Exhibit No. 1. You will note that it consists of two top pages, which purport to be a report from you to Gaffney, is that right?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. And then certain pages following it, which purport to be a report from Inspector LaForge.

Mr. McGARVEY. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. To you, I presume, is that right?

Mr. McGARVEY. Well, this is made to the troop commander of Troop G, who was the captain of that troop in charge of that area. But as I recall it, LaForge brought that report over to me personally.

Mr. HALLEY. And the report is dated August 6, 1947?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Your summary is dated as of the same date?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, will you note whether or not the report purports to be the original report, and that the typing appears to be original typing, and that it is on a letterhead of the State police?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And by the report I refer to LaForge's report, is that right?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, will you note that the two top pages, which are your report to Gaffney, are not an original?

Mr. McGARVEY. This is a memo. This is my memo.

Mr. HALLEY. Oh, let's stop beating around the bush. That is a carbon copy, isn't it.

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is the original?

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Was the original on a State police letterhead or on blank paper?

Mr. McGARVEY. The memorandum?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. McGARVEY. I believe it was on a blank paper, just a memorandum.

Mr. HALLEY. But there certainly was an original somewhere?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And it was signed by you?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is not it?

Mr. McGARVEY. This is a copy.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know where the original is?

Mr. McGARVEY. I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no other questions.

Senator TOBEY. Who made the copy?

Mr. McGARVEY. This is a copy of the original; I presume the stenographer did.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether or not Mr. Gaffney sent the original of your report to anyone else?

Mr. McGARVEY. I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know why, when Mr. Gaffney brought that file up here, he had the original of the LaForge report but not the original of your summary report?

Mr. McGARVEY. No; I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no explanation for that?

Mr. McGARVEY. I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. Your summary report gives all the information in the LaForge report, does it not?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. It simply condenses it to two sheets of paper instead of spreading it?

Mr. McGARVEY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Mr. McGarvey, do you think that the Governor of this great State of New York could be very happy in his heart to learn that he who has sworn to uphold the law, this man that he appointed, this man Gaffney, as chief of police, and Gaffney in turn appointing you as chief inspector, and you in turn appointing LaForge, and then there is a report citing the evidence, in fact, a pretty voluminous report, so very much so that it caused Mr. Gaffney to raise his eyebrows, and that report came into existence showing the conditions of a breakdown in the laws of the great State of New York, and then when the Governor is not appraised of it by the very men he appointed to office, do you think he would be happy that you smothered this thing and put it in the confidential file?

Mr. McGARVEY. I don't know whether he had knowledge of it or not.

Senator TOBEY. Well, he will have in 24 hours, with the full story about this thing, and if he is the man I think he is, something is going to drop and drop hard.

Mr. McGARVEY. Well, sir, I cannot help that.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have any other questions?

Mr. HALLEY. No. Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. McGARVEY. Are you finished with me?

Mr. HALLEY. Just wait until Mr. Gaffney goes. There may be some other questions.

The CHAIRMAN. I guess Mr. Gaffney has gone, hasn't he?

Mr. HALLEY. I am informed that he has. We will next call Mr. Weiss.

The CHAIRMAN. How are you, Mr. Weiss?

Mr. WEISS. Fine, thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn?

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. WEISS. I do.

TESTIMONY OF PHILIP WEISS, SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, gentlemen, let's proceed.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. WEISS. Philip Weiss.

Mr. HALLEY. Sir?

Mr. WEISS. Philip Weiss.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you live?

Mr. WEISS. 63 Putnam Street, Saratoga Springs.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you lived in Saratoga?

Mr. WEISS. About 15 years.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your occupation?

Mr. WEISS. Restaurant.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you self-employed?

Mr. WEISS. Pardon me?

Mr. HALLEY. Are you self-employed?

Mr. WEISS. Yes; right at present, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own a restaurant?

Mr. WEISS. Right now, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the name of it?

Mr. WEISS. Four Sons.

Mr. HALLEY. Four Sons?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is it located?

Mr. WEISS. 39 Phile Street, Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Weiss, did you or your wife ever bring a lawsuit concerning gambling in Saratoga?

Mr. WEISS. I did not get that question.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you or your wife ever bring a lawsuit in Saratoga?

Mr. WEISS. I refuse to answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. On what grounds?

Mr. WEISS. I just refuse.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Weiss, you will have to answer that question. We will have to direct you to answer it. If you brought a lawsuit, that is a matter of public notice.

Mr. WEISS. I did not bring a lawsuit.

Mr. HALLEY. Did your wife bring a lawsuit?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did she ever bring a lawsuit?

Mr. WEISS. She may have.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you a defendant in a lawsuit?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know what you mean by that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you are going to have to answer these questions and give us the information, or we are going to have a lot of trouble here.

Mr. WEISS. I am not looking for any trouble.

The CHAIRMAN. I know you are not looking for any, but you are sure going to get plenty unless you talk forthrightly and give the committee the information we want and are entitled to.

Let's go on, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Weiss, after opening your restaurant, which I believe you opened about 2 years ago, is that right?

Mr. WEISS. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you receive any threats?

Mr. WEISS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you tell the committee about it?

Mr. WEISS. Pardon me, sir?

Mr. HALLEY. Will you tell the committee about those threats?

Mr. WEISS. Well, they told us they would bump me off, and the wife, that they were going to bump her off. We had several threats.

Mr. HALLEY. These threats were anonymous, were they?

Mr. WEISS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were attacks made on you and your wife?

Mr. WEISS. Well, I wouldn't call them attacks, but it was indirect attacks. It was not physical attacks, but it was indirect attacks.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you explain that to the committee?

Mr. WEISS. Well, they would come in and make trouble in the store, they would chase out customers, they would stand outside and call us rats.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did that?

Mr. WEISS. Several people.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know who they were?

Mr. WEISS. One is Alice Portnoy.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is she?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know who she is. She is just a woman there, and, oh, a lot of fellows.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know any of them?

Mr. WEISS. Well, I don't know. The people would try to come into the store, and they would holler, "Don't go into that rat's place." We didn't want to have the few people in the place chased out.

Mr. HALLEY. In short, you have had a lot of trouble since 1948?

Mr. WEISS. Oh, yes; we have had lots of trouble.

Mr. HALLEY. Strictly speaking now, August 18, 1948, she began a lawsuit against you and certain other people?

Mr. WEISS. Oh, she started a lawsuit. I don't know if it was started against me. I was never served with any papers.

Mr. HALLEY. Did your wife go to police headquarters to complain about these threats, and was she pushed around at headquarters by the policemen?

Mr. WEISS. I wasn't there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell that to one of the investigators?

Mr. WEISS. She told it.

Mr. HALLEY. You were there.

Mr. WEISS. I didn't say nothing. She was talking.

Mr. HALLEY. You were right there and you heard her say that.

Mr. WEISS. I was present when it was said.

Mr. HALLEY. Did a policeman enter your restaurant about a year ago and draw a gun and scare 60 patrons out of the shop?

Mr. WEISS. I wouldn't say it was 60, but whoever the patrons were who were in there, it was a full store.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened?

Mr. WEISS. We had a colored man working for us, and he was getting $30 per week. He came in and said that he wanted $60 per week, and we told him that we could not afford to pay him $60. He said that he quit, and I said, "Well, so long as you quit, the law says I have to pay you on Friday, so I will pay you on Friday."

He walked out and must have gone to headquarters, but the next day at lunchtime, just about 12 o'clock, the police officer came out and started a terrible commotion in the restaurant. I asked him, "What right do you have to demand this man's pay?" I said, "There are courts of law for that."

He pulled his gun out and everybody ran out of the store.

Senator TOBEY. The policeman did that?

Mr. WEISS. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Do you know his name?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Do you know his number?

Mr. WEISS. The missus probably knows who it is. I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Mr. Weiss, you called a certain amount of things to the attention of Mr. Kenny, and they were very interesting and helpful to the committee. I know and the committee knows that you have been engaged in a perfectly legitimate business for the last couple of years and you have had a lot of trouble.

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And we do not want to add to your troubles.

Mr. WEISS. Well, that is all you are doing, is adding to my troubles. You are just going to put me out of business; that's all you are doing.

Mr. HALLEY. At the same time, let me finish, please, it should be apparent that there is going to be a showdown on Saratoga.

Mr. WEISS. I cannot be involved in that. I am just a small man trying to make a living for four children, that is all. I am not trying to do anything else, but trying to build up a business, and you are just knocking me out of business. What they could not do you people are trying to do. They have been trying to knock me out of business for years, and I finally succeeded in getting a foothold, and you people will help me out.

Mr. HALLEY. How is the committee going to put you out of business.

Mr. WEISS. Well, the publicity. They told people not to come in because the place would be bombed, and now with this committee coming up nobody will come into our place. It will keep everybody out.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean because they are afraid it would be bombed?

Mr. WEISS. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Who would bomb your place?

Mr. WEISS. Nobody; but those are the rumors they pass around.

Mr. HALLEY. Who passes that around?

Mr. WEISS. To the whole Skidmore College.

Mr. HALLEY. Who told it around?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know. The girls won't tell it to us. I asked a few, "Why don't you come in?" They just say, "The place might be bombed, and we don't want to be there when it is bombed."

I mean, it is just ruining us, that is all it is doing.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you complained to the police?

Mr. WEISS. It doesn't do any good to complain to the police.

Mr. HALLEY. Why not?

Mr. WEISS. Because the missus even went to the Governor, and it didn't do any good.

Mr. HALLEY. When did she go to the Governor?

Mr. WEISS. She went 20 times if she went once.

Mr. HALLEY. About what?

Mr. WEISS. About everything, about everything in general.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean about the threats?

Mr. WEISS. About the threats, about the business, she went to them about everything in general.

Mr. HALLEY. Did she go to him about the gambling?

Mr. WEISS. I think she did several times.

Senator TOBEY. What did the Governor say?

Mr. WEISS. Well, they never let us see the Governor.

Senator TOBEY. Oh, you never saw him?

Mr. WEISS. They would never permit her to see the Governor.

Senator TOBEY. Who did she see?

Mr. WEISS. The secretary would stop her and say, "We will handle the matter."

She finally was advised to write to the Supreme Court Justices, somebody advised us to write to the Judiciary Department, so she wrote to the Supreme Court Justices, and they said they couldn't do anything.

Then she wrote to the Congressman and did not get an answer from him.

So finally one newspaper went to her protection, that was the Police Gazette, and I think they called somebody in Saratoga, and they told them that if any harm befalls anyone in the family, that they would follow it through, and they would never let it rest.

The Police Gazette was the only paper to side with Mrs. Weiss. They called somebody and said, "You had better make sure no harm befalls that family."

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever work for any of the gambling houses?

Mr. WEISS. Occasionally.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you describe the nature of the work you did, Mr. Weiss?

Mr. WEISS. Well, just a floor man.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean?

Mr. WEISS. Oh, just keep the people walking up the aisles.

Mr. HALLEY. In what place did you work?

Mr. WEISS. At Smith's, Urquhart's, Mechanicsville, White's

Mr. HALLEY. What years did you work there?

Mr. WEISS. 1947, 1948, and 1949; or 1946, 1947, and 1948.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you work for any of the places in Saratoga besides Smith's?

Mr. WEISS. Yes, White's and Urquhart's.

Mr. HALLEY. What are White's and Urquhart's?

Mr. WEISS. Horse rooms.

Mr. HALLEY. Horse rooms?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Smith had a regular gambling set-up, is that right?

Mr. WEISS. Well, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Roulette, craps, and so forth?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your job in Smith's?

Mr. WEISS. Just to keep people out of the ring. There is a big ring there, they call it the big money craps, and the people who are not playing, we would just tell them to please go outside of the ring.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean by the big-money craps?

Mr. WEISS. That is the $300 limit crap table.

Mr. HALLEY. That is a pretty big crap game?

Mr. WEISS. Yes, they played for big stakes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is there a minimum?

Mr. WEISS. Well, they bet among each other, they can bet as high as $100,000 among each other.

Mr. HALLEY. That is on one individual number of $300, the limit that is there?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. But on a single roll of the dice you can get several thousand dollars down on different numbers, couldn't you?

Mr. WEISS. You could probably get down $50,000.

Mr. HALLEY. I suppose if anybody tried to put dollar bills on a number—

Mr. WEISS. They would send them to the smaller crap games.

Mr. HALLEY. How does the minimum run in the crap game like that at Smith's, $20 or $5, or what?

Mr. WEISS. From a dollar up to $50.

Mr. HALLEY. No, I mean at the big table.

Mr. WEISS. At the big table it is either 5 or 10, I am not sure, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Either 5 or 10?

Mr. WEISS. Yes. I mean, I am not positive, because it is very seldom that you get a small bettor at that table.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get your job at Smith's?

Mr. WEISS. Oh, I know people; and I got the job.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get into that business?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know. It is just one of those things. You live in a gambling town, so you work for gamblers, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first move to Saratoga?

Mr. WEISS. When my mother was alive, I don't know, about 15 years, 12, 13, 14, or 15 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Where had you lived before that?

Mr. WEISS. I lived in Florida. We used to live in Florida 6 months, we used to have rooming houses, little hotels.

Mr. HALLEY. What business were you in in Florida?

Mr. WEISS. Rooming houses.

Mr. HALLEY. You and your wife?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever live in New York City?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What business were you in in New York City?

Mr. WEISS. In the furniture business.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in any other business?

(No answer.)

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever arrested in New York City?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. For what offenses?

Mr. WEISS. Disorderly conduct.

Mr. HALLEY. Any others?

Mr. WEISS. Usury.

Mr. HALLEY. But you were never convicted?

Mr. WEISS. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Not even for usury?

Mr. WEISS. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You were convicted, I think, for disorderly conduct?

Mr. WEISS. Yes; when I was a taxi driver.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you a taxi driver? In New York City?

Mr. WEISS. New York City; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You were indicted for manslaughter in Saratoga, were you not?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the circumstances?

Mr. WEISS. Self-defense.

Mr. HALLEY. Self-defense?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened, and where did it happen?

Mr. WEISS. A man attacked me—and I was compelled to shoot him—with a razor blade.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean he attacked you with a razor blade?

Mr. WEISS. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that?

Mr. WEISS. Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that?

Mr. WEISS. On Phile Street.

Mr. HALLEY. Right on Phile Street?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. I see. I see now that you were indicted for second degree assault in 1946, is that right?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In Mechanicsville?

Mr. WEISS. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did that occur?

Mr. WEISS. Mechanicsville.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened there?

Mr. WEISS. Well, a man tried to—they were going to the bank with the money, and I was outside, and this fellow tried to rob the bank roll, he tried to rob the money. It was just that I happened to be there, and a fight happened, and he was punched, he was a little drunk, and he fell to the floor and hit his head on the gutter.

Mr. HALLEY. As a matter of fact, you acted as guard, didn't you, in the transportation of money to the bank?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You went along.

Mr. WEISS. I went along.

Mr. HALLEY. And when trouble came up you got into the rumpus, did you not?

Mr. WEISS. Not necessarily.

Mr. HALLEY. But you did on this occasion.

Mr. WEISS. On this occasion I did.

Mr. HALLEY. When you talked to Mr. Kenny, did you give him the picture, did you say to him that the Saratoga picture was lousy from the bottom to the top, or anything like that?

Mr. WEISS. Maybe, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your opinion on it?

Mr. WEISS. I have no opinion.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell him that politics was behind all the trouble?

Mr. WEISS. You know it better than I do, so why ask me. You know the situation better than I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you think the situation could not exist without political support; is that right?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. It's pretty obvious; isn't it?

Mr. WEISS. You know it, don't you?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, don't you?

Mr. WEISS. What can I say? I am just a restaurant man. I just sell coffee for a nickel.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't that what you told Kenny?

Mr. WEISS. It is possible I told him a lot of things, I don't remember what I told him.

Mr. HALLEY. If he says you told him that the picture was lousy from the bottom to the top, and that politics was the cause, and that the situation would not exist without the support of politicians, would that be right?

Mr. WEISS. It is possible; I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. You could have told them that?

Mr. WEISS. Maybe I did and maybe I did not; I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let's get on, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. You will not deny that you told him that?

Mr. WEISS. I won't deny it and I won't say I did.

Mr. HALLEY. All right. Now, who is Pete Hoffas?

Mr. WEISS. He is deputy commissioner.

Mr. HALLEY. Deputy commissioner of what?

Mr. WEISS. Public safety.

Mr. HALLEY. In Saratoga?

Mr. WEISS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What does he have to do with gambling?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know. I don't bother with them people.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you told Kenny, did you not, that Hoffas was now a big man.

Mr. WEISS. A big man, sure, he is deputy commissioner. I never said he had anything to do with gambling.

Mr. HALLEY. Could the gambling go on if he was doing his job?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know. I am not in a position to know those things.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you know about Jim Leary?

Mr. WEISS. Nothing.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever work for him?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. No capacity whatsoever?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever take any money to him?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see anybody else take any money to him?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know anything about the way in which money was taken to various politicians and officials?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. From the gambling clubs?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Chief Patty Rox?

Mr. WEISS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. WEISS. Since I moved to Saratoga Springs.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any transactions with him whatsoever?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What does he have to do with the gambling in Saratoga?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know anything about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you told Kenny that if you had to, you would testify against Rox.

Mr. WEISS. I said that?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. WEISS. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. You are definitely stating that you did not say that?

Mr. WEISS. I did not say anything like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether Rox has received any graft from any of the gamblers?

Mr. WEISS. No, I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether Rox knows any of the gamblers?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course, when you were in the gambling business you did know Rox, isn't that right?

Mr. WEISS. Well, I live in town and I know everybody in town.

Mr. HALLEY. It is just a small town, isn't it?

Mr. WEISS. It is a very small town.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you at that time have any other business except working in the gambling houses?

Mr. WEISS. I may have had a horse room of my own.

Mr. HALLEY. Right in Saratoga?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, how did you operate?

Mr. WEISS. I just opened up and operated.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was your horse room?

Mr. WEISS. On Phile Street, where the restaurant is now.

Mr. HALLEY. Anybody could walk in?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have wire service?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you get it?

Mr. WEISS. I sneaked it from the horse rooms.

Mr. HALLEY. From other horse rooms?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean that somebody would phone you?

Mr. WEISS. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Then how would you get it?

Mr. WEISS. Some fellow hooked us on to the wires.

Senator TOBEY. Who did the putting on of it?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know; the fellow is an electrician, and he said if I gave him $75 that he could hook me up to the horse room.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he do it?

Mr. WEISS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you operate?

Mr. WEISS. Oh, 2 or 3 years, approximately. I am not saying definite, that is just approximate.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of front did you have for your operation?

Mr. WEISS. A little candy store.

Mr. HALLEY. Tell me, did anybody in 2 or 3 years—didn't anybody find out that you were getting this information in that length of time?

Mr. WEISS. No; they looked. They sent out people, and they tried to check, but they could never catch it.

Mr. HALLEY. They did not find out where you were getting it?

Mr. WEISS. No. The other horse rooms tried to find out where we were getting the information from, but they could not trace it.

Mr. HALLEY. Well now, why don't you try to help this committee cold turkey, let's have it cold turkey. Could you operate that horse room without paying somebody off?

Mr. WEISS. I did.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not even pay off the police?

Mr. WEISS. No police or nobody.

Mr. HALLEY. Or no politicians?

Mr. WEISS. No politicians.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you make any contributions to any political party?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir; nothing at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did they let you operate that way, then?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did anybody every try to collect from you?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever arrested at all?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir—No; they come and broke up the place once.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did that?

Mr. WEISS. The police officers.

Mr. HALLEY. And did you set it up again?

Mr. WEISS. Well, I tried to, but I could not. You could not do it, once they break you up, you cannot operate any more.

Mr. HALLEY. Why not?

Mr. WEISS. Because you are an outcast, probably.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did they break you up?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it because you were not paying off?

Mr. WEISS. I cannot answer that; I don't know what was in their minds.

Mr. HALLEY. When did they break you up?

Mr. WEISS. Oh, 3 or 4 years ago; I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever tell Kenny that the police motorcycles and cars are used to transport money for the gambling mobs in Saratoga?

Mr. WEISS. I don't believe I did.

Mr. HALLEY. He says that you mentioned that the police motorcycle cars with machine guns even used to bring the mobs' dough to the banks, to deposit, in Saratoga.

Mr. WEISS. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you say anything like that to Kenny?

Mr. WEISS. Not that I remember?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, is it a fact?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know. I never seen it.

Mr. HALLEY. You never say anything like that?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How was the money collected at the gambling houses?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know those things.

Mr. HALLEY. At least once you went to the bank at Mechanicsville and got into a ruckus and were arrested for assault. You ought to know how the money was collected.

Mr. WEISS. In Mechanicsville the money was put in a bag, and then they took it to the bank and deposited it.

Mr. HALLEY. Who took it?

Mr. WEISS. They had boys working there.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the name of the place in Mechanicsville?

Mr. WEISS. I don't think it had a name. It was just on Park Place.

Mr. HALLEY. Who ran it?

Mr. WEISS. Vic Urquhart, and Freddie Di Casper.

Mr. HALLEY. And they were your employers?

Mr. WEISS. Vic was, but not Freddie.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your capacity there?

Mr. WEISS. Well, sort of a companion for Urquhart.

Mr. HALLEY. Is there anything else you would like to tell the committee at this time?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know anything.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you work at Smith's?

Mr. WEISS. Oh, just August, they only opened up for August.

Mr. HALLEY. How many years?

Mr. WEISS. Oh, maybe four or five, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. What years?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know, 3, 4, 5 years, 1945, 1946, 1947, and 1948, or 1946, 1947, 1948—3 years, about 3 or 4 years, approximately, I worked there.

Mr. HALLEY. That is over near the lake, isn't it?

Mr. WEISS. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And it is a large rambling place?

Mr. WEISS. It is big.

Mr. HALLEY. And there is a dance hall connected with it?

Mr. WEISS. No dance hall.

Mr. HALLEY. And a restaurant, a big bar?

Mr. WEISS. No; they have no bar. It is just a little larger than this table [indicating], they have just coffee and sandwiches, but no bar. It is a big barn, it is a big shack.

Mr. HALLEY. And they have in it various——

Mr. WEISS. Various gambling devices.

Mr. HALLEY (continuing). Various gambling devices, such as roulette wheels and crap tables?

Mr. WEISS. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is where they have the big New York crap game?

Mr. WEISS. Yes; I would say so.

Mr. HALLEY. Who runs that crap game? Is that run by the management, or is that a concession?

Mr. WEISS. No; some outsiders run that.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are they?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it anyone named Lefty Clark, who ran it?

Mr. WEISS. Oh, he ran it years and years ago. I would say quite many years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he run it while you were there?

Mr. WEISS. One year.

Mr. HALLEY. He ran it 1 year while you were there?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who ran it after Clark?

Mr. WEISS. Patty Grennon.

Mr. HALLEY. Who?

Mr. WEISS. Patty Grennon.

Mr. HALLEY. Grenno?

Mr. WEISS. No; Grennon, G-r-e-n-n-o-n.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did Grennon run it?

Mr. WEISS. I only know of 1 year that I was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who ran it after Grennon?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you were there at least 3 years.

Mr. WEISS. But I worked for Grennon 1 year, and 1 year for Lefty Clark, and the third year I don't know who ran the place. The floormen used to come around and give us our pay envelopes.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no other questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey.

Senator TOBEY. You testified rather feelingly about our examining you and about not answering certain questions. You said that we would ruin you. You talked about your wife and your four children, and that you just started in an honest business, but on your own recital as to what goes on in Saratoga, you have been part and parcel of it all, and you have seen what goes on there, and you know that the things are illegal, and unholy, and the committee is trying to establish the facts. The only way we can do that is to get the facts, and then you remonstrate with us for doing that.

I don't know what your mental attitude is. You seem to have one of fear about your own business, but if you had one of hatred for the crowd that runs things there, I would like to know about that.

Mr. WEISS. Senator, I am just a small man, a small man that could be removed very easily.

Senator TOBEY. Well, the point I make is that you know all these things. You have come through, have you, and told us all that you know?

Mr. WEISS. Nobody can help me, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. We can.

Mr. WEISS. No law enforcement agency can help me, I do not care who it is. There is none who can help me, sir.

Senator TOBEY. The point I am making is this: Have you come through and told us everything that you know; have you concealed anything?

Mr. WEISS. I would have to pack up and move out of Saratoga if I told you anything like that.

Senator TOBEY. Well, that would not be the worst thing in the world; would it?

Mr. WEISS. No, but I have got every penny in the world, I have borrowed everything, and if I have to move out I am a ruined man. I have no place to go for my family and children.

Senator TOBEY. Well, every day is a fresh beginning for all of us.

Mr. WEISS. Not for me, it ain't.

Senator TOBEY. Have you told us everything you could tell us?

Mr. WEISS. Yes, I have.

Senator TOBEY. Have you come through clean to us; have you shown us all the crookedness there is?

Mr. WEISS. To my knowledge, I have.

Senator TOBEY. Everything?

Mr. WEISS. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. You know Urquhart, of course?

Mr. WEISS. Yes, sir; I worked for him.

Mr. HALLEY. In what place?

Mr. WEISS. Oh, every place he has operated.

Mr. HALLEY. What places are those?

Mr. WEISS. His own place, White's, Mechanicsville.

Mr. HALLEY. Does Urquhart work for Doc Leonard?

Mr. WEISS. Pardon me, sir?

Mr. HALLEY. Does Urquhart work for Doc Leonard?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you are smiling. Does he work with him?

Mr. WEISS. You know more than I do, and you are asking me questions.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean I know more than you do? Is it common knowledge that Urquhart works for Leonard?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know. I know I worked for him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Urquhart with Leonard?

Mr. WEISS. No. I would just ride to Mechanicsville and back, and if I went to the horse rooms I was inside.

The CHAIRMAN. What you mean is that Urquhart fronts for Doc Leonard; is that it?

Mr. HALLEY. That is the question.

Mr. WEISS. He does not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he work for Leonard?

Mr. WEISS. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he work with him? Are they partners?

Mr. WEISS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Is Patty Grennon a front for Leonard?

Mr. WEISS. That I don't know. I know both of them very slightly.

Mr. HALLEY. Is Hoffas a front for Leonard?

Mr. WEISS. Well, I would say the same thing on that. Hoffas and Patty Grennon were partners, and who they fronted for, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it common knowledge that they are fronts for Leonard?

Mr. WEISS. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of it?

Mr. WEISS. There are a lot of rumors go around. I wouldn't make a statement one way or the other about that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear that particular rumor?

Mr. WEISS. There is lots of rumors floating around, but I can't make a statement to that effect.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you be able to go as far as to say that that is one of the rumors you have heard?

Mr. WEISS. I would not say. I do not know. What I do not know, I cannot say.

Mr. HALLEY. Fine.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is the mayor?

Mr. WEISS. Mayor Mallory.

The CHAIRMAN. Has he been there a long time?

Mr. WEISS. Quite a long time.

The CHAIRMAN. And the commissioner of public safety is Doc Leonard; that is the fellow we are talking about?

Mr. WEISS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. That is all, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Mr. WEISS. Now, my wife was not subpoenaed, you know, and she wanted to come down voluntarily, and she told me to tell you people that if you do want her, when I get back, and you still want her, I can tell her, and she will come in tomorrow. She did not have anybody to leave the four children with. If you want her, and you think you want to question her, she is perfectly willing to be here.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you have to say to that, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, I think we would like to talk to her.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you have her come down tomorrow afternoon, and tell her to report, and let us know she is here.

Mr. WEISS. Yes. This way I can stay with the children and let her come down.

Mr. HALLEY. Tell her to get here about 2 o'clock.

Mr. WEISS. Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Who is your next witness, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Julius Goldstein.

The CHAIRMAN. Good morning, sir. Counsel, will you give your name to the official stenographer, please?

Mr. CARROLL. James Carroll, attorney at law.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your address?

Mr. CARROLL. Saratoga. James Carroll, of Saratoga Springs.

The CHAIRMAN. How many lawyers do you have up there, sir?

Mr. CARROLL. Oh, about 76 or 77—too many.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Let's get on with Mr. Julius Goldstein, of Saratoga Springs; is that correct?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please?

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JULIUS GOLDSTEIN, SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., ACCOMPANIED BY JAMES CARROLL, ATTORNEY, SARATOGA
SPRINGS, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, please?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Julius Goldstein.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your occupation?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I am a contractor for a plating outfit now in Schenectady, N. Y.—the Schenectady Plating Works—and I also am in the vacuum-cleaning business.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever work for any gambling house in Saratoga?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer on the grounds that it might incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, now, Mr. Goldstein, we will direct you to answer that question. Your working for a gambling house would not be in violation of a Federal law, or any Federal law that I know of.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I still decline to answer.

Mr. CARROLL. Tell them you still refuse.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I still refuse to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You refuse to follow the direction of the committee?

Mr. CARROLL. That is correct.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, do you know Dr. Ferrone?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, I would say about 10 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever work for him?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I refuse to answer the question.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you told an investigator for this committee that you worked for Dr. Ferrone. Did you work for Dr. Ferrone in 1949?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. In fact, you said you worked for him at Riley's; is that so?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. And you said that your particular occupation was steering people to the place; is that not so?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. But you would not deny that you told that to the investigator?

The CHAIRMAN. You understand, and your attorney, Mr. Carroll, that the Chair is directing you to answer these questions that are being asked of you?

Mr. CARROLL. We understand that. May it also be understood that the grounds for each declination is that it might tend to incriminate the witness.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, we understand that is the ground, all right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, did you ever tell Mr. Kenny that there was probably more ice tossed out in Saratoga than in any other gambling area of its size in the country?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. I am just asking you whether you told that to Mr. Kenny. How can that incriminate you?

Mr. CARROLL. Just decline.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. I am not asking you if you tossed out any ice.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I still decline.

Mr. HALLEY. What are you afraid of, Mr. Goldstein?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I ain't afraid of nothing.

Mr. HALLEY. Why are you coming down here with fear in your heart, when this committee is trying to do a decent job of work and clean up the conditions in Saratoga?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I have no fear in my heart.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you certainly are not going to incriminate yourself by answering that question. Your refusal is just ridiculous.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't know whether it is or not, that is why I am declining.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you not tell Mr. Kenny that the gamblers up in Saratoga are too greedy, and they killed the town themselves?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you not tell—

The CHAIRMAN. Just a moment, Mr. Halley.

For the purposes of the record, Mr. Kenny was an investigator for this committee at that time; is that correct, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Now, did you not tell Mr. Kenny that besides the sheriff would send people out to the gambling place for them to hire, and that you had to put the sheriff's men to work in the place and pay all sorts of extra expenses?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you even say that the politicians would send as many as five cabs which would have to be hired as house cabs?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. I will ask the chairman to instruct this witness to answer the question.

The CHAIRMAN. He understands that he is directed to answer. Do you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no further questions of this witness.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. No, I have no comment to make, only one of repulsion and aversion against a man who displays the attitude that this man does. I think there are ways of reaching him, and we will before we get through.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Goldstein, it is quite apparent that you have been talking with Mr. Kenny, an investigator for our committee. Now, what caused you to change your mind? You talked with him, why won't you testify here?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer on the ground it might incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You decline to answer that question?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Has anybody been to see you, to threaten you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Has anyone talked with you about it since you talked with Mr. Kenny?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you remember talking to Mr. Kenny?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How come you felt it necessary to get an attorney, not apparently that you do not have a good attorney, but what made you feel you had to get an attorney in order to come down here?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Because I did not know what I was walking into. I did not know what it was all about, and not knowing much about the set-up, I thought it advisable to see my attorney.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you don't want to tell us who you worked for?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You decline to answer as to whom you worked for in Saratoga?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you lived in Saratoga?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Nine years—eight or nine years.

The CHAIRMAN. Where were you before that?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Albany.

The CHAIRMAN. What was your first job when you came to Saratoga?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Well, I did live in Albany and Saratoga, both. I lived with my sister in Saratoga.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you do when you came to Saratoga?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Well, I worked most of the time in Albany, and I was in a dry-cleaning business, and I had stores in Saratoga and Glens Falls and Watervliet and Troy.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you married?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever been arrested?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What for?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Well, I was arrested for working in a gambling house in Schroon Lake, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you convicted?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How many other times have you been arrested?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Once in Lake George—Bolton Landing.

The CHAIRMAN. Lake George, N. Y.?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. For the same offense?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ever get arrested for working in a gambling house at Saratoga?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ever work in a gambling house in Saratoga?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer, sir.

Mr. CARROLL. Mr. Kefauver, so that there will not be any mistake, there were more convictions on his record. I don't want you to think that we are withholding anything.

The CHAIRMAN. What are the other convictions?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I was convicted at the Stewart Arms Restaurant and Bar, which is across the way from the McHenry Hotel, and I was convicted in a conspiracy case at the Sagamore Hotel. I was practically a victim of circumstances, but I still was convicted on it.

The CHAIRMAN. A conspiracy to do what—violate the prohibition law?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Well, the OPA officer was the one who was doing the violating of the OPA law, and I happened to be with him and happened to be on the spot.

The CHAIRMAN. What else have you been convicted of?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I was arrested at Revere Beach for being in a gambling house.

The CHAIRMAN. Riviera Beach?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, Revere Beach.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is that?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Massachusetts.

Mr. HALLEY. That is in Massachusetts.

Senator TOBEY. Do you know Mr. Lombardi?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you get convicted there?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How many places, how many States have you worked in gambling houses?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer that on the ground that it might incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Massachusetts is one, isn't it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And New York is another, isn't it?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How about Florida?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Any other States besides Massachusetts and New York?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer, sir, on the grounds it may incriminate me.

Senator TOBEY. Have you every been in Nevada?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Sir?

Senator TOBEY. Have you ever been in Nevada?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I decline to answer—oh, Nevada?

Mr. CARROLL. That's all right to answer that, gambling is legal there.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, Nevada; yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Were you in the gambling business there?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Sir?

Senator TOBEY. Were you in the gambling business there?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I worked there, sir.

Senator TOBEY. In the gambling business?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir; about a month, I think, when I got out of the service I went to Nevada.

Senator TOBEY. How long has Mr. Carroll been your attorney?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Oh, we have been friends for a good many years, ever since I have been in Saratoga.

Senator TOBEY. The question I asked you was how long has he been your attorney.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Well, offhand, practically this is the first time I have had him appear with me. I have asked him on different occasions for advice in different things, but this is the first time he appeared in a case with me.

Senator TOBEY. And he advised you in connection with these things you were indicted for, did he?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Goldstein. You remember that you are to remain under subpoena and that you are subject to further call of the committee, and the subcommittee will consider the record and then decide what recommendation to make in connection with your refusals to answer.

I am sorry that you have taken the attitude you have here. I do not see possibly how any Federal statute or offense would be connected with your answers, I do not see how they could incriminate you, but if that is the attitude you want to take, there is nothing we can do about it.

Senator TOBEY. Now, this may be entirely irrelevant, but I wish you would tell me how, as an American citizen first, and an attorney, second, you could keep from asking this man to tell us what he knows.

Mr. CARROLL. Well, I have my duty to him and I am advising him as best I can, in view of the things he told me.

Senator TOBEY. You must realize that this committee is making an honest effort to discourage these things and when we find them out, there is something you can do about it, and you are not helping when you tell him to refuse to answer.

Mr. CARROLL. Unfortunately, you find yourself in a position of having a witness who is not able to answer because of circumstances and conditions.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let me ask you this—we are talking to you as his attorney: Do you think that there might be some sort of retaliation if the witness were to answer? Is that what you mean?

Mr. CARROLL. Not at all. I did not mean to infer that. It has to do with prosecution for a Federal offense because of testimony before you, or I should say, that aside from that, it could have to do with prosecution in a State offense and, of course, there is no way that this committee can grant him immunity from either the Federal or State, so under those circumstances I have advised him not to testify.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Confining ourselves solely to those places where you were employed at gambling, where you were convicted, about which you have testified—if my recollection serves me correctly, one place was in Schroon Lake, N. Y.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And in what other places?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Bolton Landing; that is the Sagamore Hotel.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And also at Lake George?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Those are three places in New York State.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir, and at Revere Beach, Mass.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And Revere Beach, Mass.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Was that also for gambling?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And you also testified that you were employed in the gambling business in the State of Nevada.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. So that we have four separate places where you worked in the gambling business, is that correct?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Do you mean four separate States?

Mr. SHIVITZ. No, four separate locations, Bolton Landing, Lake George, Schroon Lake, Revere Beach, and in Nevada.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. That makes five.

Mr. CARROLL. No, Senator, just a moment. Bolton Landing and Lake George are the same places.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Very well. Then there are four places?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Will you please tell the committee whether any of these four places where you were employed had the same employer in any other places of these four. Do you understand the question?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I don't, not clearly.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Well, you had superiors in all of these four places, people who gave you your instructions or your orders.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you have the same superiors giving you instructions in more than one place?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. They were different superiors in each of these four places?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. There was no common ownership so far as you can testify to?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. No, sir; positively not.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You are positive of that?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I am positive.

Senator TOBEY. Mr. Witness, you spoke of Lake George. Now, it has been my privilege to be there in years past, and I consider that the scenery around there is about as beautiful as God could make or as anything in the world, don't you?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Don't you think it is too bad that man violates it and makes it a den of iniquity?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Well, I could not answer that. Besides I don't think it is a den of iniquity.

Senator TOBEY. Well, there are some dens of iniquity there, aren't there?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. I cannot say that there is, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Goldstein.

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Thank you.

Mr. HALLEY. You understand that you are to continue under subpoena, that you are not excused finally?

Mr. GOLDSTEIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not need to remain here today, but when we want you again we feel all we need do is to let you or your attorney know.

Mr. CARROLL. That will be perfectly all right, sir. Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Who will your next witness be, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. It will be Mr. A'Hearn.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, let us have him in here.

You are Mr. A'Hearn?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Good afternoon. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. A'HEARN. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, you may proceed, Mr. Halley.

TESTIMONY OF WALTER F. A'HEARN, DETECTIVE, POLICE DEPARTMENT, SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, please?

Mr. A'HEARN. Walter F. A'Hearn.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your position?

Mr. A'HEARN. Detective.

Mr. HALLEY. With what police department?

Mr. A'HEARN. Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you held that position?

Mr. A'HEARN. About 10 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you the second ranking man on the Saratoga Police Department?

Mr. A'HEARN. No, sir; I am not.

Mr. HALLEY. Who rates above you?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, there is a Detective West. He has been in the detective division longer than I have.

Mr. HALLEY. You are not chief of detectives?

Mr. A'HEARN. No, we have no such title.

Mr. HALLEY. How many detectives are there?

Mr. A'HEARN. Two.

Mr. HALLEY. You and West?

Mr. A'HEARN. That is all. I take care of the fingerprinting and files, and I do a lot of interrogation, and so on and so forth.

Mr. HALLEY. In what position?

Mr. A'HEARN. As detective. When I went to the FBI in 1944 our files were kept haphazardly. The files were not kept up to date.

When I came back there I organized the fingerprint files and I took the files and brought them up to date, and ever since then I have been doing that.

Mr. HALLEY. You graduated from the National Police Academy, did you?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes, I did, in 1944.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you keep any general files of the hoodlums who come to Saratoga?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes, we do. We have different ones, people that come there, I know a lot of them by sight, but I don't know their names.

During August lots of times I will go on an expedition, going down Broadway, and hanging around, going in where they hang out in different grills, and I spend an hour or so there seeing what I can pick up, and so on and so forth.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any regular set of files?

Mr. A'HEARN. No; we don't have what we call monitor files; no.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the situation with respect to gambling in Saratoga?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, there have been times where reports that gambling has been going on there has come to our attention.

Senator TOBEY. That is quite an understatement, isn't it?

Mr. A'HEARN. But so far as I know, I have never seen it actually take place.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you ever hear of Piping Rock?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in it?

Mr. A'HEARN. I have been in it at times; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. During the racing season?

Mr. A'HEARN. I have been in as far as the lobby during the racing season.

Mr. HALLEY. Why didn't you go into the place?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, I never had no occasion to go in.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you never heard there was wide-open gambling going on there?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes; I have heard it.

Mr. HALLEY. Why didn't you walk in and find out?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, I never had no orders to.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, wouldn't you do it without orders, as a detective?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, I still wanted to work.

Senator TOBEY. You are a detective, aren't you?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. And the job of a detective is to detect, is it not?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, he said he still wanted to work.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean by that?

Mr. A'HEARN. I follow orders. If I receive an order from my superior I try to follow it out.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you implying that if you went in and caused trouble without orders that you would probably be fired?

Mr. A'HEARN. I don't know whether I would or not, but I imply that.

Mr. HALLEY. You what?

Mr. A'HEARN. I don't know whether I would or not, but I would assume that.

Mr. HALLEY. You would assume that?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In fact, I think you told our investigator who interviewed you that the less you knew about it the better off you would be, is that right?

Mr. A'HEARN. That is true, in this respect, what has taken place in Saratoga I never wanted to know certain things, I never tried to find out certain things, for the simple reason that if you don't know anything you can say truthfully and honestly that you don't know. I have always tried to go along and mind my own business.

Senator TOBEY. Have you ever seen those three monkeys, See No Evil, Hear No Evil, and Speak No Evil?

Mr. A'HEARN. I have; yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. And you have certainly followed their example, haven't you?

Mr. A'HEARN. To a certain extent. My father told me that a long, long time ago, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get your job on the Saratoga police force?

Mr. A'HEARN. I first went on in 1919, after I was discharged from the war. I had seven spots on my lungs, and the doctor told me to stay out in the air.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you a native of Saratoga?

Mr. A'HEARN. I am.

Senator TOBEY. And that is why he doesn't go into gambling houses, he just wants to keep out in the air, he doesn't want to get spots on his lungs.

Mr. A'HEARN. No. I am a machinist by trade, and the doctor advised me to stay out in the air. I went on what we call the summer force for 2 or 3 months, and I went out on that force, oh, several years, just in the summertime.

Then in 1933 I was appointed regularly as a patrolman, and I was a motorcycle officer and patrolman.

In 1940 I was appointed as detective.

Mr. HALLEY. As an old-timer in town and a native of Saratoga, you are all right and pretty safe in your job so long as you don't cross anybody, isn't that what it comes down to?

Mr. A'HEARN. I have seen it up there on different political factions, when they would go in and out under different administrations, if you weren't of the same political faith, and so on and so forth, they would give you a very hard time.

Mr. HALLEY. But you stuck it out through the whole 30 years?

Mr. A'HEARN. No; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. You have been out of office, too?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, I was out before I was appointed under Sweeny's administration.

Mr. HALLEY. What year was that?

Mr. A'HEARN. I think that was in 1928, somewhere around there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who reappointed you?

Mr. A'HEARN. I was just working summers, I mean, I was not a regular man, I would work probably 8 or 9 months of the year.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you get your job again as a regular man?

Mr. A'HEARN. That was in 1932, I took the civil service examinations and I claimed disability preference.

Mr. HALLEY. Since then you have been a regular employee?

Mr. A'HEARN. I have, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, what is your general information about what has to be done in order to operate a gambling place in Saratoga?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, if I was going to operate one, as I told Mr. Rousseau, I think his name was, in order to get the real lowdown, I would go to somebody who was operating one and see the right connections.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are the right connections, so far as common gossip is concerned, in Saratoga?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, your political leaders, I would say.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are they?

Mr. A'HEARN. Mr. Leary and Mr. Leonard.

Mr. HALLEY. Jim Leary and Doc Leonard?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes, those are the political leaders.

Mr. HALLEY. I think you told Mr. Rousseau and apparently you are being completely frank about it, that while you have no proof of it, the common gossip is that if you want to open up a gambling place you have to clear with Leary and Leonard, is that right?

Mr. A'HEARN. I did not say that. He asked me who would I go to and how would I find out, and I said that if I was a gambler and wanted to open up a place, I said I would go to some of the gambling fraternity and get the lowdown on who to see and what to see, and what to do in order to get the proper connection.

Mr. HALLEY. I think you went further and said that permission to gamble had to be received from Leary and Leonard, or at least that was the common gossip.

Mr. A'HEARN. No; I don't believe I did say that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, then, how would you put it now to the committee?

Mr. A'HEARN. I said, well, it is common gossip, public opinion, and so on and so forth, that they are the bosses.

Mr. HALLEY. And then it stands to reason in your opinion that to operate you would have to get permission from the bosses.

Mr. A'HEARN. I would say that, from public opinion; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. At least you have to get clearance from the bosses.

Mr. A'HEARN. That is right; that is the truth.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, when you started testifying today, I think you said that one reason you did not go into these gambling places and try to raid them was because you wanted to keep your job.

Mr. A'HEARN. If I went against orders, what I mean, if any time they ever give me any orders I always followed them out, and I never went contrary to them and over my superiors' heads.

Mr. HALLEY. And if you did raid any gambling places you would expect to be fired: is that right?

Mr. A'HEARN. I would expect that something would be done to me, to a certain extent.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, have you had orders not to raid any gambling places?

Mr. A'HEARN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had orders just to keep your nose out of them?

Mr. A'HEARN. I never had orders to keep my nose out of them or anything like that.

Senator TOBEY. I think the witness has the ordinary powers of observation and he just absorbed that and used tact and diplomacy.

The CHAIRMAN. That puts it about right; doesn't it?

Mr. A'HEARN. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey puts it about right, you just sensed that the best thing to do was to not find out about these places.

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, since I have been on the police department I have seen two other investigations up there in my time. What I mean is, I was not on the department in my official capacity, but I have seen investigations going on, and I have seen other ones involved in it, so I have always said to myself, "The less you know, the better you are off."

Senator TOBEY. Now you are helping us. I think you ought to write a book on how to be a detective, and it would be a best seller. Just a few of those bon mots of expression are wonderful because you are telling us a very profound truth, and you would help your fellow-man by selling your rights to a magazine and dictating the story to a ghost writer. You are a public benefactor in taking the position you are, in keeping others from going on the job crusading against these men. You have really got this thing down to a fine art and it is very evident from your testimony. I congratulate you on your perspicacity.

The CHAIRMAN. When you are talking about these other investigations, you mean those men got fired; is that what you meant?

Mr. A'HEARN. No; it is just this, that years ago I was just a rookie policeman, and they were all brought into court, the county court, and I don't know what happened, I was not down there myself. Then there have been other raids in Saratoga. So I just said, "Well, if I am not inquisitive"—what I mean is that I was not going to inquire into my bosses' affairs, or this one's affairs, and so on and so forth, that I would just mind my own business more or less.

Senator TOBEY. And you graduated from the FBI?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes; I did.

Senator TOBEY. Did they give you a magna cum laude degree?

Mr. A'HEARN. I don't know what degree I got.

Senator TOBEY. At any rate, you passed the test?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Did you write out these tests?

Mr. A'HEARN. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Did you take an examination?

Mr. A'HEARN. No.

Senator TOBEY. How did they pass you, on your record as a detective?

Mr. A'HEARN. You all graduate into a certain group.

Senator TOBEY. But the individual cases were not considered?

Mr. A'HEARN. No.

Senator TOBEY. Well, if they had been, I think that you would have been in the first 10.

Mr. A'HEARN. I doubt it, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. I think so, from what you have stated here.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't it a fact that the police department in Saratoga went so far as to furnish police protection to the gambling houses for the transportation of their receipts to the bank?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes; in one sense of the word, they did.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you elaborate on that, what happened?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, after the war we transported or guarded money to the raceway, and we did that every night.

I suppose that they saw us do that, and they asked us if we would take their money out to the night clubs.

Mr. HALLEY. Who asked you?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, Mr. Burns first was the one who asked me.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his place?

Mr. A'HEARN. He was at Piping Rock, and he asked if we would escort the money out. I said yes. I thought it was just for that first night, so we escorted the money out to Piping Rock.

Mr. HALLEY. Who escorted it, you and who else?

Mr. A'HEARN. Me and my partner, Don Petes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you paid for that work?

Mr. A'HEARN. No; let me just finish, will you?

Mr. HALLEY. Go right ahead.

Mr. A'HEARN. Later on I was.

Mr. HALLEY. Go right ahead.

Mr. A'HEARN. We brought the money out and dropped it off. Then he asked us, he said, "Will you fellows be back tonight and bring us in?" I said, "If you care to, yes"; I said, "we can do it."

And I told him, I said, "Well, when you need us." I said, "telephone police headquarters, and they will get us over the air by the radio," and I said, "we can come back and pick it up and bring it into the bank."

And he said, "O. K." Which we did do. Then he said, "How about tomorrow night?" I said, "That is all right with me."

So it went on, and we did it every night.

So the middle of the following week he says, "Well, what do I owe you fellows?" I says, "Well," I says, "you don't owe us anything. Anything you care to give," I said, "is perfectly all right with us."

So he give us the equivalent of $10 a night between my partner and myself.

Senator TOBEY. Who was this who gave it to you?

Mr. A'HEARN. John McEwen.

Senator TOBEY. What is his place?

Mr. A'HEARN. He is connected with Piping Rock.

Senator TOBEY. Piping Rock?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. He gave you the $10 because of your zeal in your work there?

Mr. A'HEARN. For bringing the money out, picking it up and bringing it back.

Senator TOBEY. Then you, in a way, helped Piping Rock by your skillful handling in picking up the money and bringing it out?

Mr. A'HEARN. It was not that too much. They were afraid of stick-ups more than anything else, because you have everybody in Saratoga during the summertime; we have an increase in population of between thirty and forty thousand people, and we have just as many hoodlums in Saratoga as they have in Miami, during August.

The CHAIRMAN. Was that $10 apiece, or 10 what?

Mr. A'HEARN. $10 apiece.

Senator TOBEY. What did you do with the money?

Mr. A'HEARN. I put it in the bank.

Senator TOBEY. Didn't you give that to charity?

Mr. A'HEARN. No, sir; I did not.

Senator TOBEY. Well, I certainly am surprised.

The CHAIRMAN. Where would you take their money to? Was that taken to the bank?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes; they have a night depository vault inside of the bank; you drop it in.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you escort an armored car?

Mr. A'HEARN. No; they used to have armored cars.

The CHAIRMAN. They would give you the money?

Mr. A'HEARN. No; we wouldn't handle the money. They would send one of their own men with it, and we would bring them in as far as the bank, and when he would go over to the night depository, he would drop it into the night depository.

The CHAIRMAN. He would ride in your car with it?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Would they pay you by the week or day?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, about $10 a day.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you speak to your police commissioner, or whatever his name is, Dr. Leonard, about doing that special service?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, the first summer we did it, I didn't say anything to him at all about it. I didn't say anything to the chief. I don't know; I just went along and did it, that was all, figuring, well, we would do it to the raceway, and I thought it was perfectly all right.

So the following summer, it was in the middle of the summer that the chief asked me about it. He said, "Are you fellows escorting the proceeds out to the night clubs?" I said, "Well, I am at the Brook—I mean at Piping Rock," and he said, "Why didn't you tell me about it?" I said, "Well, I don't know, I just forgot about it. I did not think it was too important," I said, "so long as we do it to the raceway and other places."

I mean, we took it to the bank, we worked for the banks and the theaters and the churches, and we used to do it for the race track, escort it back and forth.

He said, "Well," he says, "I will let you know about it." So he never said anything more to me about it. Whether he forgot about it or whatever happened, I never asked him about it.

The CHAIRMAN. He knew that you were assisting and protecting them, but did he know that they were paying you that niggardly sum of $10 per night?

Mr. A'HEARN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. He did not know that?

Mr. A'HEARN. He did not know that.

The CHAIRMAN. Didn't you complain about that being so small, only $10?

Mr. A'HEARN. No; I was sort of pleased with it.

Senator TOBEY. Is that so? Just $10 a night for protecting all that swag?

Mr. A'HEARN. Well, $70 a week is O. K. with me.

Senator TOBEY. I see.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything else, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Now, you spoke to Dr. Leonard about this, is that right?

Mr. A'HEARN. No, sir; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. As well as the chief?

Mr. A'HEARN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I thought you told our investigator, Mr. Rousseau that the chief and Dr. Leonard asked you about the practice of taking that money.

Mr. A'HEARN. No; I think Mr. Rousseau is mistaken. I said that the chief questioned me about it.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean Chief Rox?

Mr. A'HEARN. Yes, Chief Rox. I told the chief, "Yes," and he said, "Well," he said, "I will let you know about it." And he never brought the subject up to me again, and I did not ask him about it. It must have slipped his mind, or if he went to the commissioner and asked the commissioner about it, I don't know to this day if he did or not, and so long as he did not say anything about it, I presumed that it was perfectly all right, and we continued to do it.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know who the chief spoke to, do you?

Mr. A'HEARN. I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. But you assume he spoke to some superior?

Mr. A'HEARN. I presume he brought it up to the commissioner.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Johnny "Okey" Oakley?

Mr. A'HEARN. Oakley?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. A'HEARN. No, do you mean Coakley?

Mr. HALLEY. Coakley, Johnny Coakley. You know him, don't you?

Mr. A'HEARN. I have known him for about 20 years, ever since I was a motorcycle cop.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he have an interest in one of the houses?

Mr. A'HEARN. I have always presumed he was at Arrowhead, because when I was on the motorcycle, I used to drive in there and go into the kitchen to get a bite to eat nights, when I used to ride the motorcycle.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first know Coakley?

Mr. A'HEARN. That must have been 1924, 1925, somewheres around in there.

Mr. HALLEY. What is Coakley's business?

Mr. A'HEARN. That I don't know. I was in the help's dining room one night, sitting down having something to eat. The steward introduced me. He come walking through, and the steward introduced me to him.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the Arrowhead?

Mr. A'HEARN. No, I never was there, I never even seen a show there, so long as they have had shows around Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. Who operated the Brook Club in 1949?

Mr. A'HEARN. There was a man from Albany, George Smeldone, and he has a restaurant in Albany. I was born and brought up and soldiered with Georgie Smeldone.

Mr. HALLEY. Does Commissioner Leonard ever interfere with work in the police department?

Mr. A'HEARN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How often do you see him?

Mr. A'HEARN. I wouldn't see the commissioner to speak to sometimes but two or three times during the year.

Mr. HALLEY. You have a rather small department; isn't that right?

Mr. A'HEARN. Twenty-three men.

Mr. HALLEY. How often does the commissioner come in?

Mr. A'HEARN. He doesn't come in the Department any more than—I have seen him in there probably two, three or four times during a whole year. He might come in oftener when I would be out, but that is the average I have seen him in there, two or three times a year.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no other questions. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. No, I think not. I am very much impressed with the witness.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Thank you.

You can go back today, but remember that you are to remain under subpoena, and if we need you again, we will let you know.

Mr. A'HEARN. O. K. Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Who is your next witness to be?

Mr. HALLEY. That will be the chief of police, Patrick Rox.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you do? This is Senator Tobey; this is Senator Kefauver, and my name is Rudolph Halley. I am chief counsel for the committee.

You are chief of police of Saratoga, are you not?

Mr. Rox. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And are you counsel for Mr. Rox?

Mr. Prior. Yes. My name is Daniel H. Prior. I have an office at Albany, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, Mr. Rox?

Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Rox. Yes, I do.

TESTIMONY OF PATRICK F. ROX, CHIEF OF POLICE, SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., ACCOMPANIED BY DANIEL H. PRIOR, COUNSEL

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, please?

Mr. Rox. Patrick F. Rox.

Mr. HALLEY. You may smoke if you desire.

Where do you reside?

Mr. ROX. Saratoga Springs.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your position?

Mr. ROX. Chief of police.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you held that position?

Mr. ROX. Well, I was officially appointed, let me see—pardon me a minute—I went in in 1922.

Mr. HALLEY. As chief?

Mr. ROX. No; I went in as a patrolman, and I was out 4 years, and then that would bring me up to 1933.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, have you any other businesses besides that of being chief of police?

Mr. ROX. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your compensation in that position?

Mr. ROX. Right now?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. ROX. About $3,700 a year, starting this year.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is your only income?

Mr. ROX. No; I have an income from the raceway.

Mr. HALLEY. What is that?

Mr. ROX. Well, I take the money out in my private car, and I get $10 a night.

Mr. HALLEY. For taking the proceeds from the raceway to the bank?

Mr. ROX. From the bank to the raceway, not the track, you understand, from the raceway back.

Mr. HALLEY. And for that you get $10 a night?

Mr. ROX. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you do that personally?

Mr. ROX. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other sources of income?

Mr. ROX. No, nothing.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any other sources of income in the last 5 years?

Mr. ROX. I have not.

Senator TOBEY. Do you use your own car in taking this out?

Mr. ROX. I do, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. While we are on that subject, have you ever escorted the funds from any of the night clubs or gambling houses from the bank?

Mr. ROX. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Some of your men do it, do they not?

Mr. ROX. I understand they do.

Mr. HALLEY. They so advised you, is that right?

Mr. ROX. I never advised them to do it, but I always felt that it would be much better than to have a stick-up or anything of that sort, so I did not interfere with them.

Mr. HALLEY. They told you they were doing it, didn't they?

Mr. ROX. I understood they were doing it.

Mr. HALLEY. And they also got $10 a night?

Mr. ROX. I never inquired just what they got, or what they did not get.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Chief Rox, the committee understands that up to the end of 1949, gambling at Saratoga was wide open, and without any obstruction upon the part of the police; is that correct?

Mr. ROX. That is not correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what are the facts?

Mr. ROX. I have had complaints of gambling, and I have sent men to investigate those complaints, and they have come back and reported that there wasn't any gambling at the spots where they went.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that.

Mr. ROX. Well, Mr. Halley, it has happened at different times. I just can't recall when or tell you when.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it your information that there has not been gambling at, say, the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. ROX. Sir?

Mr. HALLEY. To your knowledge, has there not been any gambling at the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. ROX. I have never seen any, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever there?

Mr. ROX. In there?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ROX. Yes, I have been there once or twice, at the Turf Riders' dinner. That is about the only time I have been there.

Mr. HALLEY. To a dinner?

Mr. ROX. I get an invitation from the Turf Riders, they hold it once a year.

Mr. HALLEY. When is it held?

Mr. ROX. Generally in August, at the club.

Mr. HALLEY. Doesn't that club have a gambling room right under the same roof as the dining room?

Mr. ROX. Mr. Halley, I never seen gambling in there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear that there was gambling in Saratoga?

Mr. ROX. We have had complaints of gambling in Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. From whom did you get complaints?

Mr. ROX. Well, we have had them from various people at various times.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do about the complaints?

Mr. ROX. Well, we sent out to investigate them.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you send out?

Mr. ROX. The different officers.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you ever send Detective A'Hearn out?

Mr. ROX. Yes, I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever tell him to go into the clubs and see if there was gambling?

Mr. ROX. That would be his duty, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you specifically tell him to do that?

Mr. ROX. I told him to investigate the complaints.

Mr. HALLEY. With reference to what clubs did the complaints come in?

Mr. ROX. I cannot just off the record tell you, but we have had them.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you ever get a complaint of gambling at the Piping Rock Club?

Mr. ROX. Yes, I believe we have.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you investigate it?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What investigation did you make?

Mr. ROX. I sent officers to find out what was going on.

Mr. HALLEY. What officers did you send out?

Mr. ROX. Well, that would depend, Mr. Halley, on who was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever send Officer A'Hearn out?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. He is a good detective?

Mr. ROX. Yes, he is the best.

Senator TOBEY. The best you have got?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell him to go into the Piping Rock Club?

Mr. ROX. Oh, yes, that is understood, that they must go in.

Mr. HALLEY. He has testified that his understanding was that he better not go in, and he says that he has never gone into any of the clubs.

Mr. ROX. Well I cannot understand his not going into them. He has been going out there to investigate them.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, now, Chief, you are the head of the department, are you not?

Mr. ROX. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And do you act under Doc Leonard?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his title?

Mr. ROX. Commissioner of Public Safety.

Mr. HALLEY. He is your superior?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. But you are in charge of the active police force; is that right, sir?

Mr. ROX. That is right, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you report directly to Leonard?

Mr. ROX. When there is anything to report, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he sit as a member of the town board, or city board?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And the city board divides up various duties; is that right?

Mr. ROX. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And Leonard's duty is public safety?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who appointed you as police chief?

Mr. ROX. I took an examination, a civil service examination.

Mr. HALLEY. Given by the city of Saratoga?

Mr. ROX. No, it is given—well, yes, by that board, but the examinations are sent in from Albany.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean there is a form of examination that comes from Albany; is that it?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. From what department?

Mr. ROX. Civil Service.

Mr. HALLEY. And there is an oral interview examination as well as a written examination?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course, you are rated from your oral examination, which is your appearance before the board of commissioners?

Mr. ROX. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that right?

Mr. ROX. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And on the basis of that examination you were appointed, is that correct?

Mr. ROX. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, as the head of that police department, would you be troubled by being advised here and now that the man you have just described as your best detective has stated that he has never gone past the lobby of any of the clubs in Saratoga?

Mr. ROX. Well, I always understood that he did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he tell you that he did?

Mr. ROX. I understood it that way. Now, to refresh my memory, I wouldn't really remember, but it was always in my mind that he did.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get that impression?

Mr. ROX. Any time we send anyone out to investigate, I always thought the procedure would be to get the key, to go around to places, get the keys and open them up and see if anything is going on.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, we are not talking about locked doors, Chief.

Mr. ROX. But I am speaking of them.

Mr. HALLEY. We have a report here now in evidence of the New York State Police that was made in August of 1947. Are you familiar with an investigation that was made by the New York State Police in August of 1947?

Mr. ROX. I don't know. Would you tell me more about it?

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Inspector LaForge?

Mr. ROX. Yes, I do know him.

Mr. HALLEY. And you speak to him from time to time?

Mr. ROX. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You are on friendly terms?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he not in Saratoga the early part of August 1947?

Mr. ROX. He could have been.

Mr. HALLEY. And did he not make a survey of the various gambling establishments?

Mr. ROX. He could have.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of him doing that?

Mr. ROX. I don't recall hearing that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear that any survey was made of gambling establishments by the State police?

Mr. ROX. No; but I know the State police were in Saratoga all last summer.

Mr. HALLEY. I am talking about before last summer.

Mr. ROX. No; I did not remember hearing that.

Mr. HALLEY. For your information, the State police just walked in to all the clubs, and found them wide open, operating without locked doors, and there was no need for anybody to have a search warrant or anything else; they could just walk right in with the rest of the public and see what was going on.

Now, that was the sworn testimony before this committee.

Without wasting a lot of time about it, Chief, would you explain how you failed to find that out in your own city?

Mr. ROX. Well, I cannot explain it, sir. I depend upon others to tell me about it. I never heard a report of that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, who specifically did you ever send out to check the rumors or the complaints which you say you received?

Mr. ROX. Well, I have sent A'Hearn and Petes. I have sent various men.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever tell A'Hearn to go into the various clubs and see whether there was gambling taking place?

Mr. ROX. I have told him of complaints that I received, and what to do and where to go.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever send them to make an investigation, and to come back and report to you?

Mr. ROX. He always comes back and reports to me.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he tell you?

Mr. ROX. He found them clean.

Mr. HALLEY. He found them with no gambling going on?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And he so reported to you?

Mr. ROX. He so reported.

Mr. HALLEY. And you believed that?

Mr. ROX. Yes; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know whether or not Joe Adonis frequented Saratoga?

Mr. ROX. No; I never seen Joe Adonis in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't it come to your attention that Joe Adonis had been in Saratoga?

Mr. ROX. Yes; I heard that.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether or not he was connected with the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. ROX. I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. Had it ever been called to your attention?

Mr. ROX. At one time, I will say it was in the late fall, there was an investigator here in New York who was trying to connect Joe Adonis up with the Copacabana. They claimed that he was hanging around the Piping Rock all that summer.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever check to see what he was doing?

Mr. ROX. Well, it was in the fall, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you never checked?

Mr. ROX. He wasn't there. He wasn't in the club. Them clubs only run during August.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever check to see if he was there?

Mr. ROX. No; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Edward McEwen?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his business?

Mr. ROX. Well, he is in the carnival business, and he is in the night club business.

Mr. HALLEY. He is in the Piping Rock Club, is he not?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you know he was in the gambling business?

Mr. ROX. Well, he has got a reputation as a gambler, but I could not say he was.

Mr. HALLEY. You live in Saratoga, do you not?

Mr. ROX. That is true.

Mr. HALLEY. And these clubs flourish in Saratoga, do they not?

Mr. ROX. They run in Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you not get up some evening, and walk into one of these clubs to see what was going on?

Mr. ROX. No; I never did.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Scotchy Morrison?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been out to Smith's Interlochen?

Mr. ROX. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never been there?

Mr. ROX. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. It is right in Saratoga?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Scotchy Morrison runs it?

Mr. ROX. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. What is Scotchy Morrison's business?

Mr. ROX. What is his business?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ROX. That I do not know. I do not justly know what his business is.

Mr. HALLEY. He is a year-round resident of Saratoga, is he not?

Mr. ROX. No; to the best of my information he lives in Albany.

Mr. HALLEY. In Albany?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He comes up to Saratoga to run, does he not?

Mr. ROX. He is in Saratoga a considerable amount of time.

Mr. HALLEY. Particularly during the season?

Mr. ROX. Yes; during the summer.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never checked on what he does there?

Mr. ROX. No; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. How well do you know him?

Mr. ROX. I know him well enough to say, "Hello, Scotchy, how are you."

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have a drink with him?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or a meal?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know of Newman's Lake House?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been there?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who operates it?

Mr. ROX. So far as I know, Joey King.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known King?

Mr. ROX. He has been a resident around there practically all of his life. I have known him since he has been a boy.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in Newman's Lake House during the season?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And did you not see gambling in progress there?

Mr. ROX. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Would it surprise you to know that the State troopers found seven roulette wheels, and a crap table in operation at Newman's Lake House, and officially reported it?

Mr. ROX. They did not report that—it is too bad——

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry. I did not hear you.

Mr. ROX. I say it is too bad they did not report that to us.

Senator TOBEY. What would have happened if they had?

Mr. ROX. We would go out on a raid.

Senator TOBEY. But the fact remains that you were there all the time, and you are chief of police, as I understand it, and you testified that you, of your own knowledge, know of this not existing, and if these detectives were sent out, God save the name, to investigate and report there was nothing doing, then the fact remains that the gentlemen from the State police came in in 1947 and gave a detailed list of gambling dens, den after den, running full blast, and you say if they reported it to you that you would have taken action?

You didn't have to work very hard in order to take action. You could go any place to find this. You know the men were breaking the law of the State, and you could close them up. How did you explain the fact that you did not take the bull by the horns and be an aggressive chief of police and put them out of business?

Mr. ROX. Well, Senator—is it Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. ROX. I have a lot of work to do.

Senator TOBEY. What?

Mr. ROX. A lot of work.

Senator TOBEY. Yes, we all have.

Mr. ROX. That is true.

Senator TOBEY. But your first work is to uphold the law; isn't that right?

Mr. ROX. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. In this case——

Mr. ROX. I never investigated them places.

Senator TOBEY. Well, how can you enforce the law as chief of police? When is a chief of police not a chief of police? He draws a salary, holds a title, and whether he has the fear of God in his heart and feels that things are wrong and against the law and goes in and smashes them up? When is a chief of police any good?

On the evidence the committee has here, with no personal feeling against you, but only kindly feeling——

Mr. ROX. I appreciate that.

Senator TOBEY (continuing). We have got our duty to do, and you have got yours.

Mr. ROX. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. I simply ask you, how would you rate a chief of police in a large place in the State of New York, where he has complete jurisdiction, and he has a lot of dummies under him as detectives, who do not do their job, and they report back to you that all is clean, when he knows that every citizen in Saratoga knows that things are wide open, then how would you feel about the matter? How would you rate a chief of police on that sort of testimony?

Mr. ROX. That is a hard question for me to answer, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. What would you mark yourself on the evidence as chief of police?

Mr. ROX. Well, you wouldn't want me to condemn myself, would you?

Mr. TOBEY. Yes. I think there are two selves to each of us. There is the inner self, and on the testimony of yourself and these other gentlemen, you were entirely negligent in your duty. You did not measure up to the job at all on your own testimony.

Now, I say suppose there was John Smith, and he gave that evidence, wouldn't you mark him zero?

Mr. ROX. Do I have to answer that, Senator?

Senator TOBEY. Not unless you want to.

Mr. ROX. Well, I would rather not.

Senator TOBEY. I think that the facts will speak for themselves. But you, sir, there is a clause in the Bible that says, "Out of their own mouths they condemn themselves."

Out of your own mouth you have condemned yourself, you have testified that you knew of no gambling in Saratoga Springs, and that you took the word of these detectives, so-called, that there was nothing doing there, when everybody else knew there was, when the State police made an investigation and gave detailed and sworn testimony as to gambling house after gambling house, and you just sit back as chief of police and say you did nothing about it.

I ask you, how much respect can people have for the State of New York, when a chief of police of a large subsidiary of the government of the State of New York does not know about what is going on in his own jurisdiction?

I say this without personal feeling. There is an incongruity here, in this degree, if I were you and was giving sworn testimony, and if I were made to look as you look to us here now, the thing that I would do, and, of course, that is entirely up to you, but I would offer my resignation so fast and get out of the country. And if you did not do it, and I had any authority in this State, I would remove you inside of 10 minutes.

That is all, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. ROX, isn't it a fact that the policy of the town commissioners of Saratoga was to leave the gambling alone? Isn't that the basic fact?

Mr. ROX. Well, I have never had any instructions or orders to leave gambling alone.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever made a raid on Smith's Interlochen?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or on the Piping Rock Club?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or on Newman's?

Mr. ROX. Newman's?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or on Delmonico's?

Mr. ROX. Delmonico's?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ROX. Is that the Brook?

Mr. HALLEY. No, Delmonico's. I can give you more details on it. It is at Saratoga Spa, and was formerly known as Riley's.

Mr. ROX. I did.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you make a raid there?

Mr. ROX. In 1938.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1938?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And wasn't it at that time, I think, that Governor Lehman instituted a clean-up of Saratoga?

Mr. ROX. I am not too sure of that. Perhaps you are right about that.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't that what it was?

Mr. ROX. I don't recall that.

Mr. HALLEY. Since 1938 have you done anything about Riley's?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever raided the Chicago Club?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever raided the Arrowhead?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever raided Outhwaite's?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, over a period of years you have heard persistent rumors, and had persistent complaints that there was gambling going on in these places; have you not?

Mr. ROX. We have had complaints; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you specifically tell this committee that you told any member of your staff to go and make an investigation of any one of these places, specifically, and come back to you with a report?

Mr. ROX. I have told the men, and I have sent men out to do that.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you give us the name of the man, the name of the place, and tell us what the report was?

Mr. ROX. Unfortunately, at the moment I cannot.

Mr. HALLEY. Don't you see the position you put yourself in, Chief?

Mr. ROX. I understand it, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. You look like a pretty good guy, and here you say—

Mr. ROX. Mr. Halley, I am not looking for sympathy, but I have been sick for 3 years, almost, and I have been sick all fall—pressure and nerves.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, naturally there is pressure when a thing like this is going on.

Mr. ROX. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. I say, naturally there is pressure when a thing like this is going on.

Mr. ROX. I have had this before, before this ever went on.

Mr. HALLEY. You have had what?

Mr. ROX. I have had this pressure before this.

Mr. HALLEY. What type of pressure are you referring to?

Mr. ROX. Blood pressure.

Mr. HALLEY. Blood pressure?

Mr. ROX. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You are not in any physical danger from testifying; are you?

Mr. ROX. Not to my knowledge; no.

Mr. HALLEY. Talking about the work in progress here, this investigation, you are in a position where, as the chief of police, you cannot state specifically that you were misled by any of your informers?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. I mean of your force, any information given by your force?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. And you cannot say specifically, or you won't, that any of your superiors in the municipal government told you to wink at gambling?

Mr. ROX. No; they did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever discuss the gambling situation with Inspector LaForge?

Mr. ROX. Last year.

Mr. HALLEY. When, last year?

Mr. ROX. Oh, several times last year.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean 1950?

Mr. ROX. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of discussions did you have, to the best of your recollection?

Mr. ROX. Well, he had men, he told me that he had men stationed around, and he told me that they had men inspecting the places. I talked the matter over with him several times.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he ever ask you what you could contribute?

Mr. ROX. No; he agreed there wasn't any, and I agreed there wasn't any.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you ever tell him that you just did not want to talk about the gambling situation?

Mr. ROX. To him?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you tell him that you would talk about anything else, but you did not want to get involved in gambling?

Mr. ROX. I never recall making that remark in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to last year, had you talked to Inspector LaForge about the gambling?

Mr. ROX. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you ever asked him what he knew about it?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever made any money gambling?

Mr. ROX. No. I am a $2 bettor, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Sir?

Mr. ROX. I am a $2 bettor.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, have you ever made any money as a $2 bettor?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you make your $2 bets?

Mr. ROX. At the race track.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever patronized any of the horse books in Saratoga?

Mr. ROX. I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, they operate fairly wide open, do they not?

Mr. ROX. Mr. Halley, they are the toughest things we have to contend with. We send men down and they watch them, and they close their doors, and the men double back, and it is the same old thing over and over again. Every once in a while we get a hold of one.

Mr. HALLEY. What are the duties of George Smith?

Mr. ROX. Oh, he is a prowler-car man.

Mr. HALLEY. A what?

Mr. ROX. A prowler-car man; nights.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know if he has any relationship with Jim Leary?

Mr. ROX. No. You are talking about the officer?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ROX. George Moon Smith?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ROX. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he know him?

Mr. ROX. Oh, he has got to know him.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean?

Mr. ROX. Do you mean is he acquainted with him?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ROX. We all know Jim Leary.

Mr. HALLEY. It is a small enough town so that everybody gets to know everybody else; isn't that right?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How could people operate in that town, even a horse book, without you knowing within a matter of days what a man was doing for a living?

Mr. ROX. Mr. Halley, trapping one of them fellows is quite a chore. We have caught them and locked them up.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you even suspect them?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have never been able to catch them?

Mr. ROX. We have caught some of them. They watch us. Everybody knows everybody. We have only got 21 policemen the year round, and we have got an 8-hour shift.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course, you have got to go into their premises in order to catch them.

Mr. ROX. That is right, and you need search warrants in the majority of them.

Mr. HALLEY. You would not need search warrants in any of these large gambling casinos, would you?

Mr. ROX. I don't believe you would.

Mr. HALLEY. And you are actually astonished when we say that A'Hearn has testified that he never set foot in one of them?

Mr. ROX. Well, I understand that he did go in there and inspect places. I have always had that understanding. I am surprised that that is not so.

Mr. HALLEY. During the season?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no further questions.

Senator TONEY. Assume, Mr. Chief of Police, that you suddenly had a change of heart and, through your emissaries, or your force, you gave Saratoga Springs a 100-percent law enforcement, and closed this crowd up and prosecuted these men to the fullest extent of the law; what do you think would happen to you?

Mr. ROX. Nothing would happen to me, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Then why didn't you do it?

Mr. ROX. Well, after talking to you gentlemen, that would be my policy.

Senator TOBEY. What is that?

Mr. ROX. That will be my policy.

Senator TOBEY. That will be?

Mr. ROX. Yes, sir; I am promising you.

Senator TOBEY. You know, you and I are not as young as we used to be.

Mr. ROX. I appreciate that.

Senator TOBEY. And there comes a time when you kind of weigh the evidence of what the trend of the evidence of a man's life has been, what he stood for, what people are going to remember him by. You realize that, and I do, too, and it is about the darndest thing a man can have. The greatest thing that a man can have is not money, but it is a reputation or godliness, religiousness, hatred of evil, inequity, and love of the people, to make this a decent place to live in; isn't that right?

Mr. ROX. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You would not think for a minute that by inaction and passivity you could develop a reputation like that, would you?

Mr. ROX. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. The game is not worth the candle, is it?

Mr. ROX. I believe you.

Senator TOBEY. That is all.

Mr. SHIVITZ. It has been testified by a member of your staff that one of the reasons he did not go beyond the hallway of any of these establishments at Saratoga was because he wanted to keep his job. Do you understand what he meant by that?

Mr. ROX. No, I do not; I do not, sir; I do not.

Senator TOBEY. Well, then, to follow that thing in the reverse order, had this emissary of your department had a conviction in his heart, and a sureness that if he had gone beyond the hall door, inside, and smashed the whole thing down, and brought the men to justice, he would not have the approval of the chief of police, would he?

Mr. ROX. He would have my approval.

Senator TOBEY. And a man naturally tries to get the approval of those over him, doesn't he?

Mr. ROX. Mr. Senator, he would have had my approval.

Senator TOBEY. But you never impregnated him with that idea, did you?

Mr. ROX. I never done otherwise; I never told the man not to do his duty.

Senator TOBEY. How do you account for his stopping in the hall?

Mr. ROX. I cannot understand it; I cannot explain it.

Mr. HALLEY. Chief Rox.

Mr. ROX. Yes?

Mr. HALLEY. You did not go past the hall of any of these places, either, did you?

Mr. ROX. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. You did not pass the hall of any of these places, did you?

Mr. ROX. No; I had no occasion to.

Mr. HALLEY. Except to attend the Turf Riders' dinner?

Mr. ROX. That is the only time, in August; the missus and I then go out.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your net worth, Chief?

Mr. ROX. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. What is your net worth?

Mr. ROX. You mean what I own?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ROX. Well, I own my own home. I paid $6,000 for it.

I have about $1,800 in the Adirondack Trust, and I have got about $3,000, I have got about $3,600 in bonds, and some of them bonds were presents by the police at Christmas.

Mr. HALLEY. By the police?

Mr. ROX. Yes; they would give me a Christmas present every year, a $100 bond or so.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever received a present from the operators of night clubs or casinos?

Mr. ROX. I have not, Mr. Halley; no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own an automobile privately?

Mr. ROX. Yes; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind?

Mr. ROX. It is a Dodge, 1949.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your wife have any property?

Mr. ROX. No, sir; everything is jointly owned.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you made any gifts to children?

Mr. ROX. To children?

Mr. HALLEY. To your children.

Mr. ROX. I haven't any children. I only had one child, and he died years ago. No. I make small gifts to nieces and nephews at Christmas time.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you made any gifts in excess of $100 to any relative?

Mr. ROX. Oh, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Does any other person hold any property for you?

Mr. ROX. No, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any cash?

Mr. ROX. Cash?

Mr. HALLEY. Cash money.

Mr. ROX. I have got about $3,000 in a lockbox.

Mr. HALLEY. What lockbox is that?

Mr. ROX. In the Adirondack Trust Co., sir.

Mr. HALLEY. In a safe-deposit box?

Mr. ROX. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any particular reason for keeping cash in a lockbox?

Mr. ROX. No, I haven't, but you only get a half or a quarter of 1 percent in the bank on it, and if you want the money you can have it. I don't have any reason, I couldn't even give you a reason for it.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other lockbox?

Mr. ROX. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you keep any kind of a lockbox around your house?

Mr. ROX. No, I haven't got any.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever?

Mr. ROX. No; I haven't any use for one.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you. I have no other questions.

Chief, you may, of course, return to Saratoga, but please consider yourself under subpoena subject to some further call by the committee, and we will try to give you reasonable notice.

Mr. ROX. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, sir.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Who is your next witness?

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Hathorn.

The CHAIRMAN. Good afternoon, Mr. Hathorn. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. HATHORN. I do.

TESTIMONY OF FRANK S. HATHORN, SHERIFF, SARATOGA COUNTY, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. HATHORN. Frank S. Hathorn.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your occupation?

Mr. HATHORN. Sheriff.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you held that job?

Mr. HATHORN. Nine years.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes?

Mr. HATHORN. In Saratoga County.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to becoming sheriff, what was your occupation?

Mr. HATHORN. Superintendent at the Ballston Spa.

Mr. HALLEY. From that position did you step into the job of sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. What is that?

Mr. HALLEY. From your position did you step into the job of sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. No; I was under sheriff for 3 years.

Mr. HALLEY. While you were in the knitting mill?

Mr. HATHORN. No; I was just superintendent of the mill at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you under sheriff? When did you become under sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. Three years before I was sheriff, and I have been sheriff 9 years.

Mr. HALLEY. You became under sheriff about 1939 or 1940?

Mr. HATHORN. Right through there some place; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the salary of the under sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. Fifteen hundred dollars and maintenance.

Mr. HALLEY. And what was your salary as superintendent of the knitting mill?

Mr. HATHORN. Five thousand dollars.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you explain why you were willing to take a decrease in salary?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you do so, please?

Mr. HATHORN. I had a son there who was under me for 9 years.

Mr. HALLEY. At the mill?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes. I figured I stood in his way, and I had an agreement with the company that if I retired, he would have that position.

Mr. HALLEY. And did you retire?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes; I was appointed under sheriff.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your salary as sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. Forty-eight hundred dollars.

Mr. HALLEY. And maintenance?

Senator TOBEY. On a fee basis besides that?

Mr. HATHORN. No; there is no fee basis any more.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you get maintenance as well?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, do you have any other businesses or occupations?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What are they?

Mr. HATHORN. I have always invested in real estate and mortgages.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you make your first real-estate investment?

Mr. HATHORN. My first real-estate investment?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. HATHORN. Well, that was a long ways back, about 1910.

Mr. HALLEY. About 1910.

Mr. HATHORN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. At the time you became sheriff, what was your net worth, would you say?

Mr. HATHORN. At the time I became sheriff?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. HATHORN. One hundred thousand, or one hundred twenty-five thousand dollars.

Mr. HALLEY. When you became sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In what form was your wealth?

Mr. HATHORN. How did I acquire the wealth?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. HATHORN. Well, I learned the machinist trade when I was 16 years old, and I worked for the General Electric Co. and the Westinghouse Co. At that time I was drawing a top salary, which was $25 a week.

Then in 1907, during the panic, I was laid off, and I bought out a trucking business. I was in that business for 13 years. I also worked as a farmer, and kept a dairy and a vegetable truck farm, which I own now.

During the war, the First World War, being a mechanic, I was hired by the late F. J. Schutz as superintendent of a large mill at Boston Spa.

There I invested in stocks, and I was with that company 16 years to the time that I became under sheriff, to get my son a break.

Mr. HALLEY. When you became under sheriff, what specifically were your assets? I realize that that may be a difficult question for you to answer, as it was some 12 years ago, but do you remember?

Mr. HATHORN. That I was what?

Mr. HALLEY. What were your assets?

Mr. HATHORN. I figured around $125,000 or $130,000.

Mr. HALLEY. When you became under sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In what form were those assets?

Mr. HATHORN. Those were in real estate and money that I had saved.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that money in a bank?

Mr. HATHORN. Not all of it; no.

Mr. HALLEY. How much of it would you say was in the form of cash, unbanked?

Mr. HATHORN. Gee, I just couldn't answer that one. I don't remember. That is quite a way back.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, would you have had a very substantial amount in cash at that time?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Go ahead.

Mr. HATHORN. Now, when I retired to give my son a break, I was a stockholder in the company.

Mr. HALLEY. You were a stockholder of the mills?

Mr. HATHORN. In the mills; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How many shares did you have?

Mr. HATHORN. I had $12,000 worth.

Mr. HALLEY. Twelve thousand dollars worth?

Mr. HATHORN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. At the current market price, what was that?

Mr. HATHORN. Now it is worth $300 a share, and it would be worth a lot more.

Mr. HALLEY. How many shares did you have?

Mr. HATHORN. I had 100 shares.

Mr. HALLEY. And they were worth $12,000?

Mr. HATHORN. They were worth $100 or $125 a share.

Mr. HALLEY. At the current market at that time?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any more shares today?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. But they are worth more today?

Mr. HATHORN. They are worth $300 a share today.

Mr. HALLEY. So as of today, your stock is worth—

Mr. HATHORN. I haven't got it now. I did have it while I was superintendent of the mills.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you sell it?

Mr. HATHORN. I sold that about 2 years before I became under sheriff.

Mr. HALLEY. So that when you became under sheriff you did not have that stock?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What were your assets specifically when you became under sheriff? You have evaluated them generally at $125,000.

Mr. HATHORN. I would say I was worth, I figured I was worth $100,000 to $125,000 at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was the money.

Mr. HATHORN. It was in mortgages, and some of it was in the bank, and some of it was in my home.

Mr. HALLEY. What portion of it generally would you say was in your home in the form of cash?

MR. HATHORN. Oh, I used to keep from $25,000 to $30,000 or $35,000 at home.

MR. HALLEY. What would be the motive for a businessman keeping that much money at home in a vault, I presume it was in a vault?

MR. HATHORN. Well, I used to use it to take a quick mortgage, if I had an opportunity to do so.

MR. HALLEY. Well, you always have to draw out mortgage papers and check the records of any property, don't you?

MR. HATHORN. That is right.

MR. HALLEY. And that would certainly give you enough time to draw money out of the bank?

MR. HATHORN. Well, after the crash of 1929, I did not leave too much in a bank.

MR. HALLEY. I still don't quite understand how you amassed all that money before you became under sheriff. What mortgages did you hold specifically when you became under sheriff? Do you have a list of them anywhere?

MR. HATHORN. Yes. Not back at that time, but I have some, I think, since 1932.

MR. HALLEY. You have those mortgages which you can present to the committee?

MR. HATHORN. Well, a record of them. They have been paid, those old mortgages, and the money reinvested.

MR. HALLEY. Do you have a record of every mortgage you ever held?

MR. HATHORN. No.

MR. HALLEY. But you do have some records?

MR. HATHORN. Yes.

MR. HALLEY. Whatever records you have, would you be willing to give them to the committee?

MR. HATHORN. Yes.

MR. HALLEY. Would you undertake to make a copy of that record?

MR. HATHORN. Yes.

MR. HALLEY. And enclose it in a letter addressed to me, chief counsel, at the United States Courthouse, Foley Square, right here, and do that as soon as you return to Saratoga?

MR. HATHORN. I think I can do that.

MR. HALLEY. I would appreciate that.

MR. HATHORN. All right.

MR. HALLEY. Now, in what bank did you have the money when you became under sheriff?

MR. HATHORN. In the Ballston Spa National Bank.

MR. HALLEY. How much money would you say you had there?

MR. HATHORN. I cannot remember.

MR. HALLEY. Would it be in excess of $20,000?

MR. HATHORN. I could not answer that.

MR. HALLEY. Well, now, you have said that you had $125,000, of which $20,000 or $30,000 was in the form of cash.

MR. HATHORN. Yes.

MR. HALLEY. You must have held a great many mortgages?

MR. HATHORN. I have held a lot of mortgages in my day.

MR. HALLEY. Are you sure you had that much money when you became under sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes; I think I did.

Mr. HALLEY. In any event, the records of the Ballston Spa National Bank will show just how much you had to deposit when you became under sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have your own records at the bank?

Mr. HATHORN. Do I have what?

Mr. HALLEY. Your own records, going back that far, of your bank-books?

Mr. HATHORN. No; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not?

Mr. HATHORN. No. I looked all over to get the records of these older mortgages, and I couldn't find them.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you submit any financial statements to anybody at the time you became undersheriff, or shortly before or shortly after?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. In short, what I am looking for is some verification. Do you have any?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, what are you worth today?

Mr. HATHORN. I am worth, I think, around $140,000.

Mr. HALLEY. So your net assets have not increased since you became sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, that is, not substantially.

Mr. HATHORN. No; I would not say that they have.

Senator TOBEY. What was he worth when he became sheriff?

Mr. HALLEY. When he became undersheriff, he was worth $125,000.

Mr. HATHORN. I could not be exact about that, now. I don't know; that is back 12 years.

Mr. HALLEY. You are going to try to give the committee a summary of it when you get back home and reconstruct this?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes; I will try it.

Mr. HALLEY. And you will send it in by mail?

Mr. HATHORN. I will try that.

Mr. HALLEY. You will do that as soon as you get home?

Mr. HATHORN. Well, when am I going home?

Mr. HALLEY. You will get home tonight.

Mr. HATHORN. All right. I am going to stay down a day or two, if I can. This is the first vacation I have had, and it has not been much of a vacation.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I hope you have some fun. How much of your assets today are in the form of cash?

Mr. HATHORN. About $2,000.

Mr. HALLEY. No more than that?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you keep that?

Mr. HATHORN. I keep it in the house.

Mr. HALLEY. Where in the house? Do you have a lockbox in the house?

Mr. HATHORN. A safe.

Mr. HALLEY. A safe?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Sheriff, we have been checking into gambling in Saratoga. Do you, as sheriff, have jurisdiction in the city of Saratoga?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How large a force of employees do you have?

Mr. HATHORN. Active?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. HATHORN. I have two.

Mr. HALLEY. How many inactive?

Mr. HATHORN. Nineteen.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the distinction between active and inactive?

Mr. HATHORN. Well, I have two that are on salary. The 19 are supposed to be, as near as I can get them, from each town in the 19 towns of Saratoga County.

Mr. HALLEY. What do they do?

Mr. HATHORN. They just work when I call them.

Mr. HALLEY. What are your duties as sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. To enforce the laws of the county.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other duties?

Mr. HATHORN. Any other duties?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. HATHORN. As sheriff?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you recite to the committee any more serious law violations than the gambling which takes place in Saratoga City during the racing season?

Mr. HATHORN. Will you put that question again?

Mr. HALLEY. Can you recite to the committee any more serious law violations with which you have had to deal than the widespread gambling in Saratoga City during the racing season?

Mr. HATHORN. No; but there is that, and prostitution.

Mr. HALLEY. That and prostitution?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What have you ever done about the gambling situation in Saratoga?

Mr. HATHORN. I have answered every complaint I ever had.

Mr. HALLEY. When you say you answered them, do you mean that you wrote a letter about it?

Mr. HATHORN. No; I investigated it, with my deputies.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever investigated the specific clubs which operate during the season in Saratoga?

Mr. HATHORN. My deputies did; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You or your deputies?

Mr. HATHORN. My deputies have; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever ordered your deputies to investigate the Piping Rock Club?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes; I had them cooperating with the chief of police in Saratoga, through the month of August.

Mr. HALLEY. What chief of police is that?

Mr. HATHORN. Patrick Rox.

Mr. HALLEY. And your men cooperated with Rox?

Mr. HATHORN. My men rode with him part of the night.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did they ride?

Mr. HATHORN. Where did they ride?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes; you say they rode with him.

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did they ride?

Mr. HATHORN. To the outskirts of Saratoga.

Mr. HALLEY. Did they go into the gambling houses?

Mr. HATHORN. I cannot answer that, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't they make a report of what they did?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes, and they told me that they found no evidence of gambling.

Senator TOBEY. I don't want to be impatient of abnormalities here, but you might know that Mr. Rox was on the stand just before you, and he was rather a broken man. I am really describing him when he got through, and he testified that he never went into these houses, that he didn't know of any gambling, and that he had only raided one place out of all those we quoted to him. He said that his chief detective, "the finest on the squad," A'Hearn, who is a detective extraordinary, had also gone only as far as the hall.

So far as Patrick Rox goes, he had an opportunity to check gambling, and he did nothing, and you tell me that you assigned your men to go with him, and he did not go. Did they ride around the city?

Mr. HATHORN. I cannot answer that.

Senator TOBEY. You didn't get a report from your men in good faith that they went in and investigated the place?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Senator TOBEY. Then they did not do the job; did they?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Senator TOBEY. Don't you, as sheriff of that county, demand of these men what you send them to do?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Did you in any one case of these men going out, demand that you get a report or find out why they did not do it?

Mr. HATHORN. Will you put that question again?

Senator TOBEY. When you sent these men out to ride with the sheriff, or the chief of police, and they didn't do anything about it, and they did not investigate and did not uncover anything, what did you do?

Mr. HATHORN. Well, I just filed a report.

Senator TOBEY. Which is a negligible thing; isn't it? It wasn't worth a darn, was it, so far as giving the stockholders, the people of this State and your county up there, a feeling of security? There was no practical thing done about it; was there? It was just a pro forma thing; wasn't it?

Mr. HATHORN. It might have been.

Senator TOBEY. And you sit here now, and I speak in all kindness to you, but you sit here now and tell this committee that you, as sheriff of this county, you yourself said and gave your authority as being the upholder of the law, which is a pretty important thing, and you took that oath of office, and you yourself said that was your job, and now you admit to us that these men of yours that you sent out to ride with Patrick Rox—

Mr. HATHORN. Not with Rox; with his detectives, or with his detective.

Senator TOBEY. With A'Hearn?

Mr. HATHORN. That is right.

SENATOR TOBEY. And Mr. A'Hearn never testified, or he testified that he never went any further than the hall, that he didn't believe in seeing evil, hearing evil, or speaking evil, and his investigations were nil, and as a detective he is a joke. So you sent your men to go out with him, and Patrick Rox, the chief of police, testified he never himself did those things. The whole thing is a farce.

MR. HATHORN. I think Saratoga has a very adequate police force.

SENATOR TOBEY. Adequate in what way?

MR. HATHORN. In numbers.

SENATOR TOBEY. But it is not worth a darn so far as doing anything; is that right?

MR. HATHORN. That may be true.

SENATOR TOBEY. Well, don't you think so?

On the evidence we have given you of Mr. Rox's own testimony, and A'Hearn's testimony——

MR. HATHORN. Yes, but I have made several raids in Saratoga, or my men have.

SENATOR TOBEY. You have alone?

MR. HATHORN. My men.

SENATOR TOBEY. We asked you about the matter, and you said you instructed your men to ride with the chief of police, and the chief of police said he didn't do anything at all, and A'Hearn didn't do anything. There you reach the lowest terms ad absurdum, and there wasn't anything done, pro forma. You, yourself, as sheriff, didn't enforce the law that you swore to uphold; isn't that right?

MR. HATHORN. Well, I sent my men out to enforce the law, and they reported back to me.

SENATOR TOBEY. Look, you are an older man, and so am I, and we have lived a number of years.

MR. HATHORN. That is right.

SENATOR TOBEY. We had some ideas in the beginning as young men. Now, look at this: If you were a young man 18 or 20 years of age, taking a wife, and thinking about raising a family, looking ahead, you would try to feel that the name of sheriff had something to do with something that was honest, and that you would hope to get law-enforcement officers hitting the line hard for decency and religiousness, and then if you saw yourself making this report of incompetence, and nonresults, and inefficiency, wouldn't you be kind of ashamed of it?

MR. HATHORN. Yes.

SENATOR TOBEY. That is all.

MR. HALLEY. When you say your men made an investigation in August, what year are you referring to?

MR. HATHORN. I had men traveling nights in every August I was sheriff.

MR. HALLEY. How can you explain the fact that they failed to report to you that there was gambling going on in these joints?

MR. HATHORN. They did not report there was gambling.

MR. HALLEY. How could they possibly have missed it?

MR. HATHORN. I don't know.

MR. HALLEY. Now, quite seriously, you are a very intelligent man, and you have a good career behind you. You know as well as every man in this room that it is common knowledge that the places in Saratoga operate for gambling; isn't that right?

Mr. HATHORN. That is right. I think they have operated ever since they ran the horses there.

Mr. HALLEY. And they have gambling in the night clubs, and that is common knowledge; isn't it?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes; it is.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, as sheriff, how can you explain the fact that your men would go out each year, and come back, and go through what Senator Tobey has characterized as a farce of reporting to you that they could not find any gambling?

Mr. HATHORN. Well, that is the report they sent to me.

Mr. HALLEY. With your knowledge of common information, didn't you try to do anything about it personally?

Mr. HATHORN. I asked them to make the investigation.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever get into your automobile and just ride into, say, the Arrowhead Inn, and see for yourself what was going on?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in the Arrowhead Inn?

Mr. HATHORN. Well—

Mr. HALLEY. During the season, I mean.

Mr. HATHORN. Not in 25 or 30 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Let us confine it for the present testimony to the last 5 years.

Mr. HATHORN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in Smith Interlochen?

Mr. HATHORN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or the Piping Rock Club?

Mr. HATHORN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Newman's?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Delmonico's formerly known as Riley's?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or the Chicago Club?

Mr. HATHORN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Outhwaite's?

Mr. HATHORN. No, sir; I never was in a horse room in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. These are not horse rooms; they are well-known night clubs, are they not, with entertainment, and they serve food?

Mr. HATHORN. That is right. I have never been in any of them.

Mr. HALLEY. Why not? Have you studiously avoided going into them?

Mr. HATHORN. No, I have been in Newman's at different times.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, Newman's doesn't run gambling except during the season, more generally; isn't that so?

Mr. HATHORN. I never saw gambling in Newman's.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been there during the racing season?

Mr. HATHORN. I cannot remember that. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, having in mind the general information which you knew about, the general belief that there was gambling, did you not see fit to do anything about it yourself, personally—to go to any of these places and look for yourself?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How far from Saratoga City do you live?

Mr. HATHORN. Seven miles.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own an automobile?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you from time to time go out to dinner?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. To various restaurants?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And do you mean to say that it never occurred to you that you might go to any one of these places, in addition to having a good meal, to perform your duty?

Mr. HATHORN. I saw no evidence of gambling.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you certainly cannot see it unless you go to look for it. How could you see it if you did not go into those places?

Mr. HATHORN. I saw no gambling rooms open.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not go to any of these places, so how could you have seen the gambling rooms open without going there to look?

(No response.)

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I think it is quite apparent that he just did not want to see them, and did not look for them.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you become sheriff? What were the events leading up to you being offered the position of under sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. I have held public office for 36 years.

Senator TOBEY. Are you a Republican or a Democrat?

Mr. HATHORN. I am a Republican.

Senator TOBEY. I see.

Mr. HALLEY. Who offered you the post of under sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. The man who was sheriff then.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his name?

Mr. HATHORN. Clarence McIlwaine.

Mr. HALLEY. Is sheriff an elective office?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. With whom did you discuss your nomination for the post of sheriff?

Mr. HATHORN. The Republican organization.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you talk to Mr. Jim Leary about it?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any discussion at that time about the gambling situation?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no other questions, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Isn't one of these places, Riley's Lake House, isn't that out in the country?

Mr. HATHORN. Out of the country?

The CHAIRMAN. Out in the country.

Mr. HATHORN. Out in the country.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it outside of the city?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you let that place run, too, didn't you?

Mr. HATHORN. It is what we call outside the district of Saratoga.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you do anything about closing them down this last year?

Mr. HATHORN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, that is all, sheriff.

Mr. SHIVITZ. The mortgages which you owned 12 years ago, and prior to that and subsequent to that, were they all recorded?

Mr. HATHORN. I think they were.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And did you hear any rumors of payoffs for the protection of any of these places in the last 5 years?

Mr. HATHORN. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You never heard anything about that?

Mr. HATHORN. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you hear anything about gambling on cock fights going on in your county?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes; and I raided one.

Mr. SHIVITZ. But you didn't know that people wagered on the outcome of those fights?

Mr. HATHORN. No; I never saw them.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know that Mr. Leary owns any of those animals?

Mr. HATHORN. No; I would not know.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You never heard about that?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, can you tell us about the maximum amount of cash which you would keep in your safe at home in the last 12 years?

Mr. HATHORN. The most that I ever had in there at one time?

Mr. SHIVITZ. That is right.

Mr. HATHORN. I could not answer that; I don't know.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever have as much as $50,000 in cash?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever have as much as $25,000 in cash?

Mr. HATHORN. I would think so.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You did?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Up to when?

Mr. HATHORN. Until I bought two pieces of property.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And how recently was that?

Mr. HATHORN. Within the last 2 years.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How much cash did you use in those transactions?

Mr. HATHORN. I used $10,000 on one and $13,500 on the other.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And you used cash only in acquiring those two parcels of real estate?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. When prior to that did you acquire real estate for cash? I use the term "cash" as distinguished from a check on a bank.

Mr. HATHORN. Yes; that is the only real estate I bought.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You only own two pieces of real estate?

Mr. HATHORN. No; I own a camp at Lake George that I have owned for 15 or 16 years.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How did you pay for that, by cash or check?

Mr. HATHORN. I cannot remember that.

Mr. SHIVITZ. With respect to the mortgages which you acquired, did you use cash or checks to pay for your interest in those mortgages?

Mr. HATHORN. I think I used both.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Both?

Mr. HATHORN. I think so.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Are there any mortgages outstanding against any of the three parcels of real estate which you own?

Mr. HATHORN. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. They are all free and clear.

Mr. HATHORN. I own four pieces.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Four pieces?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. The two you acquired for cash, one at Lake George, and your home, I assume?

Mr. HATHORN. My farm, I live on a farm, or I did until I lost my wife, and that is the reason I bought this place that I did buy.

Mr. SHIVITZ. I have no other questions.

Senator TOBEY. What rate of interest did you charge on these mortgages?

Mr. HATHORN. 4 percent.

Senator TOBEY. 4 percent?

Mr. HATHORN. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. What did the savings banks charge?

Mr. HATHORN. What did they charge?

Senator TOBEY. Yes; the savings banks are looking for mortgages all the time, as you know.

Mr. HATHORN. Well, that is what I charged, I charged 4 percent. I had some at 6, and I have some at 4 and some at 5.

Senator TOBEY. But most of them at 4?

Mr. HATHORN. I would say the greatest percentage of them are.

Senator TOBEY. What did the savings banks charge on a mortgage on real estate?

Mr. HATHORN. I don't know.

Senator TOBEY. You don't know?

Mr. HATHORN. No; I don't.

The CHAIRMAN. Sheriff, why do people keep a lot of money in a safe deposit box, I mean, why do you do it? Why don't you put it in the bank?

Mr. HATHORN. Well, I cannot see any use of 1 percent.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it is something, it is safer, isn't it?

Mr. HATHORN. Well, since the 1929 crash——

The CHAIRMAN. You have kept large amounts of money in safe deposit boxes?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, in your own safe at home?

Mr. HATHORN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Aren't you afraid that somebody might carry it off sometime?

Mr. HATHORN. Well, they never have.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. That is all, Sheriff, thank you.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Remember you are still under subpoena, and if we require your presence here in the future we will advise you. In the meantime, will you please get that information for us and send it down as soon as possible?

Mr. HATHORN. I will try to get it, sir.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Who is next, Mr. Shivitz?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Mr. Leary.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Good afternoon, Mr. Leary. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. LEARY. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES LEARY, SARATOGA COUNTY, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Shivitz, will you proceed?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Mr. Leary, you are the Republican leader of Saratoga County; are you not?

Mr. LEARY. Well, that is asking a question that is real tough. I am one of the leaders up there, and I mean by that that we have a group of about 15 or 20 who make the final decisions on most of our policies.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What is your title in the Republican county organization up there?

Mr. LEARY. I have no title.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You have no title?

Mr. LEARY. No title.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Is there a county committee, a Republican county committee in Saratoga County?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And you are a member of that committee?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You are not a member of the county committee?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And you have no title whatsoever?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. In what manner do you operate up there politically?

Mr. LEARY. Well, I will give it to you as briefly as I can.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Take your time.

Mr. LEARY. I was a young lawyer, and I was in Senator Brackett's office. He was our State senator. I was of a more mediocre class than the Senator.

He lived up on North Broadway and I lived on White Street, but I had contact or acquaintances with the ordinary individuals more than the Senator did.

While I was under his tutelage, in his law office, why, I was continuously asking favors politically of the different ones that we wanted to support our ticket.

When the Senator passed on, why, some of the burden fell to me to pay off the obligations to those I had been asking favors for, and anything I could do within reason, why, I did.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How was it in your power to do these things, by virtue of what?

Mr. LEARY. Well, at first I had an active law practice. True, that I could give advice and do favors for people who had done favors for me, and when we went into conference of our group, I would go out and campaign. I would make speeches, and travel around the county, and try to persuade people.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, with respect to that, Mr. Leary, the witness who preceded you here this evening, Sheriff Hathorn, has testified that he conferred with you prior to his receiving the nomination for sheriff the first time. Do you recall that?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You do not?

Mr. LEARY. No. I will tell you, I think I had had two small law-suits for him years ago, quite a few years ago, automobile cases.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Let me interrupt you. I don't think I made myself clear. I don't mean he conferred with you professionally.

Mr. LEARY. Oh!

Mr. SHIVITZ. I mean that he conferred with you to get your support for him politically, so that he could run for the job of sheriff, the office of sheriff. Do you recall that?

Mr. LEARY. No; I won't say that he did not, but here is the way it would be settled. He would talk, I suppose, with everybody he thought had any political influence whatsoever, and then we would go into a group, and that consists of what we call high caliber individuals, and I mean by that that we would have George Tuck, we would have Ostrander, deputy commissioner of public works, our county judge, and all of them right down through, and there never was any individual that ever put the stamp on anybody to say who a candidate should be—never.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You don't recall opposing his nomination for sheriff's office?

Mr. LEARY. Opposing it?

Mr. SHIVITZ. That is right.

Mr. LEARY. I won't say I did or did not. I don't know.

Senator TOBEY. He has made a good sheriff, hasn't he?

Mr. LEARY. Yes; I would call Frank Hathorn a good sheriff; yes, I do, I would call him a high-class citizen and a very honest man.

Senator TOBEY. He has been quite a power in putting down the gambling in Saratoga, hasn't he?

Mr. LEARY. Well, as much so as any other sheriff who was ever there, I would say.

Senator TOBEY. Is that a criterion?

Mr. LEARY. Well, I don't know, your deductions, Senator, would be as good as mine.

Senator TOBEY. Well, he has been a force in putting down the gambling in Saratoga, hasn't he?

Mr. LEARY. Yes; he has been a force, definitely, he has made raids there at times.

Senator TOBEY. He has improved conditions, and he knows the gambling houses, and who is guilty, doesn't he?

Mr. LEARY. Well, you are asking for a conclusion and his mental operation. I think you have got a fair deduction there.

Senator TOBEY. That is all.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you know a man by the name of Pat Burns now living in Florida?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Will you please tell the committee where you first met him, what your relations with him were?

Mr. LEARY. Well, when our city of Saratoga Springs, in the early days, Dr. Leonard, who is a Democrat, and I am of the Republican faith, Dr. Leonard and myself and other people there that had an interest in the community felt that we wanted to get rid of the people who were in charge at that time, we did not like the way they were conducting things.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What year was this?

Mr. LEARY. Oh, this would be 30 years ago, I should say.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. LEARY. And I met this man you speak of, Pat Burns. He was an insurance agent for one of these weekly collecting insurance companies, and he was an associate or a friend of Dr. Leonard's: I think Burns was a Democrat, I am not sure of that, and he was a committeeman up in one of the districts there in Saratoga Springs. He was active in athletics, and a good appearing fellow, and he traveled around, and I met Burns in that way. Then I knew him down through the years for a good many years.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever hear of any talk that he was a bag man for either yourself or Mr. Leonard?

Mr. LEARY. Never, and so far as I am concerned, let me say to you flatly that he never was.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, with respect to gambling in the city of Saratoga and the county of Saratoga, we have had testimony here all day to the effect that it is a pretty well known open secret that it flourished there in the month of August in most years. And that is gambling I am talking about. Does that statement come as a surprise to you, Mr. Leary?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And we are also informed that this could not flourish, that this condition could not exist without the connivance and cooperation of the local authorities. Do you agree or disagree with that conclusion?

Mr. LEARY. I would say that your deduction on that would be just as good as mine.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Well, what is yours?

Mr. LEARY. My deduction?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. LEARY. That I have no knowledge of what the authorities did, other than the fact of what I read.

Let me make this clear to you to start with, and maybe this will shorten it up some.

I will say this flatly, on oath and as a lawyer, that I have never been in a gambling room in Saratoga Springs, either in a club or even a horse room, and I do not bet on the horses. I have never shot dice in my life. I have never played a roulette wheel in my life. I never bought a lottery ticket in my life, and I don't smoke, and I have never had a straight drink of liquor in my life. I have had a glass of beer after I became 35 and I was anemic, on prescription of a doctor. That started me on the path a little bit, because I will take a glass of beer and a glass of wine, but never a straight drink of liquor.

Senator TOBEY. Well, we have not had many such paragons of virtue before us.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Well, I feel that your many virtues should be complimented, and I commend you for them, but I think, in the interest of what you started out to do, to shorten the hearing, it would be better if you would respond to questions and did not volunteer information.

Then at the conclusion of your testimony the committee will give you an opportunity to make any statement you wish, within reason.

You can be certain that Joe Louis' wife, if he had a wife, probably never engaged in a prize fight, but she probably enjoyed many of the benefits of Mr. Louis' art or ability in that connection, without being a fighter herself; isn't that so?

Mr. LEARY. Well, again you are asking for conclusions.

Mr. SHIVITZ. All right; let's get back to the questions. You are a resident of Saratoga, are you not, and you have been for many years?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And you usually spend the month of August in the city of Saratoga, don't you?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Or in the immediate vicinity thereof?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Does it come as a surprise to you that these places operated in Saratoga?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, were you aware of the fact that in the year 1947 the State police made an investigation and a report on gambling conditions in the city of Saratoga?

Mr. LEARY. I cannot tell you the year, but I would not be a bit surprised. I don't know. I don't remember the particular year or the particular investigation. I don't recall it.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And do you know whether they ever stepped in to stop gambling in Saratoga?

Mr. LEARY. I know there was a raid. That was a great many years ago.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Well, let us confine ourselves to the past 5 years.

Mr. LEARY. To 1947?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. LEARY. I don't recall. I know there have been raids there, but I don't recall the year, the more recent ones.

If you will give me some data on what they raided, and all that I might be able to tell you. But I will say that I never saw the raid or took part in it, or knew anything about it in any way.

Mr. SHIVITZ. That would not come under your duties?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You hold no official position?

Mr. LEARY. That is right.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever discuss the condition of gambling with any of the officials of the county or the city of Saratoga?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And did you ever discuss any of these conditions—do you know one Patty Grennon?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What does he do?

Mr. LEARY. Patty Grennon lives in Schenectady. He was a molder in the American Locomotive Works, and I had a case for Patty Grennon in my early days, that must have been 30 or 35 years ago, and his brother runs a liquor store there. I have known Patty Grennon. He has had matters in the office in Schenectady, not the Saratoga office, but in the Schenectady office, pertaining to affairs connected with his family and the liquor business.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, is it not a fact that for the past 8 or 9 years Mr. Grennon has made his office pretty much with you and has served you in many capacities?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Not at all?

Mr. LEARY. When you say served me, he never worked for me. He was never employed by me.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Does he run any minor errands for you?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Or arrange conferences?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Or does he see people for you?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. In what capacity did you have contacts with him for the past 8 or 9 years?

Mr. LEARY. I mean, this I can recall, of his coming to the office at one time and asking if I would take a $10,000 mortgage on a piece of property. I said it all depended on the quality of the mortgage. He described the property, and he said, "Does it make any difference if I make anything on this?" I said, "No."

So I went and looked at the property, and took the mortgage, and I found out later that he bought the mortgage from an estate for $9,000, and I gave him $10,000 for it, so he made the $1,000.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Were you in any other mortgage transactions with him?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. That is the only one?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, that is for the past 8 years, that is the only contact you ever had with him?

Mr. LEARY. I have seen him.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Have you been out with him?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Socially?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Have you visited with him—or rather, has he visited you at your office?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, do you know Victor Urquhart?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What is your association with him?

Mr. LEARY. He lived next door to me when I lived on White Street in Saratoga. I think he was born there. I am not sure, but I think he was born there. I knew his family in that way.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you have any contacts with him?

Mr. LEARY. Yes; I have had business for him and for his sister, I think even now in the last few months his sister has consulted me about a matter.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, would you say that in the month of August, in the years 1947 and 1948, that you frequently saw Mr. Grennon on Sundays?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. If you do see him on a Sunday it is merely a coincidence?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And with respect to Mr. Urquhart, do you know what business he is in?

Mr. LEARY. Well, if you want hearsay.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. LEARY. This is pure hearsay. I understand that he takes bets on horses.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Does he run any of these gambling establishments?

Mr. LEARY. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Mr. Leary, you know Joe Hanley, of course?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you know Kingsland Macy?

Mr. LEARY. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Kingsland Macy.

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. During the month of September 1950 Mr. Hanley wrote a rather famous letter to Mr. Macy, is that right?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you tell the committee what you know about that situation?

Mr. LEARY. Well now, gentlemen, let me put myself on record on this record: I think a great deal of Joe Hanley. He is a minister of the gospel, a Presbyterian minister, and as lawful an individual as you ever met. I have known him for a good many years, and I do know about that letter, in that I got a copy of it.

Now, here is what I want to get clear. I don't like to even speak about poor Joe, who is 74 years of age, and I don't feel that it has anything to do with crime. In fact, I know that it has not. Therefore, I would rather not tell anything that would impair or hurt or injure Joe Hanley in any way. Have you jurisdiction to ask a question of this kind?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, Mr. Leary, the committee has given that careful consideration, and you must bear this in mind, that this is an executive session, and if we fail to tie it up I will personally undertake to ask the committee to drop the testimony, but at this point we would like to get this testimony, subject to its being connected with crime.

Mr. LEARY. This is not for the press or for publication, is it?

Mr. HALLEY. The present hearings will not be made public until some later time.

The CHAIRMAN. We had quite a discussion about the Hanley letter.

Mr. LEARY. Is this Senator Kefauver?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; I am Senator Kefauver.

We had some considerable discussion about the matter and there is the theory upon which this committee might have jurisdiction to go into that problem. As of the present time I don't know, but we would like to get the story, and unless we connect it up with something so that we do have jurisdiction of it, it will be stricken from the record.

Mr. LEARY. Senator, I want to be honest and open with you. I feel that this smacks of politics, you know, and I hesitate to answer, but if you insist I will answer and I will tell you.

The CHAIRMAN. We will ask you to answer, Mr. Leary.

Mr. LEARY. All right.

On Tuesday, September 5, while the Republican convention was about to convene, I think that was on a Tuesday, the 5th of September, I received a copy of a letter that was reported to be addressed to Kingsland Macy.

My copy I received at the Grand Union Hotel in Saratoga Springs, I would say about 8:30 o'clock in the evening.

Our county chairman, William E. Benton, had been ill, and he had asked me to attend the meeting in the Grand Union Hotel that evening, where the county committeemen met to see who they would name for the State committeemen. I was at that meeting. Mr. Macy was there.

When he came out of there we met, and I said to him, "I have a copy of your letter that Joe wrote."

He said to me—now, no one has this yet, and I hope it will not be used for political purposes—but he said to me, "I have not received the letter." Well, I said, "I got it by messenger as it was brought up from Albany, and I understand the original has been left at the Gideon Putnam Hotel, 2 miles below here."

Then I said, "You will get it."

Then he said, "Can I see the copy?" I said, "Yes; it is your letter," and I handed him the copy I had received.

My copy did not bear the stationery heading that you would get on an original letter, it was just a copy. But my letter had the words on the envelope that I received, which was addressed to me, not to Mr. Macy, "Personal and confidential," and I treated it as such, and no man that lives today or that lived at that time has ever seen that letter other than Mr. Macy.

That is the story of that.

MR. HALLEY. When you showed the letter to Mr. Macy, did you say anything about its containing contents that would be sufficient to break up the convention, or anything similar to that?

MR. LEARY. No.

MR. HALLEY. Did you mention to anybody but Mr. Macy that you had the letter?

MR. LEARY. I think that—no; never that I had that letter. Never did I say that I had that letter. I think that in the lobby my incentive—I have got to tell it this way—my incentive was for Joe Hanley to run for Lieutenant Governor of the State, and let it go at that.

That was because I understood that this letter said in effect that Joe was not going to insist upon running for Governor. Then there was talk of running him for United States Senator and I said to Joe, "Joe, it would be your death now if you were to get down there in new surroundings, everything new to be learned over again at your age of 74, and your condition of health. Don't do it."

We were awaiting the word as to whether he should insist upon running for Lieutenant Governor or would run for United States Senator, and that was the letter that I was expecting or the word that I was expecting to get, and I did not know that it was coming in letter form, and I had nothing to do with the writing of that letter. In fact, I could not write a letter like that. If you read it, you will see that it is a letter of a minister of the Gospel. Here is a man who was having a controversy with Mr. Macy. What does he do? Does he say, "You are to blame, Macy," and Macy, "You are to blame," back, as ordinarily happens? He says in effect, "Forgive me; I have let you down."

Now, I could never write a letter like that. It is not in my make-up. I have been a trial lawyer. I could not do it. It is not in me, and that letter, I say to you now, I never gave it out to anybody at any time in any way.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Macy got his original letter somewhat later?

Mr. LEARY. Did he get it?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. LEARY. All I know about that again is hearsay, in this respect: I read in the paper that he claimed that he had seen the letter 15 hours before he got his original letter. Now, I have met Mr. Macy but little, very little, but I do not question Kingsland Macy's integrity, that is possible, but it is improbable. All he had to do was to go down from the Grand Union Hotel to the Gideon Putnam, and it is fair to assume that he had gone down to get his rest, and should—

Mr. HALLEY. I have Mr. Macy's statement. I don't think it is fair to disclose it now, no more than would I disclose the Leary statement. I have his statement on that matter.

Mr. LEARY. Then this is the next morning, you would think he would get the letter anyway.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you get the letter the day it was written?

Mr. LEARY. Tuesday, September 5; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. It was sent by messenger from Albany?

Mr. LEARY. The same messenger who delivered his original letter.

Mr. HALLEY. Did it come to you as a complete surprise?

Mr. LEARY. I was expecting word from Joe as to whether he would insist upon running for lieutenant governor. I never expected the letter until that afternoon, when I come in the office I was told that a messenger was to be sent to me. I waited in my office. I got back to the office that afternoon after seeing my sick friend, Bill Benton, who is in the moving-picture business, with me, and our county chairman, and I got back to the office, I think, about 5 o'clock. I waited until 6, and there was no letter, so I had a bite to eat, and down I went to the Grand Union Hotel, and did not get the copy until about half past 8.

Mr. HALLEY. When you showed the letter to Mr. Macy did you not say anything about the letter causing a furor or comment on it in any way?

Mr. LEARY. I don't recall any such statement. I cannot remember the exact words I used. I don't think so. I think just as I remember it, that he read it, and kind of turned as much as to say, "Well," with no words or no comment.

Mr. HALLEY. And you did not comment on it?

Mr. LEARY. I do not recall of any comment that I made.

Mr. HALLEY. And you did not comment to anybody else about the letter in any way?

Mr. LEARY. The only inference or talk of a letter that I ever had with anyone, I would think, was possibly the next morning, again in the lobby of the Grand Union Hotel, when I ran into Frank Moore, our then comptroller, and now lieutenant governor, and I said that, "Well, I understand that you are a prospective candidate for lieutenant governor, and it looks as though the way is clear for you." There was nothing more than that.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not say anything to anybody about there being a letter or some document that would be a bombshell or that would break up the convention, or anything like that?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any part whatsoever in the drafting of the letter?

Mr. LEARY. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. You never knew that a letter of that general type was being drafted?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, have you ever represented any of the night clubs or gambling houses at Saratoga?

Mr. LEARY. Let me put this on the record, first: Of all these men that were out there today, I never, I never saw this fellow Costello until out in the outer room, if he was the right man who was pointed out, never in my life, I have never seen any of that crowd, never spoken to them, never met them or spoken to them, any of them.

As to this fellow Weiss, who lives in Saratoga, I know his history from the publicity that has been had there, and the things he has done, and his reputation from the papers, but I have had nothing to do with him.

The only man that I have had any business with who runs any club or lake house is Gerard King, who runs Newman's, which is the only club that is open year around, and I have not even personally handled his matters. It pertained to a condemnation suit by the State for a highway that took part of his property down near Ballston some place, and one of the men in my office handled that.

Mr. HALLEY. And you did not represent King in any other manner?

Mr. LEARY. Represent whom?

Mr. HALLEY. Gerard King?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you represented Smith's in any way?

Mr. LEARY. Who?

Mr. HALLEY. Smith's Interlochen.

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or the owners of Smith's?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or the Piping Rock Club?

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Edward McEwan?

Mr. LEARY. No. Did you say Edward Ewing?

Mr. HALLEY. McEwan.

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or none of the other casinos or night clubs have been represented by you at any time?

Mr. LEARY. Not that I could recall—wait a minute, if you go back about 30 years, when I was just starting out, I think it was about 30 years ago, there was a fellow named Nat Evans who was said to own the Brook on Church Street, a night club there, and he was being brought back from the West for some charges against him, and whoever the deputy was who was bringing him back, he recommended me as his attorney, and I believe I was Evan's attorney in that matter. That was 30 years or more, maybe longer.

Mr. HALLEY. You have not represented any of the clubs, however, within the last say 10 years?

Mr. LEARY. No, never.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, let us get on.

Mr. HALLEY. No other questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have any questions, Mr. Shivitz?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know a place called McFinn's Drug Store?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you have a mortgage on that place, or do you?

Mr. LEARY. No; I don't think you have got that right. Here is what I think it is there. McFinn owned a drug business in Schuylerville, one at Bakers Mills, and one at Hudson Falls, and I persuaded him to come in to Saratoga and open a drug store there. He was vice president of the Saratoga National Bank. McFinn Drug is a corporation, and I owned half the stock.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you get that as a result of an original investment, or as a result of prior indebtedness of McFinn to you?

Mr. LEARY. I think that was originally, he and I had lots of real estate deals and I have loaned him vast sums of money.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you still have a 50-percent interest?

Mr. LEARY. In the McFinn Drug Co.?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. LEARY. I own all of the stock.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You own it all now?

Mr. LEARY. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And were there unrecorded mortgages in that as the result of your deals with Mr. McFinn which only came to light subsequent to his demise?

Mr. LEARY. I don't think so.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Well, don't you know?

Mr. LEARY. No; I don't. Listen to me, my memory is not infallible, you know.

Mr. SHIVITZ. I mean recorded mortgages running to you?

Mr. LEARY. To me?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. LEARY. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Who is the surrogate in your county?

Mr. LEARY. George O. Tuck.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Who preceded him?

Mr. LEARY. Judge Ostrander.

Mr. SHIVITZ. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask this: Do you own any land that you rent to any of these clubs?

Mr. LEARY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it fair to say that the political leaders up there on both sides do not expect anything to be done about these gambling places in Saratoga?

Mr. LEARY. I could not say about that. I will tell you what, I could not say about that. I am telling you now, that I am influential in a way, in a certain degree up there, in politics, through all these years with the different things that have gone on, and I do a favor for this one, and they have done a favor for me, and the like, but I don't know about that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I mean, is it the feeling that it would hurt business, and what not?

Mr. LEARY. They have that general impression up there, that is so. But I don't know that it would, and by Jove, if they would take the waters up there, gentlemen, let me say this to you, if they would just take the waters up there, and if any of you—I run this drug store on Market, and they would starve to death if they had to depend upon me to buy any medicine there, but at the Breakers Hotel in Palm Beach, we have the waters there, we have got the finest baths in the world there. I would rather have a healthy growth than one of the things that is a fluctuating thing with some of the elements tied in with it. That is very definite.

If you gentlemen see fit to inquire, you ask who my associates are, and you ask who visits my home, and ask how I run my family.

The CHAIRMAN. Who are your associates?

Mr. LEARY. I have a niece, and I say to you this, I think you brag about your own, but I have got a niece, Ruth Wallace, who is received by the finest people in this country, who goes all the way, and that statement goes all the way from Mrs. Elliott, whose mother wrote the Battle Hymn of the Republic, that goes up to the finest society people in this country today. She is beyond reproach in every way.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a family of your own?

Mr. LEARY. Just my niece and myself.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not have a wife?

Mr. LEARY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything else, gentlemen?

Mr. HALLEY. That is all.

Mr. SHIVITZ. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Mr. Leary.

Mr. LEARY. Thank you, gentlemen, even though I did not get my plane back; but it is nice of you to sit with me.

There is one thing I want to say to you Democrats, and that is this, never mind the 40-hour week, that is less than 6 hours a day, make them work more, the whole darn bunch of them, make them work and create. It makes things cheaper, and everybody is better off in the final end.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, that is pretty good political advice, Mr. Leary.

Mr. HALLEY. Good night.

Mr. LEARY. Good night.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Now who are we going to call?

Mr. HALLEY. Joseph Henschel.

The CHAIRMAN. Good evening. Counsel, what is your name?

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Arthur H. Schwartz.

The CHAIRMAN. And your address, sir?

Mr. SCHWARTZ. 19 East Seventieth Street.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Mr. Henschel, will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please?

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JOSEPH HENSCHEL, NEW YORK, N. Y., ACCOMPANIED BY ARTHUR H. SCHWARTZ, ATTORNEY

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, Mr. Henschel?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Joseph Henschel.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your occupation?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Manufacturer.

Mr. HALLEY. Of what?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Ladies' suits.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been in that business?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Thirty-seven years.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any partners?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are they?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Jacob Siegel and Philip Alenikoff.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been with them?

Mr. HENSCHEL. With them 37 years.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the name of your business?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Siegel and Alenikoff.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Henschel, you at one time were treasurer of Tammany Hall; is that right?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. During what years was that?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That must have been sometime in 1948 or 1949. When was the election of Tammany Hall? I was treasurer of Tammany Hall when they run O'Dwyer for mayor.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. That was 1949.

Mr. HALLEY. Who asked you to serve as treasurer?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Mr. Charlie Silver, who was a very dear friend of mine, asked me, and I told him I would think it over.

Mr. HALLEY. With whom else did you discuss it?

Mr. HENSCHEL. He called up Tular Rogers one day, and he insisted upon me taking it. In fact, we met at Toots Shor's, and I told him I would take it.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Rogers?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Just casually; not very well.

Mr. HALLEY. Not for many years?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, no; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you previously belonged to any political club or association?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes; Tammany Hall.

Mr. HALLEY. You belonged to Tammany Hall.

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. For how many years?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Oh, I could not remember; a lot of years.

Mr. HALLEY. Many years?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you held any political office previously?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. None whatsoever?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you belonged to any district club?

Mr. HENSCHER. Well, I was a member of Tammany Hall, but I never went to a club in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Frank Costello?

Mr. HENSCHER. Frank Costello?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. HENSCHER. I know him for about, oh, I should say about 5 years?

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to Frank Costello?

Mr. HENSCHER. Who introduced me to Frank Costello?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. HENSCHER. His wife introduced me to him.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to his wife?

Mr. HENSCHER. Well, I knew Mrs. Costello for a number of years, through the Italian local of the International Garment Workers' Union. They used to come in from the Italian orphanage to collect clothing. She came up with a few ladies for a number of years, and then one time she came up with a gentleman. I have always sent them clothes. I don't remember just how, but I do remember that, I don't know if it was at Dinty Moore's, I think it was at Dinty Moore's, if I recollect, and she told me that she was going to the theater that night, and she was sitting with Mr. Costello and some other couple, so she introduced me to him.

Mr. HALLEY. That was about 5 years ago?

Mr. HENSCHER. Although I knew Mrs. Costello a few years before that.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you known Mr. Costello more or less on a close basis?

Mr. HENSCHER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What has been the nature of your relationship?

Mr. HENSCHER. Well, I have seen him to say, "Hello," and I have probably seen him once in 6 months, maybe once in a year.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go to their home?

Mr. HENSCHER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go out to any place with them?

Mr. HENSCHER. No; no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. In your capacity—well, before we get to that, you had a transaction in which you made a Cadillac automobile available to the Costellos; did you not?

Mr. HENSCHER. Yes; and I will tell you how that happened. I was, in fact, questioned about this some time ago, 4 or 5 weeks ago, and it slipped my mind. This must have been sometime in 1945 or 1946.

Mr. HALLEY. Who questioned you about the Cadillac?

Mr. HENSCHER. Somebody from the Kefauver committee.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean one of our investigators?

Mr. HENSCHER. That is right. Of course, I did not know and I refreshed my memory, and about 1945 I went and gave $100 as a deposit for a Cadillac car to the Cadillac people. I waited quite some time, until some friend of mine told me that he would get me a 7-passenger. That was sometime in 1947, I should say. I took that 1947 car, and I bought that, and I kept that other contract.

Mrs. Costello came up with some little fellow she introduced as some Italian professor, and when I made the package for her, my boys gave her the package and I said, "How are you taking it?" She said, "I have a cab." She said, "If I had a car I could not park anyway."

I said, "Mrs. Costello, I have a car contract, and I have a $100 deposit, you can have it as of when they deliver it."

Well, she was very happy about it. I gave it to her. About 2 days later the people called up and said that they did not transfer; you have to go in rotation. Mr. Clark told me the only way I could sell her the car was providing I wait for it, and then when I get it, take title to it, and then transfer it to her.

Mr. HALLEY. How long after that conversation did the car come through?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I could not exactly tell you. I think the gentleman who examined me told me that it was May 18. I think he got that data from them.

After he got through, I says to him, "Why did you call me for anything like that?" I said, "What do I have to do with these things? I am quite a reputable businessman, the largest in my industry, I am well thought of and respectable."

He said, "Who can answer a question like that but you? You had the title of the car."

Mr. HALLEY. What year was that?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That must have been, I think he said May 1948, it was delivered to her.

Mr. HALLEY. May of 1948?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes; it was delivered to me, rather, and I transferred it in May of 1948; I believe it was then.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have any discussions with Costello with reference to your becoming treasurer of Tammany Hall?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, sir; at no time.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever, while you were treasurer, solicit him for a contribution?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever get any?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or from his wife?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, sir; never.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Mr. Fay question you with reference to the Yonkers Raceway?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the nature of your participation in the Algam Corp.?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I am a 25-percent stockholder of Algam Corp.

Mr. HALLEY. Who first interested you in this proposition?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Nat Herzfeld.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the circumstances?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, Nat Herzfeld seemed to have a friend of his working on that deal. They had a syndicate, and they worked on it for quite a while, and they were negotiating with the Butlers for some time, and it fell through.

One night Nat said that this would be a wonderful thing if it could be revived again. He said, "How about us trying to get Judge Blakely." We found out that Judge Blakely was their attorney. We had another associate of ours, a friend of ours, Arthur Lynch, who knew most all about this transaction there, and we started working on that again, and got in touch with Judge Blakely, and we consummated the sale.

It seemed that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. offered $2,100,000 or $2,200,000, and we got it at $2,400,000.

Mr. HALLEY. The track at that time had been constructed?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes; it had been, but it needed some setting up and fixing up. It had been running as flat racing at that time and not trotting.

Mr. HALLEY. And it needed conversion to trotting?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. There was also a problem about getting a date from the State racing commission; was there not?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes; we could not get any dates at all. In fact, that is why we took on Bill Kane's franchise from Goshen. Mr. Kane—you see, there is only a certain amount of licenses issued, and we couldn't get any, unless we waited our turn. Mr. Kane saw that this had potentialities that were so great and so much better than Roosevelt, where he was running, that he suggested and came to us with the proposition that we take him in on this thing, and that we permit him to run on our track.

Mr. HALLEY. You made certain arrangements with the Roosevelt Raceway; did you not?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Roosevelt had to release Mr. Kane, you see, so that he could come with us.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, his dates did not come with him. Where did you get your racing dates?

Mr. HENSCHEL. We got Mr. Kane's dates.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he give up the track at Goshen altogether?

Mr. HENSCHEL. He never run at Goshen; he run at Roosevelt.

Mr. HALLEY. He was at Roosevelt with those dates?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What arrangement was made? In fact, Roosevelt runs a track?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes; Roosevelt runs a track.

Mr. HALLEY. Who runs Yonkers?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Kane is supposed to run Yonkers Raceway, because he owns the franchise, the license; he pays us rent and pays us a percentage; he pays 1 percent of that, which is nine-tenths, actually, of 1 percent rent, which is the customary rent of tracks.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you get any percentage of the profits?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right. Then we get 50 percent of the gross of $1,800,000, and 60 after that, and they get 40; Kane does.

Mr. HALLEY. Does Roosevelt Raceway participate?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Roosevelt Raceway participates, to my knowledge I couldn't say, but I do understand that Mr. George Levy has stock with Kane, part of Kane's stock.

Mr. HALLEY. He has part of Kane's stock?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That means Yonkers, not of Algam. Algam is our own.

Mr. HALLEY. From whom do you understand that George Levy has part of it?

Mr. HENSCHEL. It is supposed to be public knowledge that he has.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, Kane operates the track himself; is that right?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, he does not, he operates it with Mr. Herzfeld, who is our director. We have an agreement that the two of them should run it, in other words he should have full say.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Mr. Henschel, isn't it a fact that there is a separate corporation on which there are books and records, part of which books and records represent the Kane interest, and part the interest of Algam, and part of which represent the Roosevelt interest?

Mr. HENSCHEL. We have nothing to do with Roosevelt, just Kane and Algam.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And Algam, in effect, is a realty owning corporation, which owns real estate at Yonkers Raceway?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. SHIVITZ. But they participate by virtue of certain contracts which have been made available to this committee as a result of the operations?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And in order to have those operations, it is necessary for the organization that Mr. Kane represents to give its time and to use the Yonkers facilities for meets?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, there is another reason for it. You see, Mr. Kane is a very old gentleman. I think Mr. Kane is about 80 years old, and Mr. Herzfeld, our executive director of Algam, is a very capable and, well, a very good sporting man, and I know that if we left Kane alone it would not work as nicely as it does with Herzfeld.

Mr. HALLEY. Your need for Kane was in order to get racing dates, is that it?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How is it that Kane controls certain racing dates?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, the racing commission gives him those dates for many years. They don't change.

Mr. HALLEY. They had given Kane those dates?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. He had them at Goshen; is that right?

Mr. HENSCHEL. He had them at Goshen, and he run the Goshen dates at Roosevelt.

Mr. HALLEY. And the State racing commission had given Kane, though 80 years old, not well-qualified, permission to run a track?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, I would not say that he is not well-qualified.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, he has to keep Herzfeld with him.

Mr. HENSCHEL. Don't forget we have a lot of money invested and we would not want an old gentleman like that to have full say. If we do not agree, we have an agreement that we will go to arbitration. We have never had to do that.

Mr. HALLEY. But in any event, he first went to Roosevelt with his dates?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right. He had the Roosevelt dates, and gave them to us.

Mr. HALLEY. And Roosevelt related them on the condition that he come to you?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And he came to you with his dates?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Who financed the expenses of the operating corporation which runs the raceway?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, Mr. Kane had somebody in there, he deposited some money with the Harriman National Bank, and it did not require a lot of money for operating then; they had their own corporation.

MR. HALLEY. How much did it take?

MR. HENSCHEL. There were several hundred thousand, I think he had.

MR. HALLEY. Who put up the money?

MR. HENSCHEL. Who put it up?

MR. HALLEY. Did Algam put up any money?

MR. HENSCHEL. Not in the operating company.

MR. HALLEY. Nothing in the operating company?

MR. HENSCHEL. No, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Who put the money up in the operating company?

MR. HENSCHEL. Kane.

MR. HALLEY. Kane alone?

MR. HENSCHEL. That is right.

MR. HALLEY. Do you know where he got it?

MR. HENSCHEL. Well, he has been in the business for a number of years. They had the Hambletonian for 30 years or so. He is that famous Kane who runs the Hambletonian at a loss of $50,000 or $75,000. He is really a horse character, this Kane.

MR. HALLEY. Did he get some money to operate from Levy?

MR. HENSCHEL. I could not say. I don't think so.

MR. HALLEY. Levy bought stock in the company?

MR. HENSCHEL. He had stock in the company prior to coming with us; Levy did not get his stock from Kane. Now, he had an interest with Kane, even though he was running at Roosevelt.

MR. HALLEY. I see.

MR. HENSCHEL. It was not a new venture at all.

MR. HALLEY. Now, by virtue of a contract, what right does Herzfeld have in the direction of the operating company? How much does he have to say?

MR. HENSCHEL. Well, he has practically a 50 percent say, so far as our handling of the help, how many people we need in the mutual windows. He gets all the statistics. He is a little better on figures than Kane, and they work it out together.

MR. HALLEY. Who picks the managers and such?

MR. HENSCHEL. Kane does.

MR. HALLEY. Kane picks the personnel?

MR. HENSCHEL. That is right.

MR. HALLEY. Does Herzfeld have a veto?

MR. HENSCHEL. He does not really have a veto power, but if a man is not suitable or is not good for the company, he can come in and complain and then go to arbitration on it.

MR. HALLEY. Prior to making the deal had Algam for some years been attempting to get a license?

MR. HENSCHEL. No; it was not a question only of probably a year or 8 months. We could not very well get it. We would have to miss at least another year.

MR. HALLEY. And to avoid that loss—

MR. HENSCHEL. Practically speaking, we were known, most of us, as Democrats, and we had a Republican regime, and we felt that God knows how long they would push us around until we would get it, because the racing commission, as a rule, is appointed by the Republican Governor, and our chances would be kind of slim. The deal we made was not the best deal that could be made, but it was better than being unable to operate.

Mr. HALLEY. Is Kane a Republican?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I would not know, practically speaking, what Kane is. I really would not know. I know the racing commissioners are all Republicans, and I know that those things are not easily done. Besides, they could not give us dates unless they added another license. I believe there are seven licenses issued for the State, and they would have to make an eighth one, and if they made an additional one for us, there would be two or three others who had been waiting for one who would be disgruntled, and the Governor could not put through one. There would be no reason to give us one and not the other two.

Mr. HALLEY. Who had enough influence with the administration—

Mr. HENSCHEL. No one.

Mr. HALLEY. May I finish my question, please.

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who had enough influence to get the little signs put up along the parkway, pointing to Yonkers Raceway? Do you know about those signs?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You have driven out to the raceway, haven't you?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Oh, sure. Well, I think the township would do that. It is easier for their traffic. What does the sign cost? Fifty cents or a dollar? How much does the sign cost?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you have driven up the parkway?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Sure, often.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever notice a sign advertising any other enterprise, on any of the other parkways?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, but they never had anything like that. We have had as high as 25,000 people there and I think the cost is so minute, I don't think that a sign costs over a dollar, it is just a little arrow.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you don't know how it was accomplished?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I would not know. Probably the police department, or the councilmen up there would do something there on that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any discussion about it?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No; I didn't know anybody up there.

Mr. HALLEY. How much money did you invest in Algam?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Personally?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. HENSCHEL. $375,000.

Mr. HALLEY. When you say personally, I presume you mean—

Mr. HENSCHEL. I thought you meant all of us.

Mr. HALLEY. No, no, your own.

Mr. HENSCHEL. My own is $375,000.

Mr. HALLEY. And when did you make that investment?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, we made it, at first we each put up a percentage to take title, that was $200,000. I think I put up then $50,000. I do not have my records here, but I put my percentage up, and if we did not get title we would have to let it go. Then when we got title we put up the balance of the money.

Mr. HALLEY. In what year did you make your investment?

Mr. HENSCHEL. We made our investment in 1949.

Mr. HALLEY. And you borrowed certain moneys with Benjamin Levine as endorser of the note?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Benny Levine?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Oh, I would say 40 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Hasn't he had a long reputation as a racketeer in this city?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, inasmuch as you ask me, I will tell you what I know of him. I have been very close with the fellow. I know his family. We were brought up together.

I might say right now that he is one of my dearest friends. Benny Levine is a hard-working fellow. I started working when I was 10 years old, and I think he did, too.

He seemed to be very friendly with some union officials, and being friendly with union officials he got a reputation of being able to do a lot of favors. I doubt if the fellow ever made a penny in his life for that, but he got the reputation as a union strong-arm man, which he paid the penalty for when they wound everybody up, and he could never live it down.

He is one of the finest men, and has got one of the finest families you could ever meet; he has three of the loveliest children, and he is the finest husband you could ever meet.

That fellow never goes out, only with his family. He never goes to clubs or any place alone, and those that know him will tell you exactly the same. He is really a grand person.

Mr. HALLEY. He did plead guilty to a racketeering charge and went to jail, didn't he?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I happened to be in the courtroom, and if I could get the minutes for you, when the judge sentenced him, he sentenced him in this way. Judge Mullins said:

Benny Levine, you stand before me for sentence. It is so unusual to have a fellow like you with a probationary report such as yours come here, that you are such a wonderful fellow, and such a marvelous father and wonderful husband. Your neighbors talk so highly of you. I must have had 10 of the finest citizens come in and intercede for you, men who are the best in this country. I go into their homes and they come into my home. But I do know, Ben Levine, that financially you never gained anything by it. In fact, I am positive, but materially you did. No doubt I would have to take my robe off if I dismissed your case.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever know Lepke?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the nature of your relationship with Lepke?

Mr. HENSCHEL. He had a partner and brother, Carl Shapiro. They have a factory in Baltimore, and they worked for me.

Mr. HALLEY. They do contracting for you?

Mr. HENSCHEL. For many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Over how long a period of years did you have a business relationship with Lepke?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I think they worked for me about 5 years, I would say many years ago; that goes back about 15 years ago or better.

Mr. HALLEY. You can probably help the committee in this respect—

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, I am not here to hinder it; I am here to help you, if I can.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes; I believe that you will. I hope you will, certainly.

We have been told that in connection with various rackets in the garment area, and you must realize that there certainly have been some.

Mr. HENSCHEL. There is no doubt; there is and there always will be.

Mr. HALLEY. That one of the rackets has been that established manufacturing companies simply must contract out a certain amount of work to out-of-town plants, which are controlled by racketeers, and which are open shops, because the racketeers can handle their own union problems?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Inasmuch as you ask me, I happen to be a good authority on it. I am the oldest suit and cloak manufacturer in the industry. I am one of the largest. I am one of the few AAA concerns. I am the largest buyer of piece goods, and most people think I know my business. In fact, I am a model benefactor for our International Garment Workers Union.

I have an out-of-town factory, too, and I will tell you how the out-of-town factories have come about.

Many years ago, I think it was even before your time, because I feel I am quite much older than you, your mother or sister wore just a plain garment. There was no such thing as style.

Gradually, we got in European people, and we changed our style. Then they came into a mannish type.

Our cloak makers could not make the mannish type, and we had to go to the amalgamated shops. There have been very few in the city, they have all been out of town, all through Jersey and Allentown, Poughkeepsie, up in Newburgh, and around there.

I, for one, started going into the mannish type suits, and naturally we started working with these shops. They are all out of town, but they are strictly union, always have been union. All we have to do, the moment they work for an international shop, they have to change employees, and give them international books. They made ladies' garments, but they were mannish styles, one-button effects, and things of that kind. That is how most of these out-of-town factories came about.

I will say that in New York City there are plenty of nonunion shops, and these rackets will always go on. You have plenty of them in the Bronx and over in Brooklyn. Of course, I do not say that there are not any out of town, specifically I cannot say, or you cannot say because it is an out-of-town shop that it is a racketeer shop. That is not so.

Mr. HALLEY. No; I am not implying that.

Mr. HENSCHEL. I am just telling you for your benefit, so that you get your picture right, just because it is out of town it does not actually mean—I am not saying that there are not many of them all over—but it does not mean just because they are out of town that they are racketeering shops.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Henschel, let us try to make your answers a little more concise and a little more to the point. I appreciate the picture, but the specific question is, What truth is there to the information we have that some of these racketeering shops thrive because of the pressure they are able to bring on regular manufacturers to give them some of their contracting business?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I will tell you something: I don't think they bring the pressure, I think they come to these racketeers, I believe. We have in our industry a lot of manufacturers, who are not businessmen at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you go to Lepke?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No; I never had to

Mr. HALLEY. Did he come to you?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Never in his life.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you do business with him?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I will tell you why, through a friend of mine, Irving Deutsch. It was a men's plant, and they gave me part of that, they broke it, it is easier to do that.

Mr. HALLEY. Why were you willing to do that?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, I needed help like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you need it from a racketeer?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I looked upon him as Carl Shapiro. Carl is a high-class garment man.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, he was sitting there with Lepke as a partner, wasn't he?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, not Carl, you are talking about——

Mr. HALLEY. I was asking you about Lepke. You said you did business with Lepke, didn't you?

Mr. HENSCHEL. With Lepke's partner, Carl Shapiro was a partner of Lepke's.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, Lepke was a partner with Carl Shapiro.

Mr. HENSCHEL. He was no racketeer, Carl, never, he was a hard-working businessman all his life.

Mr. HALLEY. But nevertheless you were doing business with Lepke.

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, I was doing business with Carl Shapiro.

Mr. HALLEY. But, Mr. Henschel, weren't they partners?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes, but Lepke didn't know anything about the business.

Mr. HALLEY. I understand that. You seem to be——

Mr. HENSCHEL. Let me state something——

Mr. HALLEY. When you walked in here, and right this minute, I had and I do have the greatest admiration for you and your accomplishments. I know about them. It seems to me now that you are just playing games with me.

Mr. HENSCHEL. If you will let me explain——

Mr. HALLEY. Will you please stick to the specific questions, without getting off the track.

Mr. HENSCHEL. But if you will just let me——

Mr. HALLEY. Now, let me ask you the questions, and you answer the specific questions.

My specific question is, Didn't you know that Lepke was a racketeer, that is No. 1.

Mr. HENSCHEL. By reputation, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And a bad racketeer?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And didn't you willingly go business with Lepke?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, you are asking me that question direct. I am not here to protect Lepke. Lepke is a dead man. If you want the truth, I will tell you——

Mr. HALLEY. First, answer the question. Did you do business with Lepke?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you did business with Lepke, you so testified. Do you want to change your testimony now?

Mr. HENSCHEL. You asked me if I knew Lepke, and I said I did business with his partner, who had a shop.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, how can you do business with a partner, without doing business with the other man? I am not smart enough to answer that. Perhaps you can explain it to me.

Mr. HENSCHEL. Let me enlighten you in your mind, just because a man is in business with another man who knows tailoring, I could not go and talk to Lepke and do any business with him. He would not understand what I wanted. Carl was a tailor and he understood everything, whether it had to do with a hand machine, or anything about the business, I could talk to him. Lepke probably did not understand any more about that work than a stranger, but I did understand that Lepke was his partner.

Mr. HALLEY. Then when Lepke and Shapiro made $10 on a job that you gave them, Lepke was getting $5 out of it, wasn't he?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Possibly so.

Mr. HALLEY. Why were you willing to do business with Lepke?

Mr. HENSCHEL. As I just explained to you, Mr. Halley, the kind of work I needed, when the style trend changed, and the men's shops could only make it, this was an opportunity I had to get a men's shop to make it, and only for that reason.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you mean to say that in this great city you were unable to find anybody else to do that kind of work, except some one who was a partner with Lepke?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right. I would never get it for that price, in the first place, and they did not make that type of work.

Mr. HALLEY. All right. Let's first talk about the price which you stated in the first place they were able to do it for. Were they able to do it for a lower price?

Mr. HENSCHEL. They were doing it cheaper, they were breaking in their plants, and they made it cheaper than most people that I would go to.

Mr. HALLEY. Did they ever get a special arrangement from a union?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. They just ducked the union altogether, didn't they?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I am not sure. I don't think they run union.

Mr. HALLEY. Obviously they could give you a cheaper price than a union shop then, couldn't they?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, gentlemen, truthfully it had to be a cheaper price, but it was not a question of getting another shop. You couldn't get anyone who knew about the mannish type suits, and if you take the date down, you can verify that, that that is when the mannish suits started. It was not something that I could say, "You do this" or "You do that." We just didn't have them in our industry.

It was with our union's consent, so that we could break in that type of help.

Mr. HALLEY. Couldn't you break in somebody that did not have Lepke for a partner? Couldn't you break in with somebody else?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, it is not easily done that way. They had a first-class plant put up there, and this friend of mine that actually broke in the help, and all, this fellow Irving Deutsch, he was on the floor with Carl, and within 4 or 5 weeks I got beautiful clothes, beautiful suits.

Mr. HALLEY. How long had you known Shapiro before you made the first business arrangement with him?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Very shortly.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to Shapiro?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Irving Deutsch introduced me to Carl.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever make any clothing for the United States Government?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, I did not make it directly. I made it for J. C. Penny, Lazy Cadets.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you do that?

Mr. HENSCHEL. I did that in the last war.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that the only item you made?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right, jackets and coats, it was working through them, a sort of a nonprofit deal.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean by that?

Mr. HENSCHEL. We did not make any profit on it. It was more of a patriotic gesture. Penny got this thing, and I do a couple of million dollars a year business with Penny, and they thought that I would be the right man to make up that merchandise. I don't think we made our overhead on it, or just about our overhead.

Mr. HALLEY. Did they come to you?

Mr. HENSCHEL. J. C. Penny came to me, and I am one of Penny's real resources.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that the only work you have ever done, directly or indirectly, for the United States Government?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Directly or indirectly, that is the only work I have ever done.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you, or any corporation or company you are connected with, directly or indirectly, done any other work for the United States Government?

Mr. HENSCHEL. When you say me, do you mean myself?

Mr. HALLEY. You or any company you have ever been connected with.

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right. I have not, never.

Mr. HALLEY. Either directly or indirectly?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Either directly or indirectly.

Mr. HALLEY. You never did any work for the United States Government?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Or for the Army?

Mr. HENSCHEL. None whatever.

Mr. HALLEY. And on this Penny contract, who came to you?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Mr. Dillon of J. C. Penny.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you deal with anybody else about it at all?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes. I met one of their personnel men, or something, and they used to give me the order and the priorities.

I will say that I benefited in one way. Here is how I benefited by it. They gave me a priority for linings. Linings were very hard to get, and if I got a priority for, say, 40,000 units of suits, which took about a yard and a half or 60,000 yards, I would say, "I will give you an order for 60,000 yards, and you give me 10,000 yards." The mill would give me 10,000 yards. They would sell me direct, so it would help me in my own manufacturing business.

MR. HALLEY. You had no other contact whatsoever of obtaining this business from J. C. Penny?

MR. HENSCHEL. None whatsoever. If you know who J. C. Penny is, you know that there is no friendship, or no people who are going to ask you to do favors. As I just told you, we are the biggest resources for them.

MR. HALLEY. Did you obtain any Government business for anyone else during the war?

MR. HENSCHEL. Never in my life.

MR. HALLEY. None whatsoever?

MR. HENSCHEL. None whatsoever, sir.

MR. HALLEY. I have no other questions.

THE CHAIRMAN. Mr. Shivitz, do you have any questions?

MR. SHIVITZ. No questions.

THE CHAIRMAN. I believe Mr. Walsh has some questions.

MR. WALSH. Yes. Do you know Tom Lucchese?

MR. HENSCHEL. Yes.

MR. WALSH. How long have you known him?

MR. HENSCHEL. I know Mr. Lucchese about, oh, I would say 9 or 10 years.

MR. WALSH. Have you done business with him?

MR. HENSCHEL. No. He went in partners with a very dear friend of mine, he went in business with him, and the day he went in business I was in Altman's Restaurant, and he introduced me as his partner.

MR. WALSH. What is his friend's name?

MR. HENSCHEL. Lou Kauffman.

MR. WALSH. Have you seen Mr. Lucchese very much?

MR. HENSCHEL. No; I have not seen much of him. I am a pretty busy man. I don't bother anybody. I run into him once in a while here and there, but I see very little of him.

MR. WALSH. When was the last time you have seen him?

MR. HENSCHEL. Mr. Lucchese, I probably saw him maybe 6 months ago.

MR. WALSH. That is all.

MR. HENSCHEL. Just passing him on the street.

THE CHAIRMAN. You were going to tell us, if you could do so briefly, I would appreciate it very much, about just how the rackets do operate in the garment industry.

MR. HENSCHEL. Well, they are there. They probably pay them so much a garment, or something like that.

THE CHAIRMAN. Who?

MR. HENSCHEL. Some of these racket people, those put in the work. The union itself does not permit that. In most cases I think it is done under false pretenses that they take money.

THE CHAIRMAN. Who takes money?

MR. HENSCHEL. Some of these racketeers.

THE CHAIRMAN. You mean union racketeers?

MR. HENSCHEL. No.

THE CHAIRMAN. How would a racketeer get in the garment industry? You have had experience with them?

MR. HENSCHEL. No; they would not come to me.

The CHAIRMAN. But somebody would take money to try to keep the shop nonunion, is that the idea?

MR. HENSCHEL. Well, they give them a promise, yes, that they will be able to work nonunion, and in most cases they work union anyhow, and they get paid. Because what I understand from the union—of course, you can find out more through them—the union has no use for these fellows at all. Those days are gone.

The CHAIRMAN. Have some of them tried to get you to pay them off?

MR. HENSCHEL. No; I never had any reason to. I always was union.

The CHAIRMAN. Who are the chief racketeers?

MR. HENSCHEL. God knows. They are young kids. They grow up and they come in and they go. That is all. Listen, I am not the kind of a fellow who hangs around—

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let us just take some company that you don't have any business with, let's say the X company starts to manufacture ladies' dresses or something like that, then how would a racketeer come into the matter?

MR. HENSCHEL. Well, I have not been there to hear how they work it, but if you gentlemen do want to find out thoroughly, you go to the union and get a list of nonunion shops, and you talk to the people, and you can easily get to the bottom of that, because the union has a list of nonunion factories.

The CHAIRMAN. How many people do you work in your shop?

MR. HENSCHEL. I have a small plant for 37 years, about a hundred people, I think. But I do employ about an additional 800 out of town.

The CHAIRMAN. Your name is Joseph Henschel, isn't it?

MR. HENSCHEL. Joseph Henschel, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is Al Henschel?

MR. HENSCHEL. Who?

The CHAIRMAN. Is there somebody by the name of Al Henschel?

MR. HENSCHEL. I never heard of him.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, this money that you borrowed from Mr. Levine, he signed your note and you signed his note.

MR. HENSCHEL. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. So that you got altogether about $150,000?

MR. HENSCHEL. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What was that for, the purpose of buying some interest—

MR. HENSCHEL. I will tell you the story on that.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, go ahead.

MR. HENSCHEL. When I talked to Nat, when we were going to buy this thing, we each set out how much we wanted to take on a percentage basis, and I had Ben Levine in mind, and I said I will be able to handle 25 percent of that.

I went to Ben and I told Ben about it. Ben said to me, "I don't want any race track business." Of course, it was only a piece of land at the time, and it looked like a hazardous thing, and it looked like we could not run.

I said, "O. K., Ben, I will just take 12½ percent then." He said, "Oh, no, if you want 25 percent, I will give you the money, and you pay me back." I offered it to him, and that is how I obtained the 25 percent.

The CHAIRMAN. Then you got in a position where you could sign checks for the race track, didn't you.

Mr. HENSCHIEL. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. And he did also?

Mr. HENSCHIEL. Nat Herzfeld?

The CHAIRMAN. No, Ben Levine.

Mr. HENSCHIEL. Oh, no, of course not.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you the treasurer now?

Mr. HENSCHIEL. No; I am not.

The CHAIRMAN. Why do you sign the check?

Mr. HENSCHIEL. Well, you see I do a little work with Nat, I am pretty active at the track, although I am not compensated for it, and naturally I am always available there, and he had to have some one to sign checks. We made a card out in the bank, and I sign checks, I am one of the executive directors, too, there.

The CHAIRMAN. How does Mr. Costello have an influence around Tammany Hall, to some extent, without contribution something to the campaign?

Mr. HENSCHIEL. Let me say this, I have heard so many rumors, that if he has any way of contributing, maybe does it in some other way, but you can rest assured that while I was treasurer Mr. Frank Costello never gave even $5, nor have I asked him for it. That does not mean that maybe through some other channels he might help, if the rumors are correct that he used to be quite a benefactor of Tammany Hall.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Do you have anything else, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Proceed, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. When did he used to be quite a benefactor?

Mr. HENSCHIEL. The rumor there was in the Aurelio case, I remember reading about that, that they gave him that title, and from then on everybody talked about him as being quite a benefactor.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't think that is just gossip, do you?

Mr. HENSCHIEL. I can tell you this under oath, as I just told you, I had never seen Mr. Costello up there. I was not very active there. I spent very little time there. I am a very busy man. I put in about 18 hours a day working.

Mr. HALLEY. But you were there for 9 months.

Mr. HENSCHIEL. I was in there because Mr. Charles Silver was talked about as becoming mayor, and that is the reason I took it. I would not take it for a million dollars. What did I need it for? I thought because he was a friend of mine that I would carry a vote, and Charles Silver was very much interested in me becoming treasurer.

You might have heard about Mr. Silver, he is a very dear friend of mine. I am one of the largest users of American woollens, and we have been very friendly for many years, socially and in business. It was only through him, or I would not take it for anybody.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Henschel, did Lou Kauffman ever discuss with you his new partner?

Mr. HENSCHIEL. He introduced me to him.

Mr. WALSH. Did he discuss the venture with you?

Mr. HENSCHIEL. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Did he tell you anything about Mr. Lucchese?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No; he did not.

Mr. WALSH. Did he tell you whether he had any experience?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No; I don't think he did. I think he was a contractor at that time. There is a difference in manufacturing, when you sell direct to the trade, or contracting for a manufacturer, and I think Mr. Lucchese was a contractor at the time, and that is how he went in partners with him, because he wanted someone to make garments for him.

Mr. WALSH. That is your impression as to how this partnership arose?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

Mr. WALSH. Do they have a big business?

Mr. HENSCHEL. It is a fair business, fair, they have been doing business for quite some time.

Mr. WALSH. Do they run a union shop?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes; from what I gather I think they do.

Mr. WALSH. Do they make quality garments?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Yes; they make a popular-priced garment, I believe a $22 garment or a $24 garment, a popular-priced garment.

Mr. WALSH. What is their reputation in the trade?

Mr. HENSCHEL. It is a very nice garment, a clean garment.

Mr. WALSH. I mean the reputation of the partnership.

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, they call it the Braunell Co., and the reputation is good.

Mr. WALSH. Their reputation is good?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Very nice, they have a very lovely reputation.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Henschel, are you in other horse or race tracks?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. This is your only venture?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. What other sort of ventures are you interested in?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, I am interested in the Crown Mill, one of the finest mills in the country.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean down in Georgia?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, South Attleboro. They make rayons and worsteds. I am interested in Walter Scott, another cloak-and-suit house. We sell specialty shops, and then I have an interest with my sister in the sportswear business; I help them in that. They make skirts and things of that kind, and cheap suits.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, again you had a definite feeling that when you brought in Mr. Kane you had to get some influence to sort of balance out the Democratic influence, from the Republicans?

Mr. HENSCHEL. You see, when you are in a city like New York, when the Republicans are in power, or when the Democrats are in power, they appoint their commission. Naturally, if we had to get another license we would have to get a Democratic regime in and we would have to wait maybe a year, 2 or 3 years, and we made the best settlement we could, as businessmen. We had a Republican senate and a Republican assembly.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you fellows put up any money for the Republican committee?

Mr. HENSCHEL. No, sir; we didn't get anything from them. They did nothing for us. We used Kane.

The CHAIRMAN. You wanted to stay friendly with the Republican racing commission, didn't you?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, we wanted to be friendly with everybody, but we haven't given them anything, not a penny. In fact, we tried to stay as clear as we possibly can, so that the Republicans will help us. We have neither helped the Democrats or the Republicans.

The CHAIRMAN. You have been nonpartisan?

Mr. HENSCHEL. That is right, and I think in that way we get a fair break from them.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Henschel. That is all, thank you. Thank you, Mr. Schwartz.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Thank you, Senator. Thank you, gentlemen.

The CHAIRMAN. If we need you again we will let you know.

Mr. HENSCHEL. All right, gentlemen.

Now, gentlemen, I want to tell you something, inasmuch as I happen to know some of these people, as I said I am one of the oldest in the business, and I don't know if you have checked on me, but you will find that my reputation is above par. There is an article in the paper which I thought was very bad. I have built up prestige all my life, for 37 years.

Mr. HALLEY. What paper was that in, Mr. Henschel?

Mr. HENSCHEL. The Daily Mirror. Isn't that a shame?

Mr. SCHWARTZ. It made reference in the article, relating to—

Mr. HENSCHEL. They all know where I am today because they read it. If I violated the law I would want to pay the penalty.

The CHAIRMAN. What did the article say?

Mr. HENSCHEL. Here is a copy of it.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. It is in the Daily Mirror this morning, February 13, 1951, and the pertinent portion reads:

Former Tammany Hall treasurer, Joseph Henschel, of 315 Riverside Drive, will be asked to explain the sale of a car to Mrs. Loretta Costello. Thus far it was learned the committee has no evidence linking Costello to the national syndicate.

Mr. HENSCHEL. Any time you gentlemen want me, I will be happy to come before you, and any time you think I am telling a falsehood, I will pay the penalty. I don't know anything that I have ever done in my life that was not fine.

Mr. HALLEY. Where they got the information about you, I don't know. Apparently they had run down a number of our witnesses.

Mr. HENSCHEL. Well, they put me right underneath Costello. Anyway, thank you, gentlemen.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Call your next witness, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. I will call Mr. Courtney.

The CHAIRMAN. Good evening, gentlemen.

Mr. Courtney, will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. COURTNEY. I do.

TESTIMONY OF IRVING COURTNEY, NEW YORK, N. Y., ACCOMPANIED BY JAMES RONAYNE, ATTORNEY

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, please?

Mr. COURTNEY. Irving Courtney.

The CHAIRMAN. Just a moment. What is counsel's name, please?

Mr. RONAYNE. James A. Ronayne.

The CHAIRMAN. And you are from New York?

Mr. RONAYNE. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your address, sir?

Mr. RONAYNE. 120 Broadway, New York City.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, you may proceed.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. COURTNEY. I am in the manufacturing of ladies' coats and suits.

Mr. HALLEY. Where are you located?

Mr. COURTNEY. 230 West Thirty-eighth Street.

Mr. HALLEY. Did I get your residence address, sir?

Mr. RONAYNE. I don't think you did.

Mr. COURTNEY. I live at the Hotel Picadilly, New York City, on Forty-fifth Street.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the trade name of your business?

Mr. COURTNEY. Courtshire Fashions, Inc.

Mr. HALLEY. How much of the stock do you own?

Mr. COURTNEY. I own 66 percent.

Mr. HALLEY. Who owns the remainder?

Mr. COURTNEY. Mr. Irving Sherman.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, 33?

Mr. COURTNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How large an enterprise is Courtshire Fashions, Inc.?

Mr. COURTNEY. Well, it varies. We have been in business 4½ years. When we started the first year we did about—these are just rough figures—we did about seven hundred thousand to eight hundred thousand.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do last year, in 1950?

Mr. COURTNEY. We did about a million and a half.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you make?

Mr. COURTNEY. Ladies' coats and suits.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been in the coat and suit business?

Mr. COURTNEY. Since 1929.

Mr. HALLEY. How long has Mr. Sherman been in that business?

Mr. COURTNEY. I don't know how long he has been in the business. I have not always been in business. I worked until 4 years ago as an employee for different concerns.

Mr. HALLEY. This is your first business?

Mr. COURTNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you work for?

Mr. COURTNEY. On my first job, that was with Siegel Bros., and my second was Morris W. Haft. Those are the only two positions I had.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you with Siegel Bros.?

Mr. COURTNEY. Four years.

Mr. HALLEY. And with Haft?

Mr. COURTNEY. About 10 years.

Mr. HALLEY. In what capacity did you work for Haft?

Mr. COURTNEY. Production man.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in charge?

Mr. COURTNEY. I was in charge of the suit department and selling.

Mr. HALLEY. For Haft?

Mr. COURTNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What salary did you receive from Haft?

Mr. COURTNEY. The maximum?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. COURTNEY. About $110 a week.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you could not have been in charge. That is a tremendous enterprise, isn't it?

Mr. COURTNEY. I know. We had several departments, the coat department, the suit department, several different departments. I am talking about 1944, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I am talking now about—when did you go into this business?

Mr. COURTNEY. I went in in 1945. I was discharged from the service and I left Haft's in 1940.

Mr. HALLEY. You left Haft in 1940?

Mr. COURTNEY. 1940 or 1941.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go back to Haft when you came out of the service?

Mr. COURTNEY. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You never went back to Haft?

Mr. COURTNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. When you came out of the service, what did you do?

Mr. COURTNEY. I went into business.

Mr. HALLEY. In what branch of the service were you?

Mr. COURTNEY. The Signal Corps.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you located?

Mr. COURTNEY. I was in Camp Murphy for 14 months. I was in Sacramento Signal Depot 14 months.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have to go overseas?

Mr. COURTNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether or not Irving Sherman had any previous experience in the coat and suit business?

Mr. COURTNEY. I believe he was in the suit business before he went into this venture.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his capacity?

Mr. COURTNEY. Piece-goods buyer.

Mr. HALLEY. Any other?

Mr. COURTNEY. And salesman.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he active in the sales field?

Mr. COURTNEY. Yes; he is.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did he gross in sales last year personally?

Mr. COURTNEY. Well, there are only three salesmen, myself, my brother, and Irving. We never grossed it. We have a grand total.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, Mr. Courtney, most people in that industry have a pretty good idea of who produced what, don't they?

Mr. COURTNEY. Well, every month it is a little different. Exactly, I could not tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. Does Sherman have any other business besides yours?

Mr. COURTNEY. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he give it his full time?

Mr. COURTNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You have a brother, do you not, Max Courtney?

Mr. COURTNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he in the bookmaking business?

Mr. COURTNEY. I know that he fools around with the horses.

Mr. HALLEY. I want to know if he books bets.

Mr. COURTNEY. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Who financed you in Courtshire?

Mr. COURTNEY. I had my own money before I left in the Army, too, and took some loans from my friends, and I have other brothers that I loaned money from.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you borrow any from Max Courtney?

Mr. COURTNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. None whatsoever?

Mr. COURTNEY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. From whom did you borrow?

Mr. COURTNEY. My brother, Dave Courtney, and my other brother, Sam Courtney.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to Sherman?

Mr. COURTNEY. Mr. Sherman got me my first job in 1929, with the first coat house which I worked for.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Sherman?

Mr. COURTNEY. I met him in 1929 when he got me this job.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you meet him, through whom?

Mr. COURTNEY. Well, my father knew his father and he asked him to get me a job, and that is the way it happened. He sent me down to see Mr. Siegel and he gave me a job. That is the business I have been in since.

Mr. HALLEY. So through your families you have been in touch with Sherman ever since?

Mr. COURTNEY. What is that?

Mr. HALLEY. Through your family connections you have been in touch with Sherman ever since?

Mr. COURTNEY. Yes. He used to come around—I saw him once in a while when I was in the service. He was in business, and we were going out of business.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, we have been trying to find your brother Max. Do you know where he is?

Mr. COURTNEY. No, but I do know he is in Florida.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see him?

Mr. COURTNEY. I have not seen him since December.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last hear from him?

Mr. COURTNEY. Oh, about 4 weeks ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was he staying in Florida?

Mr. COURTNEY. I don't know, but I can find out.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you do two things for the committee? First, please find out where he is and second, would you get in touch with him and tell him that this committee is very anxious to see him?

Mr. COURTNEY. All right? I will try my best.

Mr. HALLEY. How much time does Irving Sherman spend at Courtshire?

Mr. COURTNEY. He is there every day, when he is in town.

Mr. HALLEY. When he is in town?

Mr. COURTNEY. Well, he is only away 3 or 4 weeks, but when he is in town he is there all day, every day.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he there all day everyday in 1945, 1946, and 1947, when you organized the business?

Mr. COURTNEY. Yes, sir. I wouldn't say—he comes in and goes out, but he spends the greater part of his day at the business.

Mr. HALLEY. And his job is buying goods?

Mr. COURTNEY. Piece goods and selling.

Mr. HALLEY. In selling?

Mr. COURTNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have records and accounts which show the various participations?

Mr. COURTNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you draw a salary from the company?

Mr. COURTNEY. Do I?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. COURTNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How much salary do you draw?

Mr. COURTNEY. One hundred and fifty a week.

Mr. HALLEY. How much does Sherman draw?

Mr. COURTNEY. One hundred and fifty a week.

Mr. HALLEY. And do you have profits? Have you run into profits in the last few years?

Mr. COURTNEY. We have had profits, but we have never declared a dividend, because we were advancing.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never declared a dividend?

Mr. COURTNEY. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, as to your 66 percent, did you also make 66 percent of the investment for that?

Mr. COURTNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your total investment?

Mr. COURTNEY. Around $30,000.

Mr. HALLEY. How much of that was your own money?

Mr. COURTNEY. Ten thousand dollars.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you borrow the other $20,000?

Mr. COURTNEY. I borrowed some from my brother, Dave, around $3,500, and from my brother, Sam, $3,500, and my brother, Dave, who was with International Dress, he borrowed money from different accounts that he has done business with for 20 years.

Mr. HALLEY. And through them you borrowed $20,000?

Mr. COURTNEY. Not $20,000; I got $7,000 from my brothers.

Mr. HALLEY. From your brothers?

Mr. COURTNEY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And $13,000 from International's accounts?

Mr. COURTNEY. That is right; friends of mine.

Mr. HALLEY. With whom did you deal there?

Mr. COURTNEY. Where is that?

Mr. HALLEY. At International.

Mr. COURTNEY. At International, my brother, Dave, worked for 20 years as a salesman. He does the selling.

Mr. HALLEY. Which brother is that?

Mr. COURTNEY. Dave.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he any interest?

Mr. COURTNEY. He has half of my share.

- Mr. HALLEY. He has half of the 66?
- Mr. COURTNEY. He loaned me $3,500.
- Mr. HALLEY. Did he put in any money?
- Mr. COURTNEY. No.
- Mr. HALLEY. I have no other questions.
- The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Shivitz.
- Mr. SHIVITZ. No.
- The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Walsh.
- Mr. WALSH. Yes.
- The CHAIRMAN. Proceed, Mr. Walsh.
- Mr. WALSH. Do you know Mr. Lucchese?
- Mr. COURTNEY. Who?
- Mr. WALSH. Lucchese.
- Mr. COURTNEY. No, sir.
- Mr. WALSH. You never heard of Tom Lucchese?
- Mr. COURTNEY. No.
- Mr. WALSH. Did you ever hear of "Three-Fingered Brown"?
- Mr. COURTNEY. No, sir; the only thing I heard about him was in the papers.
- Mr. WALSH. But you do not know him in the industry?
- Mr. COURTNEY. No, sir.
- Mr. WALSH. That is all. Thank you.
- The CHAIRMAN. That is all; thank you, sir. Thank you, Mr. Ronayne.
- Mr. RONAYNE. Thank you.
- (Witness excused.)
- The CHAIRMAN. Will you call your next witness.
- Mr. HALLEY. We will call Mr. Rutkin.
- The CHAIRMAN. Good evening, gentlemen. What is your name, Counsel?
- Mr. COHEN. Jack L. Cohen. I am an attorney here.
- The CHAIRMAN. Thank you. Will you raise your right hand, Mr. Rutkin, and be sworn, please?
- Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?
- Mr. RUTKIN. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES RUTKIN, NEWARK, N. J., ACCOMPANIED BY JACK L. COHEN, ATTORNEY

- Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, sir?
- Mr. RUTKIN. James Rutkin.
- Mr. COHEN. May I interrupt for just 1 minute, please?
- Mr. HALLEY. Yes.
- Mr. COHEN. I do not want to take up too much time of the committee, but I do want to make the committee aware of a situation which exists with reference to the situation of Mr. Rutkin.
- Mr. HALLEY. Well, you did this once in Washington and it is in the record.
- Mr. COHEN. There is just this: At the time I appeared here and the committee was in New York on Columbus Day, Mr. Rutkin was at that time on trial in the United States District Court in the District of New Jersey, and I called to the attention of the committee at that time a letter that we had from the committee on September 28, promising us that that situation would be taken into consideration; that is, that he was at that time about to go on trial under that indictment.

Then when I was here on Columbus Day I had the promise of the committee that neither his being subpoenaed here nor our appearance would receive any publicity.

Contrary to that, on about the third or fourth day of the trial the fact that Mr. Rutkin had been subpoenaed here, and certain information as to the position of the committee with respect to activities he participated in in Bergen County, N. J., was the subject of very large newspaper articles.

It is impossible for you to estimate the damage that was done to him in that trial by reason of that publicity.

Our present position is that a conviction resulted that is presently on appeal.

In the opinion of counsel there are some very substantial legal questions involved in the appeal which we feel will result in a reversal and a new trial. In that event, we will be back where we were on Columbus Day. Any testimony given before this committee, particularly any attendance at an open hearing, any interrogation at this hearing, is bound to result in damage to him in any ensuing trial.

Upon that ground I have advised my client that it might prejudice—

Mr. HALLEY. We have gone over this. I listened to you, and you listened to me.

Mr. COHEN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you listen to me now, please?

Mr. COHEN. Certainly.

Mr. HALLEY. We went all over this in Washington and I read for you from the committee record, the committee just subpoenaed and sent for Mr. Rutkin, and you came in and made a statement that he was on trial and you thought any publicity during the trial referring to his testimony might be damaging.

The committee said that they would refrain from questioning him on the absolute assurance that Mr. Rutkin, the day the trial was over and from then on, would make himself available for questioning no matter what the outcome of the trial, and you gave such an absolute assurance. It was not conditioned on the question of whether the mere presence of Mr. Rutkin would appear in the papers.

It is obvious when a man walks into the witness room that the papers are going to see him. You knew the papers had seen him. They questioned him that morning before you came in here.

Now, you gave us a flat commitment and it seems to me that you are backing down on it.

Mr. COHEN. No, I am not. My commitment was that he would appear and he is here.

Mr. HALLEY. And that he would answer questions.

Mr. COHEN. You had better send for the record, then.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, if you think you have just merely committed yourself that he would appear, and not that he would answer questions, you certainly have succeeded in hornswoggling both the committee and me. He was here at that time and we did not need any commitments to get him here again.

Mr. COHEN. Well, if you will just look at the record, I said that I was not going to plead a man guilty to obtain an adjournment, or something in that sort of language. We were particularly careful to reserve any rights that we might have for the future appearance.

Mr. HALLEY. The testimony is here. We will take a look at it.

Mr. COHEN. You asked if he would come and tell us what he knew, and I said that he would be here.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I have a summary of the testimony, but I will get the testimony itself.

Mr. COHEN. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. This is the Rutkin trial. I want the committee's own hearing that was held here in New York City, at which Mr. Rutkin was a witness. Take this one back.

Mr. COHEN. For your information, it was October 12.

Mr. HALLEY. Let me read the summary which has been prepared, and it was certainly not prepared by me, but it was prepared by the Library of Congress who have no ax to grind either way. [Reading:]

The chairman and committee counsel agreed to their proposal that Rutkin not be obliged to appear until after his trial, on the condition he would be a cooperative witness and would not refuse to answer questions without having a good constitutional ground.

Mr. COHEN. I don't even know there is any quarrel with that language, but I would prefer to have the record made, or the record produced itself, in view of the statement you made that we had horn-swoggled you.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, we will get the record, of course.

Mr. COHEN. My position is that our trial has not been concluded.

Mr. HALLEY. That was not the condition. The condition was that the minute the jury trial was over, no matter what the outcome was, you would be here and it seems to me that you are backing out of the agreement you made.

Mr. COHEN. My agreement was to be here. I am here, and so is my client.

Mr. HALLEY. And also that he would testify.

Mr. COHEN. That was not our agreement.

Mr. HALLEY. We did not ask you to waive any constitutional rights, and that is as far as it went.

Mr. COHEN. Well——

The CHAIRMAN. Well, what is your position now, Mr. Cohen?

Mr. COHEN. My position is that because——

The CHAIRMAN. You have stated your position, but we are going to ask Mr. Rutkin some questions. Do you expect to advise him not to answer any questions?

Mr. COHEN. I have already advised him not to answer any questions that may tend to incriminate him. I only urged that other situation as another ground as to why he ought not to answer questions at this hearing.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, of course, I thought that we had been very, very generous in this, in trying to cooperate with you for what you thought was the protection of your client. But we cannot postpone this hearing any more because manifestly you have got the case on appeal, and it will be some time before it will be decided in the upper courts. It goes to the Circuit Court of Appeals; does it not?

Mr. COHEN. That is where it is.

The CHAIRMAN. Has it been argued?

Mr. COHEN. We are waiting for the Government to file its answering brief. It is the same situation as on Columbus Day; that situation is the same today; the case is not disposed of.

The CHAIRMAN. What we had in mind at that time was that your case was to go to trial before a jury.

Mr. COHEN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, you were here with Mr. Simandl, and Mr. Simandl said:

When you say "call him immediately after his trial is completed, do you mean he has to waive all his rights, if any he has?"

The CHAIRMAN. We are not asking him to waive his rights. We would like to know whether he is going to be cooperative or not.

Mr. SIMANDL. That is all right, Senator. So long as his rights are preserved, immediately after the trial is over, and you notify us, I assume you will give us 24 hours at least.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, yes.

Mr. SIMANDL. He will appear.

The CHAIRMAN. It will probably be in Washington, or perhaps back here, or in Philadelphia.

Mr. COHEN. Geography won't make any difference.

Mr. SIMANDL. But his rights will be preserved to him.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that right, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Then we have a stipulation that after 24 hours' notice at the conclusion of the present trial—I am not talking about appeal or anything of that sort—

Mr. SIMANDL. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Whether he is found guilty or is let out, you will produce him and he will testify?

Mr. SIMANDL. When you say testify, subject, of course, Senator, to any rights that he has.

The CHAIRMAN. But we want to say this: We are not going to put up with any cantankerousness in his refusal to answer questions, unless he has good and constitutional grounds for not answering.

Mr. SIMANDL. All right, Senator. I appreciate that.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that is very clear.

Mr. COHEN. Well, I do not see wherein we disagree.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you see that it was expressly stated that it did not mean any appeal. It meant the trial you had over there at that time, that was what you agreed to, so let us go on with the questioning.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mr. RUTKIN. 201 Midland Place, Newark, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. RUTKIN. I have been in the liquor business, and I hope to get back in it.

Mr. HALLEY. In what capacity have you been in the liquor business? What have been your connections?

Mr. RUTKIN. I was a partner in a company called the Brown Vintner Co.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were a partner in Brown Vintner? When was that?

Mr. RUTKIN. From its inception until it was sold in 1940?

Mr. HALLEY. And after 1940, what was your business?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, the company was sold, and we were looking around—that is, Joe Ranfeld, who was my partner then, my business partner, was looking for another enterprise.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. And since 1940 have you been looking for a business?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I wouldn't say that. Joe still worked for Brown Vintner after its sale, but in 1943, we had some sort of a—we had a falling out, and I have been more or less working on a civil action since sometime after that.

Mr. HALLEY. And you engaged in no business whatsoever?

Mr. COHEN. One moment, please.

(Counsel conferring with witness.)

Mr. RUTKIN. I cannot answer that on the ground that it may incriminate me, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, before we get into the incriminating or alleged incriminating phases, let me ask you point blank, have you had any legitimate occupation since the year 1940?

Mr. COHEN. I will advise my client to answer in the same way.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Let him either answer it or say that he will not answer it.

Mr. RUTKIN. I cannot answer that on the ground that I may incriminate myself.

The CHAIRMAN. This chairman is directing you to answer.

Mr. RUTKIN. Will you read that question again, please?

Mr. HALLEY. Will you read it, Mr. Reporter?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, would that take in as to whether I earned any legitimate money?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you state what it was?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I was interested in one thing, I recall the Tournament of Champions. It was a boxing corporation, and it was practically for the middleweight championship, and I sold that, I believe, I cannot remember the amount of money I sold it for, but I sold it and made some profit on it.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were your associates in that Tournament of Champions?

Mr. RUTKIN. Dave Charnay and Lou Spinelli.

The CHAIRMAN. Who? Will you spell it?

Mr. RUTKIN. Spinelli, S-p-i-n-e-l-l-i.

Mr. HALLEY. How long had you known Spinelli?

Mr. RUTKIN. Oh, I don't know, about 10, 12, 15 years, I guess.

Mr. HALLEY. How long had you known Charnay?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, to my best recollection, Charnay would be maybe 5 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to going into the Tournament of Champions?

Mr. RUTKIN. I will say 5 years.

The CHAIRMAN. Five years or twenty-five years, which did you say? Let us get that straight.

Mr. RUTKIN. Five.

The CHAIRMAN. Five years?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the approximate date that you went into this Tournament of Champions venture?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, approximately, I would say, 3 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you invest any money?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How much?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't recall. It was not a lot of money. It was mostly in traveling and expenses incurred, and so on.

The CHAIRMAN. Give us your best estimate, was it a hundred dollars or ten thousand dollars?

Mr. RUTKIN. I would say a couple of thousand dollars. I don't want to be evasive, Senator, but I just want to be as correct as I possibly can.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

Mr. HALLEY. Who brought the deal to you?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe it was, let me see, I believe it was Spinelli. He owned a soda company called—well, it was like Coca-Cola, it was on Long Island, in Long Island City and he had a big plant out there.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't mean Pepsi-Cola, do you?

Mr. RUTKIN. No. It was Nutri-Cola.

Mr. HALLEY. That is that lad who lived up at the Sherry-Netherland?

Mr. RUTKIN. For a while he lived there.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his name?

Mr. RUTKIN. Henry Marks.

Mr. HALLEY. Henry Marks?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. There is somebody else in there with him?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes; I guess they had quite a few stockholders.

Mr. HALLEY. Marks brought it to you?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, no; Spinelli did. He was associated with Marks in Nutri-Cola.

Mr. HALLEY. But Spinelli came to you.

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get Charney into it?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe they were partners.

Mr. HALLEY. Spinelli and Charney were partners when he came to you?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is right. They did not know what to do with it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you?

Mr. RUTKIN. I told them that I had different friends that I might be able to get someone to promote it eventually, and I spoke to quite a few people in the boxing business.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you tell him you would speak to?

Mr. RUTKIN. I spoke to Herman Taylor, a promoter in Philadelphia, Max Waxmann, Jack Dempsey's manager, I talked to Al Weill, who is the present manager of Madison Square Garden.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you speak to Frankie Carbo?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know him?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not talk to him about it?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir; because he is not a promoter.

Mr. HALLEY. Whom else did you talk to about it?

Mr. RUTKIN. The first one I remember distinctly I spoke to Herman Tell, we had been very friendly for many years, and I spoke to Chris Dundee. He is a fight manager and promoter.

Mr. HALLEY. You have known all these people for many years?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Would Charney, who is in the public relations business, know those people?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, Charney was with the Daily News at that time, he was a reporter for the Daily News.

Mr. HALLEY. You are going back more than 3 years then, aren't you?

Mr. RUTKIN. It was, I would say, 6 months prior to the Zale-Graziano fight, because it took me about 3 months to sell it.

Mr. HALLEY. In what year was that fight?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe it was in 1947. I may be mistaken.

Mr. HALLEY. Charney was with the Daily News?

Mr. RUTKIN. He was still with the Daily News.

Mr. HALLEY. How did he get involved in the thing with Spinelli?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened, in any event, did you make any money?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did you make?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe it was somewhere around five, six, or seven thousand dollars, something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Charney and Spinelli put any money into it?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe all they put in was their expenses, and one of them loaned some money to somebody to get signatures, to get the fight together, or something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Who made that loan?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe Spinelli laid out that money.

Mr. HALLEY. You put up the bulk of the money?

Mr. RUTKIN. No; I think Spinelli gambled about $1,500 or $2,000.

Mr. HALLEY. And you gambled about five or six thousand dollars?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir; about the same thing, about a couple of thousand, I would say.

Mr. HALLEY. And Charney put nothing in it?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't think he did, outside of his time, and what little expenses he may have incurred.

Mr. HALLEY. How was the profit divided?

Mr. RUTKIN. We each got a third.

Mr. HALLEY. What other legitimate—

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let me ask this question here. Where was the Tournament of Champions held?

Mr. RUTKIN. The boxing matches, Senator?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. RUTKIN. In Newark, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have several boxing matches, or why did you call it a tournament?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, it was called the Tournament of Champions, because they obtained the middleweight champion signature, and I also did get in touch with Zale's manager, who was a friend of mine, in Chicago. I cannot think of his name. He was a good friend of mine, too.

He agreed also that if he won the title he would sign to give another match under the auspices of the Tournament of Champions.

So it was something like perpetuating, you know, the middleweight championship.

So it was really something to sell.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have several fights?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir, just that we did not have any.

The CHAIRMAN. You did not have any fights?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the idea of getting together all those middleweight champions, then?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, the promoters put it on, the promoters that bought the fight business.

The CHAIRMAN. Where was the fight held?

Mr. RUTKIN. In Newark, N. J., at the ball park.

The CHAIRMAN. How many fights were held?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, they had the first one, and then they had the Zale one, he regained it, and then he fought Cerdan, and Cerdan won the title. I guess that was all. Cerdan got killed in an airplane crash.

The CHAMPION. Did you say it was for a flat amount?

Mr. RUTKIN. To the best of my recollection, I believe it was sold for about $25,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, during this time did you, and what was the first man's name, Spinelli, and Charney, meet and decide upon the thing, or did you have frequent meetings with them?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Where would you meet?

Mr. RUTKIN. We met a few times on Fifth Avenue, at the offices of the Nutri-Cola Co., and I believe we met a few time in Sam Salvin's restaurant, he had a restaurant on Park Avenue.

The CHAIRMAN. Well then, did you then travel around to see these people?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir, or, I mean yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You did all the traveling?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, the whole project was sort of a failure, wasn't it?

Mr. RUTKIN. Pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. It just fizzled out, didn't it?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You had rather high hopes for it originally, didn't you?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened? Why couldn't you put it over?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, it could of lost a lot of money, too.

Mr. HALLEY. Well now, look, you went in it to make money. Why couldn't you make money?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, there were several reasons. I did not think that Spinelli had the proper background to be a boxing promoter.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his background?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, he has been in trouble, or he had been in trouble during prohibition.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of trouble?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know, I was not intimate with him.

Mr. HALLEY. He was convicted, wasn't he?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. As a bootlegger?

Mr. RUTKIN. He was a bootlegger, I guess, but I could not tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, that should not have shocked you. You were a bootlegger?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. So you did not have the right background to go into the promoter's business either.

Mr. RUTKIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the matter? What about Charney?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, he was in the newspaper business, and in order to be a boxing promoter he would have had to practically give up his business, which he did do, eventually, to go in the public-relations business.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, even so, why couldn't you put this thing over? You apparently had certain difficulties when you started as to how you might do it, did you not? And you also had certain ideas when you started as to how you might do it, did you not?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, as I told you, Max Waxmann, I believe, is as shrewd as anybody in the fight business that I have ever met, and he said it was an out-and-out gamble.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, did you talk to Frank Carbo about it at any time?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't believe I ever spoke to Frank about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did either of your associates, to your knowledge, speak to him?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't it a fact that unless Frank Carbo was in the venture, you just could not get enough fighters to make it worth while?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I am going to tell you frankly, that if I had run into Frankie, I would have spoken to him about it. It was just that I did not run into him.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you have spoken to him about?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I know that he knows a lot about boxers, and I would have asked him what he thought about it. I would think that he would have a good opinion.

Mr. HALLEY. But you made no effort to find him or to talk to him about it?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What other legitimate enterprises did you have, business enterprises?

The CHAIRMAN. Before you leave that, may I ask this, I am very much interested in how these boxing tournaments are arranged.

Where did you know Charney first, and how did you happen to meet him?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I don't recall, but it was some kind of a distant relative business.

The CHAIRMAN. Some kind of what?

Mr. RUTKIN. Distant relatives. I don't know if it was through marriage, through his wife, or something.

The CHAIRMAN. You and he were fairly good friends for 5 years?

Mr. RUTKIN. Not fairly good, I just knew him, seeing him around Saratoga, mostly in the summertime, I would go up occasionally and see him around there when he was a reporter, and I would speak to him like I did to the other reporters up at Saratoga.

The CHAIRMAN. What were you doing up there?

Mr. RUTKIN. The same as everybody else, I would go to the races, and go out at night, I would lose my money and go home.

The CHAIRMAN. Was Charney related to your wife in some way?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir; I believe it was through his wife or himself, I don't recall what it was, but he spoke to me about it, he said it was through some relative.

The CHAIRMAN. You were not related to Spinelli?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you visit in Charney's home and would he come to your home?

Mr. RUTKIN. Charney has never been to my home. He was to my daughter's wedding 2 years ago, and I was to Dave's home several times, quite a few times.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you mean just social visits?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have any other business with him?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, Spinelli, isn't he the fellow, it seems like I remember his name, who was connected with the black-market sugar operation? Is that the fellow?

Mr. RUTKIN. It may have been, I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, what other legitimate enterprises or businesses or activities did you have between 1940 and 1951?

The CHAIRMAN. That is, what you made legitimate money out of.

Mr. HALLEY. Or even lost money on, but in the course of doing it, you were in a legitimate enterprise?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, up until 1943, for 3 years, we sold the company in 1943, I received $250,000 in cash from my partner, and for that I gave him a release, which I had to, from Brown Vintner Co., and himself, and I was just hoping against hope to get back in the whisky business, which I am sure I would have been better off in if I had.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that a reason for not going into any other activities?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, look, it didn't keep you out of the gambling business. Why don't you talk frankly to the committee?

Mr. RUTKIN. Why don't I what?

Mr. HALLEY. Why don't you talk frankly to this committee? I mean, you say you were waiting around to go back into the liquor business, so you could not go into a legitimate business. Therefore, I presume you were able to go into an illegitimate business. It doesn't make much sense, and it is not calculated to impress this committee with your frankness or fairness.

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I cannot answer that, because I may incriminate myself, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, there is just no answer to it. What is the real reason—well, before we get the reason, didn't you go into any other legitimate activities whatsoever, other than this tournament of champions, between 1940 and 1951?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I can explain that. In 1946 I received an affidavit or information from some associates of mine that thought I was in collusion with Mr. Reinfeld.

Mr. HALLEY. I am going to interrupt you, because you are not answering the question. I did not ask you why, the question was whether or not you had had any other legitimate activities, and the answer to that is either "Yes" or "No," and then you can go on with your explanation.

Mr. RUTKIN. To my best recollection, I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. All right. Now, will you give your explanation.

Mr. RUTKIN. In 1946 I was asked by a couple of my associates about something, and they gave me an affidavit—

Mr. HALLEY. Please name the people.

Mr. RUTKIN. Mr. Morris Kamminger, and Mr. Facher. As a result of the information they gave me, it was not that I felt bad enough to think that they would think that I would be associated with anything unethical in my partners, that I made quite a few trips to Canada, to Montreal, to the hall of records, and the courthouse, and I retained an attorney. I retained attorneys in Canada and also here in New York City.

Mr. HALLEY. What did they tell you that upset you?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, we purchased a distillery up there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is we?

Mr. RUTKIN. Joe Reinfeld and myself.

Mr. HALLEY. You purchased a distillery where?

Mr. RUTKIN. In Canada.

Mr. HALLEY. When?

Mr. RUTKIN. In 1931.

Mr. HALLEY. Go ahead.

Mr. RUTKIN. And they told me that I was away for a couple of weeks and—

Mr. HALLEY. When were you away?

Mr. RUTKIN. Right at the closing time of the distillery.

Mr. HALLEY. When did the distillery close?

Mr. RUTKIN. At the closing time of the sale, I am referring to.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. RUTKIN. In 1931, and Joe Reinfeld had told me that Sam Bronfman, chairman of Seagram's, got him drunk, and he turned over the distillery to him for nothing, and dollar for dollar, I said, "Sam is my friend, and I am going up and get it back dollar for dollar."

Mr. HALLEY. When did he allegedly turn the distillery over to him, in what year?

Mr. RUTKIN. 1931.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you buy the distillery?

Mr. RUTKIN. In 1931.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you mean that the transaction occurred in 1 year, that you bought and sold it in 1 year?

Mr. RUTKIN. The whole thing happened in about 2 months, I guess.

Mr. HALLEY. I see. What did you pay for the distillery?

Mr. RUTKIN. We had to give up 10 percent, I believe, to the man we bought it from, plus, I don't remember the exact amount, it was a brand-new distillery.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you pay any cash for it?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, we put up very little cash on account of the mortgage—the total investment was not much, right off the bat, it had reached $75,000 or $100,000.

Mr. HALLEY. And Reinfeld said that he had to give it to Bronfman for nothing?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you later find out?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, it was some years later, in 1946, when these other two gentlemen asked me up to their insurance office, and they asked me, "We want to ask you a question, if you don't mind." I said, "Sure, ask me anything you like."

And they told me that Joe Reinfeld told them he was offered 150,000 shares of Seagram's stock for the turn-over of that distillery, but he would not accept less than 250,000 shares. It was just sold, and when they asked me about it, they had the operators for the distillery ready. He had said, "Well, if you want to know any more about it, ask Jim, don't bother me." They said, "Did you cut the pie, with Joe? We don't want any money, we are just curious."

I said, "That is the first thing I ever heard about it."

So I started investigating, and Mr. Leon in Canada, whom we bought it from, he sued both of them for breach of contract, and so on, and I have been working on that, and I naturally uncovered, I guess it is like a bank clerk coming to work one day, and he is missing $200, and they go back over 10 years, and they find that there is $20,000 missing.

Well, there was a series of events right to the finish of it.

So I started working on that, and I eventually filed a suit through Hawkins, Delafield, and Wood, here in New York City, on Wall Street, in the Federal court in the southern district here, and after numerous hearings, before the trial examinations—it is on the docket for trial—and my attorneys have notified me that it is on for the February term of court.

Mr. HALLEY. What year?

Mr. RUTKIN. This year, this month.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't there some point at which—and there is no offense meant—wasn't there some point at which you went in to see Mr. Reinfeld and asked him to settle up in cash, in which you were said to have had a gun in your hand?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is what he said.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you say?

Mr. RUTKIN. It is ridiculous.

Mr. HALLEY. He did pay you cash, though. Now, if this is getting into your income tax situation in a way that might incriminate the witness on a Federal offense, I don't want to ask the question.

Mr. COHEN. At this point I have no objection to his answering your question.

Mr. HALLEY. Go right ahead.

Mr. RUTKIN. He gave me $250,000 in cash, in the presence of four attorneys and two accountants.

The CHAIRMAN. When was that?

Mr. RUTKIN. 1943, May 10, 1943, and the attorneys witnessed the paying of the money. He never told any of them he was ever threatened. He never told any police officer or district attorney that he was threatened. The only time he mentioned that was when he threatened me; his brothers went all over Newark, and they said that I was going to be indicted unless I settled that civil suit. I said, "No, I wanted friendly arbitration, and after they thought they buried all the bones, they said, 'If you have anything to arbitrate,' they said, 'If you have anything to arbitrate, do so legally'."

Now that I have gone through the trouble to do so legally, and I never sued anybody, nor has anybody sued me, I said, "We will have it legal."

So I was indicted the very last day, very mysteriously.

MR. HALLEY. You did get some cash, is that right?

MR. RUTKIN. Yes, $250,000, in the presence of—

MR. HALLEY. Did Zwillman get any?

MR. RUTKIN. He got $350,000.

MR. HALLEY. He and Reinfeld and you were in that distillery together?

MR. RUTKIN. No, sir; he had nothing to do with that distillery.

MR. HALLEY. How did he get into it?

MR. RUTKIN. He was not a partner. Joe Reinfeld and I were up there by ourselves.

MR. HALLEY. But where does Zwillman fit into this case settlement?

MR. RUTKIN. He was cheated out of that money, most of it, by Reinfeld, out of a settlement—you see, Reinfeld claimed he gave the Government $400,000, through a tax arrangement that he had with the Government, and it was an investigation, and he claimed that it cost him $90,000 in expenses and legal fees, and so on, a total of $490,000. He charged those fellows with $240,000. They had found out that he had deducted that from their share of the money in Brown Vintner's but in 1943, when it was found out that it was for his personal tax that that $490,000 came from, he admitted it and gave them that right away. That was part of the $348,000; it was all from Brown Vintner.

Joe Reinfeld testified he don't know who the $2,000,000 was for. They were all dummy names, but he knows that I was not one of them. He knew that while I threatened him from 1943, the latter part of 1942, his testimony was that one of the examinations, or at one of the examinations when I threatened him he was asked, "What did you do about it, did you go to the police or to the district attorney?" His answer was, "No."

They asked him, "What did you do?" He answered, "I spoke to my attorneys."

He was then asked: "What did you tell them?"

Well, anyway that they had negotiated with Mr. Rutkin's attorney.

Then he was asked, "Who is that?" And he named Samuel Kessler, an attorney in Newark.

Then he was asked, "What did they do?" He said, "We had seven or eight meetings, and I gave him $250,000."

He was then asked: "Did you tell your attorneys or anybody then, that you were threatened?" And he answered, "No."

He was then asked: "You didn't tell anybody?" And his answer was, "No, sir."

Only when he wanted to have me indicted. It is hard to believe, but it is so.

The CHAIRMAN. May I ask one question, Mr. Halley, before you proceed?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, certainly.

The CHAIRMAN. This $250,000 you got was in settlement of Brown Vintner, that did not have anything to do with the Canadian deal, did it?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is right, it was the Brown Vintner deal.

The CHAIRMAN. And the suit that you had filed was about the Canadian venture.

Mr. RUTKIN. As it is a continued conspiracy, right into the sale of Brown Vintner. Brown Vintner was a $20,000,000 deal, and he sold it for 7½ million.

The CHAIRMAN. How much do you claim he owes you out of the Canadian situation?

Mr. RUTKIN. All told I have suits for $22,000,000 against he and the Bronfmans.

The CHAIRMAN. Tell us about the Bronfmans. I have been very much interested in them.

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, the Bronfmans are four brothers from Montreal, Canada. They own little hotels up there. Now, if you want to find out more about the hotels, you can ask the Canadian Mounted Police, and they will tell you about the little hotels, and you can use your imagination.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it like certain types of tourist camps down South? Is that the kind of hotels they are?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I don't know how they are there, but only from what I read of hotels, that people sleep very fast, they rent them quite a few times during the night.

The CHAIRMAN. I want to explain that I did not mean to disparage all of the tourist camps, but there are some very few that are alleged to do that sort of thing.

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. Tell us about the Bronfmans.

Mr. RUTKIN. They have even got a lot of bad publicity in Canada. They have been accused of bribing Canadian officials or a Canadian official, and they have had big headlines in 1935 for defrauding the Canadian Government of, I think it was 5 or 10 million dollars, or something like that, by sending whisky barrels of water back to St. Pierre, because whisky is higher in tax there than it is in this country.

They sure did a very good job up there with the distillery.

We were their principal purchasers of whisky.

Now, we met them in Paris, there is Sam and Allan, they don't speak to the two farmers, Abe and Harry, or vice versa, but they control Seagram's. They have got about 56 or 60 percent of it, I guess, and they settled with the Government very, very cheaply, for a million and a half dollars.

They asked us at that time if we wanted to go in with them, with the company, that they intended to move it to this country.

Well, we took the position that we did not want to go in with them, because we had the outlet and not they. In the beginning of the whisky business, the first few years, it was who you knew. They did not believe in advertising these fancy names like people believe in today.

Mr. HALLEY. When you say "We had the outlet," who do you mean?

Mr. RUTKIN. Joe Reinfeld and myself and my partners.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, are you saying that the people who had the edge in the whisky business were the people who had been bootleggers and knew the retail trade?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir; I can explain it simply, Mr. Halley. For example, if Mr. Cohen here had a wholesale house in Milwaukee, and which happened, I mentioned at the trial one specific case, two of them in Chicago, the Old Gold and Gold Seal, National Distillers would not give them any credit. They said that they were bootleggers and they would only give them five thousand.

We knew that they were good, and we would send them a hundred thousand. We had the White Horse agency, and we loaded them with White Horse. If you were a cafe owner, and you wanted a case of Scotch, you got nine cases of White Horse and one case of something else. Well, when they had it they had to tell everybody how good it was and sell it, and White Horse for the first 5 or 6 years was the biggest seller as a result of that type of pushing.

Mr. HALLEY. Who in the New York area used that type of tactics, Mr. Rutkin?

Mr. RUTKIN. In the New York area?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. RUTKIN. I would say most of the wholesalers, outside of Austin Nicholls.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you give us the names?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, two of them are not in the liquor business, Lou Pappas, he was one of the big dealers, and he is in the television manufacturing business today.

Mr. HALLEY. That is a familiar name. Didn't he go into the television set-up?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, into the Teleking Television Co.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't he in there with Barman?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is the only one I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, never mind. I will check that. Go ahead, please.

Mr. RUTKIN. There was Harry Sweeny, and I would say, oh, there is a place in Long Island, the biggest operator in Long Island, I cannot think of his name, but it is the biggest wholesale house in Long Island. He pushed our brand a lot, just out of friendship. We would give him credit.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was that?

Mr. RUTKIN. They had unlimited credit with us, because we knew they were good.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was that firm? I am not sure you understand my question. Whose operations were comparable to Gold Seal in Chicago?

Mr. RUTKIN. To Gold Seal? Old Gold.

Mr. HALLEY. Old Gold, is that here?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, in Chicago.

Mr. HALLEY. I am talking about New York or New Jersey.

Mr. RUTKIN. New York or New Jersey?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. RUTKIN. I would say Reinfeld, Joe Reinfeld Co. in Newark, was the biggest user of all. He owns the wholesale company at the present time in Jersey.

The CHAIRMAN. Where?

Mr. RUTKIN. In Newark.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well then, there was Galsworthy Co. It was most all of the wholesalers give us a good push over there.

Mr. HALLEY. These were all people you had deals with during the prohibition era?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else was there?

Mr. RUTKIN. I just cannot think offhand. I know there was Charles O'Neill in Florida, the South Florida Liquor Co., he was our top pusher down there. He still owns it, Charley O'Neill does.

The CHAIRMAN. How about down in Tennessee, did you have any wholesalers down there?

Mr. RUTKIN. In Tennessee? Is that a State monopoly in Tennessee?

The CHAIRMAN. No.

Mr. RUTKIN. No, we concentrated mainly on the big centers. Outside of White Horse, when we first broke Wilson in, we broke it in New York, or rather, in New Jersey, where we were fully familiar with the business.

Mr. HALLEY. How was Wilson peddled? A little while ago you gave us an important clue, you said if you had people, wholesalers, who knew the bars, that they would just insist on the bar taking a certain number of cases, and then the bar had to push it.

Mr. RUTKIN. That was White Horse.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did that for White Horse in New York and New Jersey?

Mr. COHEN. You mean for Wilson?

Mr. HALLEY. First for White Horse. We will get Wilson second.

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe all the partners worked hard. I know that I did.

Mr. HALLEY. What wholesalers were willing and able to push it that way?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I could not tell you offhand myself. I can get the fellow who is general sales manager in charge of Greater New York, a fellow by the name of Ben Grade, he was in charge of this district.

The CHAIRMAN. What does he do now?

Mr. RUTKIN. Ben has got a wholesale liquor license in the State of Florida. He is in the liquor business.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, how about, what is it, Three Feathers?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is Schenley's.

Mr. HALLEY. No, Wilson I mean. How did you push that?

Mr. RUTKIN. We acquired that, and maintained—in 1936, I believe.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is "we"?

Mr. RUTKIN. Reinfeld, we obtained that very cheaply from Schenley. They made a bust out of it two or three times. They had a nonrefillable top, and so on.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. RUTKIN. We were not partners with Seagram's, and they agreed to bottle it at the Maryland plant, where they bottle Calvert.

We had a yellow label on it then, but somehow or other it just did not catch the first 6 months or 8 months.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you go about pushing it with the various bars?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I would say one of the salesmen, the best way is that he would go into a strange bar—in friendly bars they just naturally will push it for him, and he could even go into a strange bar, and if you give the bartender $5 and buy a drink and say keep the change, he will tell the boss that there is so much demand for that whisky, and he will keep pushing that product, until the next whisky salesman comes around, and he will do the same thing.

However, the important thing is to get the cafe to put it on the bar so that it can be seen. That is the important thing.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you have friends who were willing to push your brand?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You did?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And that was an important factor in the early days of post-prohibition era?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And those friends were generally fellows that ran speakeasies during prohibition, is that right?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. While we are still on this liquor phase, do you want to ask any questions?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes. Who is Doc Stacher?

Mr. RUTKIN. He is a friend of mine. He was a blind stockholder in Brown Vintner Co.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean by a "blind stockholder"?

Mr. RUTKIN. He had his stock fronted by unknown nominees, front men.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were they?

Mr. RUTKIN. There were quite a few. At the trial, the president of the company, Joseph Newman, testified that he was the president for 10 or 12 years, and the stock that was put under his name was sold for somewhere around $200,000, or a little more, and he diverted the cash to Mr. Reinfeld, after he had paid the capital tax gains on it.

So all the tax on Brown Vintner Co. was paid to the Government. They conceded that on the 5½ million dollars profit, it is all paid.

Mr. SHIVITZ. When you got into a dispute between yourself and Reinfeld, after there was a settlement, so-called, between yourself and Reinfeld, is it a fact that Stacher was your intermediary as between you and Reinfeld?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well—

Mr. SHIVITZ. And that Stacher called and said that Rutkin was not satisfied with the settlement?

Mr. RUTKIN. Something like that.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did that also apply to Zwillman, that there were settlements, one for you and one for Zwillman?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir; we all got the money at the same in the same office. It was brought there in one or two valises by Lou Holz.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Prior to that, Stacher had communicated with Reinfeld and said that you were not satisfied with Zwillman, is that correct, or was it after you got the $250,000?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't recall that, I don't recall whether he did or not.

Mr. SHIVITZ. All right. Now, at your trial did Kanningeiser and Stacher testify in your behalf?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Were you ever in business with Zwillman, other than the Brown Vintner?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I cannot answer that, because it could be. I had a lot of trouble on the stand there, in this way: I was asked to come before Commisisoner Bromberger here, which I did, and he asked me a lot of question, as to how many brothers I had, and all that business.

I said, "What does that have to do with what you want to ask me about?"

Well, he brought out at the trial, the district attorney, "Were you ever partners with Longy Zwillman?" And I said, "No, sir."

So he read that testimony, and in the meantime—oh, no, he brought the testimony out there, that I said, no, sir.

Now, here he said, "Well, you met with Zwillman?" And I said, "Yes, I met him."

Mr. SHIVITZ. Didn't you ever talk about business?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, once in a while, when I would say, "Do you know this fellow from the Astor Hotel. gee, he ought to be good user, if you can make a deal with him, and he could push our whisky." Something like that.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You are certainly going an awfully long way around to get home.

Were you ever in any business venture other than Brown Vintner? That calls for a "Yes" or "No" answer.

Mr. RUTKIN. To my best recollection, no, because I would have to explain it this way, I called at——

Mr. SHIVITZ. Why don't you come down to the point?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, it would be like Jack Cohen and I and you having stock in General Motors, and if Mr. Halley was going to buy a Ford, we would talk him into buying a Chevrolet. We are just stockholders. But I never made any business deal with Longy Zwillman.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Were you stockholders in the same company, to your knowledge?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What company or companies?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, in Brown Vintners. Now, I don't want to go back to bootlegging days.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Before you go back to bootlegging days, what company besides Brown Vintner?

Mr. RUTKIN. To my best recollection, I don't remember.

The CHAIRMAN. Then go back to the bootlegging days.

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, he was a good firm, and we merged on different occasions; we did business together.

The CHAIRMAN. What was his firm and what was yours that merged?

Mr. RUTKIN. He was with a fellow by the name of Eddie Seaman, and Stacher, and a few other fellows.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the name of their company?

Mr. RUTKIN. They didn't have any name. We didn't have any name, it was just a bootlegging company, and instead of using one clock, it was a question of putting on twice as much liquor, and we would each take half.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever invest in any stock such as the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How were you made aware of the fact that there were negotiations going on between Zwillman and Reinfeld?

Mr. RUTKIN. Between Zwillman and Reinfeld, in what period?

Mr. SHIVITZ. At the time you got the $250,000, and he got the $308,000, or whatever it was.

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, we were both talking about it.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Both, meaning you and Zwillman?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Where?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, in Newark, but we had heard different things, and I believe one of them, or myself, got part of it from Sam Cohen and George Goldstein, who are accountants.

Mr. SHIVITZ. For who?

Mr. RUTKIN. For the Brown Vintner Co.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And at that point you and Mr. Zwillman decided to take some action?

Mr. RUTKIN. We started investigating.

Mr. SHIVITZ. With respect to Reinfeld?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is right; yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And who do you know as the principals in that Galsworthy Liquor Co. that you mentioned.

Mr. RUTKIN. One fellow sold out, the other fellow sold out, Max Kufferman, and he now lives in Palm Springs, he is retired, he sold out his interests. He had a 50-percent interest until about 3 years ago.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Were you ever in any venture and associated with Irving Haim?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir. I know Irving Haim. I never had any business dealings with him.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Or with Phil Kessler?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever buy any of their goods?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Or sell any?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Frank Costello?

Mr. RUTKIN. I would say 20 or 25 years, something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in any business relationships with him?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir; none whatever.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, when we got into all this liquor stuff, we did that because you were explaining why you had never got into a legitimate business, except the Tournament of Champions. I presume the liquor problem came up in 1946, you first found out about it?

Mr. RUTKIN. About that; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. As a result of finding that out, you gave up all thought of legitimate business, and devoted yourself to a lawsuit, is that right?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I have interviewed hundreds of witnesses and had a lot of depositions, and so forth. I was convicted actually of not being a partner in Brown Vintner, when there is probably 5,000 people around the country who know that I was, such as Billy Rose, and Walter Winchell, and I don't know how many other people I met in the office, and they knew I was a partner, but those were people that I did not want to call in on a criminal trial. When I get to a civil case, that will be another thing.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get involved with this G. & R. Trading Co.?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know, it was just one of them things, and I quit.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you were in there for a year, is that right?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't think it was that long.

Mr. HALLEY. From April 11, 1945, to April 10, 1946, was the period of operation, with a net profit stated on the books of $255,271, is that your recollection of it?

Mr. RUTKIN. I could not recall it.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you tell the committee about that transaction? It would be very helpful to have one witness who would just sit down and tell the committee the story.

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I am in enough trouble with a suit going on, and I am so busy. I was in Florida for 3 days a week ago, and I came back for this interviewing and getting depositions—I was down there interviewing and getting depositions down there, and I have got people in Boston to see, and I have got to fly to the coast and see Abe Lyman, and Mike Lyman, and different people.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I don't want to get you into any trouble, but you have no privilege against incrimination in the case of a State offense, but even more so, this thing, all the records and everything I know show that you were out by April of 1946. There is nothing that I have that shows that you were in after that, and I don't think that anybody is going to go after you for that, because the statute of limitations has run. You can really help this committee—

Mr. COHEN. I would like to say this, unfortunately we do not feel that the statute of limitations protects us. We have a situation where any time they want to, upon information we might furnish in answer to your questions about this situation, they can get a superseding conspiracy indictment, which will affect us, if the conspiracy is still in duration, and it may very well be from what is going on in Bergen today, even if we dropped out of the conspiracy 5 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, there is no point arguing about the law.

Mr. COHEN. I am merely trying to indicate why we have a reluctance to tell you about this.

Mr. HALLEY. We had better get down to the question of what he is to get into, the very dubious chance of getting indicted in New Jersey—and nobody ever seems to get indicted there—or the very definite thing that this committee will insist upon this answer.

So I will proceed.

Do you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. RUTKIN. Oh, I would guess 15 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you first meet him?

Mr. RUTKIN. I could not state exactly where, probably New York City.

Mr. HALLEY. Who first introduced you to him?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't recall that, either. It was just an incident. It was probably in a cafe, or something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business relationships with Joe Adonis?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I am sorry, but I respectfully will have to decline to answer that on the grounds that it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not a fact that between April 11, 1945, and April 10, 1946, you participated in a company known as the G. & R. Trading Co. with Joe Adonis?

Mr. RUTKIN. It was part of that time, somewhere around that time, I don't know exactly.

Mr. HALLEY. Who first brought the G. & R. deal to your attention?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever talk to Joe Adonis about it?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't believe I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever talk to Moretti about it?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever talk to Tony Guarini about it?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't recall if I did or not. I may have, I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever talk to Jerry Catena about it?

Mr. RUTKIN. I think I did; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you tell the committee what discussion you had with Jerry Catena?

The CHAIRMAN. I would like to know how these things get formed.

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, Senator, from going around in places, you see people gambling at Saratoga and various places, and I had a place for a few weeks the prior year in 1944 by myself, and it was not successful, but it was only open a short time. I figured, well, either the money was stolen, or I didn't know how to handle the business. The man I had to get me dealers didn't know, and I kind of, for something to do, I kind of sought it out myself, but after I was in it I didn't like it, and I didn't want it, and I just quit.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Excuse Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. That is all right.

What was there that you didn't like about it?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I don't know. I just didn't like it.

I guess the easiest way to explain that of anything, I have just started with the realization that I have two daughters. One was married a couple of weeks ago, and if you filled this room with money, there isn't enough money printed to have me do anything that is illegal.

After I was in it, I said, "As soon as this is over, I want to quit right then and there."

I guess it is like a kid having a toy. You want to be in something, and after you get it, you just discard it.

Mr. HALLEY. With whom did you first discuss going into it, Catena?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe it was Jerry, because I knew Jerry best.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Jerry?

Mr. RUTKIN. Oh, many, many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he one of the old Reinfeld group in the bootlegging days, and Zwillman?

Mr. RUTKIN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you know him?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I am older than Jerry, I think I must be 2 or 3 years older than Jerry, and when I was a kid around 20, there is a vast difference between 16 and 17 and a big guy of 20, like I was, so I just knew Jerry to see him around. I knew his brothers. They were all born and raised in Newark, I believe.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you come from Newark?

Mr. RUTKIN. I was born in Newark.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were raised there?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you take this thing to Jerry? Had he been in the gambling business for some time?

Mr. RUTKIN. No. I am not positive I took it to Jerry, but I think I did. It was just casually talking, you know.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, he was also a close friend of Longy Zwillman, wasn't he, and you, both?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And didn't you want to clear the thing with Longy?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir, it wasn't necessary to clear it with anybody.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what would be the reason for going to Catena?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know. I figured he could help me out, that I was not capable, I suppose.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he say?

Mr. RUTKIN. Because I had tried the gambling business once before, and it was a failure.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you go to see him first?

Mr. RUTKIN. I used to see Jerry quite frequently in Newark.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you first discuss it?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe in a barber shop in Newark, on Branford Place.

Mr. HALLEY. How did it come out, what did you say and what did he say?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't recall the conversation.

Mr. HALLEY. In general, did you propose something?

Mr. RUTKIN. It was just in conversation.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you propose that you might open up a game?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And did he like the idea?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, he said—well, we just spoke about it, and spoke about it, and spoke about, and finally it happened.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you fellows do about it next?

Mr. RUTKIN. Gee, I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. I see here that you and Catena had 20 percent each, and then 60 percent went out to the others, for instance, Joe Adonis got 30 percent, and naturally I am very curious to know how Joe Adonis was brought into the picture, and why he got the lion's share of it.

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I did not particularly want even 20 percent, which is quite a large piece in gambling, when you gamble. I was partners with a gambling place once in 1941, in Florida, and we lost money. Everybody else made money, and we lost money.

So I guess I just don't know that business. I just tried it again, and didn't want any part of it any more.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, now, you are not making much sense, Mr. Rutkin. In fact, you are not making any at all.

You were in a gambling deal in Florida in 1941. What was that?

Mr. RUTKIN. In Florida?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. RUTKIN. In 1941.

Mr. HALLEY. What business was that?

Mr. RUTKIN. The winter of 1940-41.

Mr. HALLEY. No, what was the name of the operation?

Mr. RUTKIN. It was in the Colonial Inn in Hollywood.

Mr. HALLEY. You were in the Colonial Inn?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. That was the time Joe Adonis was in it?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who had it then?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, if you don't mind, you wouldn't want me to incriminate people that have not been in the gambling business since, and never will be. They are perfectly clean. They are family men. You don't want me to mention that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, let's skip that and go on.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe one of the Lansky's was in it at that time?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir, Senator.

Mr. HALLEY. In any event, in 1941, you took a licking in a gambling operation at the Colonial Inn.

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And then in 1944 you took another licking in a gambling operation of your own?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, we did not take a licking in it.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you lost some money, let's put it that way.

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I don't know, I filed for a profit, but I don't think I made any.

Mr. HALLEY. And after those two bad experiences, then you go over to see Jerry Catena and say, "Let's go into the gambling business."

Now, that doesn't make much sense, does it?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I don't know.

Mr. COHEN. Off the record, Tommy Manville married seven times.

The CHAIRMAN. I think the thing is this, that you figured if you got Joe Adonis and Longy Zwillman and this fellow Arthur Longano, if you had those sort of people in it, you might do better, is that the idea?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe Longano was not in it.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you got Guarini to run it?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Whose idea was it to get Guarini?

Mr. RUTKIN. I would only be guessing now, I would not know.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, give us your best guess.

Mr. RUTKIN. If I knew I would tell you. There would be no reason for me not to tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. May we have your best guess?

Mr. RUTKIN. It would be foolish for me to guess, I really don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you initiated this gambling house, and you saw or you spoke to Catena, and then you get vague about it. It just doesn't add up. The thing must have made some impression on you, according to your tax returns you made $51,000 out of it, which I presume is more than you have made in anything else since 1940?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, the question is I don't remember who suggested him to run it, but I know that he is a good operator, even by reputation he is a good operator.

Mr. HALLEY. The question is, Who brought him in?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Who brought Sal Moretti in?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't remember that.

Mr. HALLEY. Don't you see how it looks? You decide that you want to run a gambling joint, and you get Jerry Catena, who is Zwillman's good friend, and you get Moretti, who is a brother of Willie, and you get Joe Adonis, who is Joe Adonis, and the real question comes up as to whether you were not pretty close to Frank Costello.

Then the second real question comes up as to where the money really went.

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know. I never spoke to Costello about it. The times I was there I never saw him there, I can tell you that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, let's go on as to why Sal Moretti was brought into it.

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Mr. Rutkin, you are a pretty smart fellow.

Mr. RUTKIN. No, I would say that I am pretty stupid.

Mr. HALLEY. When somebody pays me $250,000 to settle anything, I will argue with you about how smart you are, for my money you are pretty smart. Now, I cannot conceive of you getting into anything as big as this operation and not knowing more than you say you know. It just seems to me that you are not being frank with this committee.

Mr. RUTKIN. I am trying to be as frank as I can be.

Mr. HALLEY. As you can be, with what limitations?

Mr. RUTKIN. I do not want to guess, and you know it would be all guesswork.

Mr. HALLEY. Let me ask you a question: In the year 1946 there was a lot of cash money floating around New York, was there not?

Mr. RUTKIN. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. HALLEY. And people would come over to this gambling place with a lot of cash in their pockets?

Mr. RUTKIN. There is no doubt about that either.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you say that more people would go home with cash than would come in with cash?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, that would be a hard thing to figure out. I never stopped to figure that one out, but there is a great possibility that that would be so, because many people have a tendency to win a little bit and then run, rather than to lose a lot.

So you may have 20 winners and 6 losers, and 6 may lose more than the 20 who run, so that could be.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right, and the fellow who cashes the checks is the loser, is he not?

Mr. RUTKIN. He is one of the fellows who loses plenty.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right. Nobody comes over with a little money with the intention of cashing a check.

Mr. RUTKIN. I would say that is about right.

Mr. HALLEY. What is troubling me is, during one period of this more or less continuous operation, as your counsel has said, though you got out, so far as I can see, in the beginning of 1946, checks were being cashed at the rate of a million dollars a month, and it would seem to me that if that many checks were being cashed, the profits from the operation, at least during that period, must have been awfully large. Cashing a million bucks in checks a month, I would think the profits would be tremendous. You must have been making a lot of money, don't you think so, Mr. Rutkin?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I have a brother in the fur business here in New York City, and he told me that somebody, he doesn't even gamble, he was in Florida, and somebody came to visit him. I don't think he ever got a speeding ticket in his life. He is a very, very fine and honorable man, and he cashed a check in one of those gaming houses there, because he discovered that he had left his wallet at home, in order to pay the bill, pay the restaurant bill. They knew who he was, but he had to cash the check in the gambling place. He didn't even gamble.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, that is not a typical example, wouldn't you think that most people don't leave their wallets home when they go to gamble?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, a lot of them leave with nothing and figure they will come back.

Mr. HALLEY. As you know, the restaurant was on the house at those joints, nobody paid the restaurant bill, at all?

Mr. RUTKIN. As a rule.

Mr. HALLEY. So that whoever was there was there to gamble.

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you conceive of $1,000,000 a month in checks being cashed, without the profits being very close to $1,000,000 a month?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Let me ask you this, how long have you known Jim Lynch?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe just to say "hello" to, it would be 6 or 7 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Was some deal made whereby Jimmie Lynch would take your participation in the gambling operation?

Mr. RUTKIN. I would not know.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you stepped out and then he stepped in. Was that pursuant to some arrangement?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir. I had nothing to sell, and I just said, "Boys, I quit."

Mr. HALLEY. Well, when you quit, was that when the boys decided to take Lynch in?

Mr. RUTKIN. I would not know. I never went back, I never went in there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever discuss that with anyone else?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Lynch is said to be a good friend of Costello's, is he not?

Mr. RUTKIN. I would not know. I never saw them together.

Mr. HALLEY. You never did?

Mr. RUTKIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you sell your interest for anything?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, nothing at all, there was no value at all.

The CHAIRMAN. You just said, "I am through"?

Mr. RUTKIN. That was all, and I walked away. I did not get 5 cents for it.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you put up any part of the bank roll originally?

Mr. RUTKIN. I am quite sure I did.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did you put up?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't recall. It wasn't much. I believe it might have been around $15,000 or $20,000, something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get that back when you quit?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir, I got my money out and I quit.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the total bank roll in that place, about $100,000?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe so.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever talk to Joe Adonis about the operation?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't believe I did. I don't think there was anything to talk about.

Mr. HALLEY. That was not mentioned at all?

Mr. RUTKIN. About that operation?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When you quit, who did you tell you were through?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, I told Tony.

Mr. HALLEY. Tony who?

Mr. RUTKIN. Tony Guarini, out in the office, and Blacky, the cashier. Let me see. I spoke to Jerry, and Jerry asked me, "Why do you want to quit?" I said, "Jerry, I just want to get out of that business. I don't want to be in it."

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you ever talk to any of the partners with any real influence? For instance, you are always telling us about talking to Guarini and Catena. Did you ever talk to Moretti or Adonis? What were they doing?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't recall, outside of the fact that I say Joe once in a while and I would say, "How are things," and he would answer, "Well, so and so." That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you see him out at the place?

Mr. RUTKIN. Sometime out at the place, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you spend much time in the actual operation?

Mr. RUTKIN. Some time.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do there? What function did you perform?

Mr. RUTKIN. I guess what everybody else did, you know, nothing just sit there trying to look smart, mostly look smart so the dealers wouldn't grab all the money.

Mr. HALLEY. You would just stand around and look like a boss?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. About the end of the day or the end of the night, I should say, who counted the money?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, they had the head cashier.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was that?

Mr. RUTKIN. It was this fellow Blacky, I don't remember his last name.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't any of the partners watch him?

Mr. RUTKIN. At times I did watch him, and at times other people did. There were always two partners there.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, who were the two partners who were there whenever you were?

Mr. RUTKIN. Not two partners, two people. Some one was always with the cashier when he counted the money.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Adonis ever stick around for that purpose?

Mr. RUTKIN. I suppose he did. I never saw him do it myself.

Mr. HALLEY. You never saw him do it?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, but I suppose he did.

Mr. HALLEY. But you did on occasion.

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Once in a while you liked to be sure that you were getting a fair count.

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And Guarini was generally there, is that right?

Mr. RUTKIN. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Catena there on occasion?

Mr. RUTKIN. Very seldom.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Sal Moretti there very often?

Mr. RUTKIN. He was there fairly often.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you say would be the contribution of, say, yourself, to a deal of this type? Why would they want you in it at all?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, probably because I knew a lot of liquor people, and all the liquor people have a lot of money, and it just seems like all the liquor people like to gamble. I never met one that did not. That was one of the phases.

I could not be every place and ask friends of mine to come and gamble. In fact, I told some of them not to, not that it wasn't honest or anything, but I just didn't like to see them lose their money, and then ask me for a loan of money, or something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. People generally lost, I presume.

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir; I would say so.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have anything else?

Mr. HALLEY. That is all.

Mr. SHIVITZ. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have any part of the People's Express?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you know about how the White Horse deal was worked up with Kastel, do you know anything about that?

Mr. RUTKIN. What do I know about it?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know anything about it, sir. I know all the agents, like the Big 5, was owned by Distillers of England, the Big 5 are, namely, names like Haig and Haig, Dewars, White Horse, Black & White, and Johnnie Walker. I would say that Distillers of England controls about 90 to 95 percent of the scotch of the world, and the little independent distillers, they buy from the Distillers of England.

They more or less fight each other, the Big 5, of which we were one, but in a friendly manner, to keep all the other ones out, the same as Seagrams. Seagrams owns eight whiskies, Four Roses and Lord Calvert, and the carriage trade is Gallagher & Burton and 7 Crown, and their advertising tells us that each one is the finest, there can't be nothing finer, and the others tell you the same, and they are all owned by the parent company.

Mr. HALLEY. And the parent company also owns the cooperage companies?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, the cooperage companies, alcohol, and distilleries.

The CHAIRMAN. Seagrams took over some cooperage company down in Maryland, didn't they?

Mr. RUTKIN. I heard so, and they bought out the Frankfort Co. with Four Roses, in 1945, for $42,000,000.

The CHAIRMAN. How many of the Bronfmans are in Seagrams now?

Mr. RUTKIN. Just the four brothers.

The CHAIRMAN. Two of them are farmers and two are businessmen?

Mr. RUTKIN. No; two were never farmers, they are probably retired.

The CHAIRMAN. I thought you said that the two that were farmers would not speak to the other two.

Mr. RUTKIN. The two were the original farmers of the company, Abe and Harry, and the younger two are Al and Sam. Sam is chairman of the board, and he is really a brainy man.

The CHAIRMAN. All four of them are still in the business actively?

Mr. RUTKIN. No; Harry and Abe are not active.

The CHAIRMAN. But the two younger brothers are?

Mr. RUTKIN. The two younger brothers are in control.

The CHAIRMAN. Where are Harry and Abe now?

Mr. RUTKIN. They stay in Canada.

The CHAIRMAN. They are all American citizens?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir; they are all Canadians.

The CHAIRMAN. None of them are American citizens?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir; none of them are. Of course, they make trips here for a couple of days at a time. They have stationary quarters in the St. Regis Hotel. Their offices are in the Chrysler Building, and Allan has his headquarters in the Ambassador Hotel, and Joe Reinfeld is the miracle man of all the whisky business, he stays in it.

The CHAIRMAN. What is his company?

Mr. RUTKIN. The Reinfeld Importing Co. from Newark. He cannot get a license in New York City.

The CHAIRMAN. Reinfeld and what?

Mr. RUTKIN. But his son-in-law, whose name was Levine, and he changed to Renfeld, and his office is here on Park Avenue. He is a distributor, because Joe cannot get a New York State license, so they don't give a lot of people licenses. But here is a man who was a convicted bootlegger, who threatened to have me indicated, and did, because I would not settle the suit, he has killed a revenue man, while he was a convicted bootlegger, and he was not indicted.

The CHAIRMAN. And the son-in-law has a New York liquor license?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the name of his company?

Mr. RUTKIN. The Renfeld Co.

The CHAIRMAN. There is something I would like to know. How did he get you indicted, do you know?

Mr. RUTKIN. I believe I do know.

The CHAIRMAN. I would be interested in knowing.

Mr. RUTKIN. Former Commissioner Joseph Noonan, whom I have known for quite a while, attended a few of the sessions and examinations before trial at the offices of Hawkins, Delafield & Wood, and at the offices of other attorneys—

The CHAIRMAN. You mean before the trial of the Canadian suit?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes; at the examination before trial, to determine if it was under the Federal court, to determine whether there was merit to the suit, whether it was a prima facie case.

The CHAIRMAN. Who employed Joseph Noonan?

Mr. RUTKIN. Well, Joe said to me, even after I was indicted, "Jim, why don't you drop this whole suit and indictments, get rid of that whole thing?"

I said, "Well, Commissioner, you don't know Joe Reinfeld. I have slept with him for 20 to 25 years. We went to Europe together—all over the country. We have been as close as two peas in a pod. It is not a question of dollars; I will give all mine to charity. You know this man through me, and you only know him 2 or 2½ years; so, how can you tell me that he is your dear friend?"

He said, "I didn't get any salary."

I said, "I don't care if you get a salary by check or not, Commissioner, but it is not nice, what you did."

He said, "Well, why don't you withdraw the suit and indictment?"

I said, "I will make a deal with you. I don't care what you do with the indictment, I will pull the suit out tomorrow if you will consent to an arbitrator."

Joe Reinfeld's father-in-law, who I don't know but I hear was chairman of the board of Haig & Haig once, and Kelly, the chairman of Distillers of England in charge of the United States branch—and I don't know him, only by reputation, but I said, "Let those three be the arbitrators in a friendly arbitration, and if I am mistaken, I will humbly apologize and forget the whole thing."

The CHAIRMAN. Was Mr. Noonan a practicing attorney?

Mr. RUTKIN. He is a practicing attorney in New York.

The CHAIRMAN. That was before he got to be commissioner or after?

Mr. RUTKIN. He must have been practicing quite a while.

The CHAIRMAN. I know, but had he been commissioner of internal revenue prior to that time?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir, and then resigned.

The CHAIRMAN. And then resigned. Was he an attorney in this situation?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know. I have met various whisky people who have seen him in Seagrams' office.

The CHAIRMAN. What was his interest in your suit?

Mr. RUTKIN. He came to the examination with Joe Reinfeld, and he even took and said, "Jim, can you imagine Noonan and Reinfeld being palsy-walsy?" Toots Shor said that—Toots Shor said, "He had nerve enough to ask me if you were partners with Joe," and

I told him that when I opened the restaurant "You brought them in every day; I knew you were his partner, and closer than that."

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Cohen, can you help us get this matter straightened out, just what we are talking about, if after Noonan was commissioner he came back to practice law, and in connection with a suit about the Canadian distillery that you had against Reinfeld, you entered the picture.

Mr. COHEN. He appeared at the pretrial hearing, and when he was asked what he was doing there, he said that he was there on behalf of Mr. Reinfeld.

Mr. RUTKIN. As a friend of Mr. Reinfeld.

The CHAIRMAN. Was he the attorney of record?

Mr. COHEN. They wanted him to enter his appearance at the time and he asked that they not do so, and I think he came to one or two hearings after that and then did not show up any more.

Mr. RUTKIN. I asked my attorneys to please leave him stay there as he was a mutual friend.

The CHAIRMAN. So he wanted you to agree to some arbitration with a statement that the income tax indictment would be forgotten about?

Mr. RUTKIN. Dropped, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Who did he say that in the presence of?

Mr. RUTKIN. No one, just he and I were in his office.

The CHAIRMAN. How was he going to do anything about the income tax indictment?

Mr. RUTKIN. I was really indicted—just think, Senator, what has happened. Joe Reinfeld stated in the examination that I had threatened him sometime in the latter part of 1942, and as a result of that threat he gave me until May 10, 1943, $25,000 in cash. That was for nothing, because I had threatened him and he was scared. But he never told the policemen about it or any official—

The CHAIRMAN. Just a moment. What I am asking you about is how Mr. Noonan was going to get the income tax indictment quashed or dismissed?

Mr. RUTKIN. I don't know how they do things; I don't know. I wish I knew.

The CHAIRMAN. Did he tell you how he expected to do it?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. He was not a commissioner then?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. But you would not agree to the arbitration, so they—

Mr. RUTKIN. No; I wanted to go to arbitration.

The CHAIRMAN. But you would not agree to these particular arbitrators?

Mr. RUTKIN. No; I suggested that he and his father-in-law—I suggested them and Mr. Kelly, and I said I would withdraw the suit, and I said "I don't give a darn what you do with the indictment." I said, "Any jury that will believe a story like that"—it sounded fantastic to me, but it happened.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, now, how do you think you came to get indicted?

Mr. COHEN. I can tell you that.

Mr. RUTKIN. Every saloon keeper in Newark said that I would be indicted.

Mr. COHEN. We know how it happened. There was an investigation by the Bureau of Internal Revenue with respect to this payment of $250,000 and the payment of $358,000, with Joe Reinfeld, and they said, "We understand this payment was made," and everybody admitted the payment was made. They said, "What did you make it for?"

Now, you must remember this was at a time when the statute had almost expired, and the time that the civil suit was pending for $22,000,000 and the time Mr. Rutkin said that he would not withdraw the suit unless they agreed to arbitrate it.

Whereupon, Joe Reinfeld gave the Department an affidavit—he said: "I admit I paid it all at one time, these three people got the money; they all stand for one, but I paid it to Stacher and Zwillman as part of their proceeds for Brown Vintner, but I didn't give it to him, I gave it to him because he stuck me up with a gun."

You see, he admitted he paid as partner to Brown Vintner and he would have waived any defense he had in the accounting suit pending now. That was his motive in making a goat out of one and sheep out of the other.

The CHAIRMAN. If it had been paid as a partner of Brown Vintner—

Mr. RUTKIN. Then it would not have been taxable; that is right. That was the gist of the entire matter.

The CHAIRMAN. A return on capital investment.

Mr. RUTKIN. On which the tax had admittedly been paid.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean the jury found that you got it as the proceeds of a stick-up?

Mr. COHEN. Unfortunately, we don't know, the way the jury was charged, whether that was a conclusion they came to or not.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there anything else, gentlemen?

We have been here for a long time.

Mr. HALLEY. Only this: Do you know "Three Fingered" Brown?

Mr. RUTKIN. No, sir, not to the best of my recollection. I may know him; I may know him if I see him.

Mr. HALLEY. Then, I would like to add this: We may call upon you in the next few weeks to come in here informally, even in the absence of the committee, and try to have you help us out on some of these questions that are still bothering us. Will you be available?

Mr. RUTKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much. You have been quite cooperative.

(Whereupon, at 9:30 p. m., a recess was taken until 10 a. m., Wednesday, February 14, 1951.)

INVESTIGATION OF ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1951

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE,
New York City, N. Y.

EXECUTIVE SESSION—CONFIDENTIAL

The committee met, pursuant to adjournment, at 10 a. m. in room 2832, United States Courthouse Building, Foley Square, Senator Estes Kefauver (chairman) presiding.

Present: Senators Kefauver and Tobey.

Also present: Rudolph Halley, chief counsel; James Walsh, special counsel; Arnold L. Fein, special counsel; Reuben A. Lazarus and David Shivitz, assistant counsel; Patrick Murray, investigator; Lawrence Goddard, investigator; and Howard Brand, investigator.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

You may call your first witness, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. I will call Mr. Ambro.

The CHAIRMAN. Good morning, Mr. Ambro.

Mr. AMBRO. Good morning.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. AMBRO. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JEROME G. AMBRO, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. AMBRO. Jerome G. Ambro.

The CHAIRMAN. Where do you live?

Mr. AMBRO. 167 Central Avenue, Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. That is in Brooklyn?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your occupation?

Mr. AMBRO. Assistant attorney general of the State of New York.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you held that position?

Mr. AMBRO. Three years.

Mr. HALLEY. You are an attorney?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you practiced law?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, since 1927.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been active in politics in Brooklyn?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Over how long a period?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, well, I have run for office more times than anyone in the State of New York, 26 times as against the Democratic machine. I am a Democrat, and I defeated the machine on 18 occasions. I was in the assembly for 9 years, a candidate for the mayor of the city of New York in 1933—Democratic candidate.

And I was also under sheriff.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you under sheriff.

Mr. AMBRO. Two years.

Mr. HALLEY. Beginning in 1935 or 1933?

Mr. AMBRO. No, sir; 1934.

Mr. HALLEY. Beginning in 1934?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Until when?

Mr. AMBRO. Until 1935.

Mr. HALLEY. As under sheriff, was that an appointive job?

Mr. AMBRO. It was an appointive job; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who appointed you?

Mr. AMBRO. Frank Quayle, elected sheriff of the county.

Mr. HALLEY. Under what circumstances did you start being under sheriff?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I supported Sam Lebowitz for district attorney as against the organization.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is the organization man?

Mr. AMBRO. A fellow by the name of Geoghan—I think it was Francis X. Geoghan—and I supported Sam Lebowitz. I promised him I would give him my support in the fall. He came in to see me and asked if I would support him. I supported him and I was asked to resign—either go along with the organization candidate or else resign.

Mr. HALLEY. Who asked you to resign?

Mr. AMBRO. Frank Quayle.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever discuss that matter with Joe Adonis?

Mr. AMBRO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Joe Adonis?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I met him in—well, the early thirties and I have not seen him since then.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him?

Mr. AMBRO. In his restaurant.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that?

Mr. AMBRO. At Fourth and Carroll Streets.

Mr. HALLEY. That restaurant was quite a rendezvous?

Mr. AMBRO. It was a hang-out for all the political bigwigs.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did he have that restaurant?

Mr. AMBRO. I do not know; I do not know. I know I met him after I was appointed under sheriff.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean you had not met Joe Adonis until you were appointed as under sheriff?

Mr. AMBRO. After that; yes, sir.

I met him through possibly four or five bigwigs. I just cannot single out which one it was.

Sam Lebowitz, who was running at the time, or Irwin Steingut, or Frank Quayle, or Bill O'Dwyer, or Frank Kelley—one of the five. Senator TOBEY. Is that the Ambassador?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. One of them introduced you to Adonis?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes; one of them.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his position in Brooklyn at that time?

Mr. AMBRO. He was a restaurant owner.

Mr. HALLEY. He had some political influence; did he not?

Mr. AMBRO. No, I would not say that.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what do you think? You want to be helpful to this committee; don't you?

Mr. AMBRO. I think this: That in my fighting the machine, the organization, they put me out of business. That is all that I can say. But I just cannot put my finger on where it came from. They sent thugs and tough guys and floaters. I caught up with 25 of them—voting, that is, illegally.

Mr. HALLEY. Just what happened? You were a district leader; were you not?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. In what district?

Mr. AMBRO. The Nineteenth Assembly District. I defeated the organization leader of the district, the man who had been organization leader for 25 years.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your area?

Mr. AMBRO. The Williamsburg section, the Bushwick section. I do not know if you are acquainted with Brooklyn. That would be around Broadway and Myrtle Avenue, and from Flushing and Broadway along Myrtle Avenue on the east side, to Stockholm Street, to the Queens County line, then the Queens County line back to Flushing.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you had yourself a good tough area; did you not?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you become leader there?

Mr. AMBRO. I became leader—I had three elections in 1 year; in 1 year three elections. Did you ever hear of that—three elections in 1 year?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. AMBRO. You did?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I had three elections in 1 year, and it was a Presidential year, and I ran in the spring primary, they call it, in April 1932, and that is when I was elected leader as against the organization leader.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was the organization leader?

Mr. AMBRO. Henry Hassenfluck.

Mr. HALLEY. And then you continued as leader until what year?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, I continued until 1936.

Mr. HALLEY. That was after you had been dismissed as under sheriff; is that correct?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, what did happen?

Mr. AMBRO. I would not say dismissed—not dismissed; I had no alternative. If I would go along——

Mr. HALLEY. You were asked to resign?

Mr. AMBRO. Let me finish, if I may. If I would go along with the organization candidate, I would be in the position. Being a disabled veteran, they could not put me out, but because I supported Sam Lebowitz, an independent candidate, against the organization, I had but one alternative: Either to continue supporting Lebowitz and resign, or to support Geoghan and stay in the position.

Mr. HALLEY. Why could you not just stay in?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I tell you, I gave the man my word; I was always opposed to the organization.

Mr. HALLEY. But why could you not stay in and continue to support Lebowitz?

Mr. AMBRO. The man that was sheriff was organization, and I was antiorganization.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he tell you you had better quit?

Mr. AMBRO. No, he asked me to go along with Frank Kelly and the organization, and I said, "Nothing doing; I would rather resign and stay with Lebowitz."

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did he say in that case you had better resign?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes; and I became Lebowitz' campaign manager.

Mr. HALLEY. You continued to be district leader of the Nineteenth District?

Mr. AMBRO. I was elected. Nobody could ask me to resign. I was elected by the people.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you resign from the sheriff's office—in 1935?

Mr. AMBRO. I resigned about 3 weeks before the primary. The primary would be in September. Lebowitz ran in the Democratic primary.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1935?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes; 1935.

Mr. HALLEY. And then the next election came around 1936?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, for the leadership.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is when you were licked?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes; I was defeated.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened in that contest? Was it that you had lost your popularity, or what was it?

Mr. AMBRO. No. There was possibly $30,000 or $40,000 that came into the district, and I did not have 30 cents, and they just bought out everything.

Mr. HALLEY. Part of the money came in in the form of cash?

Mr. AMBRO. You could see it coming in, when people worked at the polls.

You could see a hundred at each polling place working.

Mr. HALLEY. What this committee is mainly interested in, and you can be helpful——

Mr. AMBRO. I will be glad to do whatever I can. I am a law-enforcement agency, myself, but we do it a little different. We do not have anyone wait a week. A man like me, in my position, fortunately I have nothing to bother me, my conscience does not bother me.

Mr. HALLEY. May I ask you to hold it up a minute.

Mr. AMBRO. Well, you asked me for——

Mr. HALLEY. Wait a minute, please. We have a lot of witnesses and very little time.

Mr. AMBRO. Fine, fine.

Mr. HALLEY. For that reason I would appreciate it if you would try to answer questions and stick to that.

Mr. AMBRO. Surely, surely.

Mr. HALLEY. Now—

Mr. AMBRO. I have all of my income tax, I only had my income tax. I had no property or bank account. I never had a bank account.

Mr. HALLEY. I tell you, we are asking you to help us. We are not investigating you.

Mr. AMBRO. Well, do you not think that it would have been right and proper to have gotten in touch with Goldstein, who is my boss? He is a Republican and I am a Democrat. Don't you think it would have been fair if you had asked him? Everybody is reading about me coming before the committee.

My son just enlisted in the Air Corps, having been in New York University for 4 years, and he calls up and says, "Dad, what happened," that I am a friend of so-and-so and this and that.

I have lived 50 years, and I am a disabled veteran, and nobody can point a finger at me. I have been fighting the machine, and fighting crime, and corruption. I have been fighting crime and thieving politicians here. The least they could have done would be to call the attorney general and say, "We want J. Ambro."

Mr. HALLEY. Well, the committee made perfectly clear to the press—

Mr. AMBRO. Yes; I have an action against the Post, I started action against the Post for saying I am a friend of Joe Adonis.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you please let me ask questions?

The CHAIRMAN. I just want to tell you that we told the press that the calling of a witness does not, in any sense, mean that he is under investigation, and the committee has just not had the time—

Mr. AMBRO. All these innuendoes.

Mr. HALLEY. To issue—we have not had the time to go through the niceties and we have had to issue subpoenas and have people come in.

When the committee sees the press, I will be happy to recommend to them that you are not under investigation.

Mr. AMBRO. That is all right. I want to do everything I can to help you. I fear no one.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, let us try to get down to business.

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And I will be happy if there is any problem involved with Attorney General Goldstein. I know that the chairman of the committee knows the attorney general and I know him, and I will be happy to tell him where you stand, and to tell it to him very fast.

Now, can we get on?

Mr. AMBRO. Sure.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry for any inconvenience you have been caused, or any embarrassment.

Mr. AMBRO. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. I am quite sure it will come out in the wash very nicely.

Mr. AMBRO. Thank you

Mr. HALLEY. What happens when they decide to put a man out of leadership and defeat him in an election? What is the technique?

Mr. AMBRO. They usually get a line-up of fellows, men and women, too, and they have them illegally vote. You know, they call them floaters. They go in and possibly have a signal of some time. They control, you see. The polls, you know, have the inspectors, two Democrat inspectors and two Republican inspectors, and they are told as a prospective voter comes in, they are told to compare the signature when they sign the registration, that is the book. Well, these floaters go in and they just sign, they sign and vote, and they vote someone else's name. They are called floaters. Things like that.

Mr. HALLEY. The floaters are brought in from the outside, are they not?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, yes; from the outside of the district. Possibly Kings County or Queens County, or New York County, wherever they can get them.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course they have to be organized by somebody who has the facilities to collect these people and bring them in.

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And it is presumed that the kind of people acting as floaters, for the most part, are racketeers or minor racketeers?

Mr. AMBRO. They have no fear, they just walk in, brush by everyone, and vote.

Mr. HALLEY. You just could not get out on the street and hire 20 people who were honest and induce them to be voters?

Mr. AMBRO. I did not get your question.

Mr. HALLEY. You could not go to an employment agency and get honest people to do that?

Mr. AMBRO. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. You would have to be using racketeers and thugs?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. When they compare the signatures in the voting places, do they arrest the men?

Mr. AMBRO. They should.

Senator TOBEY. Do they?

Mr. AMBRO. No.

Senator TOBEY. Why not?

Mr. AMBRO. I do not know.

Senator TOBEY. Don't you have men at the polling place, so that where a signature does not jibe, to arrest the men?

Mr. AMBRO. Why, you protest, and you have the man arrested. You insist upon the police arresting him; at my defeat we arrested 25 of them.

Senator TOBEY. What did you do to the 25 you arrested?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, they come before a magistrate.

Senator TOBEY. What do they do with them?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I do not know.

Senator TOBEY. Well, you have got a case.

Mr. AMBRO. Well, you have to have evidence, and things like that.

Senator TOBEY. You have the evidence when the signatures do not jibe.

Mr. AMBRO. People are supposed to testify, they are faced with intimidation.

Senator TOBEY. All the testimony in the world could not refute the fact that the signatures do not agree.

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Then you have a case.

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Don't you get a successful prosecution?

Mr. AMBRO. Sometimes you do, sometimes you do not. It's according, it's according.

Senator TOBEY. Well, a chain is no stronger than its weakest link.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, in addition to floaters, you have mentioned that they put about $30,000 into the campaign.

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I will say that of course with 50, 60, or 70 working in a polling place, by that I mean outside, and they wait as the people would come along and talk with them, you know.

Mr. HALLEY. That is a tremendous amount for one assembly district, is it not?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes; you know that at the time I opposed the county leader, and there was a lot of trouble, and they directed their guns in their district against me.

Mr. HALLEY. That kind of money, does it come in in the form of a regular contribution to the organization, or is it just cash money that is passed around?

Mr. AMBRO. Cash money, mostly cash.

Mr. HALLEY. Nobody knows where it comes from, and it is just distributed informally, is that right?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. It is never recorded on the books anywhere, is it?

Mr. AMBRO. No, no; that you can bet on.

Mr. HALLEY. Where does the organization get the resources from to get that kind of cash, and the thugs of that time that come in?

Mr. AMBRO. That I could not say, I do not know. I do not know that. I do not know. The fact remains, you know, that they get it, and if you will oppose them, and you are not organization, they just don't go along, and you will find yourself out of business in a short time.

Mr. HALLEY. Where does Joe Adonis fit into that picture, Mr. Ambro?

Mr. AMBRO. I do not know where he fits in. I do not know. I know most everyone that is anybody in Brooklyn. You could meet him in his place of business, you could meet everyone that was anybody in Brooklyn, in his restaurant, in his place of business.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean in Adonis' restaurant?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, sir. Most anybody and everybody. If you mentioned, well, any of the well-known names, politically, I will tell you whether they were there or not. Most everybody. Well, Bill O'Dwyer, I mentioned him, he was there a number of times. Steingut was there sometimes, many times.

The CHAIRMAN. How do you know? Have you seen them there?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, yes; I have seen them there. Surely I have, so many times; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. This goes back a bit; does it not?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When was it?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, around the early thirties.

Mr. HALLEY. 1934.

Mr. AMBRO. 1934 or 1935.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did he hold the restaurant after that?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I know that I never went near it after 1935. Of course, you know my campaign started, that is, as against the organization.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, after 1935, of course, you were on the outs, were you not?

Mr. AMBRO. With Frank Quayle?

Mr. HALLEY. With Frank Quayle; yes.

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he very close to Adonis?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, he used to be there quite regularly.

Mr. HALLEY. At the restaurant?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, sir; quite regular.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course Adonis was always there?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, sure; certainly.

Mr. HALLEY. Were they on a pretty friendly basis?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, yes; very friendly, very friendly.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, you say you first met Adonis, you met him for the first time after you became under sheriff; is that right?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Who recommended you for the post of under sheriff? How did you get that job?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I will tell you. I supported Joe McKee for mayor of the city of New York on the Recovery ticket, and Frank Quayle on the Recovery ticket, and I was one of the six Democratic leaders that supported the Recovery Party. That is, I can enlighten you a little more, if you ask me a few questions along those lines.

Mr. HALLEY. How did the Recovery Party come about?

Mr. AMBRO. You see, John Patrick O'Brien was the Democratic organization candidate for mayor and I opposed him in the Democratic primaries. I was defeated by him for mayor in September.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you had built up your position by being a hard fighter, and a sort of insurgent, is that right?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right. And then you know that he, being the Democratic organization candidate, there was an independent candidate ran, Joseph B. McKee, on the Recovery ticket. It was a new party that came into existence.

Mr. HALLEY. And that of course appealed to you.

Mr. AMBRO. And I, with Frank Quayle and Hymie Shortnstein, and Frank Sinnott, who is now the county leader, we came out in support of the Recovery ticket.

Now, Frank Quayle had been the Democratic candidate for sheriff on a Democratic ticket, and also got the nomination on the Recovery Party ticket, see? So, I, being one of the leaders, you know, they usually try to go—

Mr. HALLEY. Why did it come about that you decided to go along with Quayle and the Recovery Party?

Mr. AMBRO. I supported McKee, you see; I was very friendly with Joseph McKee.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you known him?

Mr. AMBRO. I introduced all of his legislation in Albany.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were in the legislature?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long had you known Quayle?

Mr. AMBRO. I just met Quayle then in that case, in that campaign.

Mr. HALLEY. Through McKee?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, we had our headquarters, you know, in the Hotel St. George at the time, and the Democratic district leaders that broke away from the organization went along with the Recovery Party, Joseph B. McKee, and we brought about headquarters in the Hotel St. George.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it Quayle who asked you to be under sheriff?

Mr. AMBRO. Quayle, that is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you talk to him about it at all?

Mr. AMBRO. About Quayle?

Mr. HALLEY. About becoming undersheriff?

Mr. AMBRO. Sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ask for the job?

Mr. AMBRO. I asked for it, certainly; I was one of the leaders because Hymie Shortstein had a position, Frank Sinnott was county clerk, they all had positions, and I did not have any position. I was district leader. I came out with the group and I supported the group, and I was appointed because, gentlemen, McKee had been defeated, LaGuardia had been elected, Fiorello LaGuardia had been elected as mayor of the city of New York in 1933.

Mr. HALLEY. You were undersheriff for almost 2 years?

Mr. AMBRO. Year and three-quarters.

Mr. HALLEY. How did the battle line form, so to speak, in this primary campaign in 1935, when Sam Lebowitz was running?

Mr. AMBRO. The organization presented a slate of candidates for the respective offices that were to be filled that year.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was the organization at that time?

Mr. AMBRO. The organization candidate for district attorney was Geaghan, and I just do not remember his first name.

Mr. HALLEY. I think he said it was Francis.

Mr. AMBRO. That is right; Francis X. Geaghan; for county judge, it was Peter Broncato, and it was Helen P. McCormick for registrar—

Mr. HALLEY. Oh, no. I am not too interested in the ticket. You said they were the organization candidates, and the question is, Who was the organization?

Mr. AMBRO. The organization?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. AMBRO. Well, Geaghan was the organization candidate.

Mr. HALLEY. But who was the organization that put him forward; who were the individuals?

Mr. AMBRO. The Democratic organization of Kings County.

Mr. HALLEY. But who were the individuals who controlled the regular Democratic organization?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, they have a county leader.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was the leader?

Mr. AMBRO. The leader at the time was John H. McCooley—oh, excuse me, please. He was the leader when Frank Quayle ran for sheriff.

Now, in the fight against the organization of 1935, John H. McCooey had died in 1934, January of 1934, and in 1935 there was a triumvirate of three leaders.

There was a man who represented the ninth assembly district, there was Frank Sinnott and Frank Kelly. You see, there was a triumvirate, because the county leader had died, and there was a triumvirate.

I do not know whether at that time—I am a little bit hazy about that, but I am trying to think now, and I am almost sure that just about that time Frank Kelly, Francis V. Kelly, who was he leader of the fourth assembly district of Kings County, became the county leader and they presented a slate, they had a meeting of the executive committee, the State committee—I mean the district leaders—and they presented a slate, so he presented a slate, of Francis X. Geaghan.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were the three leaders of the triumvirate?

Mr. AMBRO. Wogan, Frank Sinnott, and Frank Kelly. Wogan was the leader of the ninth assembly district of Kings County—

Mr. HALLEY. I just want their names.

Mr. AMBRO. Wogan, Sinnott, and Kelly.

Mr. HALLEY. And Kelly?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, you said if I gave you names, you could tell me the people who frequented Adonis' restaurant.

Mr. AMBRO. Sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Were Wogan and Sinnott and Kelly among the people who were frequenting Adonis' restaurant?

Mr. AMBRO. Kelly, often; Wogan, now and then; I do not ever remember seeing Sinnott there.

Mr. HALLEY. Sinnott was not close to Adonis?

Mr. AMBRO. No, no, never there, never there.

Mr. HALLEY. Wogan was there once in awhile.

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And Kelly was really close to Adonis, you say?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were they good friends?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, very good friends.

Mr. HALLEY. In addition to that, Frank Quayle was a good friend?

Mr. AMBRO. He was there often. I do not know whether he was a good friend, but he was there often.

Mr. HALLEY. How many of the other leaders in Brooklyn were there often? Can you name some more?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I can name—well, let's go down the line, if you have a few minutes' time.

Mr. HALLEY. Sure.

Mr. AMBRO. The first assembly district, now we are going back 20 years—that was Frank Quayle.

The second assembly district was a fellow by the name of Tom Ryan, who was with the Department of Justice, but he was district leader. He would be there.

Mr. HALLEY. When you say he would be there, you mean he also was a frequenter of the Adonis restaurant?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, sir.

The third assembly district was Congressman Cullen. He was the leader of the third assembly district and Congressman of that congressional district. He would be there now and then.

The fourth assembly district, Frank Kelly, yes.

The fifth assembly District was a man by the name of Sexton. I never saw him there. He is dead now.

The sixth assembly district, there was a fellow who was deputy hospital commissioner, I just do not remember his name.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he a friend of Adonis, too?

Mr. AMBRO. No, no, I imagine he was there once in awhile, you know.

Mr. HALLEY. Incidentally, that restaurant at Carroll and Fourth Avenue is quite a ways off the beaten track, is it not? In other words, it is not right down in the downtown section?

Mr. AMBRO. No. I will see if I can give you a fair picture. Do you know where the Long Island station is?

Mr. HALLEY. I know where it is but get the picture for Senator Kefauver and Senator Tobey. I know Brooklyn.

Mr. AMBRO. I did not know that.

Mr. HALLEY. Give the committee a picture of it.

Mr. AMBRO. It is about 15 or 20 blocks, possibly, from the Long Island station.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, the point I am trying to bring out is, that Adonis did not have a restaurant that was conveniently located right in the middle of the political area.

Mr. AMBRO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. And if you wanted to go to Adonis' restaurant you had to travel about five blocks into a very poor section of Brooklyn.

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Now, the eighth assembly district, it was known as——

Mr. HALLEY. That was a real gas-house section, was it not, where the restaurant was?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, one of the poorest and toughest in the country.

Mr. HALLEY. And this particular corner of Fourth and Carroll was as poor as any part in that section?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And it was frequented by thugs and roughnecks?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, and good people, too.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, naturally but the good people were poor.

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And when all of these people you have been mentioning took the trouble to go out to Adonis' restaurant, they were going into a neighborhood which generally they would not go to when they were out on a social occasion, is not that correct?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, I will tell you, if it is off the record, I go most any place, if I can get a fine dinner.

Now, you know. I go to Sheepshead Bay. I have no automobile, and if I get somebody with a car, I go to Lundy's, and I get the best fish dinner in the country.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, Sheepshead Bay is a nice neighborhood with a lot of nice, fine restaurants.

Mr. AMBRO. But it is way out of the way.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, it is out of the way.

Mr. AMBRO. Sure, you cannot go unless you go by automobile.

Mr. HALLEY. The only point that I am trying to bring out, and not develop too far, is that it is something that just does not happen to be a very handy restaurant.

Mr. AMBRO. No, it was out of the way; it was out of the way, certainly.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you go ahead with the other leaders?

Mr. AMBRO. The seventh assembly district was Heffernan, once in awhile.

The eighth, well, I do not know who was the leader at the time in the eighth, because there were two leaders there. There was a big fight there. Mike Riley was in the assembly with me, Michael Riley, and James V. Mangano.

Well, Michael Riley, I saw him in there a few times. I saw Mangano in there very often.

Mr. HALLEY. Mangano is pretty close to Adonis, is he?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

The ninth assembly district was Wogan; yes.

The tenth assembly district—I do not know who was the leader of the tenth.

As to the eleventh assembly district, that I do not know.

Mr. HALLEY. Just hold on a minute. Adonis lived in Mangano's district, did he not?

Mr. AMBRO. I do not know.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, Mangano was in the eighth, was he not?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What area was that?

Mr. AMBRO. That was where the restaurant was.

Mr. HALLEY. At least the restaurant was in Mangano's district?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes, sure.

Mr. HALLEY. And by the way, did you know Mangano pretty well? Was he a good friend of yours?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, he was opposed to us in our fight against the organization.

Mr. HALLEY. And that was later, was it not?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes; but I did not know him before that.

Mr. HALLEY. During 1934 and 1935, did you not know him?

Mr. AMBRO. I did not know him before that, because he supported—excuse me—he supported John Patrick O'Brien for mayor of the city, see, in 1933, that is, the latter part of 1933, and in the election of 1933 he supported John Patrick O'Brien, whereas I supported Joseph V. McKee, so we must have been opposed to each other.

Mr. HALLEY. The reason I asked you is, that you were reported as having been one of the guests of honor at a dinner given for Mangano in 1935.

Mr. AMBRO. No; I was opposed to him at the time.

Mr. HALLEY. Which was a dinner at the St. George Hotel in the early part of 1935, in February.

Mr. AMBRO. There was a dinner given to me by the Democratic Clubs of Kings County, that is, the Italian Democratic Clubs.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. AMBRO. That was around 1934 or 1935.

Mr. HALLEY. At the St. George?

Mr. AMBRO. But not with Mangano, because Mangano and I were opposed to each other.

He supported the organization as district leader, and I as a district leader supported the insurgents.

Mr. HALLEY. You are not giving me a perfectly accurate picture, perhaps because it goes back a way, or I am not making myself clear, because I am sure you do want to give us an accurate picture.

Mr. AMBRO. Sure I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it not true that you were an insurgent during the 1934 campaign when McKee ran; is that right?

Mr. AMBRO. 1934? 1933.

Mr. HALLEY. 1932?

Mr. AMBRO. 1933.

Mr. HALLEY. 1933, that is right. And that then as a result of your becoming friendly with Quayle, you were appointed under sheriff?

Mr. AMBRO. Under sheriff; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. That meant at that point you had made up with the organization; did it not?

Mr. AMBRO. I did not make up with organization.

Mr. HALLEY. But Quayle was definitely organization; was he not?

Mr. AMBRO. After a while, after a while, because I will tell you what happened at that time; you see, you have to give me a little time.

Mr. HALLEY. Take your time.

Mr. AMBRO. At the time President Roosevelt—well, Frank Quayle became the dispenser of Federal patronage and I was against the organization at the time. Roosevelt did not recognize the organization.

Mr. HALLEY. That was in what year?

Mr. AMBRO. 1934 and 1935.

Mr. HALLEY. 1933?

Mr. AMBRO. 1934 and 1935.

Mr. HALLEY. Then Quayle made up with the organization, did he not?

Mr. AMBRO. Possibly after that, but while I was there—

Mr. HALLEY. Wait a minute. You know he did, because that is why you had a split with Quayle.

Mr. AMBRO. That is right. It must have been in 1935.

Mr. HALLEY. Quayle was going along with the organization?

Mr. AMBRO. In 1935, because he asked me to go along with the organization.

Mr. HALLEY. And at the time he appointed you as undersheriff in 1934, he certainly thought you would be going along with him in whatever he was doing?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't it Quayle's idea to get the use of the Federal patronage and his position of sheriff to work back into the organization and have an influential position in that organization?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I said that he tried to work along the lines of becoming county leader himself; that is what he possibly had in mind.

Mr. HALLEY. And he had to do that with the organization?

Mr. AMBRO. And building up his own, you know, he would take possibly two or three outstanding individuals in the district, and make them deputy sheriffs, or give them jobs in Reconstruction Finance, or possibly some other business, and built up his own personal machine. That is the way these things are done. I did not go along.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1935 Quayle was friendly with the organization?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes. The answer is, what did he ask me to do? He asked me to go along with the organization, and I said nothing doing.

Mr. HALLEY. At that point your fight had not developed yet, in the beginning of 1935?

Mr. AMBRO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. That came when?

Mr. AMBRO. That came about August, because the primaries were in September, the middle of September, possibly around the 5th of September.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, now, then, when you were given this dinner, that was pretty much of an organization dinner, was it not?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I remember the dinner that was given to me was when I became leader of my district. There was a dinner given to me by my district.

Mr. HALLEY. There were a number of honored guests at a dinner honoring perhaps a dozen people?

Mr. AMBRO. The dinner given to me was in 1932, when I became leader, and John McKee, who was county leader, was my toastmaster.

Mr. HALLEY. I am asking you if there was not a dinner in 1935, at the St. George Hotel, when you and Mangano together, with perhaps another 10 people, 10 or 12 other people, were the honored guests?

Mr. AMBRO. No; I do not know of that.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not recall that?

Mr. AMBRO. No; I do not. I know that two dinners were given to me in my life, one at Arcadia Hall—I do not know if you know where that is, but that is quite a big place—and they presented me with an automobile. That was back in 1931, in 1931 when I defeated the organization for the assembly.

Then in 1932, there was a dinner given to me down at the Elks Club, when I came to be district leader.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you not ever a guest of honor at a dinner at the St. George Hotel, together with Vincent Mangano?

Mr. AMBRO. No, sir; I was not.

Mr. HALLEY. I mean James Mangano?

Mr. AMBRO. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, to go on——

Mr. AMBRO. I have been invited to a lot, you get me right—I have been asked to speak at a lot of dinners.

Mr. HALLEY. How many of the other leaders frequented Adonis' restaurant?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, we were up to the ninth; Wogan. The tenth I do not remember, and the eleventh I do not remember.

The twelfth assembly district was Congressman Heffernan. Well, he never—I never saw him there.

The thirteenth, that was an undertaker who was district leader there, he was there regularly. I just cannot remember his name. He is dead now.

Mr. HALLEY. When you say he was there "regularly," how often do you mean?

Mr. AMBRO. Oh, well, possibly once or twice a week you know. Then the fourteenth assembly district, he was—he is the leader now, and he was the leader at the time, a doctor.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, was he there often?

Mr. AMBRO. Once in a while I would see him.

Mr. HALLEY. Once in a while?

Mr. AMBRO. I would see him there; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How often was Quayle there?

Mr. AMBRO. Quayle would be there twice a week.

Mr. HALLEY. And Quayle, when he went, would you go with him?

Mr. AMBRO. Sometimes; it is according. Sometimes I would go. You see, he had an official car, and he would go with his car.

Mr. HALLEY. And you would sometimes go without Quayle?

Mr. AMBRO. Sure, sometimes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else was there?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, we are up to the fifteenth now. Pete McGinniss, who was the leader of the fifteenth district, he was never there, maybe once or twice. He is dead. What is the use of saying anything against the dead?

The sixteenth district, Kenny Sutherland, he was there often.

In the seventeenth district, there was a fellow who was deputy commissioner of the department of sanitation. I just cannot remember his name, but he was never there.

Now, the eighteenth, Steingut, he was there very often. I mean you know, once or twice a week.

That is the eighteenth.

Now, the nineteenth assembly district was mine.

Mr. HALLEY. How often would you get there?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I would get there a couple of times a week, sure, that is, until that trouble arose, where I just did not see them any more from then on.

Now, the twentieth assembly district, there was a commissioner there, he died, but he was never there.

The twenty-first assembly, oh, yes, Hasterburg, he was borough president of Brooklyn, he was there a few times.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you mean a few times altogether, or a few times a week?

Mr. AMBRO. He is dead. You see, I can't say. I have seen him there a few times, you know. That would be the twenty-first.

Now, in the twenty-second assembly district, I just could not—what is the use, I am very opposed to Shinnott today, but why should I, I do not remember seeing him there.

The twenty-third assembly district, well, that was Dr. Maxwell Ross, well, once in a while I saw him there, once in a while.

Mr. HALLEY. Have we got them all now?

Mr. AMBRO. There were only 23 districts at the time. Now there are 24.

Mr. HALLEY. Talking for yourself—

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY (continuing). What was the attraction out there? I mean, why would you go all the way out there, say, twice a week?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, the sheriff's office was downtown and we would just go over there. That is all. There was good food and I would go over, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. You would certainly meet people.

Mr. AMBRO. Yes; you would meet most everybody who was anybody in the county there.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, when you were there, I would like to say this before asking you any more questions. That the inferences are pretty clear, Mr. Ambro, as to what went on and everybody pretty well knows it.

The reason I was very anxious to ask you to come in and talk to the committee—and I am sorry if it has caused you any embarrassment, and I will try to correct that—but we are operating not only in New York, but every other city in the country, and we have just not had enough time to take care of any of the niceties. I just asked our boys to serve a lot of subpoenas.

As you probably know, we had the head of the New York State police here. He is certainly not suspected of being a racketeer, either.

But I will do what I can to correct or clarify it. But what I want you to do if you can is to try to take the thing out of the inference stage and tell us what went on at that restaurant.

Were political decisions made there? Were there discussions of major policy, about who would run, and so forth?

You would expect that when politicians meet.

Mr. AMBRO. Well, you see, where I am concerned, it possibly was a different thing. I had beaten the machine, you know, and I had a lot of trouble with them, see? Of course, when I came out and take a few candidates like Lebowitz and Sabatino, and run them against the organization—

Mr. HALLEY. You never went out there again after you backed Lebowitz, did you?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. But while you were going out there, before you picked a fight with the organization, you had the best opportunity of any man who fought the organization to know what was going on there, and frankly, I think we are giving you a golden opportunity to tell this committee what went on there.

Mr. AMBRO. No, that I do not know. I just know that I would meet them all there—you would see them all there.

Mr. HALLEY. Would Adonis circulate around?

Mr. AMBRO. Sure, he would come to a table and sit down and say, "Hello" and talk.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, it was not a very big restaurant, was it?

Mr. AMBRO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you say it was a place where important decisions were made about political matters?

Mr. AMBRO. They must have. I cannot attest to that, but something must have happened.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes; people did not just go out there—

Mr. AMBRO. They do not go there just to sit around and have good food.

Mr. HALLEY. You can get good food closer to Borough Hall.

Mr. AMBRO. Yes; at Joe's Restaurant.

Mr. HALLEY. That is another Joe, is it not?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. That is Joe's at Borough Hall on Fourth Street.

Mr. AMBRO. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Joe Adonis' place, therefore, was a place you would go to, so that in addition to the good food you could see that things were going on?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, you would see the Who's Who of Brooklyn there. I do not know whether it was in the theatrical field, or any field, you would meet Jim Durante there, and in the newspaper field you would meet the editor of the New York Evening Journal; you would meet him there, and you would meet Jimmy Durante. Now, you see, everybody in every field of endeavor.

When I tell you it is so, did you hear what I said of Jimmy Durante, you would meet him there.

Mr. HALLEY. How often?

Mr. AMBRO. Maybe once or twice a week.

Mr. HALLEY. Who would he go there with?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I do not know who with. Now, that is almost 20 years ago. But I am giving you names of people who were there, and when I tell you that the editor of the New York Evening Journal was there, this will get right out of here, right to him, but I wanted to get here. He was there a number of times. I met him there. So I can go ahead and say they were talking about this and that, I do not know, but I know that they were there.

Possibly they liked the food like I did. Possibly they had some contract to be taken care of, I do not know.

Mr. HALLEY. What was Adonis' influence in Brooklyn politics?

Mr. AMBRO. He must have had a lot of influence there.

Mr. HALLEY. Why do you say that?

Mr. AMBRO. Mr. Adonis—well, I cannot put my finger on it directly or indirectly, but they knocked me out for no reason at all; they put me out of business.

Mr. HALLEY. What did Adonis have to do with that?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, you know, you have to set forth an example. Everybody knows that John Jones' wife is bouncing around with everybody else, but he does not know it.

Everyone else knows it, though. They send money, they did this and that, to knock me out.

Mr. HALLEY. How did that get down to Adonis?

Mr. AMBRO. Hearsay or whatever you want to call it, but the facts remain that all this money came in, and all the wise guys in there, the tough guys and the floaters and all, were in the district. I just scented that, and I saw it, and I knew that I was put out of business, but can I go ahead and say so? So they did it, but they don't work that way; you know how they work, they do not come before you, they work on the dock, they hit you on the back of the head. They work in the dark. They hit you on the back of the head. That is the way that they work.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you trying to say that the man who supplied the thugs, the floaters, and the cash money in the organization was Adonis?

Mr. AMBRO. I did not say that.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that what you, as an expert witness believe, Mr. Ambro?

Mr. AMBRO. I believe as an expert, yes; I believe they did it that way; yes, sir; sure.

Mr. WALSH. What was Adonis' relationship with Quail?

Mr. AMBRO. Very friendly.

Mr. WALSH. I mean, Over and above and beyond that, was it one of master and servant?

Mr. AMBRO. No.

Mr. WALSH. I mean, Did he lord it over him?

Mr. AMBRO. No.

Mr. WALSH. Did you ever hear him speak roughly or gruffly to Quail?

Mr. AMBRO. No.

Mr. WALSH. You never did?

Mr. AMBRO. No.

Mr. WALSH. Did Jim Moran frequent that place?

Mr. AMBRO. I never knew Moran; never saw him; never met him. But O'Dwyer was there.

By the way you never asked about O'Dwyer. He was there very often. I went over to see Joe McKee to have him made a magistrate with Kenny Sutherland. Now, that is something I did.

Mr. WALSH. Who asked you to do that?

Mr. AMBRO. Because he came in and asked me. He said, "Jerry, you are very friendly with Joe McKee, how about saying a word for me?"

Mr. WALSH. Where did he come in?

Mr. AMBRO. In the place there.

Mr. WALSH. What place?

Mr. AMBRO. Joe Adonis' place.

Mr. WALSH. Did anybody else talk to you about it?

Mr. AMBRO. No, sir.

Mr. WALSH. Did Adonis talk to you about it?

Mr. AMBRO. He did, sure; Bill O'Dwyer is his name, former mayor of the city of New York, see?

Mr. WALSH. Did anyone else talk to you about that?

Mr. AMBRO. No. Then Kenny and I, Kenny Sutherland, the leader of the Sixteenth Assembly District, and I came over to the city hall. You see, I was friendly with the man, as I said a while ago—I introduced all of his legislation in Albany.

Mr. WALSH. What was the name of the restaurant?

Mr. AMBRO. I do not know. I do not know that; I can't tell you; I do not know.

Mr. LAZARUS. How many years did you continue to go there?

Mr. AMBRO. How many years?

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes.

Mr. AMBRO. Well, possibly 1 year.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was that known as the Joe Adonis Restaurant?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Was it known that he ran it, or did he run it through someone else?

Mr. AMBRO. It was known he ran it; I imagine all the people would not go there.

The CHAIRMAN. When did he stop running it?

Mr. AMBRO. I don't—I think they closed down in 1935.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's get it better than that.

Mr. AMBRO. They closed it down in 1935.

Mr. LAZARUS. You referred to the bigwigs, and you named O'Dwyer as one of them. What was his position at that time that made him a bigwig?

Mr. AMBRO. He was—he had been a magistrate for 30 days; he had been appointed by John Patrick O'Brien for a 30-day period, and his term expired. Then Joe McKee had become mayor.

Mr. LAZARUS. He had been a magistrate before McKee appointed him?

Mr. AMBRO. For 30 days; yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. You mentioned other bigwigs there. Who were some of the others?

Mr. AMBRO. Irwin Steingut.

Mr. LAZARUS. What was your relationship with him at that time? Was it friendly or not friendly?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, it was not friendly. I was always opposed to his legislation in Albany. He had certain legislation that he was interested in, and I was always opposed to it.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was that your only disagreement with him?

Mr. AMBRO. That was all. That was all that I had.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Are there any other questions?

Mr. LAZARUS. I would like to get back for one moment to the Mangano dinner.

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. You were unfriendly with Mangano, then, at that time; were you?

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Would you be surprised if you found that you were listed as one of the guests of honor at that dinner?

Mr. AMBRO. I would be surprised yes; possibly as a speaker at one of the dinners, I do not know, but not as a guest of honor.

Mr. LAZARUS. Your recollection is that you were not present at that dinner?

Mr. AMBRO. That is right, where Mangano was concerned; it may have been for Sabatino; maybe you have reference to Sabatino, a dinner for him.

Mr. LAZARUS. It is possible.

Mr. AMBRO. I supported Sabatino and Lebowitz at the time against the organization, but not Mangano.

Mr. LAZARUS. There is one other thing that occurred to me while Mr. Halley was questioning you, and that is that you could not say that Adonis was supplying the funds to finance the campaign of your opponent. Now what is it that led you to infer that he did?

Mr. AMBRO. Well, I will tell you, the fellow that defeated me, his name was Joseph M. Marcella, he is collector of internal revenue now of Brooklyn, Queens, Nassau, and Suffolk Counties.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he a collector today?

Mr. AMBRO. He is a collector today.

Mr. HALLEY. And he is the fellow you think came in with the Adonis thugs and beat you?

Mr. AMBRO. Sure, now. So he was around there, he was friendly, they were all friendly. Another fellow that became a supreme court judge was very friendly, and Anthony Di Giovanni was instrumental in helping him become assistant district attorney, he is supreme court judge, he was down there very often. I asked you to ask me names, you know. I know most everyone, and they are all in high positions today. They are all holding high positions.

I am just assistant attorney general, that is all, but, fortunately, I have been fighting them, and I have been fighting them alone up until now, both the corrupt politicians and the tough guys, the racketeers or the gangsters.

Mr. HALLEY. Please just answer the questions.

Mr. LAZARUS. I have one more question.

You brought in the name of Marcella.

Mr. AMBRO. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. I ask you how you connect him with Adonis and what occurred?

Mr. AMBRO. I did not connect him with Adonis. I said he defeated me in my district, and at the time all these floaters came in, and all these operators came in.

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes; we heard that.

Mr. AMBRO. And all this money was spent in the district. I do not know where he got it.

Mr. LAZARUS. You would have the committee believe it by inference that from these circumstances you believe the money came from Adonis to finance the campaign against you?

Mr. AMBRO. I do not know where it came from. I know it came in, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. I have one other question.

Do you know Anastasia?

Mr. AMBRO. Sir?

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Albert Anastasia?

Mr. AMBRO. No; I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met him?

Mr. AMBRO. No.

Mr. HALLEY. That is all.

Mr. AMBRO. Do you want my income-tax returns?

Mr. HALLEY. Will you show Mr. Walsh the returns?

Mr. AMBRO. I only have as far back as 1942. I worked as counsel to the Tradeways Industry at $2,500 a year, and that is all I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Just show them to Mr. Walsh, please, on your way out. That will be all. All right.

By the way, what is Adonis' power there today?

Mr. AMBRO. I do not know. I do not think he has any power. Possibly he has an undisclosed operation, but I do not know.

They say he lives in Connecticut somewhere, so I do not know.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you very much.

Mr. AMBRO. Any time.

Mr. HALLEY. All right. Thank you, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you call your next witness, please?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes; we will call Mr. Bals.

The CHAIRMAN. Good morning, Mr. Bals.

Mr. BALS. Good morning, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Bals, this is Senator Kefauver and this is Senator Tobey.

The CHAIRMAN. How are you, sir? This is Mr. Halley, this is Mr. Lazarus, and this is Mr. O'Connor.

Mr. BALS. How do you do.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, sir?

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. BALS. I do.

TESTIMONY OF FRANK C. BALS, FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA.

Mr. LAZARUS. Will you give your name to the stenographer, please?

Mr. BALS. Frank C. Bals.

Mr. LAZARUS. What is your address?

Mr. BALS. 1945 Karen Drive, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Mr. LAZARUS. What do you do at the present time?

Mr. BALS. I am retired.

Mr. LAZARUS. What were you doing before you retired?

Mr. BALS. Well, I was a seventh deputy police commissioner in the city of New York.

Mr. LAZARUS. How long did you occupy that position?

Mr. BALS. Sir?

Mr. LAZARUS. How long did you occupy that position?

Mr. BALS. Oh, from April until February; a little less than a year.

Mr. LAZARUS. Of what year?

Mr. BALS. Of 1946.

Mr. LAZARUS. What did you do before that?

Mr. BALS. I was secretary to the department.

Mr. LAZARUS. And before that will you tell us something about your career?

Mr. BALS. Well, I started in in 1916 as a policeman, and I went up to the rank of acting captain. In 1940—I think it was 1940 or 1941, I think it was a few days before Pearl Harbor—I retired as acting captain.

About a month later I was appointed chief investigator for the district attorney of Kings County. I held that position for about—oh, for about a year, I think—and then I retired there.

Then I went to work for Paul O'Neill's Detective Agency. I only held that for about 3 months.

Then I went into the Continental Shipbuilding Co. in Brooklyn, and I organized a protective organization there during the war, and I was there all the time.

Then on January 2, the day Mayor O'Dwyer was sworn in, I was appointed secretary to the police department.

A few months after that I was made seventh deputy—

Mr. LAZARUS. Who was responsible for your appointment in the district attorney's office?

Mr. BALS. General O'Dwyer.

Mr. LAZARUS. It was a personal appointment?

Mr. BALS. Well, I will tell you, I am not too clear about that. That job was vacant and at the time I retired he wanted to bring me back there, and I think he made some arrangement with Mayor LaGuardia at that time to open that job, and I came back in the office to continue that investigation on Murder, Inc.

Mr. LAZARUS. Then, as I understand it, it was an appointment made at his personal behest?

Mr. BALS. At General O'Dwyer's behest?

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes.

Mr. BALS. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Is this general any relation to the Ambassador?

Mr. BALS. It is all the same.

Mr. LAZARUS. That was after he became mayor?

Mr. BALS. No; that is when he was district attorney of Kings County.

Mr. LAZARUS. We are talking about when he became a general.

Mr. BALS. We are talking about the chief investigator job, now; are we not?

Mr. LAZARUS. That is right.

Mr. BALS. He was district attorney of Kings County at that time.

Mr. LAZARUS. Will you describe your duties as chief investigator; tell us something of your duties there?

Mr. BALS. Well, at that time we were investigating Murder, Inc., and I just continued on on that investigation.

Then what slowed that up, of course, the district attorney went into the Army, and things started to just level off, and I saw an opportunity to do better for myself, because while I was chief investigator I was not drawing a pension.

When I went into private industry I got my pension and my salary besides. I mean, that was my main reason for doing it—was to try to better myself.

Mr. LAZARUS. Then you became a seventh deputy—

Mr. BALS. Well, that is after a number of years.

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes; after you went out into private employment.

Mr. BALS. Then I came back as secretary to the department. I only held that a few months, when they created the office of seventh deputy. They had to create that office; they had no seventh deputy when I took over.

Mr. LAZARUS. What were the duties of the seventh deputy when you were there?

Mr. BALS. I had men assigned to me, and I organized a squad. The purpose of that squad was to organize information. I had no powers of arrest. What I did was to get information, or get whatever information I could through various sources, and report that direct to the police commissioner. That was turned over to whatever squad or whatever district it pertained to.

Mr. LAZARUS. Information about what?

Mr. BALS. Major crimes; mostly major crimes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Will you limit in any way the performance of your duty to gather information—or rather, were you limited in any way in the performance of your duty to gather information?

Mr. BALS. Gambling? No, we turned that in ourselves.

Mr. LAZARUS. I did not say gambling. I said in your gathering of information.

Mr. BALS. Oh, I thought you said gambling. I was not limited to anything.

Mr. LAZARUS. So far as—since you brought gambling up, what were your duties in connection with gambling?

Mr. BALS. What I did there was, I selected six men from the detective division, and six from the plain clothes division. My idea was try to work those together—to bring the gambling information in with the criminal information. So any information that those men gathered, there was a report made out, and that was turned over direct to the police commissioner.

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes.

Mr. BALS. I had nothing further to do on that—just to report it.

Mr. LAZARUS. How long did those duties continue—the gathering of general information, the duties you embarked upon when you became seventh deputy?

Mr. BALS. I should say about 4 months—3 or 4 months, to the best of my knowledge.

Mr. LAZARUS. Were those duties discontinued after that?

Mr. BALS. Well, the men, the first men sent back were the—what is known as the plain clothesmen, and then gradually the detectives were sent back.

Mr. LAZARUS. At whose orders?

Mr. BALS. On the orders of the police commissioner.

Mr. LAZARUS. Now, the work you started was discontinued in about 4 months?

Mr. BALS. I think it was; yes, to the best of my knowledge.

Mr. LAZARUS. What did you do?

Mr. BALS. Well, then I was left with one detective and one clerical man, and it was just a question of reporting to the police commissioner, and that went on for a certain length of time, and then I decided that for everybody's good it was just as well if I retired.

Mr. LAZARUS. What do you mean by that?

Mr. BALS. Well, in other words, my opinion was that there was a lot of jealousy in the department. The squad was considered this, that, and the other thing, and I could not see continuing.

Mr. LAZARUS. What do you mean it "was considered this, that, and the other thing"?

Mr. BALS. Well, I mean, they considered that they were being over-supervised, or overruled. I am just giving you my opinion, you know. I do not know what they considered, but that is my analysis of it.

Mr. LAZARUS. We would like to know what you know.

Mr. BALS. Sir?

Mr. LAZARUS. We would like to know what you know, if you will tell the committee, please.

Mr. BALS. In the first place, I will give you the actual facts, and we can draw our own conclusions.

I was left with one detective and one clerical man and a chauffeur, and my main duties were to report to the police commissioner. I wrote major crimes when I first went there, and after that I was notified on them.

Mr. LAZARUS. You were just relieved of your duties in connection with this job of general investigation?

Mr. BALS. I think that would make it very clear; yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. And the commissioner relieved you of those duties?

Mr. BALS. Yes, sir; I was responsible to the commissioner and I reported to him.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was the commissioner at that time?

Mr. BALS. Commissioner Wallander.

Mr. LAZARUS. I would like to take you back to your duties in the district attorney's office.

Mr. BALS. All right.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you devote yourself entirely to the Murder, Inc., investigation?

Mr. BALS. Yes, sir. I mean, you are going back 10 years now. There may be an isolated case there, but that was a major—my major duties; that is why I went in there.

Mr. LAZARUS. The quieting down, as you say, of the work in the office was due to the departure of the district attorney on military duties?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. LAZARUS. There had been considerable activity prior to his leaving in connection with Murder, Inc.?

Mr. BALS. There was, but I think we were just about coming in at the tail end of the trials, then.

I think most of the trials were over.

Mr. LAZARUS. One case had not been brought to trial at that time, the Anastasia case.

Mr. BALS. Yes, sir.

Mr. LAZARUS. Will you tell us something about that?

Mr. BALS. Well, so far as the Anastasia case goes, I can tell you quite a bit about that. Contrary to anything, I do not think that we ever had enough to indict Anastasia. Where those that conducted the investigation knew he had a hand in every one of those murders, you could put the finger on him, but you could not get the legal evidence.

So far as the courts of the State of New York were concerned, we needed corroboration. One case I have in mind is the Nittsburg case. I think that we tried that twice, and a ruling came back from the court of appeals which made it almost mandatory that we would have to have an eye witness for our corroboration. I mean it was so written and my opinion was that in order to even lock up Anastasia, and then bring him to trial and lose him, you would only make a bigger man out of him than he ever was, but I do not think that there was ever a murder committed in New York that Anastasia did not give the O. K. on during my time. I do not think they could have committed it.

Mr. LAZARUS. Let me call to your mind that the fact of your recollection of the failure to indict Anastasia differs somewhat from District Attorney O'Dwyer. It is my recollection that he testified under oath that a perfect murder case was made out against Anastasia.

Mr. BALS. Gentlemen, I can tell you that I will differ with him when he made that statement, and I will differ with him now. I do not think there was a perfect murder case, but if I were on a jury I would not convict him with what we had.

Mr. LAZARUS. You were the investigator, and not on a jury. Do you recall why District Attorney O'Dwyer said there was a perfect case against Anastasia?

Mr. BALS. No, I heard something of his making that statement, but I certainly cannot tell you the reason for it.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know the reason why he stated Anastasia could not be prosecuted?

Mr. BALS. No, sir; I do not.

Mr. LAZARUS. The corroboration you just mentioned necessary to convict, what did you know about holding in custody of one Abe Reles?

Mr. BALS. I know quite a bit about it.

Mr. LAZARUS. Tell us about it, please.

Mr. BALS. Well, let us start in with when Abe Reles first decided to talk, I and Captain McGowan, who is dead now, went over to the Tombs, and brought him into the district attorney's office—that is, District Attorney O'Dwyer. I remember well, it was a Good Friday. Just what year it was, I think it was 1940 and, of course, he started to talk; he started to tell all about everything, all his connections. Now it was really on Reles' talk that we got the other witnesses, we got Tannenbaum who corroborated his story.

And then I think there was Joe the Baker who come in, and there were several others, and we kept those in custody in a hotel. I had supervision.

Mr. LAZARUS. What hotel was that?

Mr. BALS. The Half Moon—no, no; we kept them in two hotels, we had them in the Bossert Hotel, first, and then the Half Moon. We switched them a couple of times. There was a good reason. They knew where we had them, so we just moved them around.

Mr. LAZARUS. I would assume that he was plainly incarcerated at the Half Moon.

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. LAZARUS. How long was he there; do you recall?

Mr. BALS. No; the records have to bear that out.

Mr. LAZARUS. What happened at the Half Moon?

Mr. BALS. Well, if we go right down to the time of his death, I can tell you.

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes; tell us.

Mr. BALS. Well, of course, in the Half Moon Hotel we had a suite of rooms there, and we built a special barrier across one of the halls, a partition with a peephole in it. I got a call one morning that Reles was gone. I mean, that is the way the call came to my home.

So, of course I immediately called for a chauffeur and I went down there. When I saw Reles he was lying on a roof, I think five stories below, and there was an indication that he had tied a bedsheet and tried to slide down to the floor below to a vacant apartment, but in particular, the bedsheet he used, he used along with that a piece of telephone wire, with that rubber covering, and little did he know that you cannot tie a knot in that thing, and when he put his pressure on, the knot pulled out and he went down.

Mr. LAZARUS. He was up five stories, you say?

Mr. BALS. I think it was five.

Mr. LAZARUS. How many bedsheets had he tied together?

Mr. BALS. I think just one bedsheet, from all indications.

Mr. LAZARUS. Who was the owner of the hotel?

Mr. BALS. I cannot tell you that. I think it was a corporation.

Mr. LAZARUS. You do not have any knowledge of the stockholders or the officers?

Mr. BALS. No, sir.

Mr. LAZARUS. Well, let us get back to some other investigations that you have conducted while a special investigator. Did you conduct an investigation of the water front?

Mr. BALS. No, sir.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you have anything to do with it?

Mr. BALS. No, sir; but I can tell you about that. When that water front came in, we were very busy on something else, and I think the chief district attorney, Joseph Hanley, conducted that investigation. I think he questioned most of those witnesses. I think he has an office some place on John Street.

Mr. LAZARUS. Just a moment, please.

Mr. BALS. I can give you a little more on that water front, who conducted that.

Mr. LAZARUS. Please do.

Mr. BALS. There was a Lieutenant Arnold who worked in the Hamilton Avenue precinct at that time and if my memory serves me right, I think Arnold did as much as anybody on it. I may have done some little work on it, but the whole investigation, I think Hanley and Arnold handled that.

Mr. LAZARUS. What is your relationship with former Commissioner Wallander at this time?

Mr. BALS. It has never differed. I know him since I am on the job, and I have never had any—

Mr. LAZARUS. What was it at the time of your resignation or retirement?

Mr. BALS. It was cordial.

Mr. LAZARUS. You were ready and willing to leave at that time?

Mr. BALS. I certainly was.

Mr. LAZARUS. You had no special reasons given why your duties had been terminated or sharply reduced?

Mr. BALS. Nobody asked me to retire, and it was just that I felt that I was just about old enough and able enough to feel that I had enough of it.

Mr. LAZARUS. And some of the talk in the department?

Mr. BALS. Now that did not interfere with me.

Mr. LAZARUS. You will recall, Mr. Bals, that there was a great deal of talk, and I would like to get your opinion of what it amounted to at the time, and that was gambling was going on to a greater extent during that time than ever before. What was your opinion of that?

Mr. BALS. Well, I will give you just one example of it.

When I got in there, there was quite a few anonymous letters written in. One I recall very well that stated that I was on Forty-second Street and Broadway and I was drunk. Well, I myself know I was not there. So, as far as anonymous communications, I can tell you that I never paid a lot of attention to them.

Mr. LAZARUS. Well, these are not anonymous communications.

Mr. BALS. I mean rumors, they came with rumors.

Mr. LAZARUS. Would it surprise you that certain police officers testified that that was the fact?

Mr. BALS. Well, it would.

Mr. LAZARUS. That gambling was widespread at that time, more so than it had ever been?

Mr. BALS. It would, because you must remember, so far as I am concerned, my specialty was never gambling. Even if it was, you must remember this, that all my duties were to report it, and it was somebody else's duty to carry it out. So if that was true, then somebody else was falling down. It certainly cannot be put on my shoulders, because I never had the power to make an arrest. I had the power of supplying the information.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you make any reports as to gambling that you found in this general investigation?

Mr. BALS. I certainly did.

Mr. LAZARUS. And those would be at the police department?

Mr. BALS. I forwarded everything direct to the police commissioner.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know Mr. James Moran?

Mr. BALS. Yes; I do.

Mr. LAZARUS. What was his position in the district attorney's office while you were there?

Mr. BALS. He was chief clerk.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you hear anything at the time of the death of Reles that certain cards were removed from the records of the office?

Mr. BALS. I can answer that in this way, while I was in the shipyard I was called before the grand jury and asked about those things. I had no knowledge of that. Of course, I believe at that time I was working in the shipyard.

Mr. LAZARUS. You were not officially interested in the Reles case and the subsequent death of Reles?

Mr. BALS. No.

Mr. LAZARUS. You would have information only that came to you?

Mr. BALS. No. When Reles died I was still there.

Mr. LAZARUS. That is what I thought.

Mr. BALS. But after that, there were rumors that certain records were removed, not at the time of Reles' death, but after that, and then I think it was the Beldock grand jury held an investigation. I was subpoenaed before them and I signed a waiver and I testified in detail. I cannot tell you what that was.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you have any connection with the holding in custody of Reles? Did you have any direct connection with that?

Mr. BALS. Yes; I supervised it.

Mr. LAZARUS. You did?

Mr. BALS. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know who was directly in charge of the prisoner at the time prior to his death; immediately prior to that time?

Mr. BALS. Now, I will tell you, we can get at that. There were six men there. There were six men up there guarding him, not him alone, there were other witnesses there, if you may call them that.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you recall whether certain of those men were in Reles' room at any time prior to his death within, shall we say, an hour?

Mr. BALS. Well, the room was practically all in one. You have got to realize, it was a suite of rooms, and there were no doors.

Mr. LAZARUS. And the prisoner was out in the open at the time?

Mr. BALS. He had a bed there and he was supposed to be in bed.

Mr. LAZARUS. And there was a man watching him at all times?

Mr. BALS. There were men in there. I cannot understand, I have my opinion of it, but they evidently fell asleep.

Mr. LAZARUS. That is your explanation or your belief?

Mr. BALS. Well, how could he do it if they did not?

Mr. LAZARUS. That is what we would be interested in finding out.

Mr. BALS. I mean, that is my candid opinion of it. Somebody fell asleep on the job.

Mr. LAZARUS. There was more than one man?

Mr. BALS. I think there was six, either four or six.

Mr. LAZARUS. Were there any visitors to that room, other than the policemen on duty, prior to the death?

Mr. BALS. I think the investigation will show that his wife visited him the night before.

Mr. LAZARUS. I mean, within an hour?

Mr. BALS. No, no; I think that this happened around 3 in the morning, the best we could reconstruct it.

Mr. LAZARUS. You were not there, this is the information that was given to you after his body was found?

Mr. BALS. That is correct. I was notified at my home.

Mr. LAZARUS. How soon after the body was found?

Mr. BALS. Oh, I do not know. It did not take me 10 minutes to get there. I was in bed, and I did not take more than 10 minutes to get to Coney Island, because I called for a car immediately and we traveled as fast as we could.

Mr. LAZARUS. The question I asked you is how long after the body was discovered, or after Reles went out the window did you learn of it?

Mr. BALS. Well, the only way I can answer that question, sir, is, how long it took me to get there after I was notified.

Mr. LAZARUS. That is not it. We misunderstand one another, perhaps.

Mr. BALS. I am sorry. I am trying to answer it.

Mr. LAZARUS. When were you notified?

Mr. BALS. To the best of my recollections it was about 7 in the morning.

Mr. LAZARUS. When was the body supposed to have been found?

Mr. BALS. Well, that is about the time they are supposed to have discovered that he was missing.

Mr. LAZARUS. And how was he discovered? How was it discovered that he was missing?

Mr. BALS. Well, the minute they went to his room, all the evidence was there—I mean the sheet was out the window, and if you looked out the window you could see him, there.

Mr. LAZARUS. Then we have it now that the officers were not on duty. You said that there was always someone in the room.

Mr. BALS. There was someone assigned to the apartment. You must remember that this was a suite of rooms.

Mr. LAZARUS. I understand, and there were no doors in them, and there were officers on duty to see that he was kept there and that nothing happened to him?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. LAZARUS. Now, you say as soon as it was discovered that he had disappeared, which means what?

Mr. BALS. Well, it means when I was notified, of course I cannot testify as to what happened at the hotel when I was not there.

Mr. LAZARUS. I want to know what your report was, since you were in charge.

Mr. BALS. I do not recall it. I mean, you are going back 10 years. If there are any records I am sure if I could refresh my memory I could give you a better story. I mean it is just one of those things. I mean, that is 10 years ago.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Bals, was Reles at the Half Moon Hotel under your command and detectives guarding him?

Mr. BALS. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Were they to make reports on who visited him?

Mr. BALS. Oh, yes.

Mr. WALSH. And did they make a report to you the morning of the death, as to who visited him that night?

Mr. BALS. Well, now, if we are talking reports, to be best of my recollection, I know I was told his wife had been there.

Mr. WALSH. Had anyone else been there?

Mr. BALS. Not that I know of. I do not remember that.

Mr. WALSH. If anyone was to go in, they had to get permission from you?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. WALSH. Does that include the New York City police officer of superior rank?

Mr. BALS. I think it would, at that time, because nobody knew, we kept that very close, there were no outsiders got in there at all, because we tried to guard against that.

As a matter of fact, that is what caused my retirement at that time, people wanted to know things, and I just wanted to tell them on that investigation, if you conducted that loosely, you were out of luck.

Mr. WALSH. Would the prohibition against visitors include the district attorney's office attachés?

Mr. BALS. There were only certain people allowed in there. What I mean by that, let me give you an idea of the way——

Mr. WALSH. Who, for instance, would have access to the room?

Mr. BALS. Well, if a case was on trial, the trial attorney or his clerk.

Mr. WALSH. You mean the trial attorney of the district attorney's office?

Mr. BALS. That is right. If Mr. Turkus was trying the case, and Mr. Kelly was his clerk, both Kelly and Turkus would go in there. There would be nothing thought of it.

Mr. WALSH. Who else besides the district attorney's men and the clerks?

Mr. BALS. That is all, to the best of my knowledge.

Mr. LAZARUS. It would be possible that anyone from the district attorney's office could come there and gain access to the room?

Mr. BALS. No, sir.

Mr. LAZARUS. The district attorney, certainly.

Mr. BALS. Oh, yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Or any assistant, or only those——

Mr. BALS. Only those assigned to the case.

Mr. LAZARUS. Would there be any other officials in the office who would have general jurisdiction to report and keep the records who would have any right to visit the room?

Mr. BALS. Well, I would answer that "No," to the best of my knowledge.

MR. LAZARUS. Would you say then that was absolutely limited to admission as to the district attorney himself and the assistants assigned to the case and actively engaged in the trial or preparation for the trial?

MR. BALS. I think if we leave it at that, we would have a very good idea of it.

MR. LAZARUS. You would say, then, that no one else could have gotten there except those you named?

MR. BALS. That is right.

MR. LAZARUS. You do say so?

MR. BALS. I do.

MR. LAZARUS. Would you have any responsibility with relation to the cards that were connected with any investigation?

MR. BALS. I could not quite get that. Excuse me.

MR. LAZARUS. What would be your responsibility with relation to records or cards?

MR. BALS. Well, while I was in that office I had clerical men taking care of that. I mean, I had men assigned for records and cards as stenographers.

MR. LAZARUS. It was their responsibility, was it not, to guard those?

MR. BALS. Certainly, certainly it was, and I will put this on the record, during this investigation we were overcareful that there were no leaks.

Senator TOBEY. When you went down and found Reles' body five floors below, how many men were in the room?

MR. BALS. That would be a hard question for me to answer.

Senator TOBEY. You said there were six men guarding the room. Were a large portion of those six there?

MR. BALS. Yes; I will say there were a large portion of them there, that all the men that were assigned there at that time were all present when I got there.

Senator TOBEY. All right. What did you do to them?

MR. BALS. Well, they were tried and——

Senator TOBEY. Were they acquitted?

MR. BALS. No; they were all demoted.

Senator TOBEY. What did they say in extenuation of their being asleep?

MR. BALS. Of course they did not say they were sleeping.

Senator TOBEY. What did they say happened?

MR. BALS. I do not recall.

MR. HALLEY. Oh, you must recall. Now, Senator Tobey is entitled to get decent answers. You were the chief investigator of the D. A.'s office.

Senator TOBEY. You found the man who was guarded so carefully and secretly dead five floors below, and you found the majority of the six men were there with the obligation to guard the man, and he still managed to get away and rig a rope and let himself out, and you find the dead body, and then you come in, in charge of everybody. What did you say to these men?

MR. BALS. The first thing I did was to conduct an investigation and make a report.

Senator TOBEY. Before you had the investigation, here we are in the room now, with a dead body five floors down. What did you say the first thing?

Mr. BALS. I cannot tell you that. That is over 10 years ago.

Senator TOBEY. So, it was a pretty vivid experience, a pretty striking experience, for a chief of detectives to find the man that he had been guarding dead, and his men defaulting in their duty. What did you say?

Mr. BALS. Well, I—

Senator TOBEY. Your mind is a blank?

Mr. BALS. No; I will not say it is blank.

Senator TOBEY. What is it?

Mr. BALS. I can't give you an intelligent answer.

Senator TOBEY. That is the only time that anything like that ever happened in your life, is it not? It was a pretty dramatic thing, was it not?

Mr. BALS. Yes; it was.

Senator TOBEY. And it was a pretty important thing?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. And you can't remember what you did when you came into the room?

Mr. BALS. Well, the first thing that we did, there were several departments to notify, the medical examiner had to be notified, and an investigation had to be made.

Senator TOBEY. Did you say, "What in hell have you men been doing to allow this?"

Mr. BALS. No doubt.

Senator TOBEY. What did they say?

Mr. BALS. I can't tell you the exact words.

Senator TOBEY. You were struck dumb by it?

Mr. BALS. I certainly was, because we lost a good witness.

Senator TOBEY. That is all I have to say.

Mr. HALLEY. Before I ask a question for the record, Senator Tobey, you understand that Reles was a key witness in Murder, Inc., don't you?

Senator TOBEY. Yes; I do.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was anyone else from the district attorney's office there when you arrived at the scene?

Mr. BALS. No; I think I was the first one on the scene.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did anyone else from there come in while you were there?

Mr. BALS. Not that I recall. I know the medical examiner came there and all the police officials.

Mr. LAZARUS. I mean from the district attorney's office.

Mr. BALS. No; I do not recall anybody.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you recall Mr. Moran being there?

Mr. BALS. I cannot, I do not.

Mr. LAZARUS. Your recollection is that he was not there?

Mr. BALS. I would not say he was there, and I would not say he was not there. I cannot tell you right now.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, if you continue to talk that way about something that important, you will find this committee taking a most hostile attitude.

Are you saying you do not know whether Moran was there or not there?

Mr. BALS. I would not take that attitude, because I have not got that attitude. We can get the record. Give me a few minutes to refresh my memory and I can tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean if you took time to refresh your recollection and came back here, you think you could give us—

Mr. BALS. No; I do not have the records. We would have to get them out of the police department. We could get the trial record.

Senator TOBEY. What did the coroner give as his verdict of death?

Mr. BALS. I could not even tell you.

Senator TOBEY. You must know that. You do not know what the coroner's verdict was? Were there any marks on the body, any bullet holes?

Mr. BALS. The cause of death was the fall.

Senator TOBEY. Is that what the coroner said in his official report?

Mr. BALS. Well, if I remember, I cannot tell you the official report on this, Senator.

Senator TOBEY. Was the body photographed?

Mr. BALS. Certainly.

Senator TOBEY. Did the coroner say it was as the result of the fall that he died?

Mr. BALS. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Or by violence at the hands of parties unknown?

Mr. BALS. I could not answer that.

Senator TOBEY. He might have said the latter, might he not?

Mr. BALS. I do not know. You are going back 10 years now.

Senator TOBEY. Ten years is a long time, but I might say, a murder like that only happens once in a lifetime.

Mr. BALS. Senator, we are in a position to get all the records. You can get the medical examiner's report.

Senator TOBEY. We are asking you, you who were the major domo, you were the ringmaster, and you yourself had the responsibility, and your six dummies there let the man go out the window, or else they threw him out quid pro quo, or something of the sort.

I think the thing is shady, to me, this whole thing is shady. He was the most influential witness you had, and they wanted to get him out of the way.

Mr. BALS. My thought is that he just tried to play smart and sneak down to the next floor.

Senator TOBEY. Was he in his night clothes?

Mr. BALS. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. His body was all clothed?

Mr. BALS. I think he had on all his clothes.

Senator TOBEY. What time did it happen?

Mr. BALS. It happened during the night; it was 7 in the morning when I got there.

Senator TOBEY. How long had he been dead, according to the coroner's inspection?

Mr. BALS. I think we got—when we got there, rigor mortis started to set in.

Senator TOBEY. How long did that take after death?

Mr. BALS. Anywhere from 3 to 4 hours.

Senator TOBEY. And these six guards, in the 3 or 4 hours before rigor mortis set in, probably continued to sleep soundly; no one woke up and, when you came, what were they doing?

Mr. BALS. Well, they were up all around there, and some were downstairs with the body.

Senator TOBEY. What did they say had happened?

Mr. BALS. Well, of course, at the time—it is going to be hard for me—

Senator TOBEY. I should think it would be the easiest thing in the world. There is not a man in this room who would not remember the details of that to their dying day.

Mr. BALS. Well, I have had a lot of experiences.

Senator TOBEY. You are certainly far from being dumb.

Mr. BALS. I am not trying to be dumb, or appear dumb. The records are there, if I can go over them and refresh my recollection, I think I can tell you a better story.

Senator TOBEY. I certainly do not think you could tell a worse story.

Mr. BALS. I am doing the best I can.

Senator TOBEY. But you are not doing good enough.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Why don't you answer to the best of your recollection what was said without referring to the records, what you recall that was said at that time?

You must have some recollection, Mr. Bals.

Mr. WALSH. Wasn't it an extraordinary thing to have prisoners incarcerated in hotels?

Mr. BALS. Yes, it was.

Mr. WALSH. It was an extraordinary thing?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. WALSH. It is the custom and practice to put people in jail. We have a number around the city.

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. WALSH. When you took the men out of the jail and put them into a hotel, you took some extraordinary precaution, did you not?

Mr. BALS. I did.

Mr. WALSH. In the first place, you leased a suite?

Mr. BALS. Right.

Mr. WALSH. And you took doors out of all the rooms connecting with the suite?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. WALSH. And you put a peephole up in the corridor?

Mr. BALS. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. And this was a public hotel?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. WALSH. Now, as the Senator says, this is all extraordinary. How many years were you a policeman?

Mr. BALS. I was appointed in 1916.

Mr. WALSH. And this was 1942?

Mr. BALS. About 1940.

Mr. WALSH. Twenty-four years.

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. WALSH. In those 24 years you worked on a number of cases, did you not?

Mr. BALS. Yes, sir.

Mr. WALSH. Were you a member of the detective division?

Mr. BALS. Yes, sir.

Mr. WALSH. How many prisoners, other than this Murder, Inc., group, did you ever have in a hotel room?

Mr. BALS. Those are the first prisoners I ever had in a hotel room.

Senator TOBEY. Who gave the orders?

Mr. BALS. They came from the district attorney.

Senator TOBEY. That was O'Dwyer?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. What was his reason for giving that extraordinary order?

Mr. BALS. It was to keep the witnesses away, the material witnesses away from all other prisoners.

Senator TOBEY. If he had been in a cell in jail he would be kept away.

Mr. BALS. Yes; but they would be reached by other inmates there.

Senator TOBEY. Other inmates in the jail?

Mr. BALS. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Could they not have been held incommunicado?

Mr. BALS. They would be held as material witnesses, or as a material witness, and I understand that they have a separate part of the jail set aside for material witnesses.

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. BALS. I do not think you would get the story.

Senator TOBEY. Who selected the six men?

Mr. BALS. I would say I did.

Senator TOBEY. Do you remember their names?

Mr. BALS. No; I do not. I remember, I may remember one or two of them.

Senator TOBEY. Well, give us their names. Maybe we would like to talk to them. So, be sure to give us their names right.

Mr. BALS. Well, I will tell you what I prefer, Senator, if you would give me a chance to look up the record and get the names, because you are asking me a question here that is rather hard for me to answer, to come back and give you the exact names of six men.

Senator TOBEY. I do not care who their fathers were. What were their names, officer so-and-so and officer so-and-so.

You cannot make this committee believe that you cannot remember the names of the men who were there. That is just ridiculous. Why don't you spill it, and come out with it? Don't try to screen this thing. We certainly mean business here, sir, in this case. We are going to the last dregs of it.

Mr. BALS. Senator, I am here to help you.

Senator TOBEY. And I want to tell you that we have got the power to do that.

Mr. BALS. I know that.

Senator TOBEY. And God help the fellow that tries to play funny with us. We are going through with this thing. You haven't seen anything yet. You have got your chance now, and if you have some common sense you will spill it. It is manifest to any keen observer here with witnesses that you are holding back. It is manifest.

Mr. BALS. Senator, it would be very foolish for me to hold back something that is a public record. It is a public record as to who those six men are. I am not trying to conceal anything.

Senator TOBEY. Well, you do not impress us at all favorably with your attitude before this committee this morning.

Mr. BALS. I am very sorry.

Senator TOBEY. If you are sorry, then come across.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you retired from the police department now?

Mr. BALS. I am.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you retire?

Mr. BALS. I retired 4 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Where are you living now?

Mr. BALS. In Fort Lauderdale.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any business there?

Mr. BALS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any business since you retired?

Mr. BALS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your pension?

Mr. BALS. $6,000.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have been living on that?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any assets in addition to your pension?

Mr. BALS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have a bank account?

Mr. BALS. I have.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is that?

Mr. BALS. At the Broward National.

Mr. HALLEY. In Fort Lauderdale?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other bank account?

Mr. BALS. I have two accounts there, and I have just opened a checking account at the Dania Bank.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is that?

Mr. BALS. At Dania, Fla., 4 miles out of Lauderdale.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you married?

Mr. BALS. I am.

Mr. HALLEY. Does your wife have a bank account?

Mr. BALS. No, sir. I say, "No, sir," but all those accounts are joint accounts.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own any automobiles?

Mr. BALS. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you own?

Mr. BALS. I own a 1949 Packard which I have had about 4 months. I turned in a 1948 Chevrolet and gave them $400 for it.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other automobile?

Mr. BALS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own any real estate?

Mr. BALS. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. When I say "you," I mean you or your wife.

Mr. BALS. Yes; any question I answer pertaining to that will be my wife and myself, because everything is joint.

Mr. HALLEY. What real estate do you own?

Mr. BALS. I have five lots in Carmel, N. Y. I purchased them maybe 20 years ago. That was bought from the newspaper, the Mirror. They ran an ad and they were paid off so much down and so much when they catch you.

I also have some acreage up at Stuart, Fla. I bought that in 1947. I have about 10 acres there and I paid $2,200 for it.

That is the only real estate that I own. I am just here from selling my own home.

Senator TOBEY. Who was the officer in charge of the six men? One man was in charge.

Mr. BALS. There was a detective in charge.

Senator TOBEY. What is his name?

Mr. BALS. I cannot think of that name, Senator; I cannot think of their names.

Senator TOBEY. You remember the man in charge, certainly?

Mr. BALS. No; I do not.

Senator TOBEY. But you remember that there was a man in charge?

Mr. BALS. There is always a man; the senior man on the squad would be in charge.

Senator TOBEY. You appointed the squad and placed them there?

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. And you cannot remember the names of any one of the men?

Mr. BALS. Now—

Senator TOBEY. Well, you said you might be able to name one of them or two of them and now you have not come across with one.

Mr. BALS. Well, if I gave you a name I might be mistaken about it. I think Buckley was one of them, but what I would prefer to do would be—if we can get the records out on this thing, they will be there, and we can have all the names. You must remember during the time of those investigations those were not the only witnesses we had in the hotels. We had women in hotels—

Senator TOBEY. Well, there wasn't any as important as Reles, we know that. What did O'Dwyer say to you when he heard of Reles' death?

Mr. BALS. As a matter of fact, I called O'Dwyer at his home the minute I was notified, and he said, "You had better get right down there."

Senator TOBEY. What else did he say?

Mr. BALS. I do not remember anything else.

Senator TOBEY. That is elementary to what we are getting down to.

Mr. BALS. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. That is all he said?

Mr. BALS. He seldom issued instructions to me. What I mean by that—

Senator TOBEY. Did he talk to you about it afterward?

Mr. BALS. Sir?

Senator TOBEY. Did he talk to you about it afterward?

Mr. BALS. I think that he did. I think that we discussed it.

Senator TOBEY. What did he say then?

Mr. BALS. We were very much put out about losing a witness, and so far as what happened is concerned, it certainly upset the applecart for us.

Senator TOBEY. That is very obvious.

Mr. BALS. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Wasn't the police department upset about that?

Mr. BALS. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH. Didn't they make some representations to Mayor O'Dwyer, "That is what comes of it when you don't have policemen working under the superior officers of the police department"?

Mr. BALS. I don't think that came up at that time.

Mr. WALSH. You were a civilian?

Mr. BALS. No; I was not.

Mr. WALSH. You were a lieutenant then?

Mr. BALS. I was acting captain.

Mr. WALSH. You did not take orders from anybody in the police department; did you?

Mr. BALS. None at all at that time; no.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. O'Dwyer never gave you any orders?

Mr. BALS. When I say "orders" I was in charge of that, I knew what I had to do. I do not know of any direct orders.

Mr. WALSH. Well, he was the one who directed that these people be incarcerated in the hotel.

Mr. BALS. That is right, and properly protected.

Mr. LAZARUS. Where was Romeo incarcerated?

Mr. BALS. Romeo?

Mr. LAZARUS. Anthony Romeo, does the name of Anthony Romeo mean anything to you, or Joe Spring, otherwise?

Mr. BALS. I do not remember that name.

Mr. LAZARUS. You were in charge of this investigation?

Mr. BALS. That is right, that is right.

Mr. LAZARUS. Have you any recollection at all about a man by the name of Anthony Romeo?

Mr. BALS. No; I do not recall that name.

Mr. LAZARUS. Don't you know that he was another one of the corroborating witnesses to the killing of Peter Panto?

Do you know whether he had been incarcerated?

Mr. BALS. I do not; no. Not on the Peter Panto case. I know a little about it.

Mr. LAZARUS. This is Anastasia we are talking about.

Mr. BALS. I know that; I know that, and the persons responsible were the Anastasias, Weiss, and some young Italian who lived over in Jersey.

Mr. LAZARUS. You cannot remember the name of Anthony Romeo in connection with this case at all?

Mr. BALS. No; I cannot recall it.

Mr. LAZARUS. That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. When you retired and went to Fort Lauderdale, did you buy a home?

Mr. BALS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you pay for it?

Mr. BALS. $16,000.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there a mortgage on it?

Mr. BALS. There was.

Mr. HALLEY. How much?

Mr. BALS. $8,500. I will tell you about that transaction. I had a home in Brooklyn. I went down to Florida, and I did not want to put my home on the market until I had a retainer on one there. I put a thousand dollars on that home and then came back and sold my home in Brooklyn. I have the records of that whole transaction. I brought them up here, and I brought my bank account, and everything else.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your net worth today?

Mr. BALS. My net worth?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. BALS. With the money I owe and everything else, I would say it is less than $5,000, four or five thousand dollars, and I have received $5,000 since I got out from Warner Bros.

Senator TOBEY. What was that for?

Mr. BALS. They signed me to a contract. I think it is on this picture, The Enforcer, just to use my name.

Senator TOBEY. It covers the Rele case, does it not?

Mr. BALS. It covers everything. I never gave them any information.

Senator TOBEY. Well, if you cannot give any more information for $5,000 than you are giving us, you have sold them a gold brick.

Mr. BALS. Well, both Turkus and I got paid off on that one. That is Bert Turkus.

Mr. HALLEY. We have no further questions, but we may want to talk to you again. You want to get back to Florida, I guess?

Mr. BALS. I do. I will tell you why, I will tell you what I have down there, I have a boy in college who took a nervous collapse. We have been fighting that thing 3 years. He is working now and he is all right, but I think that it is dangerous for me to leave him alone with my wife. I have more on my mind than my hat. It is not the best situation.

The CHAIRMAN. I wonder if sometime today or tomorrow, Mr. Lazarus had other matters that he wanted to discuss with Mr. Bals, if you could do it without the committee being here?

Mr. LAZARUS. I will do my best.

Senator TOBEY. I suggest that the gentleman take the afternoon off and go to Central Park and conjure up some of these things and come back and tell you the truth.

The CHAIRMAN. What time are you planning to leave?

Mr. BALS. Well, I have a reservation for Wednesday, that is a week from today. That is the nearest I could get.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you be where members of the staff can get in touch with you?

Mr. BALS. I certainly will. I will be glad to.

Mr. HALLEY. Where can we get in touch with you?

Mr. BALS. If you leave a message at my father's house, he can contact me.

Mr. HALLEY. What is that?

Mr. BALS. If you leave a message at my father's house he can contact me.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is that?

Mr. BALS. He lives at 1816 Albany Avenue, and the telephone number is Esplanade 7-6342.

Mr. HALLEY. You are not staying at any hotel where we can reach you?

Mr. BALS. I have a room at the Bossert, but I have two daughters here and my father here, and I want to see them as much as it is possible, so I certainly will not be sitting in my hotel room.

There is one thing if I may say, and I wish to say this, that if any of these records can be produced, and I can refresh my memory—

The CHAIRMAN. How would it be if this afternoon or tomorrow you see if you cannot go and look at the records?

Mr. BALS. Well, I have no authority to get at the records.

The CHAIRMAN. Aren't these public records?

Mr. BALS. In the police department?

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, you said a few minutes ago about the information, who the officers assigned to these prisoners were, was a public record.

Mr. BALS. I did not mean it that way. I mean they should be in the police department, because all these men were tried.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you also got your own personal financial records?

Mr. BALS. Sir?

Mr. HALLEY. Have you also got your own personal financial records?

Mr. BALS. I have. I have them here.

Mr. HALLEY. Are they here in the room now?

Mr. BALS. Not in the room. I have them outside. I brought them with me.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you produce them and go over them now with Mr. Walsh?

Mr. BALS. I will be glad to.

Mr. HALLEY. We would like to have you do that now.

Mr. BALS. All right.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

All right, call your next witness, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. We will call Mr. Meyer Lansky.

The CHAIRMAN. Hello, Mr. Lansky, and how are you, Mr. Polakoff?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Glad to see you, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, Mr. Lansky?

Do you solemnly swear the testimony that you give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. LANSKY. I do.

FURTHER TESTIMONY OF MEYER LANSKY, NEW YORK, N. Y., ACCOMPANIED BY MOSES POLAKOFF, ATTORNEY, NEW YORK, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, let us go ahead.

We are way behind.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. Lansky, are you at the present time in the jukebox business?

Mr. LANSKY. I am not. I am presently not in business at all. I am not engaged in any business.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last have any business?

Mr. LANSKY. What kind of business? Jukeboxes?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LANSKY. The jukebox business.

Mr. HALLEY. Let us confine it first to the jukebox business.

Mr. LANSKY. I do not remember if it was 1946 or 1947, I think it was around that time.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the name of your business?

Mr. LANSKY. The last name, I think, was Emby.

Mr. HALLEY. That was over on Forty-third Street?

Mr. LANSKY. Correct.

Mr. HALLEY. 525 West Forty-third?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that right?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that business still going on, or did you liquidate it?

Mr. LANSKY. I do not remember, I think we sold the stock.

Mr. HALLEY. Who owned the stock with you?

Mr. LANSKY. Well, there was a Mr. Smith interested, and there was a Bill Bye interested in the business.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is Bill Bye?

Mr. LANSKY. I think at one time he was connected with the Wurlitzer Co., prior to his coming with me.

Mr. HALLEY. And M. B. Smith?

Mr. LANSKY. Smith was connected with the Wurlitzer Co. as an agent.

Mr. HALLEY. M. B. Smith, was it not?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes. Bye was connected with the company as a field man.

Mr. POLAKOFF. If it means anything to you, Mr. Halley, Emby is Ed Myer and Bill Bye, and that is how we picked the name of Emby.

Mr. HALLEY. I see. How long were you in that business?

Mr. LANSKY. I think about 4 years.

Until the banks canceled out my credit on account of the publicity.

Mr. HALLEY. And when did that happen?

Mr. LANSKY. June about the time I had to sell out; that was my reason.

Mr. HALLEY. What year was that?

Mr. LANSKY. I cannot tell you honestly, it was around 1946, the beginning of 1947, or somewhere in there.

Mr. POLAKOFF. I can furnish that information to you, if you want it, because I was the attorney for the company.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you with the Riverside Music Co.?

Mr. LANSKY. The Riverside Music Co.?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LANSKY. Gee, I could not tell you that.

Mr. HALLEY. That was also a jukebox business?

Mr. LANSKY. I do not know, I can't tell you if I was in it.

The Emby Co. during the war, we did not do any manufacturing, because Wurlitzer was involved in war work. So would buy up, to make business, you know, we would buy routes and sell them and take in the machines and rebuild them, and things like that. If there was a Riverside Music Co. amongst it, I could not furnish you any information about it.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your relationship to the Wurlitzer Co.? Can you give the committee a picture of it?

Mr. LANSKY. Oh, I had a—

Mr. POLAKOFF. An agency.

Mr. LANSKY. I had an agency.

Mr. HALLEY. For the Wurlitzer Co.?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you have it?

Mr. LANSKY. In New York, I had part of New Jersey, I had part of Connecticut. You see, they cut out, just like an automobile agency.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you selling or renting jukeboxes?

Mr. LANSKY. Selling.

Mr. HALLEY. You sell them?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. That was Emby, not you?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And Riverside Music was another company?

Mr. LANSKY. Well, we would buy a route, maybe someone's route, something like that, then build it up and try to sell it, you see.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Zwillman ever in the jukebox business with you?

Mr. LANSKY. No; never with me.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Michael Lascari ever in the jukebox business with you?

Mr. LANSKY. Nobody was ever in the jukebox business with me.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Just a moment. Except Bye and Smith?

Mr. LANSKY. That is right.

Mr. POLAKOFF. No other stockholders. I can vouch for it.

Mr. LANSKY. There was one by the name of Goldberg, and he died.

Mr. POLAKOFF. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in any business with Zwillman?

Were you in this television outfit, Consolidated Television?

Mr. LANSKY. Was I?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes; I was.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you tell the committee the story of Consolidated Television, what was that all about?

Mr. LANSKY. Well, to the best of my knowledge, because we had the knowledge of distribution of juke boxes, I think Ed Smith was approached to form a—what do you call it—he claimed he had two good mechanics for television, and they formed a company, and we took an interest in it.

Mr. POLAKOFF. You bought stock?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes; we bought stock.

The CHAIRMAN. I think for the benefit of the reporter this is very difficult for him to get. Please speak up.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Is it too low for you?

Mr. LANSKY. Am I speaking too low?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, everybody is speaking too low.

Mr. LANSKY. I am sorry. We started to build television sets and I think that we went in at the wrong end of it. We thought that the commercial end was the best part. We should have gone into the home-set end, and maybe I would have been a very rich man today.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you making them for, bars and restaurants?

Mr. LANSKY. At that time they were mostly for bars. You did not have—what do you call it—those reel cabinets, you just bought the set.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was this that approached Ed Smith?

Mr. LANSKY. Pokrass.

Mr. HALLEY. Pokrass had the Air King Co., too, did he not?

Mr. POLAKOFF. The Tele-King, is it not?

Mr. HALLEY. Tele-King?

Mr. LANSKY. I do not know if he changed the name, but I think that we opened it up as Tele-King. What it is today I could not say.

Mr. HALLEY. That was with Pokrass, too?

Mr. LANSKY. He approached them on the assumption that we were acquainted in the field and we knew all the distribution points. We knew every place that had a juke box, and that would be a good place to have television.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Pokrass—what was that first, Tele-King or this Consolidated Television?

Mr. LANSKY. I think it was Consolidated.

Mr. HALLEY. Consolidated was there first?

Mr. LANSKY. I am pretty sure it was Consolidated.

Mr. HALLEY. Who started the Tele-King?

Mr. LANSKY. He may have started that himself; after we could not go any further we did not want to take the risk.

Mr. POLAKOFF. You lost money on it. Tell them about it.

Mr. HALLEY. And Rutkin who testified yesterday said he had gone into Tele-King with Pokrass?

Mr. LANSKY. Well, if he did, it was unbeknownst to me. I knew nothing about it.

Mr. HALLEY. You knew nothing about it?

Mr. LANSKY. There was not Rutkin in there.

Mr. HALLEY. Rutkin was not in the Consolidated?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. But he was in Tele-King?

Mr. LANSKY. This is the first time I ever heard of it. I want you to believe me; this is the first time I ever heard it.

Mr. HALLEY. To be frank with you, when he mentioned Pokrass yesterday, it hit a note, and you mentioned the name today and I put the two together.

Mr. LANSKY. I did not know Pokrass until Consolidated, either.

Mr. HALLEY. I am trying to get the story. Now, when you first went into Consolidated, or anyone else connected with you, was there anyone else that was connected with you then making television sets?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Whose idea was it to go into the television field?

Mr. LANSKY. The way I knew it, it was Pokrass with some engineers, and he went to Ed Smith then, thinking that would be a good outlet on the market because we knew all the places where jukeboxes were.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you had known Pokrass previously, had you not?

Mr. LANSKY. Just casually.

Mr. HALLEY. He had been in the liquor business during prohibition, I understand?

Mr. LANSKY. I do not know anything about that. I mean, I never knew him.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in the liquor business at that time?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You were?

Mr. LANSKY. Must we go into that, too?

Mr. HALLEY. I just wanted to know whether you were. I think we might qualify you as an expert on the subject, and I wanted to ask you whether you knew of Pokrass in the liquor business during prohibition.

Mr. LANSKY. No, I did not; not during prohibition.

Mr. HALLEY. At that time you were not operating in Jersey, were you?

Mr. LANSKY. I was not operating particularly anywhere.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, getting back to television, who else was in Consolidated?

Mr. LANSKY. There was Pokrass, there was Ed, there was Bill Bye, there was myself, and there was Costello in there. He bought a piece, but he did not buy it from my doings.

Mr. POLAKOFF. When you say that, you mean he bought stock?

The CHAIRMAN. Let's all talk a little louder. I can tell that the reporter just cannot hear you.

Mr. HALLEY. Costello was in it?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes; he bought stock.

Mr. HALLEY. And Joe Adonis was in it, was he not?

Mr. LANSKY. He bought some stock.

Mr. HALLEY. How much money did you invest in it?

Mr. LANSKY. I think about $15,000 or $16,000.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get any back?

Mr. LANSKY. Nothing.

Mr. HALLEY. The whole thing was a flop?

Mr. LANSKY. That part of it was, but I understand it is successful now.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean Tele-King is now successful?

Mr. LANSKY. That is what I understand.

Mr. HALLEY. And you no longer have any connection with it?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether Adonis or Costello have any present connection with it?

Mr. LANSKY. No; the whole company busted up, and he went ahead with it on his own, as I understand it, at the time, because nobody else cared to invest any money in it, and Bill Bye and Smith and I, we did not want to go any further, and we quit.

Mr. HALLEY. You mentioned some time back you had some unfavorable publicity that forced you out of the jukebox business.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that in connection with your visit to Luciano when he left the country?

Mr. LANSKY. (Shaking his head negatively.)

Mr. POLAKOFF. Answer out loud. You shake your head and he can't get it.

Mr. LANSKY. No; I don't think—it was before that.

Mr. HALLEY. He left the country in 1946, did he not, Mr. Polakoff?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't that in 1946?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't think I got too much publicity about that.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Just what happened, I happened to be the attorney for the company, so I know. Under the arrangement we sold the Emby or the Manhattan Simplex, which was a prior name. This was by what is known as trust certificates. They had to take the machines in, and then the bank or trust would pay the Wurlitzer the money. Although it was a corporation, the individuals had to endorse the trust certificates, and Mr. Lansky was one of the individuals who endorsed them, and then one day we got an order that the bankers—I do not know who the bankers were——

Mr. LANSKY. Well, the Wurlitzer Co. first came to me, and they told me they were satisfied with me——

Mr. POLAKOFF. Your integrity?

Mr. LANSKY. Satisfied with my integrity, that the banks was not; that they did not want—they said that I was a bad risk for them, and that is why I had to sell out.

Mr. LANSKY. That was after working for a couple of years, and waiting for machines to come out, and I was forced out.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you go, to the Luciano home?

Mr. LANSKY. I didn't go to see Luciano.

Mr. POLAKOFF. You missed the question.

Mr. HALLEY. When he left the country, when he was deported, what was the purpose of your visit to him?

Mr. LANSKY. No particular purpose.

Mr. HALLEY. A considerable amount of trouble was involved in getting down to the boat to see him, was there not?

Mr. LANSKY. When I saw him, I didn't go to the boat.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you go to see him?

Mr. LANSKY. Ellis Island.

Mr. HALLEY. How long before he was deported did you go to Ellis Island?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't remember.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Mr. Halley, I can give you a very clear picture of that, because I was present at the visit.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you just——

Mr. LANSKY. Pardon me, Counselor; I will answer you that.

I went to see Luciano while he was in jail, and the district attorney's office asked me to go there. Now, don't you think I should have gone down to say good-by to him?

The CHAIRMAN. What did they ask you to go for?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Senator, there has been a lot of mystery and talk——

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't you clarify that?

Mr. POLAKOFF. I will be very happy to.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. POLAKOFF. In 1942——

The CHAIRMAN. Don't give us too long a story.

Mr. POLAKOFF. No; I will make it very brief, but it will show you there is no mystery about this.

In 1942 I was sent for by the district attorney's office of New York County, who wanted for Naval Intelligence certain help that Luciano could possibly give. And they asked me if I would be the intermediary.

I volunteered to be that intermediary, with one condition. I told them that I did not know Luciano well; I didn't know how to go about it; that I would have to take one person with me whom I had great confidence in, who wouldn't do anything wrong, or cross us—meaning the district attorney and me—and if they would agree to that proviso, I would undertake to do the work.

Now, the gentleman I picked, who wanted to remain anonymous, met with Naval Intelligence and the district attorney's office and me.

And the very next day Luciano was removed from Dannemora, which was too far out of the way for us to go to, and transferred to Comstock, which was much more convenient.

During the course of the years, about 15 or 20 visits were made to him. And that gentleman always accompanied me.

Mr. LANSKY. Through the windshield, too; pardon me.

Mr. POLAKOFF. I tried to get out of going each time. But Commissioner Lyons insisted that I be present, because he felt that would be an insurance against any possible violation of prison rules.

After Luciano was paroled, to be deported, and there was no other condition attached to it but that he be deported—he was sent to Ellis Island, and at that time we had missed him in prison, and I arranged for a visit at Ellis Island to see him off and say good-by to him for Mr. Lansky and one other person. The other person is Mike Lascari; you might as well know the facts.

Those are the only two people that I arranged the visit for. And again I had to go as an insurance that there would be no violation of the rules. They signed their names; they were examined and searched, and the visit was in the presence of several customs men or officials of Ellis Island.

That is all there is to that story.

Mr. HALLEY. What conversation was there, Mr. Lansky, between you and Mr. Luciano?

Mr. LANSKY. Compensation?

Mr. HALLEY. Conversation.

Mr. LANSKY. I couldn't recall, but it was nothing of any secret conversation.

You mean, when I went to the prisons?

The CHAIRMAN. No, when you went to Ellis Island.

Mr. LANSKY. Just to say good-by.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did Lascari go; was he a friend of Luciano?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, he was a friend of the family, I think.

Mr. POLAKOFF. And Lascari also visited in prison with him.

Mr. HALLEY. Visited what?

Mr. POLAKOFF. In prison with him.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Polakoff, who was in Naval Intelligence that requested the aid?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Murray Gurfein. I met with him and Frank Hogan. Then, the next day, Murray Gurfein introduced us to a man we met for the first time. At that time Mr. Lansky was present, and so was Commander Haffenden.

Now, this procedure, or this event took place not at Luciano's request, not at anybody's request except people connected with the Government. He agreed to go through with it. If he didn't, he would have been a bad so-and-so. Because he did, he is also a bad so-and-so.

Now, I don't know what happened, or what good he accomplished. But I do know that in 194—one of the years after the war, and after Mr. Justice McCook retired, an application was made before Mr. Justice McCook to reduce his sentence, that is, to parole him on the basis of consecutive sentences. He got 10 to 20, 10 to 15, and 10 to 15 consecutively. And the court still had jurisdiction to commute, or to let him on the consecutive sentences.

At that time Mr. Justice McCook, who had no use whatsoever for defendant, Luciano, held a private hearing, and in his official opinion filed in the court records, he states that he heard witnesses in private, and that there was evidence before him that the defendant, Luciano, tried to be of some service, with some possible success.

So there is no question about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did either you—did you, let's say, get any information from Luciano, or did he convey it directly to the Navy authority?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Mr. Halley, this whole thing was supposed to be off the record, and sub rosa. The theory behind it was that the Government had the Germans pretty well spotted, but they were afraid that if any sabotage might be done, it would be done through Italians, who weren't well spotted. And this was supposed to be off the record, and they were only supposed to be given leads.

Now, what success those leads led to, I don't know. We all know that informers are never given credit for the results; and we all know—as your committee probably does—it protects the sources of information, and doesn't disclose them.

Now, this thing was supposed to be all off the record. But in view of all the conjecture and guesses and surmises that had been made about it, I have now for the first time told anybody the facts in the case. And Mr. Lansky was the person that I picked.

Mr. HALLEY. The original approach came from Murray Gurfein?

Mr. POLAKOFF. From Murray Gurfein.

Mr. HALLEY. And he took you immediately to this man Haffenden?

Mr. POLAKOFF. No. We went to the district attorney's office, Murray and I, and he told me what he wanted. And he wanted to know if I would act as an intermediary, and I told him I would be happy to.

I had served in the First World War. But that I was not familiar with these people and I would have to take one person with me in whom I had confidence.

The CHAIRMAN. That is Mr. Lansky?

Mr. POLAKOFF. That is correct, sir.

MR. HALLEY. Weren't you with Luciano when he went aboard the boat on which he was deported, Mr. Lansky?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

MR. HALLEY. Did you accompany him to the boat?

Mr. LANSKY, No.

Mr. HALLEY. And you never were on it?

Mr. LANSKY. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. I refer to the steamship Laura Keane, the boat on which Luciano was deported.

Mr. LANSKY. No.

MR. HALLEY. You did not go to the boat?

Mr. LANSKY. I wasn't in New York at the time, I don't think. I am pretty sure I wasn't.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Luciano when you were in Italy?

Mr. LANSKY. I wouldn't have seen him if it wasn't for the press, Mr. Halley. I am going to answer that question.

MR. HALLEY. You did see him?

Mr. LANSKY. I did see him. It was all the fault of the

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean when you say it was ^g or ^r fault of the press? ^{would}

Mr. LANSKY. Because he called me when I was about ^{would} to leave Rome. As far as I knew, he was in jail. And I said, "How the hell did you know where I am staying?"

He says, "Well, I got it from the paper, and I traced you through Naples, Hotel Excelsior." Because I had my itinerary made up with Cook's Tours.

I wouldn't have gone, because they had me routed on the Queen Mary, and then they said they couldn't get me on that boat, and they put me on this Italia. From then on, I got buckwheats. I had some trip.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean, it was purely an accident that you were routed through Italy?

Mr. LANSKY. On my part.

Mr. HALLEY. It was the initiative of Cook's Tours?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes. You see, when I tried to get reservations, they said they would get me out on the Queen Mary. I think, on July something, the first week in July. Then they called me up and they said they were very sorry, they couldn't fulfill that contract, but they have a new boat that is going to make a Mediterranean cruise, and that I better take it, because I won't get anything else, unless I want to go in August.

Well, I couldn't go because my kid was going to camp, and I just wanted to spend the time that she would be away in camp.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you visit with Luciano?

Mr. LANSKY. Just that dinner with him, and period.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you see him?

Mr. LANSKY. In Rome. Whatever the restaurant is, I don't know I can't tell you that.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean, at a restaurant in Rome?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He did not come to your hotel?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes. He called me in that hotel, and he came up to see me, and he says, "Do you want to have dinner with me?"

He invited me to dinner, and I said, "O. K." I couldn't very well refuse him.

Mr. HALLEY. And was there any discussion about any matters in the United States?

Mr. LANSKY. No. Just he told me how he was being crucified, and what happened to him. And I told him, I says, "You have nothing to kick about; look at the way I am being crucified."

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him when he was in Habana?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't recall. I was over in Habana. I may have seen him there. I don't recall, though.

Mr. HALLEY. It wasn't so long ago. Will you think a minute, because you should be able to remember one way or the other.

The CHAIRMAN. What was that, 1948, 1949?

Mr. POLAKOFF. No; it was earlier than that. It was 1945 or 1946.

Mr. HALLEY. I think it was a few years ago.

Mr. LANSKY. I guess I have seen him there. I don't remember how long I saw him there.

Mr. HALLEY. When you went to Habana, with whom did you go on the occasion when you saw Luciano?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't remember now.

Mr. HALLEY. Perhaps I should ask you, how many times did you see Luciano when he was in Habana?

Mr. LANSKY. I couldn't tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. More than once?

Mr. LANSKY. If I saw him, I couldn't have seen him more than twice because, as a rule, I go over to Habana every year.

Mr. HALLEY. How often did you go to Habana during the year that Luciano was there?

Mr. LANSKY. I couldn't have gone too often, because I can't go away that much.

Mr. HALLEY. That winter you were in Florida, I presume?

Mr. LANSKY. I guess so.

Mr. HALLEY. You had certain interests in Broward County; is that right?

(No response.)

Mr. HALLEY. In any event, you were in business in Florida; let's put it that way?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you do, fly over to Habana from time to time?

Mr. LANSKY. Just a minute, Mr. Halley. I may have flown over to Habana for business, too.

Mr. HALLEY. I understand that.

Mr. LANSKY. I was in business a long time ago.

Mr. HALLEY. In Habana?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you in business in Habana?

Mr. LANSKY. In the late years of 1937.

Mr. HALLEY. What business did you have there?

Mr. LANSKY. I had the race track, and a casino, Nationale.

Mr. HALLEY. What interest did you have, first, in the race track?

Mr. LANSKY. What do you mean, first in the race track?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I am taking them one, two. First, what interest did you have in the race track?

Mr. LANSKY. Operation.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you own it?

Mr. LANSKY. No, we leased it from the National City Bank.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is "we"?

Mr. LANSKY. The partnership.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were your partners?

Mr. LANSKY. There was a man by the name of Al Levy.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else?

Mr. LANSKY. Then Martin was interested.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know who else.

Mr. HALLEY. Frank Costello a trustee?

Mr. LANSKY. No, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Longy Zwillman?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. After the race track—

The CHAIRMAN. Let's see if he can think who else was interested. Was somebody by the name of Pfeiffer?

The WITNESS. No; that was before my time. They were a couple of years ahead of me. They were the tail end of prohibition.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Al Levy connected with Erickson?

Mr. LANSKY. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Erickson have any interest in the track?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't remember now whether he did or he didn't.

Mr. HALLEY. He might have?

Mr. LANSKY. I couldn't answer that. I don't know what his connections were. He went down a couple of times, but I didn't know if he had any connection. I don't remember all that.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Abe Allenberg interested in any way in the track?

Mr. LANSKY. No; not as a stockholder that I would know.

Mr. HALLEY. Or in any other way?

Mr. LANSKY. I wouldn't know.

Mr. HALLEY. What interest did you have in the Nationale Casino?

Mr. LANSKY. Same way; operation of the casino.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was interested in that with you?

Mr. LANSKY. Just the same people that I tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. The identical people, or were there any other people who were in the casino?

Mr. LANSKY. What do you mean, the identical people?

Mr. POLAKOFF. The same people.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes. The same people that were in the race track; that was one operation.

Mr. HALLEY. One operation for both?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you operate the entire casino, or were there any other interests in the casino?

Mr. LANSKY. Outside of the restaurant; we rented out.

Mr. HALLEY. You operated all of the gambling; is that right?

(No response.)

Mr. HALLEY. It is legal in Cuba?

Mr. LANSKY. Sure, it is legal; yes. But the reason we didn't operate the restaurant—I didn't need anyone else to operate it, Mr. Halley—was just to be able to get along with the Cuban people, you see. One does a different kind of cooking for them, and not to run into any friction with labor.

I didn't need anybody else to operate the restaurant, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have an interest in the President Hotel in Cuba? El Presidente, I think they call it.

Mr. LANSKY. No, no. That hotel is deteriorated.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, before it deteriorated?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether Costello did?

Mr. LANSKY. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. In any event, that was some years before the period we are talking about in connection with Luciano. During the period Luciano was there, it would be your position that you did get over to Cuba and see him at least twice; is that right?

Mr. LANSKY. I didn't get over just to see him. I may have gone over on business.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you go to Cuba?

Mr. LANSKY. Well, just as I tell you. At that time I was very much interested to try to get the Montmartre Club.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have the race track and the casino at the time Luciano was there?

Mr. LANSKY. No, no; we stopped when the war broke out. You see, because after that, there weren't any boats on the sea. And at that time you didn't have enough planes, and you couldn't live from the planes coming from Miami. You can't live from Cuban people themselves.

The CHAIRMAN. May I ask, were these big operations, the race track and the casino at the Nationale Hotel—the Nationale Casino?

Mr. LANSKY. Big operations?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. LANSKY. Well, we took it when it was pretty well run down.

The CHAIRMAN. But was it a million-dollar operation?

Mr. LANSKY. No, nothing like that, Senator. A leased proposition, and we tried to develop it. Unfortunately, the war broke out.

Mr. HALLEY. Aside from the amount of money involved, the Nationale Casino, it was a tremendous and beautiful place in Cuba?

Mr. LANSKY. Oh, sure; it was.

Mr. HALLEY. It has probably more floor space for gambling than any other place in the hemisphere; doesn't it?

Mr. LANSKY. Well, I guess it does.

Mr. HALLEY. And it is a gorgeous, beautiful big building?

Mr. LANSKY. Oh, sure it was.

Mr. HALLEY. With a tremendous, absolutely beautiful restaurant?

Mr. LANSKY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And another place for dancing?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. It is quite a lay-out, in other words?

Mr. LANSKY. It is.

Mr. HALLEY. And the track is a good-sized race track?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes, the track was a good-sized race track. I think it had one of the most beautiful clubhouses in the country.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you talk to Luciano about when you saw him in Cuba?

Mr. LANSKY. Mr. Halley, I couldn't even recall what I talked about. I know it was nothing of importance.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Purely social.

Mr. LANSKY. Purely social. What else could I talk to him about?

Mr. HALLEY. Did it have anything to do with any business matters whatsoever?

Mr. LANSKY. No, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Whether legal or illegal?

Mr. LANSKY. No business, illegal or legal, with him.

Mr. HALLEY. First, do you know of—

Mr. LANSKY. I was purely looking for legal business in Cuba.

Mr. HALLEY. I am also referring to legal or illegal business in the United States.

Mr. LANSKY. I had no business with him here.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't talk any business with him whatsoever?

Mr. LANSKY. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do when you saw Luciano in Habana?

Mr. LANSKY. Gee, I can't recall. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have dinner with him?

Mr. LANSKY. I may have eaten with him. That's about all.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, try to remember. I should think there would be a picture in your mind of what happened.

Mr. LANSKY. I don't think anything startling happened that I would have a picture in my mind, outside of maybe having dinner, or just purely social.

Mr. HALLEY. I know that going to Habana is not a too unusual affair to you. But it seems to me that when I went to Habana in those years, although I didn't see "Lucky" Luciano, I could give you a pretty vivid description of everything I did, or whether I have gone to any other place, going back 5 or 10 years.

Mr. LANSKY. I spent 4 years in Habana, and about 6 months a year. I mean, to me Habana used to become very tiring.

Mr. HALLEY. But, not by 1945 or 1946—well, it was after that. It must have been around 1947 or 1948. Luciano just was deported in 1946. And then he was in Italy for awhile.

Mr. LANSKY. I was in Habana right after the war, Mr. Halley; before there was ever Luciano there. I am speaking right after the war.

Mr. HALLEY. We are talking about Luciano.

Mr. LANSKY. I know.

Mr. HALLEY. So let's not get off the track.

Look, Mr. Lansky, Luciano was deported in 1946. He was in Italy at least a year before he got out into Habana.

Mr. LANSKY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Which makes it 1947 or 1948. And you should be able to remember what you did in Cuba in those years when you saw "Lucky" Luciano.

Mr. LANSKY. Well, I know I didn't do anything outside of going to the hotel, and I may have gone to the race track.

Mr. HALLEY. What hotel did you stay in, in those days; the Nationale?

Mr. LANSKY. The Nationale.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Luciano have a home in Cuba?

Mr. LANSKY. I think he had an apartment; I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever there?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know if I went over there or not. I can't answer you.

Mr. HALLEY. You just can't say. That's absurd. You must know whether—

Mr. LANSKY. Mr. Halley, I didn't attach that much importance to it, to analyze it that way. I mean, I don't know if he showed me his home, or I drove by it, or most likely he came over to the hotel to visit me. I don't know if he did or not. I went to the race track, I guess, or to a casino.

Mr. HALLEY. You, in any event, didn't talk any business?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Did you have any business with him, or talk any business with him, anything illegal or legal?

Mr. LANSKY. No; no business whatsoever.

Mr. POLAKOFF. You have that on record.

Mr. HALLEY. But it would be possible to attach more credibility to your answers if your memory were better on obvious matters about what you must have a recollection, in my opinion.

Mr. POLAKOFF. I don't want to argue with you, Mr. Halley, but you might not know who you had lunch with in Habana when you were there either, and you only went there once.

Mr. LANSKY. I know a lot of people in Habana, Mr. Halley. When I go there, I know a lot of people. I spend a lot of time there. And we used to have a lot of people come to our place. It seats about 600 people, you know.

Mr. HALLEY. What place is that?

Mr. LANSKY. The casino.

Mr. HALLEY. No; we are now back in 1947—

Mr. LANSKY. And at the race track, at times.

Mr. HALLEY. You are talking about a period 10 years earlier, now. I am talking about 1947 or 1948, when Luciano was in Cuba.

Mr. LANSKY. Yes; I understand you. But I am trying to tell you that I knew so many more people. I would have been over in Habana this year if it wasn't—I didn't know when I would be called by this committee.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know a George Goldstein, the accountant?

Mr. LANSKY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. LANSKY. Maybe a period of about 10 years, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you first meet him?

Mr. LANSKY. I think I met him around Lido Beach, if I am not mistaken; along the shore somewhere.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you first introduce Goldstein to Longy Zwillman?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or to Anthony Guarini?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or to Salvatore Moretti?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or to Joe Adonis?

Mr. LANSKY. No, not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Goldstein operated, for your information, if you don't know it, as an accountant for certain gambling enterprises in New Jersey, and the partners in that enterprise, the first enterprise, were Guarini, Rutkin, Solly Moretti, Jerry Catena, and Joe Adonis.

First, do you know all of those five people?

Mr. LANSKY. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, did you introduce Goldstein to any of them?

Mr. LANSKY. Not that I can remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Goldstein has represented you; is that right?

Mr. LANSKY. Correct.

Mr. HALLEY. In what connection?

Mr. LANSKY. He filed my returns.

Mr. HALLEY. What else has he done for you?

Mr. LANSKY. All he did was prepare my returns.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he represent you in connection with the Beverly Club?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer that, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. The testimony is already before this committee from Mr. Costello that you had been in the Beverly Club; and also from Mr. Goldstein, that he represented you there.

Under those circumstances, do you still desire to plead your privilege?

The CHAIRMAN. We have all the records of the Beverly Club.

Mr. POLAKOFF. As long as you have them, Mr. Halley, what I don't understand, if you have that information, why force a man, or try to compel him to answer a question which, in his mind, may lead to something that may incriminate him? If you have it, so much the better.

Mr. HALLEY. I haven't tried to compel him. I said that, under those circumstances, if he didn't want to talk about it——

Mr. LANSKY. I said that he was my accountant.

Mr. POLAKOFF. So that you may know his position, Mr. Lansky will answer any question that doesn't incriminate him. He will not answer any question about his business or source of income, because that may incriminate him. Other than that——

Mr. HALLEY. He has referred to having participated in certain businesses, and I will refrain from asking him about the amount of income.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Isn't that the first step in proving that he had an interest in the business, to prove that he may have committed a crime?

Mr. HALLEY. He has talked freely about his interest in certain juke-box operations.

Mr. POLAKOFF. That was perfectly all right in our opinion. In other words, we are now trying to meet you.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's——

Mr. POLAKOFF. You once said in some other hearing that when a man waives his right; he is not waiving any right. He has answered those questions which don't incriminate him. If you are going into that field that may incriminate him, he is not going to answer it.

You may have the information yourself. You undoubtedly have his income-tax returns, which show some of these things. But he doesn't have to admit it to you.

Mr. HALLEY. I simply asked the question. We weren't trying to order him.

Mr. LANSKY. No; I decline to answer it, Mr. Halley, on the ground it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Lascari?

Mr. LANSKY. For many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business relationships with him, of any kind?

Mr. LANSKY. Never had any.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever send any money directly or indirectly to Lucky Luciano since he left the United States?

Mr. LANSKY. No; I didn't.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any knowledge of any money, or assets of any kind, that were given or sent to "Lucky" Luciano since he left the United States?

Mr. LANSKY. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether anybody in this country does send money, or any other valuable assets, to Luciano?

Mr. LANSKY. I wouldn't know that, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no knowledge of that whatsoever?

Mr. LANSKY. I have no knowledge of it.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Did you ever send him any?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. He has testified that he did not.

Mr. LANSKY, during the last 4 years what has been your business?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any business at the present time?

Mr. LANSKY. No. I am not in business at the present time.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last have any business?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't know; 6 or 9 months.

Mr. HALLEY. And what business did you last have?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground it may incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the last legitimate business you had, the jukebox business?

The CHAIRMAN. Let's speak up, now; get the answers in here.

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground it may incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. I think I will have to order you to answer that question, Mr. LANSKY.

Mr. POLAKOFF. What is the question then?

The CHAIRMAN. Let's read the question.

(The reporter read the previous question, as follows:)

What is the last legitimate business you had, the jukebox business?

Mr. LANSKY. The M. B. Distributing Co.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is the jukebox business?

(Mr. LANSKY nods head in affirmative.)

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't the television business more recent?

Mr. LANSKY. I wasn't active in it. I am telling you the business that I was active in. I wasn't active. I just owned some stock.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have at this time any stock holdings or other business interests in which you are not active?

Mr. LANSKY. In business?

Mr. HALLEY. In any kind of business?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't have any stock or financial interest in any business, or financial enterprises?

Mr. POLAKOFF. You are asking, has he got any business? Do you mean if he owns 100 shares of General Motors?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you own stocks in various companies; let's put it that way?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer on the ground it may incriminate me.

Mr. POLAKOFF. That is one of the methods the Government works, is that net worth statement, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. I don't want that. However, he has declined to answer, and he will stand on that.

Now, in connection with the television company, you own stock; is that right?

Mr. LANSKY. I did own.

Mr. HALLEY. You did?

Mr. LANSKY. I don't own it any more.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you own a substantial interest in the company?

Mr. LANSKY. No. I don't—I don't know what it amounts to. I don't think it was more than 10 percent at the time, or 9 percent, or something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Are there any companies in which, since then, since the television enterprise, in which you have owned more than, say, 5 percent of the company?

Mr. LANSKY. I decline to answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't that a fact—let me ask the question this way—are there any legitimate businesses in which, since the television company, you have owned more than 5 percent?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. I am learning how to play this game with you.

Mr. POLAKOFF. He did own——

Mr. LANSKY. A piece of real estate, I owned.

Mr. POLAKOFF. He had a 25-percent interest in a piece of real estate.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was the real estate?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Seventy-third and Madison Avenue. He had no active part.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that sold?

Mr. POLAKOFF. Last June.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been active in the real estate business?

Mr. LANSKY. No; not now.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever?

Mr. LANSKY. No. But I am going to look to get.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't take any active part in the management of this real estate?

Mr. LANSKY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you hold it?

Mr. LANSKY. About 13 years, 12, 14. It was about that long.

Mr. HALLEY. With whom else did you hold that real estate?

Mr. LANSKY. Ask the lawyer. He remembers it better than me.

Mr. POLAKOFF. There were four people. Three of them have nothing to do with this. Each had a 25-percent interest.

Mr. HALLEY. Can we have the names?

Mr. POLAKOFF. People that have nothing to do with any of these so-called things that you are investigating. One is dead; his wife, Mrs. Rosenbaum—you don't want those names.

Mr. HALLEY. Just submit them—on your assurance that they have nothing to do with any of these matters; I will take a written statement from you giving the names, and we will just keep it in the file.

Mr. POLAKOFF. It has nothing to do with anyone you have mentioned.

Mr. HALLEY. We have no further questions. Thank you very much. (Mr. Lansky was excused.)

(Mr. Polakoff at this point requested a copy of the transcript.)

Mr. HALLEY. You may buy a copy of the testimony, with the usual understanding that it is not to be disclosed to anyone else.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Of course, we won't disclose it. But I don't want to be facetious, but you say it is secret; and tomorrow all the press are going to have the story, because I believe members of the press are present at this hearing; aren't they?

Mr. HALLEY. No. These are all people working with our committee.

Mr. POLAKOFF. I see. At the same time, may I have a copy of this—I will pay for it also—of his previous private testimony for our own use?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. POLAKOFF. I had written the stenographer a long time ago, but I had never gotten a reply to it.

Mr. HALLEY. You may have that.

Mr. POLAKOFF. Thank you. And I will use it for my own use. If you want to know the three other people, I will tell it to you now. (Mr. Polakoff at this point spoke to Mr. Halley privately.)

TESTIMONY OF JAMES J. MORAN, COMMISSIONER, BOARD OF WATER SUPPLY, NEW YORK, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you solemnly swear the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. MORAN. I do.

Mr. LAZARUS. Will you please give your name to the stenographer.

Mr. MORAN. James J. Moran.

Mr. LAZARUS. Your address?

Mr. MORAN. 545 Eighth Street, Brooklyn.

Mr. LAZARUS. What are you doing at the present time, Mr. Moran?

Mr. MORAN. I am commissioner in the board of water supply.

Senator TOBEX. Was that for a number of years?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Senator TOBEX. You don't want to resign; is that it?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. LAZARUS. For your information, Senator, it is a position without tenure, to be held without—during good conduct, and removal on charges.

Before you were commissioner of water supply, Mr. Moran, what did you do?

Mr. MORAN. I was first deputy fire commissioner.

Mr. LAZARUS. How long did you hold that position?

Mr. MORAN. A little over 4 years—4 years and 4 months.

Mr. LAZARUS. And prior thereto, what were you engaged in?

Mr. MORAN. I was chief clerk at the district attorney's office.

Mr. LAZARUS. And you held that office for how long?

Mr. MORAN. About 5 years, and 8 months.

Senator TOBEX. Who was district attorney then?

Mr. MORAN. William O'Dwyer. Part of the time he was absent, though.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was that a civil service place, or an exempt office?

Mr. MORAN. Exempt.

Mr. LAZARUS. How soon after Mr. O'Dwyer's election as district attorney did you receive your appointment?

Mr. MORAN. First of January 1940.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was that a personal appointment, so far as you know?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I would say yes. I was with him in the county court before then.

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes, tell us about that.

Mr. MORAN. I was a court attendant in the county court, from the first of January 1929, until December 31, 1939.

Mr. LAZARUS. That was during the entire time that Mr. O'Dwyer had been county judge?

Mr. MORAN. He was county judge for 2 years at that time.

Mr. LAZARUS. Will you describe to us your duties as chief clerk of the district attorney's office in Kings County?

Mr. MORAN. Well, at the time I was at the district attorney's office, I had charge of the personnel, making up of calendars, and so forth. In substance, that was about the duties; making up of payrolls, and in charge of the clerical personnel.

Mr. LAZARUS. General supervision of the office?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you ever occupy any political place or office?

Mr. MORAN. I did not.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you have any participation in the nomination or election of Mr. O'Dwyer to any of the offices he has held?

Mr. MORAN. I did not.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you ever attend any conferences of persons who were interested in the nomination or election of Mr. O'Dwyer at any time?

Mr. MORAN. No; I would not have been allowed into any of the conferences.

Mr. LAZARUS. Why not?

Mr. MORAN. Because I was not in the political picture at all.

Mr. LAZARUS. I didn't mean a party matter, or as a party political matter. I mean, as a friendly discussion among the friends of the former mayor, who were interested in his nomination?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Never attended any conferences?

Mr. MORAN. Yes; I did.

Mr. LAZARUS. You did?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Can you recall what those were?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I can't recall offhand, but there were conferences with his brother, and his brother's partner, and maybe one or two others; maybe sometimes with some of the members of the district attorney's staff.

At the time he was appointed county judge, I did not know him—I mean, I had seen him around, but I didn't know him. So I naturally would have nothing to do with that.

Mr. LAZARUS. Let me take you back to a time in 1941, while you were in the district attorney's office, and Mr. O'Dwyer was district attorney.

Do you recall a visit made to that office by Mr. Costello, Mr. Frank Costello?

Mr. MORAN. I never saw Mr. Costello in his office.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you ever meet Mr. Costello?

Mr. MORAN. I did.

Mr. LAZARUS. Can you tell us when and where?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I wouldn't be sure whether I had met him before this one particular time, but there was some time during General O'Dwyer's tenure in the Army. I met him at his home.

Now, I wouldn't be sure of the time. I think it was in 1942; it might have been 1943.

Mr. LAZARUS. At whose home?

Mr. MORAN. Costello's home.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you remember where that was?

Mr. MORAN. Yes. It was on Central Park West, I believe, Seventy-second Street.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was that in your official capacity as chief clerk?

Mr. MORAN. No; it was not. Because William O'Dwyer was not district attorney at the time. But he asked me if I would go up with him.

As a matter of fact, I had arranged the appointment through Michael Kennedy, who was then the county leader of New York County.

Mr. LAZARUS. Can you give us the purpose of that meeting, the reason for the meeting?

Mr. MORAN. Well, as near as I can remember, there was some question of a tie-up between Costello and a Joe Baker; or there were other names that Baker was supposed to have; I can't remember what they were.

He was supposed then to be tied up with some Captain Schaeffer, who was out at the Army airfield, because the communication on it came through the district attorney's office at the time.

As near as I could see it, it was a question as to whether or not he was tied up with Baker, or what there was in this proposition.

Mr. LAZARUS. How did you happen to call Mr. Kennedy to make the appointment?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I knew Michael Kennedy at the time, and I spoke to him and asked him if he could arrange the appointment, because I had gotten a telephone call from, then, Major, I think, O'Dwyer, about arranging this appointment, that there was this problem over some business, I believe, at Wright Field. I wouldn't be sure.

Mr. LAZARUS. I am sure that the committee would be interested in knowing why you selected Mr. Kennedy as the man who might make this appointment?

Mr. MORAN. Well, as far as knowing why I selected Kennedy; I wouldn't know.

Mr. LAZARUS. It just occurred to you?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you think that Mr. Kennedy might know Mr. Costello?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was that the reason you called him?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. LAZARUS. How would you have come to the conclusion that he might know him; can you tell us?

Mr. MORAN. Sure. I read it in the newspapers. The newspapers were filled that Kennedy and Costello were friends at the time.

Senator TOBEY. What was Kennedy's business?

Mr. MORAN. He was in the insurance business.

Senator TOBEY. What newspaper account made the relationship?

Mr. MORAN. Kennedy was county leader of New York County.

Mr. LAZARUS. Is that the reason you thought he might know Mr. Costello?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. LAZARUS. Will you think real hard, Mr. Moran, and see if you can't recall whether there was another occasion in 1942 when you might have visited that apartment of Mr. Costello?

Mr. MORAN. I don't think I did.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know Mr. Irving Sherman?

Mr. MORAN. I do.

Mr. LAZARUS. Would you tell us how you know him? In what connection?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I have known Irving Sherman since, oh, back, probably 20 years, around.

Mr. LAZARUS. What is his business?

Mr. MORAN. As near as I can figure out, he has a clothing business, or suits or coats; something like that.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know of any other business he participates in?

Mr. MORAN. I don't know.

Mr. LAZARUS. What was that?

Mr. MORAN. I do not.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know Judge Savarese of Queens County? Anthony Savarese?

Mr. MORAN. No; I wouldn't be sure that I ever met him or knew him.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know Mr. Bert Stand?

Mr. MORAN. I do.

Mr. LAZARUS. Would he have been present at the conference which you attended in Mr. Costello's apartment?

Mr. MORAN. I don't think so.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know Clarence Neal?

Mr. MORAN. I do.

Mr. LAZARUS. But you can't recall his being there, either?

Mr. MORAN. As far as Clarence Neal is concerned, I would be almost positive he wasn't there.

Mr. LAZARUS. Why would you be more positive in the case of Neal than anyone else?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I would remember Neal more than I would anyone else.

Mr. LAZARUS. Why would that be?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I have met Neal more often than I have met the others.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was it a social meeting? Are you friends?

Mr. MORAN. Not friends in the sense of being socially friendly at all.

Mr. LAZARUS. Would you care to tell the committee how it was that you met him more frequently than the others?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I had met him off and on around the fights. Up to about 1945 I was quite a fight fan. Since then I have gone to none.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you remember any meetings at Cavanagh's Restaurant on Twenty-third Street in Manhattan?

Mr. MORAN. I remember being in Cavanagh's on Twenty-third Street on many occasions.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was Mr. O'Dwyer at any—there at any time that you visited Cavanagh's?

Mr. MORAN. General O'Dwyer and I ate in Cavanagh's many times.

Mr. LAZARUS. And at Dinty Moore's, I suppose, too?

Mr. MORAN. Yes. Not many times did Mayor O'Dwyer eat at Dinty Moore's.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you ever represent former Mayor O'Dwyer at any meetings held in Cavanagh's Restaurant?

Mr. MORAN. I was at the meeting at Cavanagh's Restaurant, and I don't know who was there at all. At the time there was some question as to whether or not O'Dwyer would run for governor.

I believe O'Dwyer at that time was in the Army. And he himself told me, when I spoke to him, he would not run for governor. That was the time that Colonel Bennett ran for governor.

Mr. LAZARUS. Would it be possible that Mr. Costello would have visited the office of the district attorney while Mr. O'Dwyer was district attorney, and you would not know of it?

Mr. MORAN. Well, yes, that could be; because there were several times I was in the hospital. Outside of that, I was always in the district attorney's office.

Mr. LAZARUS. As chief clerk, wouldn't you have some record of the people who called on the district attorney, called at the district attorney's office?

Mr. MORAN. Yes; there used to be a record kept in the book there.

Mr. LAZARUS. Everyone who called?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. So it wouldn't have been possible for anyone to call there without a record being made of the visit in that book?

Mr. MORAN. I would expect every name to be included in that book.

Mr. LAZARUS. You say it was possible for someone to call at that office without the name being recorded?

Mr. MORAN. It could be possible; yes.

Senator TOBEX. Of course, it could be possible if instructions were given not to record a certain person.

Mr. LAZARUS. The circumstances of nonrecording, I suppose, would be something that Mr. Moran might tell us about. I don't know who had charge.

Would you have had charge of the entries in that book?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. LAZARUS. Would you have charge of the records of the office?

Mr. MORAN. Well, in a sense; yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. What would be the limitation. You say "in a sense."

Mr. MORAN. Well, I mean, as far as the keeping of a book was concerned, I mean. I wouldn't pay too much attention to the keeping of the book. There were policemen assigned there that just keep the book and keep the record of the people that came in and out.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you ever give an order that a name be not entered in that visitors' book?

Mr. MORAN. Outside of prisoners; no.

Senator TOBEX. Would that include not only prisoners, but those who ought to be in prison?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I don't know, sir, if that's something that I should answer. I don't know enough about who should and who should not be in prison.

Senator TOBEY. I was facetious; forgive me.

Mr. MORAN. Yes, sir.

But when I say "prisoners," I mean witnesses that were brought in for the purpose of testifying, and things like that.

Mr. LAZARUS. Would you ever have attended any meetings of political leaders or other persons interested, in conferences leading to the nomination or designation of Mr. O'Dwyer to any office?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. LAZARUS. Never discussed that matter with anyone?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. LAZARUS. We have listened to testimony, Mr. Moran, which would take you back to the period of time when you were chief clerk at the district attorney's office.

You were a witness, I think, at the time Mr. Beldock succeeded—rather, superseded Mr. O'Dwyer as district attorney, who conducted a survey of that office?

Mr. MORAN. May I say that your choice of language on superseding is a little bit wrong.

Mr. LAZARUS. Well, correct me, please.

Mr. MORAN. He did not supersede him. O'Dwyer just resigned; Beldock was appointed by Governor Dewey to fill his place. So that there was no superseding of O'Dwyer as district attorney.

Mr. LAZARUS. I will accept your explanation. He was merely appointed to an interim appointment—as an interim district attorney until the next election?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. LAZARUS. There was a time when the Anastasia case was under discussion, and I believe you were a witness as to the circumstances of the failure to indict Mr. Anastasia?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Can you generally give us a description of your part in that case? What do you know about it?

You testified to certain facts, the missing records of certain arrests, and of some witnesses. Could you tell us something about it?

Mr. MORAN. What do you mean by "missing records"?

Mr. LAZARUS. Let's be specific about it. There was a time when a man by the name of Romeo, who was under arrest, was released because the records of your office, the office of the district attorney, were found to be missing; and those were the records necessary to hold him. Can you recall that?

Mr. MORAN. There were no records of the district attorney's office missing at any time, up to the 15th of August 1945. And as far as Romeo or anybody else concerned, there never was the question of whether or not there was missing records.

As far as the so-called Albert Anastasia case was concerned, there never was a case on Albert Anastasia. Albert Anastasia gave himself up to John Harlan Amen, who was then finishing up as special prosecutor, or superseding prosecutor for the previous district attorney's period. And John Harlan Amen called Thomas Craddock Hughes, who was then the acting district attorney of Kings County, as to whether or not he wanted Anastasia, or whether or not he had a case, and Thomas Craddock Hughes answered him that he didn't want him.

Shortly after that the case was taken up, because there was no sense of cluttering up these files with wanted cards. As far as any possibility of convicting Albert Anastasia at that time was concerned, there was a young boy who, I think, was both blind, and maybe had other afflictions in addition to that, who was questioned around the district attorney's office by Burton Turkus for a period of 2 or 3 months, which was the supposedly, the crux of the Anastasia case.

As far as Anastasia was concerned, if there ever was a murder case on him, there still is.

MR. LAZARUS. Your opinion as to whether there was a case on Mr. Anastasia differs somewhat from the sworn testimony of Mr. O'Dwyer, who said there was a perfect case against him.

MR. MORAN. Well, a long while ago, when I first started to work in law offices, I found out there was a court of appeals that differed even with judges.

I differ with General O'Dwyer as to what he thought was a perfect case.

MR. LAZARUS. Are you admitted to the bar as a lawyer?

MR. MORAN. I am not.

MR. LAZARUS. Not that you couldn't know just as much law as the lawyer.

MR. MORAN. No; I don't hold myself out as knowing as much law as a lawyer.

MR. LAZARUS. Did you ever attend a law school?

MR. MORAN. I did not.

MR. HALLEY. You were familiar with the fact that Mayor O'Dwyer did testify that he thought there was a perfect case against Albert Anastasia?

MR. MORAN. That's right.

MR. HALLEY. At that time did you tell him you differed with him?

MR. MORAN. No. I think it would be impertinent on my part if I did.

MR. HALLEY. Why?

MR. MORAN. No. 1, not being a lawyer; and No. 2, being a subordinate; why should I tell him that—the first I heard of the reference to a perfect case against Albert Anastasia was a question put to me before the grand jury in December 1945, by Mr. Beldock. And at that time my answer was the same, if you have the record there.

MR. LAZARUS. From the copy of the presentment at that time, may I refresh your recollection of what the testimony of William O'Dwyer was:

Question. Anastasia was not only one of the biggest of the big shots, but you found that he played a hand in every murder committed in Brooklyn, and you finally got him in the case, didn't you?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. And you could have gotten an indictment against him, couldn't you?

Answer. Yes.

Question. And sent him to the electric chair?

Answer. Yes.

The conflict of opinions as to evidence constitutes sufficient evidence to indict. Let's drop that.

I am reading from another presentment in Kings County, dated October 29, 1945. One of the findings is:

That the removal of the "wanted notices," for Romeo—

I think it is—it is unclear—

Parisi, Anastasia, and other fugitives from the Bureau of Criminal Identification, on May 4, 1942, was on the direct order of Chief Clerk James J. Moran, according to the testimony of Sergeant Divers. Divers testified these "wanted notices" were not taken out on his own accord; and that he, in fact, had no authority to do so.

Have you any comment on that?

Mr. MORAN. Yes. I don't think the wanted card on Parisi was ever taken out. Parisi was picked up in recent years, the last 2 or 3 years, and tried in Brooklyn for that crime.

Mr. LAZARUS. But the record is that the cards were missing when Mr. Beldock was in that office, the office of district attorney, and in the inquiry conducted by him.

Senator TOBEY. Who testified that, Mr. Lazarus?

Mr. LAZARUS. This is the—Divers.

He was an attaché of the office, was he not?

Mr. MORAN. He was a policeman.

Senator TOBEY. Did you know before this that he so testified?

Mr. MORAN. I knew, on the question back in 1945, on the Anastasia card.

Senator TOBEY. I mean, this testimony about the records being taken, with reference to you; did you know he made that testimony?

Mr. MORAN. I couldn't be sure of what testimony he made. I know that I was asked a question about—

Senator TOBEY. Did you ever talk to him about his testimony?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Senator TOBEY. Did Mr. O'Dwyer ever talk with you about the charge made by Mr. Divers?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Senator TOBEY. Did anybody ever talk to you about it?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Who?

Mr. MORAN. Mr. Beldock.

Senator TOBEY. What was Mr. Beldock's position?

Mr. MORAN. He questioned me before a grand jury.

Senator TOBEY. Mr. Divers testified before the same grand jury?

Mr. MORAN. I believe he did. I wouldn't be sure that he testified at all before a grand jury. But if he did, that probably would be the same grand jury.

Mr. LAZARUS. If we read you his sworn testimony, would you believe that he did so testify, Mr. Moran?

Mr. MORAN. Oh, I will take your word for what he testified. I mean, I am not questioning that. I am just questioning this—this gentleman (indicating Senator TOBEY) asked me if I knew that he testified. But I knew that I had been asked a question about the wanted card. I don't know what Divers testified to at all.

Mr. LAZARUS. There was some attempt to hold accountable someone in the office for the disappearance of certain of the records, a stenographer by the name of Anna Paris. Do you know anything about that?

Mr. MORAN. I never heard of any missing records.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know why Anna Paris was disciplined for 60 days during that period of time?

Mr. MORAN. No. I think at that time there was some complaint on the part of Mr. Beldock that she was insubordinate as far as he was concerned, and that—mostly on the basis of insubordination.

Mr. LAZARUS. That was the reason for the 30-day suspension or disciplining?

Mr. MORAN. I don't know whether it was 30 or 60.

Mr. LAZARUS. Sixty; you are right.

Mr. MORAN. I know what you mean about the missing records; now it dawns on me what you are coming to—may I be permitted to have a smoke?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; go ahead.

Mr. LAZARUS. Would you give us your opinion, Mr. Moran, why you thought they did not have a good case against Anastasia?

Mr. MORAN. I didn't think they had sufficient corroboration. This was out of the words of Burton Turkus, who was handling the case, that the witness was no good, that the witness couldn't see 3 feet ahead of him.

Mr. LAZARUS. Who was that witness?

Mr. MORAN. Oh, it was a boy, at the time, I think, was maybe 9, 10 years old. I know they had him around the office there for months.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was Abe Reles another witness?

Mr. MORAN. As to the actual killing, I don't know for sure.

Mr. LAZARUS. Why was Abe Reles held; do you know?

Mr. MORAN. Abe Reles was held growing out of several murders, including one that was committed in his own house.

Mr. LAZARUS. Was he also held in connection with the killing of Peter Panto—as his testimony being needed in the prosecution of Anastasia?

Mr. MORAN. That I wouldn't be sure. All I remember about Panto was that I found the body.

Mr. LAZARUS. Of whom?

Mr. MORAN. Peter Panto.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you find the body of Reles?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. LAZARUS. Who found the body of Reles?

Mr. MORAN. I don't know.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know that Reles was incarcerated in one or two hotels during the period that he was held as a material witness?

Mr. MORGAN. I do.

Mr. LAZARUS. Will you tell us what you know about that?

Mr. MORAN. I don't know anything about it at all, except that I know he was kept there.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you know—

Mr. MORAN. And I know the original story of Reles was given to me.

Mr. LAZARUS. What was it?

Mr. MORAN. I mean, his whole story, beginning.

Mr. LAZARUS. In connection with this case?

Mr. MORAN. That's right, in connection with all the cases.

Mr. LAZARUS. You would have knowledge of witnesses, and evidence being gathered in all prosecutions, as chief clerk, wouldn't you?

Mr. MORAN. No. In the preparation of cases, and in the digging up of evidence, testimony, and everything else, that was entirely up to the man who was prosecuting and handling the case. The cases were assigned to them. Well, in most of those cases, they were assigned to Turkus.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you ever visit the Half Moon Hotel while Reles was held there?

Mr. MORAN. I never was in the Half Moon Hotel in my life.

Mr. LAZARUS. You heard about the death of Reles indirectly; then?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. From whom did you hear it?

Mr. MORAN. I wouldn't be sure, but I believe it was Acting Captain Bals.

Senator TOBEY. Would he have knowledge of the case?

Mr. MORAN. Of which case?

Senator TOBEY. Reles?

Mr. MORAN. No; I don't believe he was there at the time. But he called me to tell me what happened to Reles.

Senator TOBEY. Shortly after it happened?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I wouldn't be sure that it was at the time it happened. But I was called before I went to the office. It might have been 9, it might have been a little before 9; something like that, that Reles was dead. He had fallen out the window.

Mr. HALLEY. Who called you, Bals?

Mr. MORAN. Bals, yes. I wouldn't be positive, but I am almost sure it was Bals.

Mr. HALLEY. I think a little while ago you said you thought you remembered what Mr. Lazarus was driving at about the missing records?

Mr. MORAN. Yes. On the missing records, at that time there were two things cropped up: No. 1, Mr. Beldock had decided I was being overpaid as chief clerk at the district attorney's office; that somewhere along the line in the Statutes or some place, it called for $5,000, and I was being paid $7,500.

So one of the headlines was that Moran, during that period of time, had taken $14,000, or something, from the city funds, and so forth.

In addition to that, they had gone through some small filing cabinet which was there, and they found a campaign button and a box of crackers in it, and insisted that there should be a lot of papers in there.

Well, there was no reason for any papers to have been there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was "they"? You mean Beldock?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever receive any papers from Anna Paris?

Mr. MORAN. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Of any kind?

Mr. MORAN. No. And she took no papers out of there at all. There were no papers ever there.

Mr. HALLEY. Were any papers taken out of the files of the district attorney's office?

Mr. MORAN. Never, during my time.

Mr. HALLEY. Or any papers relating in any way to the district attorney's office?

Mr. MORAN. That's right; never.

Mr. HALLEY. Or was it done perhaps after your time?

Mr. MORAN. No; nothing that I know of. Naturally, after my time, I know nothing about. But I know nothing about any missing records.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever receive from Anna Paris any records relating to the district attorney's office?

Mr. MORAN. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Albert Anastasia before he was indicted?

Mr. MORAN. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. MORAN. I did.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see Joe Adonis?

Mr. MORAN. Oh, possibly 2 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you see him?

Mr. MORAN. At an Italian restaurant on Forty-eighth Street, near Broadway.

Mr. HALLEY. Vesuvio?

Mr. MORAN. Vesuvio; that's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you eat with him, or just meet him?

Mr. MORAN. No; I just met him and said "Hello" to him.

Incidentally, I have known Joe Adonis since I was a child.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you grow up in Brooklyn, in that area?

Mr. MORAN. Yes. I not only grew up in Brooklyn, I went to school, and still live within 2 miles of the place I was born.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Frank Costello?

Mr. MORAN. Seven or eight years.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet him?

Mr. MORAN. At his home.

Mr. HALLEY. Under what circumstances?

Mr. MORAN. With General O'Dwyer; then Major O'Dwyer.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you doing at his home?

Mr. MORAN. I went there with Major O'Dwyer on the investigation that I spoke to Mr. Lazarus about.

Mr. HALLEY. Who suggested that, Major O'Dwyer?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. You were then still in the D. A.'s Office?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Major O'Dwyer was in the Army?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the purpose of the trip?

Mr. MORAN. Well, he went there to check on a letter that they had received, that this Joe Baker was supposedly tied up with Costello, and was using Costello in this business; whatever it was, I don't know.

I mean, the definite part of the business, or anything connected with it, was some Army business. It was nothing connected with the civilian life.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else was present at Costello's house when you got there?

Mr. MORAN. I wouldn't be too sure who was there. I do believe that Kennedy was there, but outside of that I know of no one else that was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Were there other people whom you don't remember?

Mr. MORAN. There could have been; yes.

Senator TOBEY. You testified a while ago there was something about Wright Field?

Mr. MORAN. It was in connection with Wright Field.

Senator TOBEY. Some contract or something?

Mr. MORAN. I don't know whether it was a contract or a series of contracts.

Mr. HALLEY. Kennedy, then, was leader of Tammany Hall?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you think other people might have been there?

Mr. MORAN. There could have been.

Mr. HALLEY. After the meeting, did the people present go anywhere else?

Mr. MORAN. No. Major O'Dwyer and I left.

Mr. HALLEY. You left and went where?

Mr. MORAN. Well, that I wouldn't be sure, of whether I went out to his home with him on Seventy-ninth Street, whether we went some place to sea, or what. I couldn't be too sure of that.

Mr. HALLEY. This was in 1944?

Mr. MORAN. No; I think it was before then.

Mr. HALLEY. What year?

Mr. MORAN. I wouldn't be sure whether it was 1942 or 1943.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your connection with the Air Corps business?

Mr. MORAN. I had absolutely none.

Mr. HALLEY. You were just going along to keep the major company?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And what was discussed up there?

Mr. MORAN. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. What was discussed with Costello?

Mr. MORAN. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Weren't you in the room?

Mr. MORAN. No. I had no part of the conversation, and didn't go near them at all when they were conferring.

Mr. HALLEY. Who conferred?

Mr. MORAN. Major O'Dwyer, or Colonel O'Dwyer, whatever he was then, and Costello were the two that conferred.

Mr. HALLEY. And did they go to a separate room to talk?

Mr. MORAN. No. There was a large room there; they were talking.

Mr. HALLEY. They went to one side of the room?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you didn't hear any of the conversation?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. So all you know about the purpose of the meeting was the major told you; is that right?

Mr. MORAN. Oh, no. As I said before, the letter on it came through the district attorney's office, and I turned the letter over to the then Major or Colonel O'Dwyer.

Mr. HALLEY. What did the letter refer to?

Mr. MORAN. It referred to this Joe Baker and, oh, I don't know; there was a captain out there, I believe a Captain Schaeffer, or I believe a name similar to that—that they were doing business, and that Costello and Baker were the ones that were financing all this work.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were they supposed to be doing this business?

Mr. MORAN. At Wright Field.

Mr. HALLEY. And the major himself went up there to investigate that?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do; did you get the letter?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Would a letter of that type ordinarily come to you?

Mr. MORAN. It was mailed to William O'Dwyer, care of district attorney's office, personal.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to get it?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I handled all the mail that came into the district attorney's office.

Mr. HALLEY. And you communicated with the mayor?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was he at the time?

Mr. MORAN. That I wouldn't be sure.

Mr. HALLEY. He was not in New York?

Mr. MORAN. I don't believe so.

Mr. HALLEY. He made a special trip into New York to get that?

Mr. MORAN. No, no. He used to come into New York about every week, every 2 weeks, sometimes every 3 weeks, according to where he would be. And it was then that he got it.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you opened it before you gave it to him?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you had told him of the contents?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he tell you to do, if anything?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I wouldn't be sure when or how it happened, whether he had gotten back here or not. He wanted to know if there was some way that he could get ahold of Costello, and I said I thought there was. And I got ahold of Michael Kennedy and made the arrangements. It was on a holiday. I don't remember what it was.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you call Costello yourself?

Mr. MORAN. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Whom did you call?

Mr. MORAN. Kennedy.

Mr. HALLEY. For what purpose?

Mr. MORAN. He arranged the appointment.

Mr. HALLEY. With Costello?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you need Kennedy to arrange an appointment with Costello?

Mr. MORAN. Well, how else could I arrange it? Where would I go? How could I get ahold of him?

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Costello as a politician or as a thug?

Mr. MORAN. What do you mean by "a politician"? I don't know whether Costello is a politician. I don't know whether Costello is a thug.

Senator TOBEY. A few minutes ago you testified—I don't think Mr. Halley was here—that when you wanted to get this conference, you went to Mr. Kennedy and asked him to make the appointment with Costello, which you did?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Senator TOBEY. You said that Kennedy was a county Tammany political leader?

Mr. MORAN. He was the county leader of Tammany Hall.

Senator TOBEY. Now, was Costello close to the city and county political leaders?

Mr. MORAN. That I don't know. At that particular time, the newspaper headlines were that Costello and Kennedy were arm in arm, and so forth.

I mean, it was continuous for a long period of time. I believe even during Mayor La Guardia's administration, he said that there was a tie-up between the two. I mean, it was common knowledge through the newspapers.

Mr. HALLEY. Aren't you talking about a rather unusual way of investigating what would appear to be a routine complaint?

Mr. MORAN. There was no complaint as far as I was concerned.

Mr. HALLEY. You had a letter, did you not?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it an anonymous letter?

Mr. MORAN. An anonymous letter.

Mr. HALLEY. Not even a signature?

Mr. MORAN. That's right. And it was Army business; it wasn't my business.

Mr. HALLEY. And on the basis of an anonymous letter, the former district attorney himself, you, and the leader of Tammany Hall went up to Costello's apartment?

Mr. MORAN. No. The leader of Tammany Hall did not go up with us.

Mr. HALLEY. He was there when you got there?

Mr. MORAN. He was there; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he know—he arranged this appointment?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. What was he doing there?

Mr. MORAN. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't it strange that he would arrange an appointment for Mr. O'Dwyer with Costello on a purely Army basis, and that he would then go up there?

Mr. MORAN. Well, that I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. While O'Dwyer and Costello were off in one corner talking—would you like some water?

Mr. MORAN. No, thanks.

Mr. HALLEY. While you and O'Dwyer were off in one corner—I mean, while O'Dwyer and Costello were off in one corner talking, what were you doing?

Mr. MORAN. I was sitting there. I may have been talking to Kennedy. I don't know whether I did or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you previously known Kennedy?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Is Kennedy still living now?

Mr. MORAN. No; Kennedy is dead.

Senator TOBEY. Was he a former Congressman?

Mr. MORAN. I believe Michael Kennedy was a Congressman.

Senator TOBEY. The thing that interests me about this, Mr. Halley, is that here is an anonymous letter which most of us would pay no attention to, with reference to something out at Wright Field, and yet it was deemed important enough for Mr. Witness, who is an ex-friend to Mayor O'Dwyer, and his confidential clerk, extending to his opening his personal letters, taking it on himself to arrange an appointment with the king of what you may say, Mr. Costello; and through a Tammany politician, go over the content of an anonymous letter.

Mr. HALLEY. Senator Tobey, I am sure that Mayor O'Dwyer himself will have a good and satisfactory explanation for this committee, and I know that he will come here and help us out.

But I am interested in this witness' explanation, because I am certain that this witness wants to give the committee every help he can. But so far the story—he hasn't succeeded in getting us to understand just what happened.

Mr. MORAN. At that time, the then Major or Colonel O'Dwyer was investigating at Wright Field and several other spots, and so what he—

Senator TOBEY. Did the letter refer to Costello at all?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. What did it say about Costello?

Mr. MORAN. It made a reference that Costello and this fellow Baker—and they gave a couple of other names—Osterhoffer, or something like that—that they had business together, that they were wining and dining this Captain Schaeffer; and that as a result of that, they had the free rein at Wright Field.

Senator TOBEY. Contract, or building, or something, or something of that sort?

Mr. MORAN. That I don't know.

Senator TOBEY. Is Wright Field a permanent construction, then?

Mr. MORAN. That I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. Wright Field is at Dayton, Ohio; isn't it?

Mr. MORAN. It is out there some place. Where it is exactly, I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. What did Costello—I mean, Mr. O'Dwyer, have to do with Wright Field?

Mr. MORAN. At that time he was—

The CHAIRMAN. He was here, wasn't he?

Mr. MORAN. No; at that he was investigating at Wright Field, and at Lackland, and a couple of other places.

Mr. HALLEY. For the record, in that period, as a matter of fact, I was then investigating at Lackland. Major O'Dwyer, I think he was then a colonel, was in the Inspector General's Office of the Air Corps, and traveling around the country.

What surprises me is that on an anonymous letter like this, anybody with the duties such as the mayor had, would have come to New York and taken the trouble to see Costello.

Mr. MORAN. He didn't come to New York especially; I didn't say that. I said he used to come in to New York about every week or every 2 weeks.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you suggest that to him?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Whose idea was it to call Mike Kennedy to make the appointment?

Mr. MORAN. Mine.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever get hold of this fellow Baker?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know who he is?

Mr. MORAN. No. I know of him. I mean, I have heard the name around.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know there is such a person?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. But you never took the trouble to talk to him?

Mr. MORAN. No, I had no interest in the Army business. I mean, I had no right to talk to him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Mayor O'Dwyer, to your knowledge, ever take the trouble to talk to Baker?

Mr. MORAN. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. He certainly did not with you?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. But he did with you, and with Mike Kennedy, go to talk to Costello?

Mr. MORAN. That's correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you previously known Costello?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Had never met him before?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you seen Costello since then?

Mr. MORAN. Oh, yes. I have seen him any number of times. I have seen him in restaurants; I have seen him at the race track.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you seen him in any private gathering or meeting?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had a meal with him since then?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or talk to him?

Mr. MORAN. I have talked to him: yes.

Mr. HALLEY. About what matters?

Mr. MORAN. Nothing in particular. Just "Hello," walk in to him in places and not—

Mr. HALLEY. Isn't it a fact, if you know it, and I have reason to believe you do—that Frank Costello had previously visited Mr. O'Dwyer in the district attorney's office in Brooklyn?

Mr. MORAN. I never saw Mr. Costello in the district attorney's office in Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever told—

Mr. MORAN. And I have no knowledge of him having been there.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever told by anybody that Mr. Costello had visited the district attorney's office in Brooklyn, and had seen Mr. O'Dwyer?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Nobody ever told you that?

Mr. MORAN. No one ever told me.

Mr. HALLEY. When you got to Frank Costello's apartment on this one occasion, did you—did Bill O'Dwyer know Costello?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You both had to be introduced to him?

Mr. MORAN. That's correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did the introducing?

Mr. MORAN. Michael Kennedy.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was already there?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long after the side talk between O'Dwyer and Costello did you leave?

Mr. MORAN. Well, it was only a short period of time, whatever—the whole transaction took, maybe, a half hour.

Mr. HALLEY. And then you left?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And this, you said, occurred about 1943?

Mr. MORAN. That I couldn't be sure. It was 1942 or 1943. It must have been 1943, because I believe General O'Dwyer went into the Army in 1942. So it must have been 1943.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, now, wasn't Clarence Neal there that day?

Mr. MORAN. No; not that I know of. I would say "No."

Mr. HALLEY. Are you sure?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I wouldn't be sure.

Mr. HALLEY. What time of the day was this meeting?

Mr. MORAN. I don't know. It was in the daytime.

Mr. HALLEY. Daytime?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Morning or afternoon?

Mr. MORAN. That I wouldn't be sure of.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go right to Costello's office—home, from Brooklyn, or did you have other appointments with Mr. O'Dwyer in New York?

Mr. MORAN. No; we went right from Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you leave from in Brooklyn?

Mr. MORAN. I believe 449 Seventy-ninth Street.

Mr. HALLEY. What was that, Bill O'Dwyer's home?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Can you place the time of the day that you left his home?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you had lunch yet?

Mr. MORAN. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. But you are sure it was daytime?

Mr. MORAN. It was daytime; yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you wouldn't say yes or no as to whether Clarence Neal was there?

Mr. MORAN. I wouldn't be definite that he wasn't there. As my own recollection is that he was not there. But I wouldn't be definite.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you say about Bert Stand?

Mr. MORAN. I would say the same thing; I don't remember seeing Bert Stand there. He could have been there.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know one way or the other, then?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you say about Irving Sherman?

Mr. MORAN. I would have to say the same thing, although my own recollection would be no. But I couldn't be definite on it.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Irving Sherman?

Mr. MORAN. Since about the middle of the thirties, some time.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you first meet him?

Mr. MORAN. Well, that I wouldn't be too sure of. 1930's, I worked at night for the trustees of Paramount, in addition to my day job in the county court. And I was up around Broadway there at the Paramount office at the time. Occasionally I would go to different places to eat. I knew lots of policemen that were working up that way. And in around that time, or maybe a short while after, was when I met Sherman.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go to the Arizona Restaurant?

Mr. MORAN. Yes, sure. Arizona was not a restaurant; it was a bar.

Mr. HALLEY. Bar?

Mr. MORAN. A wild sort of a place.

Mr. HALLEY. Pretty wild joint, wasn't it?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Sherman run it?

Mr. MORAN. That I don't know. I know I have seen him there. But who ran it, I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. He owned it, didn't he?

Mr. MORAN. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. You can generally tell if a man acts as though he owns the place.

Did he act as though he might have some connection with it?

Mr. MORAN. I have seen people acting like that, I mean, things were proven different afterward.

Mr. HALLEY. Take it for what it is worth——

Mr. MORAN. I believe he had an interest in it of some kind.

Mr. HALLEY. That is a nice answer. You believe he had an interest in it at some time; is that right?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. What are some of the other interests that Mr. Sherman had? I remember some time back you said you thought his business was a coat and suit business, and I thought you weren't being entirely frank with Mr. Lazarus. I hope you can think of a few of Mr. Sherman's other businesses. Do you know of any others?

Mr. MORAN. I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. None at all?

Mr. MORAN. I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the Garment Fashion Center Club?

Mr. MORAN. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you in 1942?

Mr. MORAN. In the district attorney's office.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you come to New York from time to time?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go into a building at 1480 Broadway?

Mr. MORAN. 1480 Broadway—I don't even know what 1480 Broadway would be.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Phil Kastel?

Mr. MORAN. I don't know him. I have seen him.

Mr. HALLEY. Where have you seen him?

Mr. MORAN. I saw him at a restaurant—I believe it was Toots Shor's. I wouldn't know for sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Who pointed him out to you?

Mr. MORAN. That I wouldn't be sure of.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Izzie Silverman?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Ike Silverman?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know anybody by that name?

Mr. MORAN. I know lots of people by the name of Silverman, but not those two.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a restaurant located at the top of a loft building on Broadway?

Mr. MORAN. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever at the Sun and Surf Club at Atlantic Beach?

Mr. MORAN. The what?

Mr. HALLEY. Sun and Surf Club at Atlantic Beach?

Mr. MORAN. I never was at Atlantic Beach.

Mr. HALLEY. Never in your life?

Mr. MORAN. The nearest I ever was to Atlantic Beach was East Rockaway, across the bay.

Mr. HALLEY. When Mayor O'Dwyer left to become Ambassador, he appointed you commissioner of water supply; is that right?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you now hold that post?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Your career is that you were a clerk in the office of the mayor; is that right, originally, when he was a judge?

Mr. MORAN. That was a court attendant, acting as secretary.

Mr. HALLEY. Acting as secretary to Judge O'Dwyer?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. What had you been prior to that?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I was a court attendant from the 1st of January 1929. Prior to that I was a law stenographer for about 14 years. And I went into the county court because I thought at that time my eyesight was going bad from long hours.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Moran, do you know a Lou Weber?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. How long have you known him, sir?

Mr. MORAN. Oh, that would be pretty hard to say. Probably 15, 18 years.

Mr. WALSH. Have you seen him recently?

Mr. MORAN. I saw him right outside as I came in.

Mr. WALSH. Would you say you took an active part in the campaigns of '45 and '49?

Mr. MORAN. '49, I took no part in it at all; '45, I did.

Mr. WALSH. Your part, did it have anything to do with the collection of funds for the campaign?

Mr. MORAN. Partly, yes.

Mr. WALSH. Did you collect any funds from Weber?

Mr. MORAN. I did not.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know if Weber knows Police Commissioner Bals?

Mr. MORAN. That I wouldn't be sure of.

Mr. WALSH. What are your relationships with Lou Weber?

Mr. MORAN. Louie Weber I have known for a lot of years. I know that Louie Weber was one of the few Puerto Ricans around that could speak halfway intelligently to you in the English language at that time. Like everyone else, I mean, as I said before, I was born and lived in a radius of a few miles all of my life. As far as knowing people, I know most everybody that there is around Brooklyn. I mean, not that I know them intimately, nor do I know them socially, because socially I may be considered a wet blanket, for the simple reason I don't bother too much with anybody.

Mr. WALSH. Has Weber been to your office recently?

Mr. MORAN. Weber has been to my office off and on during the last 3 or 4 years.

Mr. WALSH. In connection with business?

Mr. MORAN. No. He would drop in and pay a visit. I remember one time he had some kind of a painting and scaling outfit. He was anxious to see if he could get some work scraping ferryboats, or some other damned thing.

Mr. WALSH. Did he get the job?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know if he organized any Democratic club?

Mr. MORAN. No; I do not—now wait a minute. When you say do I know if he organized one—that I wouldn't be sure of.

I know he was connected with some of them. I know he was connected with most of the Puerto Ricans.

Mr. WALSH. Where? In Brooklyn?

Mr. MORAN. Brooklyn, mostly. In New York I heard that he was.

Mr. WALSH. Had you ever been to his club?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know he has a criminal record?

Mr. MORAN. I know that he was convicted of policy in Brooklyn 10 years ago. I know a lot of people with criminal records, though.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know what his occupation is now?

Mr. MORAN. I do not.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know what it has been during the last 10 years?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever received or held sums of money for any other persons?

Mr. MORAN. I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. Whether in cash or by check?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Directly or indirectly?

Mr. MORAN. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. What were your qualifications for the post of this deputy fire commissioner?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I don't know what you would want to know as to my qualifications. I consider myself having ordinary run-of-the-mill intelligence; also, what might be termed as a disagreeable expression; I have a certain amount of gutter wisdom.

I would love to think that I was somewhat like the blacksmith philosopher in ways. I think that as far as most any job around, I would be as well qualified, except for a job that would call for peculiar qualifications, such as an engineer, or that I be admitted to the bar, or something like that; that I can handle them as well as anybody else.

Mr. HALLEY. Doesn't the deputy fire commissioner have to know something about the business of fighting a fire?

Mr. MORAN. No.

Mr. HALLEY. The organization of a fire department?

Mr. MORAN. Well, the organization is directly under the commissioner. 'The deputy handles odds and ends, and whatever there is to the fire department could be picked up in 5 months by anybody with common intelligence.

Senator TOBEY. Were you a deputy fire commissioner under LaGuardia?

Mr. MORAN. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Then what qualifications have you had to become commissioner of water supply?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I dare say in the 8 months that I have been there, I have picked up quite a bit about the board of water supply. You need no qualifications. The only qualification, or the only statement that is made as to your requirements is that you be a citizen of the city of New York.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, the job pays $15,000 a year: is that right?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And it is an appointment for life?

Mr. MORAN. That's right. That seems to be the beef that is in everybody's mind, is that I got a job for $15,000 for life.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you get a job for $15,000 for life?

Mr. MORAN. Well——

Mr. HALLEY. Speaking of it from the point of view of the interest of the citizens of this city.

Mr. MORAN. Well, I got the job because of the fact that Mayor O'Dwyer saw fit to appoint me to it. I feel now that I am as well qualified for that job as anyone.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, are you as well qualified, for instance, as an engineer that might have experience in the water-supply field?

Mr. MORAN. No; not as an engineer.

Mr. HALLEY. As well qualified as somebody who would have long and intensive administrative experience in the business field?

Mr. MORAN. Well, what do you mean by "long and intensive training"? Lots of things that are classified as long training, may be a complete flop when it is all through. I mean, people that have had 50, 60 years of training have fallen by the wayside insofar as their business administration is concerned.

That doesn't necessarily qualify anybody, because they studied business administration, or partook too much of it.

Mr. HALLEY. Just one more thing. In running over the list of people we have asked you about who might have been at the meeting between O'Dwyer and Costello, there is not one that you would definitely say wasn't there; is that right?

Mr. MORAN. I couldn't say they weren't there, because I have no definite recollection. I mean, my thought is that they were not there. But I couldn't definitely say they were not.

Mr. HALLEY. You are not sure they weren't?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. The list is Neal, Sherman, Stand, Savarese.

Mr. MORAN. Pinned down to it, I would say they weren't there. But I have no independent recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have a definite feeling that there were some other people there besides yourself, Kennedy, Costello, and O'Dwyer?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. But you cannot tell this committee who they were?

Mr. MORAN. I cannot.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know what happened to Miss Paris after she left the district attorney's office?

Mr. MORAN. She was in the district attorney's Office until 1946. I believe she is now working in the mayor's office.

Mr. WALSH. She is now in the mayor's office?

Mr. MORAN. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you a member of any political club in Brooklyn?

Mr. MORAN. I joined the Twelfth Assembly District Democratic Club in August or September 1928, and never attended a meeting. Never attended any political meeting. The only other membership I have in anything, I have an athletic membership in the Knights of Columbus, where I play handball. Outside of that, I have membership in nothing.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Frank Quayle?

Mr. MORAN. Oh, I would say 20 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Was your appointment as deputy to him, his appointment or the mayor's appointment?

Mr. MORAN. The mayor's appointment.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it acceptable to Quayle?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I went to work there. He didn't throw me out.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did he welcome the appointment, or was it something he was willing to accept?

Mr. MORAN. That I wouldn't be sure of. I don't know what would be running through his mind.

Mr. HALLEY. He certainly wasn't enthusiastic; is that the point?

Mr. MORAN. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. He was not enthusiastic?

Mr. MORAN. No; I didn't answer that way at all.

Mr. HALLEY. That is what I want to get sure. You just don't know one way or the other?

Mr. MORAN. That's right. As far as him bubbling over or gushing over the appointment, he did not.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ever collect any campaign funds from Costello for any campaign?

Mr. MORAN. I did not.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know whether he contributed to any?

Mr. MORAN. I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ever hear of any discussion about it?

Mr. MORAN. I did not.

The CHAIRMAN. These lost records that have been referred to previously, does that have to do with the waterfront matter where apparently some grand-jury docket book became missing, or something of that sort?

Mr. MORAN. No. As I said before, I know nothing of any missing records at all.

The CHAIRMAN. Weren't you accused of some records missing out of your possession, and not being presented to the grand jury?

Mr. MORAN. Definitely not. I was never accused of that.

The CHAIRMAN. You were accused of tearing down some wanted notices that were put up when Anastasia and others were wanted?

Mr. MORAN. No. Let me tell you what a wanted notice is, sir.

A wanted notice is a card that is placed in the files of the police department that such and such a person is wanted for a crime. That's kept there. And, as I explained before, once the man had turned himself in to John Harlan Amen, who in turn called Thomas Hughes and said he didn't want him, there was nothing that he could do with him now; the card was taken down. And within a short time after that he had joined the Army or been drafted; I am not sure which.

The CHAIRMAN. I notice here from the record I have, that the removal of the wanted notices for Romeo, Parisi, Anastasia, from the bureau of criminal identification, May 4, 1942, was on the direct order of Chief Clerk James J. Moran, according to the testimony of Sergeant Divers. And then that it says that they were taken out on a statement, and you told them to take them out. And I believe you said that that wasn't correct. Is that—

Mr. MORAN. No; I said that the one that I had—the only one that I had independent knowledge of was Anastasia's record; the wanted card, rather. Because within a month after the card was taken out, and within a month after he had turned himself in to John Harlan Amen, and in turn he had called up Thomas Hughes, Anastasia was in the Army; and within a few months after that, there was some hullabaloo over in the Army. I don't know just what it was.

The CHAIRMAN. Apparently, these wanted notices here referred to not only Anastasia, but to Romeo and Parisi and others?

Mr. MORAN. Well, I don't think that there was ever a card taken out on Parisi for the simple reason he was picked up and tried during the term of, I believe, Mr. McDonald in Brooklyn, and found not guilty, within the last year or 2 years.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything else, gentlemen?

Thank you, Mr. Commissioner.

(Mr. Moran thereupon left the hearing room.)

TESTIMONY OF LOU WEBER, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. WEBER. I do.

Mr. WALSH. Will you give your full name, please?

Mr. WEBER. Lou Weber.

Mr. WALSH. Your address?

Mr. WEBER. 248 Warren, Brooklyn.

Mr. WALSH. Warren Street?

Mr. WEBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. WALSH. What is the correct spelling of your name?

Mr. WEBER. W-e-b-e-r.

Mr. WALSH. How long have you lived at Warren Street, Mr. Weber?

Mr. WEBER. I live about 2 years, I think.

Mr. WALSH. Where did you live before that?

Mr. WEBER. 200 Court Street.

Mr. WALSH. What is your occupation?

Mr. WEBER. I work.

Mr. WALSH. At what?

Mr. WEBER. Different odds and ends.

Mr. WALSH. What are you doing today?

Mr. WEBER. Working in a stevedore, longshoreman.

Mr. WALSH. For whom; what company?

Mr. WEBER. Libonia Stevedore, lumber yard.

Mr. WALSH. Where is that located?

Mr. WEBER. That is located 1162 Greenwich Street, in Brooklyn.

But they have the office over here in 42 West Street.

Mr. WALSH. Did you work yesterday?

Mr. WEBER. No, sir.

Mr. WALSH. When is the last time you worked as a longshoreman?

Mr. WEBER. I worked last year. Previously I had been sick.

Mr. WALSH. What time last year did you work?

Mr. WEBER. Up to December, last time was in month of—late in November.

Mr. WALSH. How much did you earn as a longshoreman last year?

Mr. WEBER. Last year, 356—I have it here [indicating]. I did a few other jobs that were minor jobs on some other places.

Mr. WALSH. Tell us how much that longshoreman paid?

Mr. WEBER. $356.40.

Mr. WALSH. $356.40 for the entire year?

Mr. WEBER. Yes, sir; in that place.

Mr. WALSH. Are you married?

Mr. WEBER. I am married; yes, sir.

Mr. WALSH. Any children?

Mr. WEBER. Puerto Rico.

Mr. WALSH. Do you support them?

Mr. WEBER. No; they support me.

Mr. WALSH. Do you have any bank accounts?

Mr. WEBER. No, sir.

Mr. WALSH. Do you have any safe deposit box?

Mr. WEBER. No, sir.

Mr. WALSH. What else did you do last year besides this longshoreman's job?

Mr. WEBER. Last year I only did another job on the—I work about 3 days, in the maintenance; that is shipping and painting and scaling.

Mr. WALSH. Where was that?

Mr. WEBER. 73 Hamilton Avenue.

Mr. WALSH. Brooklyn?

Mr. WEBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know Commissioner Moran?

Mr. WEBER. No, sir.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know James Moran?

Mr. WEBER. No, sir.

Mr. WALSH. Did you see a gentleman just go out there in the witness room?

Mr. WEBER. I see nobody there. I am a Puerto Rican myself. And only people over there are American—not American, not Puerto Ricans.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Weber, if I tell you that the gentleman that just walked out the door into the witness room—did you see that gentleman?

Mr. WEBER. Well. I didn't notice that; I was half asleep when the gentleman came in.

Mr. WALSH. You and one gentleman came through the same door; one went out and one came in; you came in.

Mr. WEBER. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Did you recognize him?

Mr. WEBER. No, sir.

Mr. WALSH. If I tell you, Mr. Weber, that Commissioner Moran, James Moran, was in here a few moments ago, and testified that he knew you——

Mr. WEBER. Probably he know me. I don't know him.

Mr. WALSH. He saw you.

Mr. WEBER. Probably he saw me, and I didn't see him.

Mr. WALSH. In the witness room today.

Mr. WEBER. Probably he saw me, but I didn't see him.

Mr. WALSH. And he further testified that you had visited him recently in his office.

(Mr. Weber shakes head in negative.)

Mr. WALSH. You say he is in error?

Mr. WEBER. I am not saying. I want nobody quote me. I am not quoting him.

Mr. WALSH. I am asking you.

Mr. WEBER. I am giving you an answer.

Mr. WALSH. What is your answer; do you know that gentleman or not?

Mr. WEBER. I say I don't know him.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait just a minute now. Mr. Weber, he said you came to see him, you had some kind of apparatus that you wanted to to try to get a contract or business to scrape some ships.

Mr. WEBER. I don't saw him the day I went there.

The CHAIRMAN. And you went to see him about it, about getting some business to scrape off some ships.

Mr. WEBER. Ship scaling and operating one day, but I didn't meet the man himself.

The CHAIRMAN. And you came in and talked with him about it. Why do you want to tell us that you don't know him, that you never saw him?

Mr. WEBER. I don't saw him, at the time I went over there to his office.

The CHAIRMAN. How do you know you didn't see him?

Mr. WEBER. Because there were some other people there.

The CHAIRMAN. Whom did you see?

Mr. WEBER. A man that was attending there.

The CHAIRMAN. How do you think Mr. Moran would be mistaken about seeing you?

Mr. WEBER. I am a face that no man can forget, you know.

The CHAIRMAN. I know, but he remembered you, and it looks like you should remember him.

Mr. WEBER. Very easy to remember my face.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Excuse me, Mr. Walsh.

Mr. WALSH. Are you engaged in politics, Mr. Weber?

Mr. WEBER. Well, every Puerto Rican is a potential politician.

Mr. WALSH. I am asking you, are you engaged?

Mr. WEBER. I am not engaged in politics.

Mr. WALSH. Do you belong to any political club?

Mr. WEBER. Well, I am a Democrat.

Mr. WALSH. Do you belong to a club?

Mr. WEBER. I belong to Puerto Rican clubs.

Mr. WALSH. Where are they located?

Mr. WEBER. Well, one is located at 110 Madison; that I am honorary member of that club.

Senator TOBEY. Republican club?

The WITNESS. No; Democratic.

Mr. WALSH. 110 Madison Avenue, New York?

Mr. WEBER. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Do you belong to any in Brooklyn?

Mr. WEBER. In Brooklyn, I used to belong before. But the clubs over there, they are disorganized lately, and many years ago I organized the Puerto Rican clubs—many years ago. That was many years, before 1940.

Mr. WALSH. You organized them?

Mr. WEBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. WALSH. In 1945 and in 1949 were you active in the clubs?

Mr. WEBER. No; I was not.

Mr. WALSH. Did the clubs back any candidate for mayor?

Mr. WEBER. Well, all clubs back different candidates.

Mr. WALSH. No; your clubs, the ones that you belong to?

Mr. WEBER. Well, sure. Sure we back some candidate for mayor.

Mr. WALSH. What candidate?

Mr. WEBER. The candidates who were Democrat.

Mr. WALSH. Mayor O'Dwyer?

Mr. WEBER. All the candidates that were Democrats. I am not mentioning any names. I vote Democrat all the straight ticket.

Mr. WALSH. Did you contribute any money to that campaign?

Mr. WEBER. No, sir; I have no money. How am I going to contribute money?

Mr. WALSH. Did the club to which you belong contribute any?

Mr. WEBER. No club contribute any money.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know Kovan's Bar and Grill?

Mr. WEBER. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Do you have any interest in that bar?

Mr. WEBER. No, sir.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know one Louis Rotundo?

Mr. WEBER. No, sir.

Mr. WALSH. How about a Ralph Rivera?

Mr. WEBER. I know Ralph Rivera.

Mr. WALSH. What does he do?

Mr. WEBER. I don't know.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know Happy Evans?

Mr. WEBER. I know him; yes.

Mr. WALSH. What does he do?

Mr. WEBER. I don't know either.

Mr. WALSH. How long do you know him?

Mr. WEBER. For a few years.

Mr. WALSH. Where did you meet him?

Mr. WEBER. Well, I see him down in Harlem.

Mr. WALSH. In Harlem?

Mr. WEBER. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Does he have a place of business?

Mr. WEBER. I do not know if he has. I don't have no place of business there.

Mr. WALSH. I say, does he have a place of business?

Mr. WEBER. I don't know either.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know one Joe Munes?

Mr. WEBER. I do know him.

Mr. WALSH. What does he do?

Mr. WEBER. He work in the ship scaling and painting, in 40 Carver Street.

Mr. WALSH. In Brooklyn?

Mr. WEBER. Yes, sir. I know him for 20 years, or 25.

Mr. WALSH. Did you ever work for him?

Mr. WEBER. We work together; yes. He used to work for me, and I work for him, in the ship scaling.

Mr. WALSH. Did you have a concern, business?

Mr. WEBER. One time I have.

Mr. WALSH. How long ago was that?

Mr. WEBER. 19—around 1945, 1946. I have the paper on it—on the men. But I was a general superintendent there. I was not the owner.

Mr. WALSH. You were not the owner of the company?

Mr. WEBER. No, I was not the owner; no. I was general superintendent.

Mr. WALSH. What salary did you receive then?

Mr. WEBER. Well, I pay my income tax there, and you can find out [handing document to Mr. Walsh].

The CHAIRMAN. You tell us. You know what you made.

Mr. WEBER. I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. About what did you make?

Mr. WEBER. The man kept all the papers. The money was paid to the Government, how much I made.

The CHAIRMAN. You ought to know how much you got every week, or day, or month.

Mr. WEBER. Well, this, nobody can tell how much you make. Sometime, in the ship scaling and painting, like a longshoreman, sometime a man work 6 days and make $125. Sometimes make 2 days, make $40. That's according to how much overtime you work.

He have all the papers and the income tax, this gentleman. [Indicating document previously handed to Mr. Walsh.]

Mr. WALSH. Are you a member of the union?

Mr. WEBER. No; I was not.

Mr. WALSH. Don't you have to be a member of a union to work as a longshoreman?

Mr. WEBER. No. In some locations, no. I work with the company for 4 years during the war. And I went through the Government, and—

Mr. WALSH. But last year, when you worked, 1950—there was no war then?

Mr. WEBER. No, no; because we were in the lumber yards.

Mr. WALSH. You were working as a long—

Mr. WEBER. Even as a stevedore, you can work without being a member of the union.

Senator TOBEY. Are you a stevedore?

Mr. WEBER. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. You work with your hands?

Mr. WEBER. With my hands, yes.

Senator TOBEY. What do you do, lift bundles?

Mr. WEBER. Lift bundles.

Senator TOBEY. You do that every day?

Mr. WEBER. No, not every day; when I have the opportunity. Lately I have been sick.

Senator TOBEY. That is your only source of income?

Mr. WEBER. The only source of income, yes.

Senator TOBEY. What you get as wages as a stevedore?

Mr. WEBER. Well, once——

Senator TOBEY. The wages as a stevedore is all the income you have?

Mr. WEBER. That's all. And a little money that my daughter send from Puerto Rico, once in a while. She is a school teacher, teaching English in a school in Puerto Rico, and teach in the university.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, let's get on.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Have you ever been to the board of water supply?

Mr. WEBER. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Never were there?

Mr. WEBER. I don't even know the address.

Mr. WALSH. Were you ever in the municipal building, in the office of the deputy fire commissioner?

Mr. WEBER. I went once to there, but I don't met Mr. Moran.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How many times were you there?

Mr. WEBER. I went a couple of times and ask him for jobs to paint the towboats. When I was in the Atlantic Ship Scaling & Painting, 44 Court Street, where the office there. You can check on that.

Mr. WALSH. Were you ever engaged in the policy business?

Mr. WEBER. I am not.

Mr. WALSH. I say, were you ever engaged?

Mr. WEBER. One time I went to jail for that.

Mr. WALSH. How long ago was that?

Mr. WEBER. Well, I came out in, I think, 1941: January 7, 1941. I make 3 years complete, just for numbers. They give me the book.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did they give you the book?

Mr. WEBER. I don't know why.

Mr. HALLEY. You must have been a big operator.

Mr. WEBER. I don't know about that.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do in the numbers field; what was your business?

Mr. WEBER. Well, I was doing a business; then they indict me for conspiracy.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you a banker?

Mr. WEBER. I was not.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you?

Mr. WEBER. Collector.

Mr. HALLEY. Whom did you collect for?

Mr. WEBER. Oh, I don't remember. You collect for different peoples, you know, different Italian peoples, you know.

Mr. HALLEY. Name one you collected for?

Mr. WEBER. I can't recall any name.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you say, what kind of people were they you collected for. Puerto Ricans?

Mr. WEBER. No; they was only Italian people.

Mr. HALLEY. And they were the bankers?

Mr. WEBER. They were.

Mr. HALLEY. Who, for instance, were some of the bankers?

Mr. WEBER. I can't mention anybody now; I have been out of that field for many years.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Jimmy Blue Eye?

Mr. WEBER. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mr. WEBER. Never. If I bumped into him, I don't know him—well, I see him through the newspaper.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met him?

Mr. WEBER. Never met him in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. WEBER. Never met him in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Meyer Lansky?

Mr. WEBER. No. I travel with Puerto Ricans only.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are some of the Italians?

Mr. WEBER. Well, Italians that were over there in Brooklyn at the time I went to jail in Brooklyn. And it was some Italian who was booking at that time, a fellow by the name of Mike Maletti, who is dead now. It is immaterial if I say that now; I was working during that time. He died after I come out.

Mr. HALLEY. Mike what?

Mr. WEBER. Mike Maletti.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else did you work for?

Mr. WEBER. Only for him.

Mr. HALLEY. What are you doing now?

Mr. WEBER. I say, working.

Mr. HALLEY. As a longshoreman?

Mr. WEBER. Yes, working as a longshoreman.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you work now?

Mr. WEBER. I was working in the lumber yard, over there.

Mr. HALLEY. Where?

Mr. WEBER. 1162 Granner Street; we shape up there.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you worked there?

Mr. WEBER. I tell you, in the late part of November.

Mr. HALLEY. How much do you earn there?

Mr. WEBER. Some weeks $40; some weeks, $50; some weeks, $60.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you live?

Mr. WEBER. 248 Warren Street, Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. What street?

Mr. WEBER. Warren.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you married?

Mr. WEBER. I am separated from my wife.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you live alone?

Mr. WEBER. I live with this lady; I pay $10 a week.

Mr. HALLEY. You pay rent?

Mr. WEBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you lived there?

Mr. WEBER. I been living in this house now for the last 2 years. But before, I live in 200 Court Street. And before Court Street, I live in 256 Pacific. My sister lives there.

Mr. HALLEY. Your sister has now gone back to Puerto Rico?

Mr. WEBER. Who, me?

Mr. HALLEY. Your sister?

Mr. WEBER. No, not my sister. My daughter is in Puerto Rico. They have property there.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How did you come here today?

Mr. WEBER. Well, I don't come here of my own volition.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get here?

Mr. WEBER. How I get here?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. WEBER. By the subway.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have an automobile?

Mr. WEBER. Yes; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of car do you have?

Mr. WEBER. 1947 Pontiac. Second-hand car that I bought.

Mr. WALSH. Is it in your name?

Mr. WEBER. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. When were you last in the numbers racket?

Mr. WEBER. I was in 1937.

The CHAIRMAN. But didn't you go back in it after you got out of the penitentiary?

Mr. WEBER. I went to work after I got out from the penitentiary, and I was working in a restaurant as a handyman. And I put there in the luncheonette. I came out in 1947, and I put there 6 months; I was on parole; plus 6 months more that I worked there. The restaurant is still there; you can check on that.

The CHAIRMAN. You haven't been in it since you got out of jail?

Mr. WEBER. No, sir. I have paid my income tax every year that I work, and this gentleman [indicating document previously handed to Mr. Walsh] have all the papers, the company I work, and everything. And in fact, he was the man of the Atlantic Ship Painting—

The CHAIRMAN. That is all. If we need you again, we will let you know.

Mr. WEBER. At 246 Warren; I am at your service.

Mr. HALLEY. You remain under subpena.

Mr. WEBER. The gentleman don't serve the subpena on me. I mean, I heard they were looking for me; I volunteer myself to meet him. (Mr. Weber thereupon left the hearing room.)

TESTIMONY OF GERALD CATENA, SOUTH ORANGE, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. CATENA. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mr. CATENA. 21 Overhill Road, South Orange, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business address?

Mr. CATENA. 497 Raymond Boulevard.

Mr. HALLEY. What business are you in?

Mr. CATENA. Trucking.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the name of your company?

Mr. CATENA. Peoples.

Mr. HALLEY. Peoples what?

Mr. CATENA. Express.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been in the trucking business.

Mr. CATENA. About 4½ years.

Mr. HALLEY. Our men spent an awful long time looking for you. Where were you for the several months that the committee tried to find you?

Mr. CATENA. I was just roaming around. In the confusion, I was a little confused. My mind cleared up, so I thought I would—

Mr. HALLEY. You mean you were ducking the subpoena, in other words; is that what you mean?

Mr. CATENA. Well, in a way, you would say that I was, I was just in a state of confusion.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you confused about?

Mr. CATENA. Well, about the publicity, about the—it was about the Peoples Express, the publicity. It was about the publicity given.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean, you were afraid of the publicity?

Mr. CATENA. I wasn't afraid of anything. I was just confused.

Mr. HALLEY. You had certain things to fear; isn't that right?

Mr. CATENA. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. One was publicity that might hurt the Peoples Express business; is that right?

Mr. CATENA. Well, the publicity was there.

The CHAIRMAN. You had a nice looking wife; she was up here. She couldn't find you at that time. She said she couldn't. So we are glad you have come back, and that you are here today.

Mr. HALLEY. Your business partner couldn't find you either; isn't that right?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You just ducked out?

Mr. CATENA. He couldn't find me.

Mr. HALLEY. You just ducked out of sight for a while; is that right?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, now, what other businesses have you besides the Peoples Express?

Mr. CATENA. I have awning business.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the name of that?

Mr. CATENA. The Cool Vent Metal.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any partners in the Cool Vent awning business?

Mr. CATENA. Yes, we have some partners.

Mr. HALLEY. Who are they?

Mr. CATENA. Mr. Brown—

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Catena, you know who your partners are. Let's tell us and get on with the statement.

Mr. CATENA. It was just organized. Mr. Dameo. Mr. Boiardo.

The CHAIRMAN. Spell that last name.

Mr. CATENA. B-o-i-a-r-d-o.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else?

Mr. CATENA. I think that's all. There might be a little minor point. I just don't remember it now. But I think that's all there is.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any other business?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that one.

Mr. HALLEY. I refer to businesses today.

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's put it this way: Do you have any other businesses today which are legitimate?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator TOBEY. Just talking together as two fellows here, here is a Senate committee trying to do a job. We don't know you from a hole in the ground; no bias against you; we just bring you in as a witness. We know you have something to tell us if you want to. Why don't you tell us just as you would three fellows in a grocery store in the country? Don't take refuge behind these things, and help us out in our job.

Mr. CATENA. I would love to help you out all I can.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you tell us how you could incriminate yourself by telling the committee about another legitimate business you might have? You have already mentioned two. If you have any others, why don't you tell the committee what they are.

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question on the ground it might incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Counsel asked you whether you had any other legal or legitimate businesses. Do you refuse to answer that question?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You understand you are directed to answer that question. Do you still refuse?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer on the same grounds.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Go ahead, Mr. Halley.

We hate to get in trouble with you, we don't want to do you any harm. We don't want you to answer any question that is really going to violate your constitutional rights. But you start out in this uncooperative way; I am afraid we are going to have a hard time with you.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Willie Moretti?

Mr. CATENA. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. CATENA. I know him, oh, quite a number of years.

Mr. HALLEY. How many?

Mr. CATENA. Quite a number of years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in business with Moretti?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in any——

The CHAIRMAN. You are ordered to answer the question. Do you refuse to——

Mr. CATENA. I refuse on the same grounds.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in a legitimate business with Moretti?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You are ordered to answer. Can we have it understood, then, Mr. Catena, that where you refuse to answer we will understand that you are refusing to answer on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate you; and that when you refuse, that then the chairman has ordered you to answer that question, and you still refuse?

Mr. CATENA. I understand you are ordering me to answer the question, and if I say I just refuse, it means that I am stating it tends to incriminate.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; I know that. It will save a lot of time.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever take a trip with Willie Moretti?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where to?

Mr. CATENA. I went to Habana with him.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you go to Habana with him?

Mr. CATENA. Oh, about 2 years ago, I believe.

Mr. HALLEY. How many?

Mr. CATENA. About 3 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Lucky Luciano there?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you talk to Luciano?

Mr. CATENA. I had dinner with him one night.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Moretti there?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you have dinner?

Mr. CATENA. At the hotel.

Mr. HALLEY. What hotel?

Mr. CATENA. Nationale. I believe that is the name.

Mr. HALLEY. In whose room did you have dinner?

Mr. CATENA. We had it downstairs.

Mr. HALLEY. In the dining room?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was staying at the Nationale; was Luciano there, or were you there?

Mr. CATENA. I was there.

Mr. HALLEY. And Moretti?

Mr. CATENA. Moretti was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Luciano on any other occasion?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Luciano?

Mr. CATENA. Well, I haven't known him personally. I have seen him at different places around. I believe this was the first time I could really say I have known him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever take any other trips with Moretti?

Mr. CATENA. Moretti, I met Moretti at different places. But I don't think I took a trip with him.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to go to Habana with him to see Luciano?

Mr. CATENA. He asked me if I wanted to take a trip to Habana, and I thought I would take the trip.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you down there altogether?

Mr. CATENA. Oh, I don't think it was more than 2 or 3 days.

Mr. HALLEY. Two or three days?

Mr. CATENA. I don't remember right now. I think it would be just 2 or 3 days.

Mr. HALLEY. While you were there you saw Luciano. Did you see anyone else?

Mr. CATENA. There was another fellow there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was that?

Mr. CATENA. A fellow by the name of Vince.

Mr. HALLEY. Vangano?

Mr. CATENA. That is Mangano.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he at dinner with you and Moretti?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Anyone else?

Mr. CATENA. That's all. A couple of Cubans around. I don't know—I don't remember now.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry, I don't hear.

Mr. CATENA. There was a couple of Cubans, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the discussion at dinner; was there any business talk?

Mr. CATENA. No; no business talked in front of me.

Mr. HALLEY. None whatsoever?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You say in front of you; was there a discussion at which you were not present?

Mr. CATENA. I wouldn't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you there during all the talk?

Mr. CATENA. No; I wasn't.

Mr. HALLEY. How did that occur; what happened?

Mr. CATENA. I just went about my business.

Mr. HALLEY. Before or after dinner?

Mr. CATENA. I went out; just went around out in the outside like any other visitor of Cuba.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Moretti with Luciano during all of the time that you were there?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know if he was with him all of his time or not. But I am just telling you the time that I was with him.

Mr. HALLEY. You were alone part of the time?

Mr. CATENA. Most of the time, I was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was Moretti when you were alone?

Mr. CATENA. Well, he would roam around. I couldn't say. I couldn't answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. But there were occasions when Moretti was with Luciano when you were not there, is that right?

Mr. CATENA. It could be.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what was the situation?

Mr. CATENA. Well, I just couldn't say if he was with him or he wasn't. I just say it could be or it could not be.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he on any occasion tell you he was going to be with Lucky and that you should do anything else?

Mr. CATENA. No; he did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Why do you say it could be?

Mr. CATENA. I just imagine it could be.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Longy Zwillman?

Mr. CATENA. Oh, 25 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in business with him?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question.

Mr. HALLEY. During prohibition were you in the liquor business?

Mr. CATENA. I did not get that question.

Mr. HALLEY. During prohibition were you in the liquor business?

Mr. CATENA. On my own, as a bottle peddler.

Mr. HALLEY. You peddled bottles?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in with anyone else?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in with Zwillman?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or Reinfeld?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet Rutkin?

Mr. CATENA. I knew him quite a while. I just don't know when I met him. We all come from Newark. It could be a long time. I know the man a long time. I just don't know him, but on a "hello" basis a long time.

Senator TOBEY. Did you have any business relationships with Lucky Luciano?

Mr. CATENA. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You had no business relations?

Mr. CATENA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When you went down to see Lucky, did you take any money with you, other than traveling expenses?

Mr. CATENA. Just a couple of hundred dollars.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Moretti take any large sums of money?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether or not either you or Moretti took any money to Lucky?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see Mangano on any other occasions, except at the dinner?

Mr. CATENA. Yes; I saw him in Florida a few times.

Mr. HALLEY. No; I mean in Habana.

Mr. CATENA. No—I did not understand the question. When you say in Habana—

Mr. HALLEY. What is that?

Mr. CATENA. I did not understand the question.

Mr. HALLEY. Which question, the last?

Mr. CATENA. The last one.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were in Habana on the occasion you saw Lucky Luciano and Mangano, did you see Mangano only on the occasion of the dinner?

Mr. CATENA. No; he stayed at the hotel.

Mr. HALLEY. And you saw him from time to time at the hotel?

Mr. CATENA. I saw him from time to time.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Meyer Lansky there at that time?

Mr. CATENA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Meyer Lansky?

Mr. CATENA. I do.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with Meyer Lansky?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to get into the Peoples Express?

Mr. CATENA. Mr. Dameo invited me in.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. CATENA. When we started, around 4½ years ago, I believe.

Mr. HALLEY. And what were the circumstances?

Mr. CATENA. He just invited me in, if I wanted to own part of the business.

Mr. HALLEY. He needed money, didn't he?

Mr. CATENA. Well, he needed my part of the money.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, how much money did you put in?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. What?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did he ask you to get into it? You are not being cooperative. You might have just as well kept wandering around in a daze.

Mr. CATENA. He invited me in. He asked me if I could stand an investment and I said "Yes," and I invested some money.

Mr. HALLEY. He was running at the time?

Mr. CATENA. Peoples?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. He had some express company, did he not?

Mr. CATENA. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He had previous experience in the trucking business?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you had none; is that right?

Mr. CATENA. None.

Mr. HALLEY. He asked you if you wanted to make an investment?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he match your investment?

Mr. CATENA. Did he match mine?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. CATENA. He did.

Mr. HALLEY. With an equal amount?

Mr. CATENA. Well, it is matched up now.

Mr. HALLEY. Out of the profits?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know if it was out of the profits or he put it in.

Mr. HALLEY. But the fact is he needed some cash, didn't he, and you were in a position to provide it?

Mr. CATENA. I only put in my investment.

Mr. HALLEY. That was cash; wasn't it?

(No answer.)

Senator TOBEY. How much was the investment?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question.

Mr. HALLEY. You put up some money; didn't you?

Mr. CATENA. I put up money; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You put up money, and that is why he needed you; isn't that right?

Mr. CATENA. I did not know the business, so it must have been about the money.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right.

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been active in the business since then?

Mr. CATENA. Partially.

Mr. HALLEY. In what way is that?

Mr. CATENA. In a lot of ways, doing odd checking, it is a trucking business, and we do the usual checking, we do a transferring business, checking there evenings, I go out and try to spot trucks, and I did a lot of work there. I go in the office and try and do what I can.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have anything to do—

The CHAIRMAN. Just a moment. Are you going to ask him about the Peoples Express?

Mr. HALLEY. I am going to.

Did you ever have anything to do with an offer made to represent the port authority trucking terminal in Newark?

Mr. CATENA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know anything of such an offer?

Mr. CATENA. I knew about it when it broke.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean by that?

Mr. CATENA. Well, I knew about it when I read about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you read about it and when?

Mr. CATENA. In the newspapers.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean when this committee was looking into it?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. But prior to that, had you not made some offer to the port authority?

Mr. CATENA. I had not made any offer.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you discussed it with anybody?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You had no knowledge of it whatsoever?

Mr. CATENA. No; I had no knowledge of it.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know any of the offices or members of local 478?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know anyone that I would say I would know. I know who they are. I saw them come in. I never had any business with them. Mr. Dameo had business with them. I couldn't tell you who they are. All I know that Mr. Collon is an officer.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. CATENA. Well, to say I know him would be doing an injustice to him. I only know him as being an officer of the union.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Milton J. Litz?

Mr. CATENA. I know him about the same way, or less.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you meet Litz?

Mr. CATENA. Litz?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. CATENA. I don't believe I ever met him. I knew him to say "Hello" to by seeing him, being an officer of Peoples Express, I don't think I was properly introduced to him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Anthony Casano?

Mr. CATENA. I know him to be an officer also.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet him?

Mr. CATENA. Just to say "Hello", that is about all.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to Casano?

Mr. CATENA. Well, you are in the trucking business, they are union officials, and you probably run into them at a barroom or a restaurant, or something like that, and either probably offer them a drink or they offer you a drink, and several things happen. I don't know any of these fellows personally.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet Casano?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know if I ever met him. I saw him in a restaurant somewhere, I believe. I just cannot place it.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, at no time did you participate in an offer made to the port authority to rent that terminal?

Mr. CATENA. No; I did not, personally I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't even know an offer was being made by the People's Express?

Mr. CATENA. I did not know that.

Mr. HALLEY. You had no knowledge of that?

Mr. CATENA. I had no knowledge of that.

The CHAIRMAN. Didn't you discuss it with Mr. Damio?

Mr. CATENA. No; I have not.

The CHAIRMAN. What?

Mr. CATENA. He has not discussed it with me, to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you remaining in the Peoples Express business?

Mr. CATENA. Yes; I am still there.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the nature of the awning business? Is that a new one?

Mr. CATENA. That is a new business and it is going out right away.

Mr. HALLEY. You are dropping it?

Mr. CATENA. Well, we are curtailed on manufacturing. This is an aluminum product.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, it is a metal awning?

Mr. CATENA. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you are having trouble getting metal?

Mr. CATENA. We have a certain amount of days to finish up.

Mr. HALLEY. You are actually going out of business?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, have you ever had any business dealings with Rutkin?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever participate in a business known as the G. & R. Trading Co.?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been arrested?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. On what offenses?

Mr. CATENA. I have been arrested several times.

Mr. HALLEY. For what?

Mr. CATENA. Well, the most recent one, I believe, was around 1933 or 1934, for trying to bribe a jury or a jurymen.

Mr. HALLEY. You were convicted, were you not?

Mr. CATENA. Or a possible jurymen.

Mr. HALLEY. You were convicted for bribing a Federal juror, were you not?

Mr. CATENA. A possible jurymen, or something like that. I was, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were fined $55 and sentenced to 3 months in jail?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened in that case?

Mr. CATENA. I tried to bribe the man, and we got arrested.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you try to bribe him?

Mr. CATENA. Just trying to bribe him.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of a case was he going to be a juror in?

Mr. CATENA. He was going to be a juror in. I think it was the Nick Delmore case.

Mr. HALLEY. Nick Delmore?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And what was that, what kind of a case was that?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know. I think there was an officer killed.

Mr. HALLEY. What?

Mr. CATENA. I think there was a prohibition officer killed, and he was tried for it.

Mr. HALLEY. A murder case?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He was acquitted?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And in connection with it you were convicted for bribing a juror, is that right?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did that juror actually serve?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Nick Delmore?

Mr. CATENA. I have known Nick Delmore about 20 years.

Mr. HALLEY. What business is he in?

Mr. CATENA. Nick Delmore?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. CATENA. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. He had a gambling place in Linden for one thing, didn't he?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know if it was his place.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know of a gambling place in Linden?

Mr. CATENA. I have heard of it.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been there?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean when you say you don't know if it was his place?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know whether it was his or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Johnny Becker?

Mr. CATENA. Johnny Becker?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met Johnny Becker?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Malstein?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Oscar Robey?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met them?

Mr. CATENA. I don't think so.

Senator TOBEY. May I interrupt just a minute, please?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. Pardon me, but all I want to ask about is this: It isn't very often that we run into a man such as you who tried to bribe a juror in a case involving a murder, and you say you did do it, and you were convicted of it, so it must be true.

The point I make is that you come before us as a clean-looking chap, and we have seen your wife, and she impresses us as being a very sincere and fine woman, and here you stand in the prime of life and tell us that you were convicted for trying to do this, for trying to thwart justice by interfering with justice, and you try to bribe somebody to vote a certain way. What is your mental process? You are an American citizen?

Mr. CATENA. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You knew it was about the worst thing a man could do, to interfere with the natural course of justice in the jury system?

Mr. CATENA. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. How can you justify yourself to Mr. Catena himself?

Mr. CATENA. I cannot justify it. I can just say I am sorry.

Senator TOBEY. It is one of those things that seems to be about the height of crime. It is about the most contemptible thing—and I don't say this with reference to you—but the crime itself is so contemptible and vicious, it strikes at the very heart and seat of justice.

Mr. CATENA. I have to agree with you.

Senator TOBEY. You understand that I am not saying this in a critical way, but it is such a horrid thing, I feel sorry for you, frankly, as man to man, because you have undoubtedly got brains and you have got a physique, and a personality, and you could go a long way, in my judgment, in legitimate business, and have the benefits that accrue to a man who is above reproach and has a wonderful family and all, and you could live in decent comfort and manifestly you are nervous, you said you were nervous about the subpoena. Is it worth the candle of playing ducks and drakes and hide and seek with authority?

Mr. CATENA. It is not.

Senator TOBEY. What?

Mr. CATENA. It is not.

Senator TOBEY. Well, I am glad to have your testimony and I am sure you will find it out as time goes by.

The CHAIRMAN. How old are you now?

Mr. CATENA. Forty-nine.

The CHAIRMAN. This bribery thing happened in 1932?

Mr. HALLEY. 1934 was the conviction. I don't know. When did you do the thing?

Mr. CATENA. Probably either around 1933 or 1934.

The CHAIRMAN. That was 17 years ago?

Mr. CATENA. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How much did you offer the man?

Mr. CATENA. I didn't have a chance to offer him anything.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't get down to figures and facts?

Mr. CATENA. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Why does a fellow like you, if you don't mind us talking about it, and how does a fellow like you get started in this sort of underworld kind of business? Is it because of associates you have, or lack of education, lack of housing? What is it?

Mr. CATENA. Do you want my opinion?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; I would be glad to have it.

Mr. CATENA. I think it is mostly lack of education.

The CHAIRMAN. Where were you born, for instance?

Mr. CATENA. I was born in Newark, N. J.

Senator TOBEY. Are your father and mother living?

Mr. CATENA. No; my mother died when I was 15 years old.

The CHAIRMAN. How much schooling do you have?

Mr. CATENA. I graduated school and went to night school for 2 years.

The CHAIRMAN. You graduated from high school?

Mr. CATENA. No; I graduated from grammar school and went to night school, high school, 2 years.

The CHAIRMAN. It is just the associates you had around, some way to find an easy way to make money, is that the way you got into it?

Mr. CATENA. I believe that is it.

The CHAIRMAN. Sir?

Mr. CATENA. I believe that is it, Senator. I went in business and am in business now and getting along fine, and I want to raise my children properly. I got all this publicity, and I got so confused. I made some nice associates, and then I could not keep on doing it. The publicity just knocked me out again.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you got into things to make easy money?

Mr. CATENA. I know that; I have nobody else to blame but myself.

The CHAIRMAN. Sir?

Mr. CATENA. I have nobody else to blame but myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you have testified—it is not that you have testified, but our records show that you were in the big gambling games in 1946, right to about 1948, 3 years ago.

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And at least our records don't show that you were in after 1948. I assumed that you were trying to go straight, except that you have refused to answer certain questions about what you are doing today.

Mr. CATENA. I am sorry. I have to respectfully refuse to answer questions concerning my income.

Mr. HALLEY. I have not asked you about your income. You told us about Peoples Express. I just want you to know this, and you don't have to answer it, but the clear implication from your unwillingness to tell the committee all of your present businesses that even today you are not going straight, although you have at least one good business out of which Dameo is making a living.

Mr. CATENA. I am going to try it.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you got rid of all your illegal businesses?

Mr. CATENA. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Then why do you mind telling us what other businesses you are in today?

Mr. CATENA. It concerns my—well, I will have to take my privileges, under my income taxes. I don't think I should answer those questions today.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, proceed.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you want to tell us how you got involved with Rutkin and the G. & R. partnership?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Joe Adonis?

Mr. CATENA. Joe Adonis?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. CATENA. I might know him about maybe 12 years or 10 years, something like that, when I was in Florida.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him in Florida?

Mr. CATENA. It was a place down there, I think they called it—well, it was some place down there. I don't remember the name, but I met him in a place.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to him?

Mr. CATENA. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you stay when you went to Florida?

Mr. CATENA. Well, I had a little house down there, it might be 12 years ago, 12 years ago I believe it was about, I had a little bungalow down there.

Mr. HALLEY. You went down to Cuba with Moretti, and when you did, did he tell you that you were going to see Lucky when you left?

Mr. CATENA. No; he did not.

Mr. HALLEY. He just said, "Come on down for a few days"?

Mr. CATENA. He asked me if I wanted to take a trip to Havana.

Mr. HALLEY. And he did not mention Mangano?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you known Mangano previously?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Profaci?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know him at all?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you meet him at a wedding?

Mr. CATENA. I did not meet him; no.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you know about the Mafia?

Mr. CATENA. About whom?

Mr. HALLEY. The Mafia.

Mr. CATENA. The Mafia?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. CATENA. Well, just what I read about it.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you know about the Black Hand?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know a thing about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear about the Black Hands?

Mr. CATENA. I have heard just what I read.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear about Black-Hand extortion letters?

Mr. CATENA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you believe there is such a thing as a secret society in the criminal field?

Mr. CATENA. Well, some people believe everything they read and some people make deductions. I don't know. It has never been brought out to me as if it is there. It might be there. I just couldn't answer it.

Mr. HALLEY. In your dealings with certain of these businesses, which I won't mention by name, was it your experience that conflicts were settled by some society, or by some people who seemed to have more authority than others?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know anything about that.

Mr. HALLEY. Oh, I don't have any other questions.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Mr. Catena, do you know Philip Zuchello?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever hear of him?

Mr. CATENA. The name does not mean anything to me at all.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know Tommy Lucchese?

Mr. CATENA. Tommy, no, I don't know him.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Sometimes called or referred to as "Three-Fingered Brown."

Mr. CATENA. I just read about it yesterday.

Mr. SHIVITZ. But you never met him?

Mr. CATENA. I might have saw the gentleman, but I don't know him.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know a lawyer in New Jersey by the name of Charles Handler?

Mr. CATENA. I know him to be a lawyer.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Have you——

Mr. CATENA. I know his brother.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Have you ever been to Handler's office in Newark?

Mr. CATENA. I might have been there 7 or 8 years ago.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What was your answer?

Mr. CATENA. I might have been there 7 or 8 years ago.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mr. CATENA. Yes, I do.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How long have you known him?

Mr. CATENA. I have known Frank Costello. I would say, maybe 12 years or something like that.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, were you ever in any business dealings with him?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Never?

Mr. CATENA. No.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you say?

Mr. CATENA. Never. I was not.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you own stock in companies he owned stock in?

Mr. CATENA. No; I don't.

The CHAIRMAN. Or did you?

Mr. CATENA. Never did; no.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, with respect to Mr. Rutkin, the committee has information that at one time you and he were associated together in a business, and in the course of that relationship he came to you and told you he wanted out, do you recall that?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Were you ever associated with—do you know the Automatic Conveying Corp.?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. I am sorry, it is the Automotive Conveying Corp.

Mr. CATENA. Automotive?

Mr. SHIVITZ. That is right

Mr. CATENA. That is the one connected with Joe Adonis, or Joe Doto?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know of the company?

Mr. CATENA. I know of it, yes, what I read about it. I don't know anything further.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Have you ever had any business dealings with them?

Mr. CATENA. Never.

Mr. SHIVITZ. When did you last see Frank Costello?

Mr. CATENA. I saw him yesterday.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Previous to that when did you last see him?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know, several days ago I saw him in New York some place. I just run into him.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you run into him?

Mr. CATENA. Well, in one of the cafes around here, I stopped in for a drink.

Mr. HALLEY. Where?

Mr. CATENA. I don't even remember which one now.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You don't know where you met him?

Mr. CATENA. I just don't remember what place we were in.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Was it uptown or downtown?

Mr. CATENA. Uptown somewhere.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Was it Dinty Moore's?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Was it at the Copacabana?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Was it at the Madison Hotel?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Were you ever to the Madison Hotel with Costello?

Mr. CATENA. I was there a few times.

Mr. SHIVITZ. With Costello?

Mr. CATENA. I just met him there.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You met him there?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you have a drink with him?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you have dinner with him?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Where did you have dinner with him?

Mr. CATENA. In Moore's with him.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And is it not a fact that you have an interest in the Automotive Conveying Corp.?

Mr. CATENA. I do not.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You do not?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever?

Mr. CATENA. Never.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever receive any income from that organization, that corporation?

Mr. CATENA. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, where did you see Costello in the last few days?

Mr. CATENA. I just don't remember. I seen him some place.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were you with when you saw Costello?

Mr. CATENA. I was by myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was with him?

Mr. CATENA. He was by himself.

Mr. HALLEY. You were both wandering around bars alone?

Mr. CATENA. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't expect anybody to believe that, do you?

Mr. CATENA. Well——

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have an appointment to see him?

Mr. CATENA. No; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Had he gotten word to you that he wanted to see you?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you gotten word to him that you wanted to see him?

Mr. CATENA. No, no; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it at the Waldorf?

The CHAIRMAN. The barber shop?

Mr. CATENA. No; it was not there.

Mr. HALLEY. How long was it?

Mr. CATENA. Several days ago, maybe longer, I don't know. I ran into him somewheres the last time I seen him, I just cannot place it.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it at a bar?

Mr. CATENA. It was at a bar somewhere.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you last in New York? Do you come here frequently?

Mr. CATENA. Not so often.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it on your last trip to New York?

Mr. CATENA. Well, no; my last trip was yesterday.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to that.

Mr. CATENA. Prior to that it was about a week ago, 10 days ago, or something like that.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it the last time you were in New York that you saw him?

Mr. CATENA. Yes; I believe it was.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you here for?

Mr. CATENA. I was here, I was going to see a show.

Mr. HALLEY. What show?

Mr. CATENA. I will tell you the theater, it is over on Broadway between Fifty-first and Fifty-second, what is the name of the show there, it used to be the old Hollywood Theater, it is a Damon Runyon Theater, is it?

Mr. HALLEY. A movie show?

Mr. CATENA. No; it is a play.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go with somebody?

Mr. CATENA. With my wife.

Mr. HALLEY. And you met Costello before you went to the show or after?

Mr. CATENA. Before I went to the show. I just came in and had a drink somewheres, and he happened to walk in.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go somewhere to dinner that night before the show?

Mr. CATENA. I went with my wife.

Mr. HALLEY. To dinner?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you have dinner?

Mr. CATENA. I believe it was at the Quo Vadis.

Mr. HALLEY. At the Quo Vadis.

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you meet anybody there?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do, leave your wife then and go some place for a drink by yourself?

Mr. CATENA. No; we went to dinner, we went to see the show and then went home.

Mr. HALLEY. What time did you see Costello, before dinner or after?

Mr. CATENA. It must have been about 5:30. My wife was shopping and was supposed to meet us at 6 o'clock.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you have the drink, at the Quo Vadis, perhaps?

Mr. CATENA. No; it was not there.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, where was it?

Mr. CATENA. I don't know. It might have been in the Park Avenue there. I met my wife; I met her in the lobby of the Savoy-Plaza, and I think I was across the street having a drink.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know Irving Sherman?

Mr. HALLEY. Wait just a moment. What did you talk to Costello about?

Mr. CATENA. Oh, he always kids me about my golf.

Mr. HALLEY. You just talked about golf?

Mr. CATENA. Golf; that was about all.

Mr. HALLEY. Anything else?

Mr. CATENA. No; not in particular.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know Irving Sherman?

Mr. CATENA. I don't think so.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know David Charnay?

Mr. CATENA. No, sir; I don't think so.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What was your answer?

Mr. CATENA. I don't think so. I don't know him; I don't think.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Can you recall the occasion of your visit to Handler's office.

Mr. CATENA. That was several years ago.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Who was the lawyer when you formed the People's Express Co.?

Mr. CATENA. I could not tell you right now; I don't know.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Would you say whether or not it was Mr. Handler?

Mr. CATENA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. It was not?

Mr. CATENA. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you going to take much longer with him?

Mr. SHIVITZ. I am through.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey, do you have any questions?

Senator TOBEY. Just one question: Did you and Mr. Costello talk about these hearings?

Mr. CATENA. About these hearings?

Senator TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. CATENA. It might have been just mentioned. This hearing is very popular.

Senator TOBEY. What did he say about the hearings?

Mr. CATENA. Well, just general talk, nothing in particular about it. Senator TOBEY. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. What other convictions have you had?

Mr. CATENA. I have had one for receiving stolen goods, and one I had a scrap with an officer.

The CHAIRMAN. You had what else?

Mr. CATENA. I had a little scrap with an officer going back maybe 30 years.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you draw a salary for the People's Express?

Mr. CATENA. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. As vice president, or what is your official title?

Mr. CATENA. Vice president.

The CHAIRMAN. How much is your salary?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question.

Mr. HALLEY. How much?

Mr. CATENA. I refuse to answer that question.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Well, Mr. Catena, you will remain under subpoena, and when we want you again we will let you know.

Mr. CATENA. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. By the way, is the People's Express unionized?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The drivers are members of a union?

Mr. CATENA. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. It is unionized all the way through?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What union are they in?

Mr. CATENA. 478.

The CHAIRMAN. 478?

Mr. CATENA. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. How many drivers do you have?

Mr. CATENA. Well, we have around 43, 44, or 45 drivers, something like that.

The CHAIRMAN. How many trucks do you have?

Mr. CATENA. About the same amount.

The CHAIRMAN. 43 or 44, some where around in there?

Mr. CATENA. About that.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Who will be the next witness?

Mr. HALLEY. It will be Miss Anna Paris.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey, will you swear the witness, please?

Senator TOBEY. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please?

Miss PARIS. Just wait a minute, please.

(Witness removes outer clothing.)

Senator TOBEY. Now will you please stand and be sworn.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Miss PARIS. Yes.

TESTIMONY OF ANNA Z. PARIS, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Mr. LAZARUS. Will you give your name to the reporter, please?

Miss PARIS. Anna Z. Paris.

MR. LAZARUS. Where do you live?

MISS PARIS. On Schirmerhorn Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

MR. LAZARUS. What do you do for a livelihood?

MISS PARIS. I am on the secretarial staff of the mayor's office.

MR. LAZARUS. How long have you been there?

MISS PARIS. Approximately 4 years.

MR. LAZARUS. What did you do before that?

MISS PARIS. I was on the secretarial staff at the district attorney's office in Kings County.

MR. LAZARUS. Did you have any particular duties there?

MISS PARIS. Over a period of time; yes.

MR. LAZARUS. Will you tell us what they were, please?

MISS PARIS. Hearing stenographer, grand jury stenographer, and secretary.

MR. LAZARUS. Were you also assigned as a secretary to any particular person while there?

MISS PARIS. From time to time; yes.

MR. LAZARUS. To whom?

MISS PARIS. How far back would you like?

MR. LAZARUS. Any time. Give us a general description of what you did, and who you worked for while in that office.

MISS PARIS. Mr. Loughran, Mr. Moran, Mr. Morehead, and Mr. O'Dwyer.

MR. LAZARUS. You came to the city hall at about what time, what date?

MISS PARIS. In March of 1947, to the best of my recollection.

MR. LAZARUS. How did you happen to go there?

MISS PARIS. I was appointed by Judge O'Dwyer.

MR. LAZARUS. It was not through the intercession of any person, it was simply that Mayor O'Dwyer sent for you and said, "I want you to work in this office"?

MISS PARIS. So far as I know, Judge O'Dwyer appointed me, that is all.

MR. LAZARUS. When you say he appointed you, did you take an oath, or did you do some particular act? Did he send for you?

MISS PARIS. Yes; I was appointed—excuse me—I don't think I am sure that I understand your question.

MR. LAZARUS. I just want to know how you got to the city hall. Did anyone tell you that you were going? Did the mayor tell you he wanted you to come over there, and when you got there what happened? Were you told that this was to be your new job, or were you told before you got there?

MISS PARIS. I don't recall the details, but I do know that I was sworn in. Is that what you want to know? I was sworn in.

MR. LAZARUS. I want to know something just a little more. Just relax. This is all in a friendly way.

MISS PARIS. Well, I want to answer you very clearly, and have it accurately, and certainly truthful, and I don't want to say anything—I am afraid I don't understand. Do you want the mechanics of what happened?

MR. LAZARUS. Yes; I want to know who told you that you were going to the city hall. Did you get a notice, did somebody telephone you, or how did it happen?

Miss PARIS. I don't think I can answer that exactly.

Mr. LAZARUS. Well, generally.

Miss PARIS. I can tell you that I went over to Arthur Walker's office. He was the chief clerk at city hall.

Mr. LAZARUS. Who sent you?

Miss PARIS. I don't know about anybody sending me.

Mr. LAZARUS. How did you learn he wanted to see you over there?

Miss PARIS. Actually, I don't know.

Mr. LAZARUS. You mean you just had an inspiration, you went to the city hall and were sworn in, or got a job? You don't want us to believe that, do you?

Miss PARIS. I am sorry. I don't know how to explain it differently. I don't recall exactly, but as a matter of fact I think there was something in the newspaper about it, too. Actually, I went over to Arthur Walker's office, and I was told to wait.

Mr. LAZARUS. That is where you go when you go to the city hall.

Miss PARIS. I was told to wait. I think there was some confusion.

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes; there generally is. Let us be a little more specific, Miss PARIS. Just give us your best recollection of who told you to report at city hall. How did you get word you were to go there?

Miss PARIS. My best recollection is that Judge O'Dwyer's office, or Mayor O'Dwyer's office called.

Mr. LAZARUS. They telephoned to you?

Miss PARIS. I cannot say that as a fact. I am giving you that as my best recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. May I ask a question?

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you apply for a job at the city hall?

Miss PARIS. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you offered a job at the city hall?

Miss PARIS. Well, if you call that an offer; yes. I was told Judge O'Dwyer wanted me.

Mr. HALLEY. Who told you that?

Miss PARIS. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Somebody called you?

Miss PARIS. I think it was a telephone call, but I cannot say that. That has been a number of years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. And somebody called you from the city hall?

Miss PARIS. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

Senator TOBEY. Now, Madam Witness, as a matter of fact, Mr. Moran arranged for this job for you and notified you, didn't he?

Miss PARIS. I don't know that.

Senator TOBEY. He told you about it?

Miss PARIS. I don't know about that.

Senator TOBEY. He told you he had recommended you?

Miss PARIS. I don't know that.

Senator TOBEY. Didn't he tell you that?

Miss PARIS. I cannot answer that.

Senator TOBEY. Did he not talk with you about it?

Miss PARIS. I don't know.

Senator TOBEY. When did you see Mr. Moran last?

Miss PARIS. I haven't seen Mr. Moran in something like 3 years, approximately 3 years.

Senator TOBEY. Three years.

Miss PARIS. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. How long a lease have you at the address you live at now?

Miss PARIS. How long a lease?

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes.

Miss PARIS. Well, I have been there some 11 years, maybe 12.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you sign a lease there?

Miss PARIS. Yes; but that was many years ago. I don't remember.

Mr. LAZARUS. The lease is in your name?

Miss PARIS. Yes, yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Are you assigned to anyone in particular at the city hall at this time?

Miss PARIS. Yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Who?

Miss PARIS. Mr. Kingsbury.

Mr. LAZARUS. What is his job?

Miss PARIS. Assistant deputy treasurer—excuse me—assistant deputy mayor.

Mr. LAZARUS. At the time you were in the city hall, or, rather, in the district attorney's office, there was a question about some records that had disappeared. Can you tell us something about that?

Miss PARIS. I will tell you everything I know. However, you must remember that this was a number of years ago.

Mr. LAZARUS. Give us your best recollection.

Miss PARIS. Yes; I will give you my very best recollection.

As I recall, Mr. Beldock question me about some empty files that were found in one of the rooms in the district attorney's office that was occupied when he came in by Mr. Moran and myself. I told him at the time, and this is the same thing I am telling you, I am trying to remember exactly the truth as it is, but I told Mr. Beldock the absolute truth, too, although I don't know whether he believed me or not. It was the truth at the time, and it is the truth today. I don't know anything about the files, anything about things being missing from those files.

Later on I understood he had been referring to some small drawer that was on top of some filing cabinet, that I had no knowledge whatever of. At the time I thought he was talking about this four-drawer cabinet, which had nothing in it at all when we moved into that room, and by "we," I mean Mr. Moran and myself.

Mr. LAZARUS. You were then acting as his secretary?

Miss PARIS. That is right.

Mr. LAZARUS. How did the subject of missing records come to your notice?

Miss PARIS. Mr. Beldock questioned me.

Mr. LAZARUS. Is it not a fact that you had a discussion with Mr. Moran in a place at Court and Pacific, or Atlantic, in relation to these files, just before this discussion about their being missed, or about that time? Did you ever discuss that matter with Mr. Moran?

Miss PARIS. Absolutely never, never.

Mr. LAZARUS. You never discussed any missing records?

Miss PARIS. No, sir.

Mr. LAZARUS. You were questioned about missing records by whom?

Miss PARIS. By Mr. Beldock.

MR. LAZARUS. And you were Mr. Moran's secretary at the time?

MISS PARIS. That is right.

MR. LAZARUS. You never mentioned it to him?

MISS PARIS. No, sir.

MR. LAZARUS. That would be unusual, wouldn't it?

MISS PARIS. No; it would not be unusual, because I don't think you have got the story straight.

MR. LAZARUS. Well, give it to us, then.

MISS PARIS. From the way you are talking, I know that you do not have the facts straight, or you wouldn't think that that was ridiculous.

MR. LAZARUS. Well, please straighten us out on this.

MISS PARIS. How do you expect me to straighten it out? How do you think I feel? You don't know the story about Beldock. You don't know what injustice and what an unfair thing it was. Isn't it bad enough after 4 years, to have the newspapers with my name in them. How do you think I feel? I know Beldock was looking for publicity so that he could run to be a miserable district attorney, and he didn't care whose body he stepped over in doing it.

I didn't have the nerve or the energy or the strength to sue him, so I let it ride. This is very distasteful. You must know how embarrassing and how humiliating this all is.

Why don't you call Beldock in, and get the story from him? Why was I dragged into a thing like this? For what reason? The thing is ridiculous. Apparently no one else told you the story, why do you want it from me, the least of all? Why don't you bring Turkus in, and Beldock, and Louis Joseph, and find out from them the kind of conspiracy they went through to gain a miserable election? Anybody stooping so low as to do that should be called in to face the facts, and I for one would like to face Mr. Beldock at a place like this and find out why he did what he did. They get the headlines, and when they find out there is nothing there, they don't bother exculpating you.

Who will explain to my new bosses that this thing is ridiculous to bring me in here? For what?

MR. LAZARUS. Well, we feel as keenly as you do about it.

MISS PARIS. Oh, no; you can't feel as keenly as I do about it.

MR. LAZARUS. Don't you think this would be a good opportunity to clear the record and give the truth that you say was never gotten to before? Wouldn't this be just the opportunity?

MISS PARIS. The truth? This is not a question of getting at the truth, this is a question of unraveling what amounts to a stupidity so gross that I cannot even explain it. I could not very well—well, to get back to your question—I am sorry if I am rushing you, Mr. Reporter, I know how that feels.

MR. LAZARUS. Go ahead.

MISS PARIS. Mr. Beldock, at the time he questioned me about the empty files, Mr. Moran was not in the office at that time. He was no longer a part of the office. He was no longer an employee in that office. He had nothing to do any longer with the district attorney's office.

I was a civil servant, so I stayed there because of my civil-service status. Administrations came and went while I was there. It made no difference.

Therefore, the fact that I remained had nothing to do with the filing cabinet one way or another, and the fact that Mr. Moran went had nothing to do with the filing cabinet one way or another, and when Mr. Beldock questioned me there was no point nor any reason for ever having met Mr. Moran, at any fictitious or nonfictitious corner. I don't know what you are referring to when you say Court and Atlantic or Court and Pacific. Why should I meet him anywhere?

Mr. LAZARUS. That is what we are trying to find out.

Miss PARIS. He was no longer a part of that office.

Mr. LAZARUS. We understand that.

Miss PARIS. Why would I talk with him about it?

Mr. LAZARUS. We want to find out. This committee is interested in a matter which we consider to be important, and that is, missing records, public records.

Now, if that is not important, will you tell us what is?

Miss PARIS. Do you honestly believe there were missing records? Do you think Mr. Beldock, or do you not think that Mr. Beldock might just have used that as an excuse? How many excuses did he use? Did you investigate the rest of the things that Mr. Beldock used in order to get headlines, and everybody sat and suffered and took it, and nobody bothered to sue him later on it?

Mr. LAZARUS. Is that all you have to say about the story of the missing records?

Miss PARIS. I will say anything, I will answer any question you want to put to me, but so far as I am concerned there was no such thing as a missing record in my office, in my file cabinet, while I was there. And I told that to Mr. Beldock. I told him that there were no records of any kind in that file cabinet. We had just moved into that room. It was a new room and we took over. I made that very clear to him.

He made sure to do nothing about it afterward, and he knows that I was telling the truth. He knows that today, too, but he hasn't done anything about it.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, that answers the question about the missing records. Let's pass on. Is there anything else you have?

Mr. LAZARUS. The next thing I would like to ask, there was some disciplinary action taken at that time. What was that for?

Miss PARIS. That is a matter of record. I didn't pay any attention to it, actually. I don't even remember the things.

Mr. LAZARUS. You were disciplined, were you not?

Miss PARIS. He suspended me for 3 months; yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Three months or 60 days, which was it?

Miss PARIS. It was 3 months, and then I asked that it be changed to 2 months, because legally I understand you are not supposed to suspend anybody for 3 months. I went in for that third month every morning at 9 o'clock, and I signed the book, and still the corporation counsel would not O. K. it, and I was still suspended for the 3 months. I did not get any back pay for that 1 month's pay. That is another thing that is still coming to me.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you bank your money?

Miss PARIS. Yes, I do.

Mr. LAZARUS. Where do you bank it?

Miss PARIS. Well, I never did bank any until I got this job with a fairly decent salary.

MR. LAZARUS. What job?

MISS PARIS. I beg your pardon?

MR. LAZARUS. What job is that?

MISS PARIS. At the city hall, the mayor's office.

MR. LAZARUS. At the city hall?

MISS PARIS. Yes. I did not bank any before that.

MR. LAZARUS. Where do you bank?

MISS PARIS. At the Emigrants Industrial on Chambers Street.

MR. LAZARUS. The Emigrants Industrial?

MISS PARIS. Yes.

MR. LAZARUS. At Chambers Street?

MISS PARIS. That is right.

MR. LAZARUS. Do you have any other bank accounts?

MISS PARIS. I?

MR. LAZARUS. Yes.

MISS PARIS. No. There is another bank account which happens to be in my name, but that is not mine. I have a situation there which I will be very glad to explain to you, so any time in the future you don't think I have lied to you. There is nothing in this world to me worth lying about. I don't lie to anybody, let alone at a time like this.

It so happens that I have a boy who does not know the value of money. I allowed him to start a savings account near our home in the Fulton Savings Bank, and at the first opportunity, the few hundred dollars, it didn't amount to much, that he had in the bank, it was gone. Some other boy had talked him into spending it for something.

I went over to the Fulton Savings Bank, and I spoke to the people who opened the account. He was with me, and I asked them was there some way we could open a bank account so that Dan, that is my son, could not take the money out unless I O. K.'d it. They said the only way we could do that was we could not have a joint account, and the only way we could do that would be to have it in my name, in trust for him. That is the way I have it. That account is in the Emigrants Bank.

MR. LAZARUS. And those are the only two accounts you have?

MISS PARIS. Let me explain it all so you don't come back later with anything.

Dan has been playing basketball, and he gets paid so much a game. That is in the evening. He is in college during the day. He has only been doing this recently. Every time he gets paid he gives me his money, and I put it in that bank for him, so you will find, if you care to investigate, it is only in the past year or so, but it has come to several hundreds of dollars. As a matter of fact, it might be a thousand or a little over that. I didn't even look at it, until I got money from him to put in there every now and then, and every now and then if it is his birthday or Christmas, I might give him $25 as a present, and that goes in. That is in my name in trust for him, but that is his account, and I would not draw a penny from it if I died, and he knows that, he trusts me.

MR. LAZARUS. You have just two bank accounts?

MISS PARIS. I don't want you to call it mine. I can bring the bank people here to tell you that it is his. That is his money. I wouldn't touch that if I was sick and dying.

Mr. LAZARUS. Well, you have a trust account for your son, Dan, and you have your own account in Emigrants.

Miss PARIS. Yes; that is mine in the Emigrants; yes, sir.

Mr. LAZARUS. You have no other depositories where you keep anything of value?

Miss PARIS. I have nothing. I pay $45 a month rent for a two-and-a-half-room apartment that I have had for the last 11 or 12 years. I have raised two children of my own. I have done it alone. I have no jewelry, no property, no stocks, I have no bonds, I have no money, and I wait every 2 weeks for my check to come in in order to be able to pay my current bills. I have no money whatsoever. That is why this is such an outrage.

Mr. LAZARUS. That is an answer. I have no further questions, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any further questions?

Senator TOBEY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Walsh?

Mr. WALSH. Miss Paris, do you know an individual by the name of Louis Weber?

Miss PARIS. Louis Weber? No. Is he anybody supposed to be working with me?

Mr. WALSH. No. This man is a friend of Mr. Moran's, or an acquaintance, I should say.

Miss PARIS. Not that I know of. I knew everybody in the district attorney's office, and I knew everybody in the mayor's office.

Mr. WALSH. He is just Louis Weber, a Puerto Rican, I believe.

Miss PARIS. No.

Mr. WALSH. You never saw him visit——

Miss PARIS. I never heard the name before.

Mr. WALSH. And you never saw him visit Mr. Moran while you and Mr. Moran shared an office in the district attorney's office?

Miss PARIS. No; and let me explain something, when you talk about sharing an office with Mr. Moran, that arrangement lasted only a very short time. As you know, that district attorney's office——

Mr. WALSH. Just a moment. If you saw him, you tell me; if you did not, then you tell me that you did not.

Miss PARIS. That is "No" to that, but while you are on the other subject about sharing an office, you are interested in finding out the facts, aren't you?

Mr. WALSH. Miss Paris——

Mr. HALLEY. No; let her answer. Go ahead.

Miss PARIS. The situation, when Mr. Moran and I shared an office in the district attorney's, was for a very, very short part of the time that I was employed in the district attorney's office. It was a very short time. I don't want you to think that this was a continuing thing over a period of years, or even a year. I think it was only a matter of months, as a matter of fact.

Mr. WALSH. I did not suggest that at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Is Paris your maiden name?

Miss PARIS. Paris is my maiden name. I have a Supreme Court order which gives me the right to use it.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your married name?

Miss PARIS. Finn.

Mr. LAZARUS. You said your initial was "Z"?

Miss PARIS. Yes; Anna Z. That is Italian, Anna Zorano.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much.

Miss PARIS. You are welcome. I feel better now that I have told you of the situation.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you want to tell us anything else?

Miss PARIS. I felt that Mr. Beldock used me innocently—that is, I was the innocent victim, and then he did nothing about it afterward, which he should have done, and when he suspended me for the 3 months it was absolutely an outrage. I did not want to embarrass O'Dwyer, who had become mayor. It just involved a small fry. What difference does it make? I went to the corporation counsel with that thing, and instead of getting my month's pay back, I had to pay some $30 or something for having brought the action in the first place, and now that it has died for 3 years, if this thing is put in the papers, and my name comes out, remember, I have children, I have a family, and I have an office to which I am very much attached. I have become very interested in these people. They are a wonderful group. They have been so nice to me, and now all this has to come out again. For what?

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think you need worry about it.

Miss PARIS. If it is in the papers I have to worry about it. You see, that is not fair at all. I mean, before you call people here you should have the background and know exactly whether those people are important to you, not because a Beldock happens to come along and tosses your name into a paper, and throws up a smoke screen. That is not fair.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Thank you very much.

Miss PARIS. You are quite welcome.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Who are you going to call next?

Mr. HALLEY. We will call Mr. Anastasia.

The CHAIRMAN. Come around here to that chair, Mr. Anastasia. Now, will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, gentlemen, let's get down to the matter here. Who is going to question Mr. Anastasia?

Mr. HALLEY. I am.

The CHAIRMAN. Proceed.

TESTIMONY OF UMBERTO (ALBERT) ANASTASIA, PALISADES, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Umberto Anastasia.

Mr. HALLEY. How old are you?

Mr. ANASTASIA. 47.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you born?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Italy.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first come to this country?

Mr. ANASTASIA. 1917.

- Mr. HALLEY. 1917?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.
- Mr. HALLEY. Are you a citizen?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.
- Mr. HALLEY. When did you become a citizen?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. 1943.
- Mr. HALLEY. Where did you live when you first came to this country?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Brooklyn.
- Mr. HALLEY. How long have you lived in Brooklyn?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. I would say about 29 years.
- Mr. HALLEY. Where do you live now?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Jersey.
- Mr. HALLEY. Where, at what address?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Palisade.
- Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any particular address?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, 75 Bluff Road.
- Mr. HALLEY. Bluff Road?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.
- Mr. HALLEY. When did you move to Jersey?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. 1947.
- Mr. HALLEY. 1947?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. 1947.
- Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. At the present time I am a dress manufacturer.
- Mr. HALLEY. A dress manufacturer?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.
- Mr. HALLEY. What is the name of your company?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Madison Dress.
- Mr. HALLEY. Madison Dress?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.
- Mr. HALLEY. Where is that located?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Hazelton, Pa.
- Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any partners there?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.
- Mr. HALLEY. Who are they?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. A gentleman by the name of Harry Strauss.
- The CHAIRMAN. How do you spell that?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. That is S-t-r-a-u-s-s.
- Mr. BAILEY. Do you have any other partners?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.
- Mr. HALLEY. Do you contract to make dresses for other people, or do you sell dresses yourself to the trade?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. We make them for different jobbers.
- Mr. HALLEY. You job, in other words?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.
- Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been in that business?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Since 1948.
- Mr. HALLEY. How much money did you invest in the business?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer that question.
- The CHAIRMAN. Well, now, just a minute. That is a legal business; isn't it?
- Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, there is nothing wrong with the business; is there?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, I decline to answer that on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean how much money you invested in it? Is that what you are talking about?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you want to make any explanation as to why you think it would incriminate you, how it could? We don't want to take advantage of you, if you do have a sound ground. But here you are in the dress business, and you put some money in it.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, sir, the Government is investigating my income at the present time, and that is the reason.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you go into business?

Mr. ANASTASIA. 1948.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you any other business?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do prior to 1948?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last have a legal business?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer on the same ground.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Anastasia, you decline to answer when you last had a legal business prior to the Madison Dress Co.?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer on the same ground.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will direct you to answer that question. Do you refuse to follow the direction of the chairman?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer on the same ground.

Mr. HALLEY. When you first came to this country, how old were you?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Fourteen.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go to school here?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do, go to work?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I went to work.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your first job?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Longshoreman.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you work as a longshoreman?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Oh, I worked as a longshoreman until about 1919, I believe.

Mr. HALLEY. Then what did you do?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever belonged to the Longshoremen's Union?

Mr. ANASTASIA. To a union?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been an officer of a union?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What union did you belong to?

Mr. ANASTASIA. The ILA.

Mr. HALLEY. What local?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember.

The CHAIRMAN. I did not understand the name of the union.

Mr. HALLEY. He belonged to the ILA. Let's see; in 1919 you stopped working as a longshoreman; is that right?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I believe I worked about 2 years.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the next occupation you had, you do remember?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, sometime between 1919 and 1948, you must have had some occupation. Can you tell the committee of any occupation you had between 1919 and 1948?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, I volunteered in the Army in 1942, and I was discharged at the end of 1944. I believe I worked for my brother for 4 or 5 months. I cannot tell the exact time. My brother was a stevedore at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. You worked as a longshoreman for him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No; as a superintendent, after I was discharged from the Army.

Mr. HALLEY. You went right into his business?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I did not go into his business. I was a stevedore superintendent, and hired people to work.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, when you volunteered in the Army, did you go into any particular branch?

Mr. ANASTASIA. You mean—I don't understand you.

Mr. HALLEY. What part of the Army were you in?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was in Camp Forrest, Tenn., in the Eighty-eighth Division, Infantry.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go overseas?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did your division go overseas?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was relieved from my division.

Mr. HALLEY. When it went overseas?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How did that come about?

Mr. ANASTASIA. A circular from the War Department came out that they wanted expert longshoremen, and when I went into the service I had put down that—that I knew how to load a ship, how much the capacity of a boom was, how much can a boom lift—and that is the reason I was relieved from the Infantry and sent to transportation.

Mr. HALLEY. When your unit went overseas, then, you went into transportation; is that right?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you assigned?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Mr. HALLEY. Indiantown Gap?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there a port there?

Mr. ANASTASIA. It was a port of embarkation.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. It is about 170 miles from New York, past Arlington, about 40 miles from Arlington, Pa.

Mr. HALLEY. You say that was a port of embarkation there?

Mr. ANASTASIA. It was a port of embarkation; they called it that. There is no port there. There is no sea there.

Mr. HALLEY. What did they need longshoremen there for?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, they have a ship on land there and they train all the Negro troops.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were training troops?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was sent there.

Mr. HALLEY. What?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was sent there from Camp Forrest, Tenn.

Mr. HALLEY. To train troops?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you there?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was there from 1942 to the end of 1944. I don't remember if it was November or December.

Mr. HALLEY. And then where did you go? Were you released?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was discharged. I had an honorable discharge.

Mr. HALLEY. Between 1919 and 1942, can you tell the committee of any occupation you had?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you mean to sit there and say that you don't remember any occupation you had between 1919 and 1942?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any legitimate business or occupation between 1919 and 1942?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I refuse to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me.

Senator TOBEY. Oh, now, just a moment. He is asking you about legal business.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, sir, I don't remember any job that I had.

The CHAIRMAN. What was that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't recall any job in legitimate business that I had.

Mr. HALLEY. The fact is that you did not have any; isn't that the fact? Isn't it the fact that you just didn't have a job.

Mr. ANASTASIA. In those years, I don't remember. I was around the race track occasionally. I don't recall if I had any legitimate business or not.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, is it not a fact that you not only don't recall, but you just did not have any?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, now——

Senator TOBEY. How did you live in those years?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, I went down to the race track, and I would make a little bet and get a winner now and then, and get a loser. That is the way I used to do.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Proceed.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you hold a position of sergeant in the Army?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Were you a sergeant in the Army?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know a Colonel Katay?

Mr. ANASTASIA. He was my colonel.

Mr. HALLEY. He was your colonel?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How well did you know him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I knew him in my line of duty, as you would know a colonel, if you was in the Army yourself.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you see him since you got out of the Army?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you build your house in the Palisades?

Mr. ANASTASIA. In 1946.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you build it yourself?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I refuse to answer on the ground it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. I will ask the chairman to direct the witness to answer the question.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Anastasia, I will have to direct you to answer that question.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer it on the same grounds sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Lucky Luciano?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember if I ever met him. I know of him from reading the papers.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not ever meet him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No; I don't recall that I ever met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you by any chance go to the boat to see him off when he was deported?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Of that you are sure?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How far is your home from the home of Joe Adonis?

Mr. ANASTASIA. It is in the same neighborhood, about three blocks, three and a half blocks.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you ever see Joe Adonis?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How often?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Oh, maybe once every 2 days or 3 days, once a week, occasionally.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I saw him yesterday, I would say. I believe I saw him Monday.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I know him. I have seen his picture this morning in the paper.

Mr. HALLEY. But you never met Frank Costello?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I met him down at the race track years back.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met him in the last 5 years?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I cannot say, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what do you mean when you say you cannot say?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I might have seen him. I might have seen him some place.

Mr. HALLEY. In the last 5 years?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I might have.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you seen him within the last year?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I can't recall if I seen him in the last year or last 5 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him within the last month?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I cannot say.

Mr. HALLEY. The answer is "No"? What is the answer?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't recall if I saw him in the last month, or the last 5 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Your best recollection is that you did not?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't recall ever seeing him.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you talk to Joe Adonis about the last time you saw him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No conversation whatsoever, just greetings of the day, "How is your children," "How is my children."

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell him you were subpoenaed to come before this committee?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not talk about that at all?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Not at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever had any business dealings with Joe Adonis?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were working on the water front in Brooklyn, did you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. ANASTASIA. In 1917, I didn't know Joe, not in 1917.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, since that you said from time to time you helped your brother out.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, I must have saw him in Brooklyn a few times. I believe I know him 15 or 20 years, around 15 or 20 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in his restaurant at Fourth Avenue and Carroll Street?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, I don't remember. I guess I was there a couple of times, eating.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your brother Tony doing?

Mr. ANASTASIA. My brother at the present time is a superintendent; he is a hire foreman.

Mr. HALLEY. Who does he work for?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Jarka Stevedoring Co.

Mr. HALLEY. How long has he been there?

Mr. ANASTASIA. My brother Tony has worked for Jarka quite a number of years. I don't remember how long he worked the last time. I believe he was working for Jarka before.

Mr. HALLEY. By the way, did you ever tell anybody that Bill O'Dwyer told you to keep out of New York City when you were in the Army? Did you ever tell that to anybody?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Bill O'Dwyer?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Told me to what?

Mr. HALLEY. Keep out of New York City.

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Bill O'Dwyer tell you that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you never told that to anybody in the Army?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Absolutely not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever tell anybody that you joined the Army because it would help you kill the trouble you were in?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You never told that to anybody?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you move to Jersey in 1947?

Mr. ANASTASIA. My wife, she had the house for sale since 1944, so finally she felt like, "Let's bring up our children away from Brooklyn," and we moved to Jersey. We bought a piece of land and built a home.

Mr. HALLEY. Who runs the Jarka Stevedoring Co.?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Who owns the Jarka Stevedoring Co.?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Jarka?

Mr. HALLEY. Who owns it?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Captain O'Reilly?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there ever a meeting in your house concerning work to be done on the breakwater in Brooklyn?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. In the month of December 1950?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see your brother Tony?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yesterday.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you talk about?

Mr. ANASTASIA. He was here yesterday; he had a subpena.

Mr. HALLEY. I know, but what did you talk about?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Nothing.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see him before that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, he comes to my house maybe once a week or once every 2 weeks.

Mr. HALLEY. You saw him from time to time in December?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I saw him during the holidays and New Year's.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you see him before the holidays in December?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I saw him often. He is my brother. I don't know when I saw him.

Mr. HALLEY. Was your brother in your home with a number of other men?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. During December 1950?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Gus Schiannovino?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, I do.

Mr. HALLEY. How long do you know him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Oh, about 25 years, 25 or 30 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you on friendly terms with him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his business?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Organizer.

Mr. HALLEY. A union organizer?

Mr. ANASTASIA. For the union for the longshoremen.

Mr. HALLEY. For the longshoremen?

Mr. ANASTASIA. For the Longshoremen's Union.

Mr. HALLEY. And did Schiannovino want your brother to get that job on the breakwater in Brooklyn?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That I don't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Nolan?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What are the advantages of being the hiring boss on a dock? What does the hiring boss do?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, he calls the men in the morning, gang by gang, "You are assigned to No. 1 hatch," No. 2 hatch, No. 3 hatch, No. 4 hatch, and so on.

Mr. HALLEY. He picks the men who get hired; is that right?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard that sometimes the men kick back the money to the boss?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You never heard that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You realize you are under oath?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is a good way to get into trouble, if you fail to tell the truth under oath?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I never heard of it.

Mr. HALLEY. You never heard of any case where a man paid money back?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, you read—in fact, I read of a lot of cases, but I never heard about my brother.

Mr. HALLEY. I did not ask you about your brother. Did you ever hear that that occurred on the docks?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I am not too near the dock. I am away from Brooklyn for 4 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you worked there right after the war; is that right?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. For how long?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I worked from—beginning to work in December or January 1945.

Mr. HALLEY. And how long after that did you work?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't recall if it was 4, 5, or 6 months; I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. What were your duties there? You were a foreman on the dock?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was a superintendent.

Mr. HALLEY. What does a superintendent do?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, a superintendent is above the hire foreman. The hire foreman designates the men in the gangs and the superintendent walks around the pier and sees that they do their work.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were superintendent, did you ever hear anything first about any men paying for the privilege of working on the docks?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Not on our pier.

Mr. HALLEY. On any other pier?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't know about that.

Mr. HALLEY. Did anybody ever tell you that men paid for the privilege of working on the dock?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was not interested.

Mr. HALLEY. Would you have heard about it, if you were interested?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, I might have read that, but I was not interested—sure, I guess so.

Mr. HALLEY. That is what the men say, isn't it?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. That is what the men say, isn't it, that they have to pay to work on the docks?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir; not on our pier.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Benjamin Crown?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Ben Crown? I heard his name here yesterday.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see him before that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Benjamin Macri?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I know him several years.

Mr. HALLEY. In what way do you know him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, we are very friendly.

Mr. HALLEY. You are a good friend of his?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember if I knew him before I went in the service, or after I got discharged from the service.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, how did you meet him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, how I met him I cannot tell you; I don't remember now.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you got any mutual friends?

Mr. ANASTASIA. With who?

Mr. HALLEY. With Macri.

Mr. ANASTASIA. With Macri, you mean if we are close?

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any friends, some of his friends whom you also know?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you don't just meet a man; somebody introduces you, or you meet him through some business.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't know if it was through the occasion of a stevedoring matter, through my brother, that my brother was a stevedore, and we were doing some work during the winter of 1945, and we had a ship of ballast in one of Macri's piers in Brooklyn, and I believe that is the time that I must have met him.

Mr. HALLEY. What was Macri's business?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Ship repair.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know the name of his company?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Sancor Shipbuilding Co.

Mr. HALLEY. Since you met him you say you have become very friendly?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Does he come to your house?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How often?

Mr. ANASTASIA. He was over to my house a couple of times, maybe three or four times, with his wife and kid.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you been over to his house?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. With your wife?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And did he ever give you any help in the building of your house?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he ever provide any laborers for you?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That I refuse—I decline to answer on the ground it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. I order you to answer.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline on the same grounds, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was the contractor for the building of your house?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer on the ground it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. You know, your way of approaching this is very peculiar. Every time we get close to some subject which the committee has any suspicions about, and you refuse to answer, then we are sure we are right. This is a fact-finding committee. The committee is going to form its judgment, and when you refuse to even tell the committee the name of the contractor who built your house, the committee's judgment, expressed in its report, will be bound to be adverse to you; at least, I will recommend so to the committee.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I am under investigation by the Government. The Government knows everything. It knows my income, the house, the contractors.

Senator TOBEY. We know your income, we have got your income-tax blanks. It is all open to us.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

Senator TOBEY. That does not answer the question about the house.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you are ordered to tell what contractor built your house.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer on the same grounds.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry; but did you refuse to answer?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer on the ground it may tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. What is Macri's first name?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Benedict.

Mr. HALLEY. What?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Benedict Macri.

Mr. HALLEY. Benedict Macri, is he in the Tombs now? Isn't he in jail?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Charged at the time for the Loria murder?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How many times were you charged with murder, Mr. Anastasia.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember, sir. If you will show me the record, I will tell you if it is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, we are not going to play that game. Have you ever been charged with murder?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. More than once?

Mr. ANASTASIA. More than once.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever convicted of any crime?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever convicted of any crime?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What crime?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Violation of the Sullivan law.

Mr. HALLEY. For carrying a gun?

Mr. ANASTASIA. For carrying a gun.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you convicted of that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. In 1923.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go to jail?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. For how long?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was sent to a New York penitentiary.

Mr. HALLEY. For how long?

Mr. ANASTASIA. About 27 or 28 months.

Senator TOBEY. Do you still carry a gun?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I did not understand you.

Senator TOBEY. Do you still carry a gun?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was accused of it, but I was innocent.

The CHAIRMAN. The question that Senator Tobey asked you is, do you still carry a gun?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir. I carried one in the Army, but not now.

Mr. HALLEY. What other convictions have you had?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. What other convictions have you had?

Mr. ANASTASIA. A conviction that stood up, the only one was the the gun charge, that I served time for, and no other conviction ever stood up against me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any conviction that was reversed?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. For what?

Mr. ANASTASIA. For murder.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't know, 1920 or 1921. You have the record there, you know.

Mr. HALLEY. I have the record, but I want your memory on it.

Mr. ANASTASIA. 1920 or 1921. I don't remember. I was convicted of murder in the first degree.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were sentenced to the chair?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was sentenced to the chair, and the court of appeals of the State of New York unanimously reversed it, and dismissed the indictment.

Mr. HALLEY. Who defended you?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Leo Healy, and a fellow by the name of Milligan, a State lawyer. I didn't have no lawyer.

Mr. HALLEY. The case was reversed, and you were given a new trial?

Mr. ANASTASIA. A new trial was granted unanimously by the court of appeals.

Mr. HALLEY. On the new trial, were you acquitted?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Not acquitted, they were ordered to dismiss the indictment. I was never brought to a second trial.

Mr. HALLEY. You were never brought to trial again?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you convicted of crime on any other occasions?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joseph Profaci?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I just see him outside here.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet him before?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I must have met him once or twice before, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Where?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Around Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, where?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Some restaurant, or some wedding; I don't remember where.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Willie Moretti?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go to the wedding of Willie Moretti's daughter?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Vito Genovese?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I know of him, and I must have met him once or twice, but I am not too friendly with him.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Little Augie Pissano?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Twenty-five years, twenty years, I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in business with him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever belong to a political club?

Mr. ANASTASIA. A political club?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. ANASTASIA. It was a political club in Brooklyn that occasionally I used to go in.

Mr. HALLEY. What club was that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. The City Democratic Club.

Mr. HALLEY. In what district was that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. The third assembly district in Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you belong?

Mr. ANASTASIA. In 1931, 1932, 1933, I don't remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever make a political contribution?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You were not a citizen at that time, were you?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And of course you could not vote.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. You did not vote at that time?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your interest in a political club at that time?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I did not get that.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your interest in a political club at that time?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No interest whatsoever.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you belong?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, you go in there occasionally, once a week, or maybe once every 2 weeks; that is the only interest I had.

Mr. HALLEY. Who asked you to join?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't recall who it was. I think a fellow by the name of Dr. Longoe; I believe he was president. He is dead now. He was the president of the club.

Mr. HALLEY. He was a good friend of Adonis, wasn't he?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't know, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you ever see Adonis around there?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir; I never saw him around the club.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, let's get back to Macri. Did he ever send any trucks over to your house at Palisade?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember him sending any there.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't remember?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't deny it, though.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember that he ever sent anything there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he ever send any workmen over there?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer that on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did it cost you to build your house?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That house cost me $48,000 or $47,000. I got a $30,000 mortgage, 20 and 10.

Mr. HALLEY. And how much did the ground cost you?

Mr. ANASTASIA. $8,000.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did it take to build it?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, around 4 months, I believe.

Senator TOBEY. What was your business before building the house?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer on the ground that it may tend to incriminate me.

Senator TOBEY. Where did you get the $28,000 cash, over and above the mortgage to put into that house?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Do you mean the first money?

Senator TOBEY. You said it cost $48,000, and $10,000, that is $58,000, with a mortgage of $30,000.

Mr. ANASTASIA. $58,000?

Senator TOBEY. You said that the place cost $48,000, and the land $10,000.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Eight thousand.

Senator TOBEY. Well, that is $56,000, and you got a mortgage of $30,000, so as to the $26,000, where did that come from?

Mr. ANASTASIA. A $30,000 mortgage, $20,000 first and $10,000 second.

Senator TOBEY. Well, deducting that, it leaves $26,000.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. Where did that money come from?

Mr. ANASTASIA. We had a home in Brooklyn, and we sold it.

Senator TOBEY. What did that bring?

Mr. ANASTASIA. $27,000.

Mr. HALLEY. So you put that money in there; is that right?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. I see. Thank you.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Mr. Anastasia, you got a first mortgage from a lending institution, from a bank, of $20,000?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I have a first mortgage from the president of the Fort Lee Trust Co.

Mr. SHIVITZ. From the who?

Mr. ANASTASIA. My first mortgage is from the president of the Fort Lee Trust Co.

Mr. SHIVITZ. The Fort Lee Trust Co., that is for $20,000?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, and he also has the second mortgage.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And he has the second mortgage?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Also.

Mr. SHIVITZ. He has it personally, or is it the trust company?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I believe he has it personally.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And he gave you that mortgage, or you gave him that mortgage, rather, and he made you that loan after the house was built; is that correct?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What then?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, the house was in operation.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Before the house was built he gave you a mortgage?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Tell us when.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, I had the wall up.

Mr. SHIVITZ. When you had the walls up?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That is right.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you have the interior walls up and the outside walls up when he gave you the mortgage?

Mr. ANASTASIA. My house is a cinder block. I don't know if you know anything about building, but cinder block goes up in a week, right to the roof.

Mr. SHIVITZ. That is when he gave you the $30,000?

Mr. ANASTASIA. The first floor, they were working on it, and I applied for the first mortgage.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you submit a set of plans to him at that time?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I believe I must have. I don't know.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And specifications?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You don't remember.

Mr. ANASTASIA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did they get an appraisal on the building before they gave you the mortgage?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't remember. You will have to ask him.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, tell us please when you negotiated this $30,000 loan.

Mr. ANASTASIA. That was not $30,000; it was $20,000.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Well, 20 and 10. When did you get the $10,000, after the house was built?

Mr. ANASTASIA. When the house was almost complete.

Mr. SHIVITZ. When you get the $20,000, did you negotiate that yourself?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No; through a lawyer.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What lawyer?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Bernard White, from Cliffside.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And you stated to Mr. Halley that you thought you knew Vito Genovese, from Bluff Road.

Mr. ANASTASIA. From Bluff Road?

Mr. SHIVITZ. You think you know Vito Genovese?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't know no Genovese on Bluff Road.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know Genovese?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I know of him.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You know of him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I read about it.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You don't know him, though?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Is it not a fact that you lived with that man?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I lived with that man?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Just answer "Yes" or "No."

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir. Religiously, no.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Where did you get your citizenship?

Mr. ANASTASIA. In the Army.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Where?

Mr. ANASTASIA. At Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know Joe Russo?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Joe Russo?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. ANASTASIA. That name don't mean anything to me.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, you do contracting for jobbers; is that right, in your business?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You do contracting work?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How many concerns do you do work for, about?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I refuse to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you are ordered to answer. Do you still refuse?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I refuse to answer on the same ground.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean that your dress business is a racketeering business, too? Does that mean that your dress business is a racketeering business, too?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, that is my opinion—I am not a lawyer, I never went to school, and I refuse to answer. The Government has all the names and addresses of people with whom we do business, how much income out of the dress shop. The Government is in a position to have every document.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Who were some of your customers?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I refuse to answer on the same ground.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You won't tell us the names of any of your customers?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I refuse to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you are ordered to answer. You understand you are directed to answer these questions? Do you understand that, Mr. Anastasia?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Who does your trucking?

Mr. ANASTASIA. My partner takes care of that.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Don't you know the name of the company that does your trucking?

Mr. ANASTASIA. He is taking care of that.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You don't know the name of the company?

Mr. ANASTASIA. My partner takes care of that.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You did not answer the question.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I said he is taking care of the trucking.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Please answer the question. Do you know the name? Do you know the name of the company that does your trucking? Answer that "Yes" or "No."

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't know the name.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know Tommy Lucchese?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know a man called "Three-fingered Brown"?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I read about it last night.

Mr. SHIVITZ. I asked you if you know him.

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, you testified that when you got out of the Army you were a superintendent for your brother's company and that you hired men in the stevedoring business.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I did not hire men.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What does a superintendent do?

Mr. ANASTASIA. A superintendent watches out for the interests of the concern.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What company was your brother in? What was the name of the company at that time?

Mr. ANASTASIA. The A A Stevedoring.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever hear of the Nessa Co.?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know whether the superintendent lays out the cargo plans?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No; I don't.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Who are the owners, besides your brother, of the A A?

Mr. ANASTASIA. He, himself.

Mr. SHIVITZ. He has no partners?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No partners.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did they ever have a Government contract, the A A?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Where are they located?

Mr. ANASTASIA. A A?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Fifteen Bridge Street, I believe.

Mr. SHIVITZ. In Brooklyn?

Mr. ANASTASIA. New York.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you last in Hazelton, Pa.?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer on the ground it may tend to incriminate me.

The CHAIRMAN. You understand that you are ordered to answer that question.

Mr. ANASTASIA. I decline to answer on the same ground, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you spend any time at that dress place?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Occasionally.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean by "occasionally"?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, sometime.

Mr. HALLEY. Once a week?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No; that is not necessary.

Mr. HALLEY. Once a month are you there?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No; once maybe every 3 weeks.

Mr. HALLEY. For a day?

Mr. ANASTASIA. A couple of hours.

Mr. HALLEY. For a couple of hours?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you ever go out to solicit business for the company?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever ask any of your friends to get you some work?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever ask your friends to get you some machinery?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever ask anybody to help you legitimately in your business?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you ever do anything for your business?

(No response.)

The CHAIRMAN. What do you do in this dress factory? I mean, What is your part in it, Mr. Anastasia? I mean, do you keep the books? Do you hire the people?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, we have books; we have everything.

The CHAIRMAN. No; what do you do in it? You are a half owner, or a big owner.

Mr. ANASTASIA. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you do about it?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, I go out there and see that my partners take care of all the field work, all the transactions, he takes care of it.

The CHAIRMAN. How many people do you employ?

Mr. ANASTASIA. We have got 100 machines there.

The CHAIRMAN. You employ about 200 people there; do you?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No.

The CHAIRMAN. About how many?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, sometimes our plant—our plant has 100 machines, but it isn't all the time that you have 100 people working.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you make there? Dresses?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Dresses.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you sell them all to one person, or all over the country?

Mr. ANASTASIA. They belong to the jobbers.

The CHAIRMAN. You sell them to jobbers?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir; we get the goods from the jobbers. Whatever my partner jobs. We make the dresses.

Mr. HALLEY. You are what they call a contractor; aren't you?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes; a contractor.

The CHAIRMAN. Excuse me.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You say your partners take care of the details?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What did you say your partners' names were? What are their names?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Carl Strauss.

Mr. SHIVITZ. That is one. Who is the other?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That is my partner.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Well, you have been saying "partners"; have you not?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir; I am sorry; just one.

Mr. SHIVITZ. That was a mistake if you said "partners"?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Does he have a manager under him, too?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. He does everything; he is his own boss?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And he has no assistant boss there?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What price goods do you make?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Oh, well, it all depends, a $3.75 dress or $4.75.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You don't go higher?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And you said your brother hires men for Jarke. Is he on their payroll, do you know?

Mr. ANASTASIA. What payroll?

Mr. SHIVITZ. The payroll of Jarke.

Mr. ANASTASIA. The Jarke payroll?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, he is working for Jarke.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Then he is on their payroll?

Mr. ANASTASIA. He must be on it.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know what the letters A A stand for?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Anthony Anastasia.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know Joe Ryan?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. For how long?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Oh, maybe 20 years; 18 years.

Mr. SHIVITZ. When did you see him last?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Today.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Where?

Mr. ANASTASIA. In here [indicating].

Mr. SHIVITZ. And before today?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I must have saw him a few months ago, I don't remember.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Did you have any business dealings with him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No; I meet him in a bar or some restaurant, but no business dealings.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Whereabouts? in Jersey? New York? or Brooklyn?

Mr. ANASTASIA. New York.

Mr. SHIVITZ. In New York?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. In what neighborhood?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Around Eighth Avenue.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you consider him to be a good friend of yours?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Joe Ryan?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Not too close to me, but he is a gentleman; he is a nice fellow.

Mr. SHIVITZ. I didn't ask you for your opinion of him. Do you consider yourself a friend of his; a good friend of his?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Well, I don't know what he considers me.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What do you consider him?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I consider him just a friend, not too intimate. There is nothing attached between him and I, that we are socially, to be a family friend.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Well, if you got in a jam could you count on him for some help?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Walsh?

Mr. WALSH. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. I think we ought to clear this up. You have been charged with murder quite a number of times. We have your record here; is that correct?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And felonious assault; is that right?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, here is April 6, 1923, felonious assault, before Judge Haggerty, supreme court, and you were discharged. Do you remember that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. That was murder.

The CHAIRMAN. That was murder?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And you were finally charged with vagrancy in 1936; were you not?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I beg your pardon?

The CHAIRMAN. You were charged with vagrancy in 1936?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How did you get out of this last case they had up here in 1940 or 1941?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Which case, sir?

The CHAIRMAN. That was the Romeo case; wasn't it? Isn't that the name of it? Panto Romeo?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Panto Romeo? I don't know nothing about it.

The CHAIRMAN. Weren't you tried in that case?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I don't know nothing about it.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, you were tried; were you not?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Panto Romeo?

The CHAIRMAN. Didn't the grand jury indict you on that?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Those names don't mean nothing to me, Mr. Senator. I think you have got the wrong investigator. You should hire a reliable investigator. There is no Romeo and Panto that I was implicated in.

The CHAIRMAN. Peter Panto?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Never.

The CHAIRMAN. And Anthony Romeo?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Never, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't remember them at all?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I never was charged with any crime concerning them, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, didn't the grand jury charge you with intent to murder?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And the killing of some union official?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Or the harboring of Lepke?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I beg your pardon?

The CHAIRMAN. Didn't you get charged with harboring or keeping Lepke somewhere?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I was charged with it?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. ANASTASIA. Not that I recall.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Senator TOBEY. You were convicted of murder and then the sentence was set aside; is that right?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I believe it was three or four, yes, you are right.

Senator TOBEY. It is an unusual thing for a man to be charged with three or four murders, isn't it?

Mr. ANASTASIA. It is very unusual. It happened to me.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Anastasia.

Mr. SHIVITZ. May I have just another question?

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Mr. Anastasia, you say that you were a superintendent. Can you tell us what the work of a superintendent is—is it just to walk around and see men do the work; is that correct?

Mr. ANASTASIA. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Can you tell us in little more detail what a superintendent's functions are?

Mr. ANASTASIA. I will give you the details in a second.

Mr. SHIVITZ. If you will.

Mr. ANASTASIA. The detail of my brother, we didn't handle any general cargo. We were discharging ballast from all the ships that were carrying troops to the sea, after I got discharged from the Army, all those ships, they had all the ballast—I don't know if you know what it is.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; we know what ballast is.

Mr. ANASTASIA. So we were discharging the ballast, and it doesn't require any intelligence to be a superintendent.

Mr. SHIVITZ. On that kind of a job, you mean?

Mr. ANASTASIA. On that kind of a job. I was not superintendent on any other, Mister.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You were never superintendent on a regular cargo-loading job?

Mr. ANASTASIA. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. No further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Anastasia, when we want you again we will let you know. You are to remain under subpoena. There will be no other subpoena served on you. That is all now.

Who will be our next witness?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Mr. Katz.

The CHAIRMAN. Good evening, Mr. Katz. I see you have counsel with you. Will you give me your name, Counsel?

Mr. BRODERICK. John J. Broderick.

The CHAIRMAN. And your address, sir?

Mr. BRODERICK. 76 Beaver Street, New York 5, N. Y.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, will you raise your right hand and be sworn, Mr. Katz?

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. KATZ. Yes.

TESTIMONY OF LOUIS KATZ, BROOKLYN, N. Y., ACCOMPANIED BY JOHN J. BRODERICK, ATTORNEY

Mr. SHIVITZ. Mr. Katz, you have a business establishment in Brooklyn, do you?

Mr. KATZ. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And is that on Pitkin Avenue?

Mr. KATZ. It is.

Mr. SHIVITZ. What number?

Mr. KATZ. 1514 Pitkin Avenue.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Is that in the upper story?

Mr. KATZ. Upstairs.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Is that a commercial loft or offices?

Mr. KATZ. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How many feet does your office occupy?

Mr. KATZ. Thirty-seven and one-half by eighty-four.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Thirty-seven and one-half by eighty-four?

Mr. KATZ. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And do you operate it pursuant to a lease?

Mr. KATZ. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And have you got a copy of your lease here?

Mr. KATZ. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. May I have it, please?

Mr. KATZ. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. While you are looking for it, where do you reside?

Mr. KATZ. 135 East Ninety-second Street, Brooklyn.

Mr. SHIVITZ. I will offer in evidence the leases of the witness Louis Katz for the premises at 1514 Pitkin Avenue, the first lease dated January 29, 1943. That will be exhibit No. 21; the second lease, dated May 14, 1947, will be exhibit No. 22.

The CHAIRMAN. They may be received.

(The leases referred to were marked as exhibits Nos. 21 and 22, and were returned to the witness after analysis by the committee.)

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, looking at these leases, Mr. Katz, I see that the first one calls for an annual rental of $3,000 a year; is that correct?

Mr. KATZ. $2,500 a year.

Mr. SHIVITZ. $2,500 a year. I am sorry.

Mr. KATZ. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. $2,400 a year.

Mr. KATZ. $2,400 a year.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And that the subsequent lease was increased to $4,200 a year?

Mr. KATZ. That is right.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, when you originally entered into the lease for these premises in 1943—

Mr. KATZ. Pardon me. I am there 21 years.

Mr. SHIVITZ. 21 years?

Mr. KATZ. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How much was your initial rent; do you recall?

Mr. KATZ. The same thing.

Mr. SHIVITZ. $2,400?

Mr. KATZ. $2,400.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And that $4,200 hike was quite a large one?

Mr. KATZ. In 1947.

Mr. SHIVITZ. It was quite a substantial one?

Mr. KATZ. Well, the property on that street is very high, and my business, I felt when they renewed my new lease, they asked me for $100 a month more rent, and I felt it was all right.

Mr. SHIVITZ. As a matter of fact, it is more than $100 a month more; isn't it?

Mr. KATZ. No; that is all it is.

Mr. SHIVITZ. From $2,400 to $4,200 is how much—$1,200 more would be $3,600; isn't that right?

The CHAIRMAN. It is——

Mr. HALLEY. It is $150 a month more.

Mr. KATZ. I paid from 1948 $250 a month more.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You paid more than——

Mr. KATZ. It says on the lease, $2,400 to be paid during the time the war was on. After the war I paid a little bit more; is that correct?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes; that is correct. Your rental went up to $3,000?

Mr. KATZ. That is right.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you have any brothers?

Mr. KATZ. Brothers?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. KATZ. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. How many?

Mr. KATZ. I have three brothers.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And are any of them in business with you?

Mr. KATZ. No, sir.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And are you known in the neighborhood as the Katz brothers?

Mr. KATZ. I don't know what I am known as in the neighborhood.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Do you know? You do or you don't.

Mr. KATZ. I don't.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Now, have you ever been charged with bookmaking there?

Mr. KATZ. Charged with bookmaking?

Mr. SHIVITZ. Yes.

Mr. KATZ. Yes.

Mr. SHIVITZ. On how many occasions?

Mr. KATZ. About three times.

Mr. SHIVITZ. And when were they?

Mr. KATZ. During the course of 21 years.

Mr. SHIVITZ. If you can, just give us the dates.

Mr. KATZ. I cannot offhand recall.

Mr. SHIVITZ. When was the last time?

Mr. KATZ. The last time was in 1942.

Mr. SHIVITZ. The last time was in 1942?

Mr. KATZ. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you still occupy the premises?

Mr. KATZ. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. For what kind of business?

Mr. KATZ. A billiard parlor.

Mr. SHIVITZ. Have you always had a billiard parlor there?

Mr. KATZ. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever engage in bookmaking there?

Mr. KATZ. I never did.

Mr. HALLEY. At any time?

Mr. KATZ. I never did.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you never been in the bookmaking business?

Mr. KATZ. Never was in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. Even though you were convicted of it?

Mr. KATZ. I never was convicted in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was convicted?

Mr. KATZ. Nobody.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean you were just arrested and not convicted?

Mr. KATZ. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. It is your contention that there was never any bookmaking there?

Mr. KATZ. Never any bookmaking there.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is your sworn testimony?

Mr. KATZ. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any questions, Senator Tobey?

Senator TOBEY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. We can give you your leases back.

Mr. SHIVITZ. You will realize that you are still under subpoena, and if your appearance is required by the committee we will advise you.

Mr. KATZ. Any time at all to help the committee. Thank you a lot.

The CHAIRMAN. Who are we going to call next?

Mr. HALLEY. David Charnay.

The CHAIRMAN. Good evening, gentlemen. Counsel, what is your name?

Mr. SCHULTZ. Henry E. Schultz.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Will you stand, Mr. Charnay, and be sworn.

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. CHARNAY. So help me God, I do.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

TESTIMONY OF DAVID B. CHARNAY, ALLIED PUBLIC RELATIONS ASSOCIATES, ACCOMPANIED BY HENRY E. SCHULTZ, ATTORNEY

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, Mr. Charnay?

Mr. CHARNAY. My full name is David B. Charnay.

Mr. HALLEY. And your occupation, please?

Mr. CHARNAY. Public relations.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the name of your company?

Mr. CHARNAY. Allied Public Relations Associates.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been connected with that company?

Mr. CHARNAY. I would say approximately a little more than 3 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to that, what was your occupation?

Mr. CHARNAY. I was a newspaperman, employed by the New York Daily News. I was employed there on October 1, 1939, and I came there from the New York Daily Mirror, and I tendered my resignation to the New York Daily News in May of 1949, although I had been on leave of absence for two periods while I was working in the public-relations business.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you work for the Mirror?

Mr. CHARNAY. I would say I was with the Mirror since 1935 or 1936—I am not quite sure; it was somewhere in there—1935, I think, until 1939, when I left.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your occupation prior to going with the Mirror?

Mr. CHARNAY. Prior to going with the Mirror I was in the public-relations business, and this firm that I mentioned was operating under a trade name, which I was head of and owned.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you the sole owner?

Mr. CHARNAY. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. Were you the sole owner?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes, at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. And are you now the sole owner of your present business?

Mr. CHARNAY. No; I am not.

Mr. HALLEY. You have certain partners?

Mr. CHARNAY. I have one partner.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his name?

Mr. CHARNAY. His name is Art Rothwell.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Charney, there have been repeated assertions in the press and elsewhere that you have represented Frank Costello, and by the question there is no inference that you should not have represented him, but the question is, Did you ever represent Frank Costello?

Mr. CHARNEY. I am delighted that you ask that question. That has been a great source of annoyance and harassment to me. It has made me an ill man. I have just gotten out of bed. I am very sick. It has caused me a great deal of embarrassment, and it has caused a great deal of embarrassment to my wife and children.

At no time did I ever represent Frank Costello. The only knowledge I obtained was knowledge as a newspaper reporter for the New York Daily News.

This is a campaign of vilification and abuse which I have tolerated for a couple of years. It was inspired by a personal vendetta on the part of Mr. Lee Mortimer and his present employer, Jack Lait.

I left the Daily Mirror. I protested against their tactics, and I resigned of my own volition, and I went to the Daily News.

Jack Lait, the morning I went to the News, October 1, I remember it very vividly, called me up at the Daily News on the first day of my employment there and asked if I could come downstairs and meet him at a local restaurant. I said that it was impossible, that I had just come on the job, and that I didn't know the people too well, and I could not ask—he said, "It is very important that I see you."

I did. He met me for breakfast in a little restaurant right next to the Daily News, and asked me to come back to work for the Daily Mirror. I refused, and he told me that I would regret it for the rest of my life.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it your contention that they have spread stories about you for that reason only?

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, Mr. Mortimer spread stories, he had a personal vendetta, a personal animosity that he has carried in his heart for some years. I honestly do not know what it is predicated on. I warned him once some years ago and told him to stop using my name the way he was using it. He was picking on inconsequential little stories, and he asked Jack Lait, who is some relative, I am sure, and he told him to knock down, that he was going to expose the fact that I had written phony stories for the Daily News.

We had some words once, and he warned me that he would get me. He said, "Don't you worry," he says, "you are my meat."

It was unimportant to me, because I consider Mr. Lee Mortimer a very unscrupulous little man, and I consider the fact that he should not have a license as a reporter, because he is abusing the privilege that is put in the hands of a reporter. He has done me and my firm a tremendous amount of harm. He has caused my firm to lose $500,000 in business, and right now I am fighting for life in this business. In fact, my name is put in the newspapers now, and I don't know whether I will be in business for 48 hours. Being in the public-relations business you have to be like Caesar's wife; you have to be clean.

If I do sound a little distraught, it is because this has worked me up.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's try to clear it up, if we can.

Mr. CHARNAY. I would like to.

Mr. HALLEY. Has there been any basis at all, do you think, for these rumors?

Mr. CHARNAY. I cannot understand it, except this, I will try to explain it, I would like to say this, if I may:

I made some notes here of some things that I wanted to say to the committee, and I want to emphasize here voluntarily that there was no need to serve me. I have not been served. There was one left at my office, but I told Mr. Meyers, who was down in my office, to see me at any time, any place whatsoever, and I would voluntarily cooperate with the committee, and I am very much in favor of the work this committee is doing.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you. There is no implication whatsoever in the service of a subpoena. We simply had so many people to cover that the only thing to do was to issue subpoenas and get them out. It was impossible to phone everybody, because that is a long, involved business, getting in contact with them personally and inviting them.

Mr. CHARNAY. I understand; but in my case it has been very destructive. Just the day that thing appeared, last Friday, I was advised by a client who was ready to sign with us, that because of this publicity in the paper he could not sign with my firm, as much as he wanted to, he felt that we were the best in the business, but he could not sign with us. He felt that he would be doing his own firm irreparable harm by linking my name with his, when my name was linked with a lot of pugs, gangsters, thugs, et cetera.

I just wanted to make that clear.

Now, your query was, why did Mr. Mortimer, or what inspired this rumor?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHARNAY. Back in 1946 I met Frank Costello. The Daily News asked me to meet him for the same purpose this committee is in existence, to find out what he was doing. It was part of my job on assignment from the managing editor of the aDily News, or from his assistant, to meet Mr. Costello.

I did meet him. Mr. Costello would talk to me. He talked to very few reporters. Frankly, I was not able to learn a whale of a lot more by being able to talk to him than anybody else has. I tried. I notice in yesterday's papers you people talked about Saratoga. I printed stories about Saratoga, containing those facts, exposing the gambling situation.

I have copies of those stories exposing those situations there as far back as 1948, and all the names that were subpoenaed yesterday were names contained in my story.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any connection with Piping Rock?

Mr. CHARNAY. Never in my life.

Mr. HALLEY. You never worked for them in any capacity?

Mr. CHARNAY. No. I would like to state unequivocally that I never worked for Costello or any of his minions, or any minions of the hoodlum world, which goes back from the date I was born. All the records from the date I was born are available to this committee or any other agency.

In fact, I was a little more successful as a reporter than most of the fellows were, and that has brought down this condemnation upon me, particularly from Mr. Mortimer, who fancies himself as a crime reporter. He knows nothing. I understand he is writing a book and furnishing this committee with a copy of the book, which he openly boasts about.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you are wrong about that. He has not furnished me with any book.

Mr. CHARNAY. I say that he openly boasts of doing that; I don't say that he has.

Mr. HALLEY. You may be assured that we have no information from Mr. Mortimer about you. You may be completely assured of that.

Senator TOBEY. I wonder if I could ask you a question, and it may digress from your own inquiry here, but you hear about the words "public relations," and the words "public relations" have always intrigued me. I never knew what they meant.

When you are a public-relations man, just what does that cover; what kind of service do you give to your clients, for instance?

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, I don't want to bring my clients into this hearing, if I don't have to.

Senator TOBEY. Well, they are not known to us. Just mention the line of business, how you operate, and what you do for value received.

Mr. CHARNAY. I think we may as well boast about something right here, because for one of our clients we worked out a plan, and we won the Freedom Foundation award for a man when we created something on civil defense. It is for a client, where the client furnished equipment, and it was set up as an example to the rest of the country as to what industry and labor can do to further the civilian defense efforts.

We have staged demonstrations in your State; just recently we have staged demonstrations in other States, and we are going to do it in some 36 States before the year is over.

Our plan was adopted by the State of New Jersey. It is before the powers that be here in New York for adoption.

Our suggestion was that every industry in the United States notify their local civilian defense officials of their facilities, of the manpower they have, in case of an emergency or disaster in peace or war.

For that plan we have been notified that we have won the award. Now, this is a public-relations plan, and it brings good will to the company, and at the same time it does the public service. We have been nominated to receive the Freedom Foundation award.

Senator TOBEY. Well, that is in harmony with the times we are living in, but over a period of 10 years, you hear about these things, and what does the public-relations man do?

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, they do as much as they can to gain good will for their client through the press, radio, and television, et cetera.

They also advise the client what is the best way to proceed in the matter. They try to bring the level of personnel relations on a better scale than it has been in the past, and they are usually concerned with everything that is relative to the operations of a business, and in the operations of that business they try to correct that which they think is wrong in the operations. At the same time they try to publicize that which is good so they can get more clients or more business.

Senator TOBEY. In other words, it is to build up good will with the public at large, and the public powers of agency or business, so that the people may have a more understanding heart; is that it?

Mr. CHARNAY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. Now, there was an Ivy Lee & Co. who represented Standard Oil or the Rockefeller interests?

Mr. CHARNAY. That is right.

Senator TOBEY. I was just thinking about that. That was their job; wasn't it?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; they are still in business.

Senator TOBEY. Who are some of the other leading houses?

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, Carl Beier has the leading organization of the country.

Senator TOBEY. They run at cross-currents with advertising agencies, don't they?

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, in our own interests we cooperate closely with BBDA, or with J. Walter Thompson, or other agencies concerned with our clients' advertising. Our work dovetails with theirs.

The CHAIRMAN. Benton & Bowles are an advertising agency, are they not?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes, Benton & Bowles are an advertising agency.

The CHAIRMAN. How about Arthur G. Newmyer and Associates?

Mr. CHARNAY. They are a Washington outfit.

Senator TOBEY. That is Standard Oil, isn't it?

Mr. CHARNAY. That is one of their clients. It is a very reputable and a very good firm.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Charnay, you say you have not had any relationships with any of the racketeering elements at all?

Mr. CHARNAY. No; I never have. Yes; I have had relationships with them as a newspaperman.

Mr. HALLEY. But you have had no other business relationships with them?

Mr. CHARNAY. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you participate in the Tournament of Champions?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were your partners there?

Mr. CHARNAY. William Paley, the chairman of the board of the Columbia Broadcasting System; Music Corp. of America; and our firm; not me personally.

Senator TOBEY. What was that?

Mr. HALLEY. That was a tournament of champions.

Senator TOBEY. Was that a basketball tournament?

Mr. HALLEY. No; we had some evidence last night on it. It had to do with a boxing tournament.

Senator TOBEY. Thank you.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were the partners, please?

Mr. CHARNAY. William Paley, the chairman of the board of Columbia Broadcasting System. The Columbia Broadcasting System held the stock. Music Corp. of America, George Kletz, and our firm.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me write these down. William Paley, chairman of the board of the Columbia Broadcasting System. Was he president of the tournament?

Mr. CHARNEY. No; he was not. I was the president.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was the other one?

Mr. CHARNAY. I guess it is now known as the Management Corp. of America, but it was the Music Corp.

The CHAIRMAN. And they were a partner in it?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; they were equal partners.

The CHAIRMAN. Who else?

Mr. CHARNAY. George Kletz.

The CHAIRMAN. Is he with the Management Corp. of America?

Mr. CHARNAY. No; he is an individual.

Mr. HALLEY. And were there any other people concerned with it?

Mr. CHARNAY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the corporate set-up, one single corporation?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; when I was president of it, there was one single corporation known as the Tournament of Champions, and the stock or shares were divided in equal shares of one-fourth apiece.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were the four?

Mr. CHARNAY. Kletz, Music Corp. of America, Columbia Broadcasting System, and Allied.

Mr. HALLEY. Weren't there any other individuals in that Tournament of Champions?

Mr. CHARNAY. I know what you are referring to, you are referring to the time of purchase. We bought it from those seven individuals.

Mr. HALLEY. What seven individuals?

Mr. CHARNAY. I can think of some of the names; Ben Bodney, Cohen, I can't think of who they were, but they were characterized as the seven millionaires.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there a man named Rutkin in the Tournament of Champions?

Mr. CHARNAY. Not at the time I was there. He had something to do with it, I understand, and I know about it, too.

If you want to start at the beginning, you have started at the end—

Mr. HALLEY. I think you had better do so, because we have had some testimony, I should say in all fairness, that differs from yours.

Mr. CHARNAY. It does not differ. It cannot differ. You started at the end. You have not started at the beginning.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you go right ahead.

Mr. CHARNAY. The Tournament of Champions started as an idea of mine back, I don't recall the exact date, but it was in 1947 or 1948, at which time I suggested Graziano, the fighter, be permitted to fight—he had been barred here in New York, and that we put the fight on in New Jersey.

I did not have the finances to set up the corporation. I talked to a fellow by the name of Ben Reuben, who was—he is now dead—but he was connected, I think, with the Philip Morris people.

There was another fellow by the name of Spinelli, and I was introduced to him. Spinelli was a friend of Rutkin.

Between them they arranged to get a fellow named George Hale to buy the Tournament of Champions, which was never in existence, it was just being formed, and, as my share of it for getting Graziano to participate in it, I was given one-third of it. I did not own any stock in it; there was no stock issued in it; there was no corporation.

When they sold this thing to the seven people, I was retained by these seven people as their publicity man.

Mr. HALLEY. Before the sale to the seven people, the original Tournament of Champions consisted of you, Spinelli, and Rutkin; isn't that right?

Mr. CHARNAY. I was not a partner in it; I never was.

Mr. HALLEY. You got one-third of it.

Mr. CHARNAY. I got a third interest for producing the fights, for getting them to agree that they would go on with the fight.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, if you had a third interest, why weren't you a partner?

Mr. CHARNAY. There was no corporation set up; there was nothing set up.

Mr. HALLEY. Oh, there apparently was an informal copartnership; was there not.

Mr. CHARNAY. I cannot say that Rutkin was ever my partner in that deal, I just cannot.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, if he says you were his partner, then he is not telling the truth?

Mr. CHARNAY. It is a question of characterization. If you want to characterize me as a partner on a deal like that, then I would say "Yes."

Mr. HALLEY. How long did the three of you—you, Spinelli, and Rutkin—work together?

Mr. CHARNAY. I think this whole thing transpired in a period of weeks.

Senator TOBEY. Excuse me, gentlemen, but I will say goodbye to you all.

(Senator Tobey thereupon left the hearing room.)

Mr. CHARNAY. The firm of Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin & Krim handled the whole deal.

Mr. HALLEY. From the origin?

Mr. CHARNEY. At that time; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who originated it as between you, Spinelli, and Rutkin?

Mr. CHARNEY. Well, it was originally my idea.

Mr. HALLEY. And you went with it to Spinelli?

Mr. CHARNEY. No; I talked to Ben Reuben about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is he?

Mr. CHARNEY. Ben Reuben was an executive in the Philip Morris Co.; I think he had some association with them.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get to Spinelli and Rutkin?

Mr. CHARNEY. Reuben got me to Spinelli. He did not get me to him, but he brought me into a conversation with him.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you get Rutkin?

Mr. CHARNEY. I did not get Rutkin in.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did?

Mr. CHARNEY. I presume Spinelli or Reuben, I just don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you were given a third of it because you produced Graziano. That does not make sense. On the one hand you portray yourself as a man who got a third for producing a fighter, and on the other hand you say that it was your idea and you originated it.

Mr. CHARNEY. I think it is pretty clear. There is no conflict.

Mr. HALLEY. The two concepts do not jibe.

Mr. CHARNEY. There is just one concept. I had this idea and I talked to Mr. Reuben about it in a casual conversation. He brought this fellow Spinelli into the picture.

Mr. HALLEY. Spinelli was in the Nutri-Cola business; wasn't he?

Mr. CHARNEY. Yes; he had a sirup plant.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he know about fights?

Mr. CHARNEY. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you need him for?

Mr. CHARNEY. I did not need him.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you go into business with him?

Mr. CHARNEY. He was the one who said he could sell this thing. I will tell you, Mr. Spinelli said that he would put up the money for it, and that was the reason, that was the only reason Mr. Reuben produced it.

Mr. HALLEY. What did Rutkin get out of it?

Mr. CHARNEY. I think Rutkin got into it through Spinelli.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I don't understand it yet. You say you had this idea?

Mr. CHARNEY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You had the idea and you had the fighter. First you said Spinelli was going to put it over, and you say Spinelli was the man who put up the money.

Mr. CHARNEY. He did not put up any money. He said he would.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, the man who could put up the money. I can see that. And I can see where you would get half and Spinelli would get half.

The next thing that apparently happens is that Rutkin is in there, and he has a third and you have a third and Spinelli has a third. You claim you are just a fellow being given a third because you were able to produce a fighter.

Mr. CHARNAY. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. But you were the first one in it.

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; I created it.

Mr. HALLEY. You made a deal with Spinelli.

Mr. CHARNAY. I was ready to give up at the same time.

Mr. HALLEY. I think you are ready to give it up now.

Mr. CHARNAY. Just a minute. I am not ready to give it up now.

Mr. HALLEY. I don't think you are being frank with us.

Mr. CHARNAY. I am being frank.

Mr. HALLEY. How about Rutkin? What was he doing there? How did he get in? What was the association?

Mr. CHARNAY. Mr. Rutkin got in through Spinelli, I believe. I did not go to Rutkin.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did Spinelli come back to you and say, "I want you to cut a third man into this"?

Mr. CHARNAY. All Spinelli told me was that this thing was being sold, and that Mr. Hale was producing some people who were buying it. I knew him. He told me that my share would be one-third for the sale of it.

Mr. HALLEY. That was some time later. As I understand it, there was a considerable amount of activity before the time of the sale. As a matter of fact, you sold it and got some money out of it; didn't you?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. You developed it, then; did you not?

Mr. CHARNAY. I developed what?

Mr. HALLEY. The idea, and you brought it to a head.

Mr. CHARNAY. When the thing was sold, and as I stated a moment ago, those people who bought it retained us as their public-relations counsel, and paid us for it.

Mr. HALLEY. Well——

Mr. CHARNAY. You want to hear the full answer; don't you?

Mr. HALLEY. Sure.

Mr. CHARNAY. When they retained us, that was part of the deal. I would get one-third for the transfer of this thing to them, plus the fact that we would be retained to handle their public relations and handle their radio and television commitments, which was precisely what we did.

Mr. HALLEY. I know you are sensitive about this, so don't get any wrong ideas. I will tell you right now in the presence of the chairman that we knew nothing about this until Mr. Rutkin, out of a clear sky, presented it after we asked you to come in. We were very much surprised when he said he had been a partner of yours in this tournament.

Mr. CHARNAY. I have nothing to hide. I am not ashamed of anything. It was a very normal business transaction.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you have any dealings with anyone like Rutkin?

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, this is about the only thing there is, and I think Rutkin's deal in this thing was very remote to mine. He did not deal directly with me.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you talk to him?

Mr. CHARNAY. Oh, yes; I talked to him.

Mr. HALLEY. You met with him occasionally; didn't you?

Mr. CHARNAY. Sure I did.

Mr. HALLEY. And you became fairly good friends?

Mr. CHARNAY. I had known the man for some time, I guess.

Mr. HALLEY. You had known him before that, had you not?

(No answer.)

The CHAIRMAN. He said last night—excuse me for interrupting you—but he said last night that over a period of some time you and he and Spinelli sat down as partners and worked out who would do what, and you worked the thing up together, and finally agreed on the sale, and each one of you got a third.

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, Senator, if he considered himself my partner, I cannot argue the point.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you consider it?

Mr. CHARNAY. I considered them as a catalytic agent.

The CHAIRMAN. When you came into the thing, when he came into it, what was he to get out of it?

Mr. CHARNAY. He got one-third for producing the buyer.

The CHAIRMAN. He put up some money, too?

Mr. CHARNAY. That I don't know anything about.

The CHAIRMAN. That is what he said.

Mr. CHARNAY. I cannot deny that. I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, he got a third for producing the buyer, and you got a third for originating the idea, and Spinelli got a third for being willing to put up some money, apparently; is that about the size of it?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; I would say that is so.

The CHAIRMAN. Frankly, it is a little bit surprising, and I don't think it is probably a good thing—well, we had better get this thing settled once and for all, from the reports and rumors that are flying around, but this thing came up so we had no alternative but to call you in and ask you about it. Of course, the surprising thing is that you would be doing business with Rutkin. I mean, Rutkin has a pretty bad record, as you know.

Mr. CHARNAY. I found out.

The CHAIRMAN. Dating back to the brewery days and rum-running days back in Canada, in gambling operations, and quite a number of other things.

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; I know.

The CHAIRMAN. This was during the time when it was quite well known, he was already in litigation with Reinfeld, and it was general information, and with the Seagram people, what is their name?

Mr. HALLEY. The Bronfmans.

The CHAIRMAN. The Bronfmans.

He had been arrested quite a number of times up to that time, so we just don't know what you were doing in this deal with him.

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, the first time I met him, I think, was back in 1946 or 1947. I am not quite sure of that. He gave me a tip on a story that he was going to sue Reinfeld.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it had already been in the papers that Reinfeld had alleged that he had been stuck up with a gun for $250,000 by Rutkin, which, however, Rutkin denies, he says it was not a stick-up, that he was getting back part of his capital investment out of the Brown Vintner Co., and that happened back in 1942.

Mr. CHARNAY. I had not seen any such story, Senator. I checked his story pretty thoroughly, and I didn't do much about it, except the fact that he had brought action against these people.

Mr. SCHULTZ. Might I suggest that we try to get some dates? Perhaps it would help orient this matter.

Mr. HALLEY. Let us have from Mr. Charnay the date on which he entered the Tournament of Champions deal.

Mr. CHARNAY. I would say it was sometime in 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. 1947?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, as the chairman said—

Mr. CHARNAY. It may have been 1948, I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. As the chairman said, the litigation with Reinfeld and Rutkin had started as early as 1946, and there had been some publicity on it. I am quite sure of that. How did you first meet Rutkin?

Mr. CHARNAY. I am not hesitating, but I am just trying to recall. I think I was introduced to him on the street by some other newspapermen. We were talking about back in 1946 and 1947, and that is the first time I met him, and I didn't see much of him after that, and then when this Tournament of Champions deal came up I had my second introduction to him.

Mr. HALLEY. Through Spinelli?

Mr. CHARNAY. Through Spinelli, and Reuben, I guess.

Mr. HALLEY. At that time did you know about Rutkin's reputation?

Mr. CHARNAY. I didn't know it was as notorious as I later found out, but I knew he had a background.

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of a background did you know he had, and how did you know it?

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, I knew he was a partner of this fellow Reinfeld in the prohibition days, they were bootleggers.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know about his lawsuit against Reinfeld?

Mr. CHARNAY. He told me about it. In fact, he told me that it was going to be a big story, and a lot of other things which I checked, and I didn't do very much about.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you ever, in connection with your Costello investigations, gone to any of these gambling places in Jersey that were run by the big mob, the so-called carpet places and sawdust places?

Mr. CHARNAY. I was in one place.

Mr. HALLEY. Which one were you in?

Mr. CHARNAY. It was somewhere out around Paterson, N. J. I don't know exactly where it was.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see Rutkin there?

Mr. CHARNAY. No; I never saw Rutkin in any gambling place.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know he was in the gambling business?

Mr. CHARNAY. No; I did not. I saw it in the papers just recently, and it surprised me.

Mr. HALLEY. You only knew him as a bootlegger?

Mr. CHARNAY. That is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Who took you out to the place in Paterson? Was it in Paterson?

Mr. CHARNAY. It was somewhere around Paterson. I am not quite sure of the location. I don't think it was right in town, it was right on the outskirts of town.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you become fairly friendly with Rutkin during the course of your association?

Mr. CHARNAY. Just during that period. In fact, I lost sight of the man after that.

Mr. HALLEY. But during the period of the Tournament of Champions you were fairly close to him?

Mr. CHARNAY. I would not say close to him. I would see him time and again.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever try to help him?

Mr. CHARNAY. In what way?

Mr. HALLEY. In any way, in connection with anything other than the Tournament of Champions.

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, that is a very broad question. What do you mean by helping him?

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever go out of your way to do him a favor of any kind?

Mr. CHARNAY. Such as what?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, first can you think of anything.

Mr. CHARNAY. That is a very broad term. Did I make a phone call for him, or something like that? Is that what you mean?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHARNAY. You are probably referring to this Reinfeld story. I checked the story for him. I did not check it for him, but he was giving me what he thought was an honest-to-God tip, and when I didn't run the story Mr. Rutkin got very angry with me and would not talk to me.

Mr. HALLEY. Why didn't you run it?

Mr. CHARNAY. It just didn't have much merit. I think my paper used about three paragraphs on the fact that such a suit had been filed.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you feel that it did not have any merit?

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, we judged it on its value, and three paragraphs was about par for the course.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever call the SEC about the Reinfeld case?

Mr. CHARNAY. I might have. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell them you were going to write a story about it?

Mr. CHARNAY. I probably did.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember it at all?

Mr. CHARNAY. I probably covered every angle there was to be covered on the story, because I usually did that when I covered a story.

Mr. HALLEY. How would you cover an angle with the SEC, and what would you have in mind?

Mr. CHARNAY. I was looking probably for who the stockholders were.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you ever call the SEC to tell them that you had some information you were going to break in your paper, and you thought they ought to know about it?

Mr. CHARNAY. I think I did.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the circumstances, do you remember?

Mr. CHARNAY. We had some information that was sent down from—this a long way back, and it is very hard for me to put my finger on a story I covered some years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. About 3 years ago I am talking about, at the very end of 1947.

Mr. CHARNAY. I imagine I covered about two or three hundred stories a year.

Mr. HALLEY. I know you were busy, and I can well understand your failure to remember.

Mr. CHARNAY. I am trying to remember for you, and I would say that I think we had some information from a correspondent up in Canada on the background of the Bronfman family.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you did not need that information from a correspondent. You could get that from Rutkin, couldn't you?

Mr. CHARNAY. No, I couldn't get it from Rutkin. I would not go on the word of any man. I would have to check and double check it first.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you not actually talk to Mr. DuBois of the SEC?

Mr. CHARNAY. I probably did.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mr. DuBois?

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, I might have known him and met him once, probably.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't remember meeting him?

Mr. CHARNAY. Prior to that time, no. I only met him once, when I called him at the SEC.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you mean you went down and saw him?

Mr. CHARNAY. I think so.

Mr. HALLEY. You must have had a story with you.

Mr. CHARNAY. I must have had a lot of facts with me. I did not have a prepared story.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you get your facts?

Mr. CHARNAY. As I started to tell you, and I think if you will check the records of the Daily News you will find out that about that time we wired several correspondents up in Canada, who subsequently sent us wires back on the background of that story. The Western Union file should show that. The expense account records should show that. The file copies in the morgue should show what the responses were, what information we had on which we went to check.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get any information from Rutkin?

Mr. CHARNAY. Sure I did. Rutkin was the original source of the story.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the story? Was it about the Reinfelds, or about the suit?

Mr. CHARNAY. Rutkin told me that he was bringing a fantastic suit for about $20,000,000, and that there was fraud involved, and everything else, which involved Seagram and the entire liquor industry, and it would bring in most every big name in the liquor industry.

It sounded on the surface like a good, exclusive story for me. The result of it is, and the history of that story is that we ran three paragraphs on it.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, is it not a fact that you went to the SEC, and you told them that Rutkin was going to prove certain things, not that certain things were true, but that Rutkin intended to allege and prove certain things?

Mr. CHARNAY. I told him what Rutkin's allegations were. I checked the story with Rutkin, I checked it with the advertising agency that represented Seagram, and I checked it with a half-dozen people.

Mr. HALLEY. Actually, you said you were going to break the story on the filing of the complaint, is not that so?

Mr. CHARNAY. I might have said that; yes. We always break those stories on the filing of the complaint.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, if you were just going to repeat what the complaint said, you would be perfectly protected in just saying what the complaint said.

Mr. CHARNAY. I think you are familiar with the newspaper business, and you know quite well when litigation is coming up, or some other type of story like it, we must check thoroughly on the background. There is nothing sinister in what I did on that story.

Mr. HALLEY. Weren't you trying to get the SEC to jump in on the other side in an effort to help?

Mr. CHARNAY. That is fantastic, and fabulous.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I don't see the point of getting in touch with the SEC. The SEC would not know anything about it, would they? I mean, why did you get in touch with the SEC?

Mr. CHARNAY. I got in touch with the SEC to get information.

The CHAIRMAN. What information could they give you? You did all of the informing, apparently. According to the record you did not ask the SEC for any information.

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes, I did. They told me they would not give out any information, but that they would be quite interested in having what we had.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have any connection with the Copacabana, a night club?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes, I did.

Mr. HALLEY. What was that?

Mr. CHARNAY. In 1944 or 1945, I became public relations counsel to Monte Prosser, and Mr. Prosser came to me, he called me, and I had known Mr. Prosser since 1932, he was a friend of mine, and Mr. Prosser called me and told me that he was having his name linked with hoodlums and gangsters, and they were alleging that Frank Costello owned the Copacabana, and they were about to take away his license, because the publicity was very bad, and could I help him out with it.

Mr. HALLEY. That was Monte Prosser?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; and I had known Monte Prosser since 1932 or 1933.

Mr. HALLEY. You were then working for the News?

Mr. CHARNAY. No, in 1932 or 1933; no, I was not.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1945, when he came to you?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes, I was.

Mr. HALLEY. Go ahead, please.

Mr. CHARNAY. And Mr. Prosser said that he would pay me $225 a week to act as his public relations counsel and try to get the onus off these names off him.

At that time there was a litigation taking place in the magistrate's court, I think it was, as to revoking the license of the Copacabana, and Mr. Prosser asked me to talk to a friend of mine, an associate, with whom I was in the public relations business, attempting to get Russell H. Potter, Mr. Potter was formerly the OPA director for the city of New York and resigned, and he was a Connecticut man. I talked to Mr. Potter, and Mr. Potter recommended the firm of Weil, Gotshal & Manges, to represent Mr. Prosser, which we did.

I presume in the absence of questions you want me to keep talking about this?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, I am listening. I am trying to look at some notes.

Mr. CHARNAY. And Weil, Gotshal & Manges were an eminent law firm in the city of New York, and they undertook the case, and had brought in Mr. William Herlands as special counsel, who was formerly commissioner of investigation of the city of New York, and had conferences with Mayor LaGuardia, who insisted that the license of this place be revoked, because it was allegedly owned by an unwholesome element, and particularly Mr. Frank Costello.

By stipulation with the mayor's office and the corporation counsel's office, and I think this is all a matter of record, they consented to throw out all of the so-called element that was in there, although they never admitted that Mr. Costello was any part of it, and at that time a man by the name of Julie Podell, who is present owner of the Copacabana, was one of the chancers in the situation, and the mayor's office wanted him out.

Well, he stepped out to all intents and purposes.

Mr. HALLEY. Podell?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He is in there now, isn't he?

Mr. CHARNAY. Of course he is in there.

Mr. HALLEY. And he has been in there right along?

Mr. CHARNAY. He did not come in until O'Dwyer came into office. I resigned—I would like to point out at that time that I did have a talk with Mayor LaGuardia myself, and they were looking around for a director who would be acceptable to the mayor's office, and acceptable to the corporation counsel's office, and I was put in on a pro tem basis. I have the papers here, gentlemen, I brought them down with me. I managed to dig up these records.

I stayed in there for a short period of time. When I found out that Mr. Podell was still to all intents and purposes the owner of the Copacabana, I tendered my resignation and got out but fast. I would like to show those to you.

The CHAIRMAN. How long were you in there?

Mr. CHARNAY. Only for a short period of time, 3 or 4 months at the most.

I have a confirmed copy of the original, and I was advised to tell you people that if you wanted to see the original, any of your investigators can go up and get a copy of it.

Now, here is a contract between myself and the Copacabana, which is to pay me the sum of $225 a week for a 2-year period. They reneged on the contract and never paid me off in full.

The CHAIRMAN. They never paid you?

Mr. CHARNAY. For the 3 or 4 months I was in there, they reneged on the contract.

The CHAIRMAN. May I see that, please?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes. Here is my letter of resignation. I found that copy. It is dated February 28, 1945.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, this is the letter accepting your resignation, but it is not your resignation.

Mr. CHARNAY. I gave them the letter of resignation and they accepted it.

Mr. HALLEY. You do not have a copy of your letter?

Mr. CHARNAY. I feel very fortunate in finding that. I didn't think I had that around.

Then I have here minutes of a special meeting of the stockholders. Now, it should be in their records, which I think tells pretty much what the story was at that time.

It states here in one of these resolutions that:

David B. Charnay is hereby appointed to serve until the next annual meeting of the board of directors of the corporation—and so forth.

It was my understanding that I would go in for a short period of time. It was the mayor's understanding and the corporation counsel's understanding, and my name had to be submitted to the mayor's office, or the name of the successor had to be submitted before they could approve it.

The CHAIRMAN. This contract is a copy. Do you want to leave that with us, or is this your only copy? We don't need it particularly.

Mr. SCHULTZ. It is our only copy.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the record show that this is a contract dated September 30, 1944, between Mr. Charnay and the Copacabana, and the compensation to be an annual fee of $11,070, payable $225 a week. And then the letter is dated February 20, 1945, stating:

Your resignation as vice president, secretary, and director of the Copacabana, Inc., as tendered by you today, is herewith accepted and becomes effective immediately. Very truly yours.

And it is signed by the general manager and director and Monte Prosser, president.

(The chairman handed the documents back to the witness.)

The CHAIRMAN. So you were in there from September to February.

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Who took over after Podell got out?

Mr. CHARNAY. I think it is contained in the minutes.

Mr. HALLEY. I could not find it.

Mr. SCHULTZ. There is a paragraph that lists all of the names.

Mr. HALLEY. Of those who got out?

Mr. SCHULTZ. Those who were to be removed by stipulation between the corporation counsel's office and Weil, Gotshal, and Manges.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't Monte Prosser have a background in the gambling field?

Mr. CHARNAY. Not that I know of. Monte Prosser is a very innocuous little man who has concerned his whole life with producing and promoting shows.

Mr. HALLEY. We may be wrong, but we get a lot of information that has to be checked.

Mr. CHARNAY. I don't think Monte Prosser is smart enough to be in the gambling business.

Mr. HALLEY. Wasn't he up at Piping Rock at the same time Costello was?

Mr. CHARNAY. Gentlemen, I don't know that.

The CHAIRMAN. Here is section 7-F contained in the minutes and it says—is that what you are referring to, where it mentions Jules Podell, Joe Stein, and some other names, saying that they would be immediately terminated and they would not be employed thereafter or have any further interest, directly or indirectly on the premises, nor be permitted on the premises at any time in the future?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. After you found out that Podell was really not out, but just pretending to be out, did you report that to the mayor's office, or did you just resign?

Mr. CHARNAY. I did not report it; I just resigned. I had no actual proof, Senator, other than the fact that he was ordered to stay out of the Copacabana and never show his face there, never step inside the premises, and I later found out that he was issuing the orders down there, and I don't think Monte Prosser played very square with me on the deal either.

Mr. HALLEY. What was wrong with Podell that you know of?

Mr. CHARNAY. The only thing I knew of was that the corporation counsel, or whoever was prosecuting the thing at the time, alleged that Mr. Podell had committed one violation of the law at some time with a pistol.

Mr. HALLEY. Before you got into the Copacabana deal did you know Costello?

Mr. CHARNAY. No; I never knew him and did not meet him for 6, 7, or 8 months after.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met him before that?

Mr. CHARNAY. No; I wouldn't know him if I fell over him.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the day he went to the Copacabana, October 1944?

Mr. CHARNAY. I might point out that I saw Mr. Costello in the flesh for the first time as a newspaper reporter at the hearing at the time that the Copacabana was up for its license.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, all the evidence on Piping Rock shows that both Podell and Prosser was in that set-up with such gentlemen as Frank Costello, Joe Adonis, and Meyer Lansky.

Mr. CHARNAY. What year was that?

Mr. HALLEY. I think 1943, a year before you became associated with them.

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, I had not been in Saratoga, I did not know anything about it. I heard the testimony at the time of the Copacabana hearing, which alluded to Mr. Costello and Mr. Podell and Mr. Prosser being in that thing, but I did not know Mr. Prosser was ever a partner of Mr. Costello's.

Mr. HALLEY. You had heard that Prosser was in Piping Rock?

Mr. CHARNAY. That came out, in fact, we did stories about it. May I see those Copacabana stories?

Mr. HALLEY. I thought you said a few minutes ago that you had not realized that Prosser was in Piping Rock.

Mr. CHARNAY. I did not. I heard that story.

Mr. HALLEY. But you say you did stories on it?

Mr. CHARNAY. Would you repeat that, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. I had the impression that you originally told me you did not have any idea Prosser was in on the Piping Rock deal with Costello.

Mr. CHARNAY. No; I did not. I said I heard the allegation, but I did not know he was.

Mr. HALLEY. Oh, you mean you could not prove it in a court of law?

Mr. CHARNAY. No; I could not prove it.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you heard about it before you became a member of the board of directors of the Copacabana?

Mr. CHARNAY. I heard it at the time of the hearing, but that was the very thing that Monte Prosser denied up and down the line. He said all he did was to put on a show there. I think it came out in the trial all he did was to put on a show. In fact, here is a story of the hearing. It is not in very good shape. I had it photostated. The date of it is September 16, 1944, which appeared in the Daily News under my byline, and bear the lead: "Costello walks out on police in probe of Copacabana Club," and my allusion to Mr. Costello was the following:

Frank Costello, the slot-machine baron who makes judges—there is the story right there.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Meyer Lansky?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; I think I have met him.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you meet him?

Mr. CHARNAY. I would like to point out that as a newspaperman it was my assignment to get to know all the hoodlum element, and I don't recall where I met him. I might have met him in some cafe.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have a partner by the name of Erbe?

Mr. CHARNAY. Carl Erbe; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When was he in partnership with you?

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, I will find the record on that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, give us your best impression about the matter.

Mr. CHARNAY. I thought I had it here.

Mr. HALLEY. Just generally, Mr. Charnay.

Mr. CHARNAY. It was either the latter part of 1947 or 1948, and I asked him to step out about a year later.

Mr. HALLEY. Why did you ask him to step out?

Mr. CHARNAY. We had some personal differences. I brought him in because he was considered one of the better press agents in the town, and I had another partner by the name of Charles Maybrook, with whom I founded the business, incidentally. Maybrook's background was that of a lawyer and accountant, a certified public accountant, and he did not know much about press relationships, and I wanted someone to take the load off my shoulders in handling the exploitation of our business, so I got Erbe in there.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Erbe have any racket connections?

Mr. CHARNAY. I don't know whether you could call them that, but he was press agent for a number of night clubs, and I doubt very much whether—you know how these night clubs are in this country. I know that he represented a number of night clubs.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he represent Ben Marden?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he do that while he was a partner of yours?

Mr. CHARNAY. Definitely not, so far as I know. Of course, he only met Mr. Marden once in his life.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was Arthur Halfpenny?

Mr. CHARNAY. He was someone who was put in my business by Mr. Rothwell as his representative.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is he?

Mr. CHARNAY. I told you at the outset that he was my partner.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you get rid of him, too?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the objection to Halfpenny?

Mr. CHARNAY. I found out that Mr. Halfpenny had a background.

Mr. HALLEY. A racket background?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes, I did; I found it out.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you learn about him?

Mr. CHARNAY. I found out that Mr. Halfpenny, I don't recall exactly what it was, and I don't know the details of the case, but I do know that he had been arrested and served time in prison, and the day I found it out was the day I fired him. I asked him to get out of the place. He was not on our payroll.

Mr. HALLEY. For what had he been convicted?

Mr. CHARNAY. I am not certain of the details. I still to this day don't know the exact details of what he had been convicted for, but I did ask a newspaper reporter to check the files for me and see whether this was true or not, and when I confronted Halfpenny with the information, he admitted it and cried copious tears. I told him I could not have him in the organization.

The CHAIRMAN. Why would your partner put him in the business?

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Rothwell is not operating in the business?

The CHAIRMAN. Not what?

Mr. CHARNAY. He is not an active partner.

The CHAIRMAN. He is not an active partner?

Mr. CHARNAY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Could I see your stories about the Copacabana?

Mr. CHARNAY. I just have this one here.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. This is not in very good shape.

Mr. CHARNAY. Here is another story on the Copacabana.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever at a press conference with Costello at which you acted in the role of his adviser?

Mr. CHARNAY. No; that story has always plagued me. Mr. Costello told me that he was going to give me a story the day that his name was linked with the dope ring, and I thought I was going to get it exclusively, because the man had never given a press interview to anyone directly.

His lawyer fought with him—well, I tried to convince him to give me the story alone, but his lawyer fought me on it, Mr. Wolf, and he insisted that he give it to all the press.

I called my office and talked to Mr. Shann, who is the editor, and told him what the circumstances were, and he said, "Stall the conference as long as you can until we get a photographer down there." Which is what I did do.

Costello then held a press conference at which I was present. I certainly did not act as his adviser in any way.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, in that connection I will ask you to be frank with us. The boys who are around say that it had that appearance, that he would start to say something or suggest some mode of operation, or some procedure, and he would say, "Dave, you be quiet, let me do the talking."

Mr. CHARNAY. I said that.

The CHAIRMAN. No; that is what he would say.

Mr. CHARNAY. He would say, "Dave, be quiet, and let me do the talking." I don't think those are the facts. I may have dominated almost any type of conference, but I at no time remember that he said, "Let me do the talking."

The CHAIRMAN. I don't mean let you do the talking, but that the impression was that you were there and you had the thing arranged, and that you were talking, and that he told you to be quiet and let him do the talking.

Mr. CHARNAY. I don't think that is so, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. That is what a lot of the boys think.

Mr. CHARNAY. I know, I have had a couple of them hit me with that thing from time to time. Frankly, I did not want to hold any press conferences, if I could have the story alone it would have been an exclusive, and that is what I was after.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you print the story?

Mr. CHARNAY. Here it is.

Mr. HALLEY. May I see it, please?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes. Here I call him a gambler and real-estate operator.

Mr. HALLEY. I mean of this particular press conference.

Mr. CHARNAY. That is the story of the press conference, here it is, that is the top part, and that is the jump on it.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you. Well, these reporters, and I must say there are several of them, and I don't think they bear you any animosity, and I don't know that it has any particular significance except for your vehement denials that you made to me previously.

Mr. CHARNAY. If I were Mr. Costello's public-relations man I would certainly be ashamed to admit it according to the nature of the job that has been done on this man. I don't know whether he deserves it or does not deserve it. But I could not take credit for the terrible publicity job that has been done on him. I assure you that if I had handled Mr. Costello, it would be a lot better than this.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have other copies?

Mr. CHARNAY. I do not, but that is all right.

Mr. HALLEY. May the record show that this is a photostatic copy of an article which appeared in the Daily News under the by-line of Mr. Charnay and Mr. Jaiker, December 31, 1946.

Mr. CHARNAY. Well, whatever the date is on there. I cannot make it out.

Mr. HALLEY. I cannot make it out.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose we have some more photostats of these made and send them back to Mr. Charnay and put them in the record.

Mr. CHARNAY. I am sure the Daily News would be glad to supply you with their whole file.

The CHAIRMAN. Is this the only press conference?

Mr. CHARNAY. That is the only one I ever attended with Mr. Costello.

The CHAIRMAN. Were there several reporters present?

Mr. CHARNAY. I would say every paper in town was represented.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever attended any interviews with Costello at which there were less reporters present?

Mr. CHARNAY. There was only one other, and I think a lot of my troubles come from being what I term a nice guy. That was at the time that Earl Wilson asked me to introduce him to Costello for the purpose of getting a story, and I did. Then a fellow named Spivak showed up with him. That was a favor of one newspaperman to another.

I have also asked newspaper men to introduce me to someone for the purpose of getting an interview. I had a roving assignment, and I was always out digging out stories.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let us get this matter straight, then. If you never accepted any—or if you never represented Mr. Costello and you never had any relations with him except as a newspaperman in getting a story, and never accepted any compensation from him or any outfit that he is connected with, is that correct?

Mr. CHARNAY. That is absolutely correct.

The CHAIRMAN. That is, if you knew he was connected with them.

Mr. CHARNAY. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. And you told about the Copacabana, you told about the tournament of champions. This fellow Erbe, was he in your association when he went over to Europe in connection with the Monte Carlo transaction?

Mr. CHARNAY. I did not know that he did. This is news to me.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't know anything about that?

Mr. CHARNAY. No; I did not. Mr. Erbe and Mr. Maybrook are partners in a public relations business right now and competitors of mine. There has been some bad feeling engendered there. We don't talk to each other. Then I have no way of knowing whether he ever went to Europe or not.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it probably was some other time. I don't know the alleged date. I don't have it here.

Now, there has also been one time I heard a rumor, and I know you will say there is nothing to it, but I think it ought to be on the record, that you had some part in the public relations for the Desert Inn opening in Nevada, or some such transaction in connection with the Desert Inn, and I wanted to ask you about that.

Mr. CHARNAY. I wouldn't know of that, other than the fact that it is in Las Vegas. I have never been in the State of Nevada.

The CHAIRMAN. You had nothing to do with it?

Mr. CHARNAY. Or who owns it or what it is like.

The CHAIRMAN. Or the Flamingo?

Mr. CHARNAY. I would not know that.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, there would not be any reason why you should not represent them, because gambling is legal out there.

Mr. CHARNAY. It just so happens that I have been accused of being the head of the Mafia, and a half dozen other things. I have an excerpt of Mr. Lee Mortimer's book in which he says that I am a bigger man than Costello, and so forth. I don't know why I put in 10 or 12 hours a day in working as a public relations man if I am.

The CHAIRMAN. Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. SCHULTZ. Is there any additional material you would like?

The CHAIRMAN. No; but if you think of anything you would like to have us consider, write a letter and send it on to us.

Now, this question of how long a period of time from the time Rutkin first came into this tournament of champions and the time it was sold, how much time expired?

Mr. CHARNAY. A matter of 6 or 8 weeks.

The CHAIRMAN. And the second question is, did you stay on the News at the time you were at the Copacabana?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; with the knowledge of my editors.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; you explained that to them?

Mr. CHARNAY. Yes; I did.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. CHARNAY. In fact, everything I have done, Senator, I first got permission from my paper to do it.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, that is all.

Mr. SCHULTZ. Are we privileged to buy a copy of these minutes?

The CHAIRMAN. You are indeed.

Mr. HALLEY. That is with the usual understanding that it is for your confidential use only.

Mr. SCHULTZ. Of course. Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Who are you going to call next?

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Neal.

The CHAIRMAN. Good evening, Mr. Neal. I am sorry we have had to keep you waiting and inconvenienced you so much. We will try to make it brief. All right. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, sir.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. NEAL. I do.

TESTIMONY OF CLARENCE H. NEAL, JR., NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, Mr. Neal?

Mr. NEAL. Clarence H. Neal, Jr.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you live?

Mr. NEAL. 410 East Fifty-seventh Street.

Mr. HALLEY. And what is your business?

Mr. NEAL. I am retired.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your last business?

Mr. NEAL. I was in the printing business, the Berlan Printing Co.

Mr. HALLEY. The Berlan Printing Co.?

Mr. NEAL. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And there was an investigation of the Berlan Printing Co., was there not?

Mr. NEAL. There was, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in it at that time?

Mr. NEAL. I was subpoenaed, and that is the last I heard of it.

Mr. HALLEY. You were not one of the people who was convicted as a result of it?

Mr. NEAL. Oh, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever belonged to any Democratic or other political organizations?

Mr. NEAL. I was district leader for 25 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you district leader?

Mr. NEAL. In Harlem.

Mr. HALLEY. What district?

Mr. NEAL. Twentieth Assembly District, and it is now the Sixteenth Assembly District.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mr. NEAL. I know him for about 35 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he been a good friend of yours?

Mr. NEAL. Not a good friend, just a social friend.

Mr. HALLEY. We are trying to move along, and the hour is getting late. We have not had dinner, and I suppose you have not.

Mr. NEAL. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. So I will try to short cut and move on informally.

What has been Costello's position with reference to politics in this city?

Mr. NEAL. None that I know of. I know him for 35 years. I have been in politics for 45 years, and he never asked me for a favor yet.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he been in a position of influence in politics?

Mr. NEAL. No; not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see him?

Mr. NEAL. What did you say?

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last see him?

Mr. NEAL. I saw him one day last week at the National Democratic Club. He was having lunch and I was having lunch. He was with some other people.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he with you?

Mr. NEAL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was he with?

Mr. NEAL. I don't know who, he was with a couple of them.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you talk to him at that time?

Mr. NEAL. Yes; sure.

Mr. HALLEY. About the investigation?

Mr. NEAL. Not about the investigation, just "How are you doing?" that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you present at Frank Costello's apartment at any time?

Mr. NEAL. I was there once, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. When was that?

Mr. NEAL. Oh, about 8 or 9 years ago, I guess.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there anyone else present?

Mr. NEAL. No; just Mrs. Neal and myself.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you there for dinner?

Mr. NEAL. No; we went out for dinner.

Mr. HALLEY. With Frank and Mrs. Costello?

Mr. NEAL. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he ever been to your home?

Mr. NEAL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is the only occasion when you were at his home?

Mr. NEAL. At his home.

Mr. HALLEY. You have gone out with him socially on other occasions?

Mr. NEAL. What did you say?

Mr. HALLEY. I say, you have gone out with him on other occasions?

Mr. NEAL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Not at all?

Mr. NEAL. I have met him at different places, bars and restaurants and hotels, but never by any definite appointment. May I smoke?

Mr. HALLEY. Oh, surely; yes, go right ahead.

What has been the nature of your acquaintance with Costello? How were you thrown in contact with him?

Mr. NEAL. Well, he happens to come from the same neighborhood where I was district leader, like you would meet anybody. He was a neighborhood boy, and I just got acquainted with him, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his business, do you know, during those days?

Mr. NEAL. Well, I did know he was interested in the Good Humor Ice Cream concern which had a place between Weber's old butcher shop up my way, I think it is between One Hundred and Nineteenth and One Hundred and Twentieth Street and Third Avenue.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know of any other businesses he had?

Mr. NEAL. I know that he is in the real estate business.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that?

Mr. NEAL. I don't know, but it was houses up on the West Side. This was 20 or 25 years ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know of any other businesses?

Mr. NEAL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he in the gambling business, to your knowledge?

Mr. NEAL. That I don't know. According to the papers he is.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he in the slot machine business?

Mr. NEAL. That I don't know, outside of what I read in the papers.

Mr. HALLEY. You have never had any other knowledge of it, except what you read in the papers?

Mr. NEAL. None whatsoever; no, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether he ever took any part in politics?

Mr. NEAL. I know he never took part in politics while I was interested.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever support James Fay for leader of Tammany?

Mr. NEAL. Did I ever what?

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever support James Fay for leader in Tammany?

Mr. NEAL. Did I?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. NEAL. He was my candidate; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. At that time—

Mr. NEAL. You see, at that time Kennedy was Congressman; they were both Congressmen, if I am not mistaken.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't Costello support Kennedy against Fay?

Mr. NEAL. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever speak to Costello about Fay?

Mr. NEAL. No, he spoke to me about Fay.

Mr. HALLEY. When and where did that happen?

Mr. NEAL. Sir?

Mr. HALLEY. When and where did that happen?

Mr. NEAL. That was about the time they were about to settle, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. About the time they were about to what?

Mr. NEAL. Settle the leadership.

Mr. HALLEY. And where did you have the discussion?

Mr. NEAL. Maybe in Luchow's, or some place like that, I just cannot remember where the discussion was held.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean in the restaurant?

Mr. NEAL. Yes, Luchow's Restaurant on Fourteenth Street.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there anybody present besides you and Costello?

Mr. NEAL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Who asked for the meeting, who arranged the appointment?

Mr. NEAL. I just happened to meet him there.

Mr. HALLEY. You just walked in and met him?

Mr. NEAL. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the conversation?

Mr. NEAL. He said, "I understand there is a new leader to be appointed there in a few days."

I said, "That is right: Fay is my man."

He said, "That is surprising, I kind of like Jim myself."

Mr. HALLEY. Was there anything else said?

Mr. NEAL. No, that was the end of the conversation.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of the testimony he gave in connection with the Aurelio hearing?

Mr. NEAL. Certainly, I read it in the papers every day.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he mistaken about it?

Mr. NEAL. What did you say?

Mr. HALLEY. Was he mistaken about it?

Mr. NEAL. That I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you know he said that you came to him for help.

Mr. NEAL. That is not so.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, do you remember reading that?

Mr. NEAL. That is not so, young man, and I will tell you why. May I ask your name, please?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, my name is Halley, Rudolph Halley.

Mr. NEAL. At that time Mr. Hogan, our present district attorney, I think he had all kinds of wire taps, mine included, and after the whole thing was over I was asked, I had a quarrel one morning with Mr. Costello and Mr. Kennedy, and my candidate was not Aurelio, my candidate was Hogan. Despite what other testimony he gave, or anybody else gave, it doesn't make any difference.

Mr. HALLEY. I would like to get back to the testimony about the contest between Fay and Mike Kennedy. Do you remember whether or not Costello testified as follows:

Mr. Neal had spoken to me about Fay. He was sort of managing Fay, and I had committed myself for whatever help I could give to Fay. I told him that if Fay did not have enough votes, my second choice would be Mike Kennedy, and he said, "Well, Mike is a nice fellow, in fact, if Fay hasn't enough votes I will go along with Mike myself."

Do you remember having any such conversation?

Mr. NEAL. Not with him, no.

Mr. HALLEY. And if he so testified, was he mistaken?

Mr. NEAL. What did you say?

Mr. HALLEY. If he so testified, if Costello so testified, was he mistaken?

Mr. NEAL. He was mistaken so far as I am concerned, certainly.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear of this testimony before?

Mr. NEAL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. This stuff was not in the papers every day, then?

Mr. NEAL. Well, it was in the papers, but not that.

Mr. HALLEY. Let me read you some more testimony that maybe was not in the papers.

Mr. NEAL. Go right ahead.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever hear that Costello said, and I quote:

I told Neal that if he could not get enough votes for Fay, if he thought he could not put him over, to go along with Kennedy, and I told Sarubbi and Rosenthal I would prefer that, I would consider it a nice thing if they went along with Neal, with whoever Neal would suggest.

Did you ever hear of any such testimony by Mr. Costello?

Mr. NEAL. May I interrupt you and explain something?

Mr. HALLEY. Will you answer the question?

Mr. NEAL. Of course not.

Mr. HALLEY. You never heard of such testimony?

Mr. NEAL. He never talked to me in regard to politics about anything or any individual.

Mr. HALLEY. You never prior to this moment heard that he so testified?

Mr. NEAL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Now go ahead and say whatever you want.

Mr. NEAL. I want to tell you something, that if Costello had any power in the party, and he was supposed to be such a dear friend of mine, what am I doing on the outside now?

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I don't know that it is a crime for Mr. Costello to have had any influence.

Mr. NEAL. I don't either. He never had them conversations with me.

The CHAIRMAN. When you say you are outside, what do you mean that you are outside?

Mr. NEAL. Well, we had an ouster here about 4 years ago, right after Mr. O'Dwyer was elected. He thought he kind of disliked myself and two or three other gentlemen around the place and he proceeded to have us ousted.

I was chairman of the committee of elections and organization, and we stood them off for a year, and for some unknown reason four or five followers of mine saw fit to sign a petition and broke up the combination we had, and we were voted out. That is, we were not voted out, but Mr. Loughran resigned, and when he resigned the secretaries and the chairman of all committees automatically ceased with his resignation.

Mr. Sampson succeeded Mr. Loughran.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you vote for in the final election for leader of Tammany as between Fay and Kennedy?

Mr. NEAL. Between Fay and Kennedy?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. NEAL. There was no vote taken.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean there was no vote taken?

Mr. NEAL. There was no vote taken.

Mr. HALLEY. Who got the leadership?

Mr. NEAL. Why, Kennedy got the leadership.

Mr. HALLEY. And how did he get the leadership?

Mr. NEAL. Fay was not his opponent at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. He was not?

Mr. NEAL. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was?

Mr. NEAL. I think, if I am not mistaken, I think young Dan Finn had injected himself into it at the last minute.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened to Fay?

Mr. NEAL. Fay had given me his word, I met with Fay in Canada, and I said, "Jim, you have not got enough." Well, he says, "I agree." Both of them agreed whichever one had enough the other one would support him.

Mr. Fay shook hands with myself and Mr. Kennedy, and they are both dead now, and the three of us shook hands. We had a meeting the next afternoon in executive committee, and Mr. Fay come to me and said, "Do you know, I think I can get this now. A lot of these people want to change my way."

I said, "You shook hands last night. You can do what you want, but I am with Kennedy."

Mr. HALLEY. And you finally did support Kennedy, is that right?

Mr. NEAL. He was the only one running, outside of Finn, and he was an outsider, he broke in at the last minute.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no further questions of Mr. Neal.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Neal, what is your opinion about Costello's influence today? Does he have any?

Mr. NEAL. That I am unable to say. I know when I was there he had absolutely none.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think this new outfit that got in increased his strength?

Mr. NEAL. What did you say?

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think that the new group who got in increased his strength?

Mr. NEAL. I wouldn't say as to that. I wouldn't say "yes" or "no." I just don't know. I am not on the inside any more, so all I get is hearsay.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, sir, Mr. Neal. Thank you.

Mr. NEAL. All right, thank you.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. Who is our next witness?

Mr. HALLEY. We still have Mr. Stand here.

The CHAIRMAN. Good evening, Mr. Stand. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please?

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. STAND. I do.

TESTIMONY OF BERT STAND, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry to have had to keep you waiting.

Mr. STAND. That is all right.

Mr. HALLEY. We have not had any dinner ourselves.

Mr. STAND. I don't eat lunch, so I am worse off than you.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry to hear that, Mr. Stand.

What we would like to do is to get your opinion and any facts you can give us one way or the other and whether or not Frank Costello took any active part in the politics in New York City.

Mr. STAND. He never asked me for anything all the years I have been in Tammany Hall.

Mr. HALLEY. Aside from that, what has been your observation?

Mr. STAND. Purely from the newspapers; just newspaper talk.

Mr. HALLEY. You met him, I understand, at lunch the other day at the National Democratic Club?

Mr. STAND. Yes; he was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he frequently at the National Democratic Club?

Mr. STAND. From time to time he comes there.

Mr. HALLEY. What other manifestations does he give of being in politics? Does he attend, or did he in the past attend many political dinners?

Mr. STAND. I cannot recall seeing him at dinners.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he attend affairs of various district clubs?

Mr. STAND. Occasionally I would see him at one or two of them.

Mr. HALLEY. What would he be doing there?

Mr. STAND. I cannot answer that. I imagine he would go the same as anyone else.

Mr. HALLEY. Most people don't go running around to political affairs unless they have some interest in politics.

Mr. STAND. That is something that he would have to answer.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been to his home?

Mr. STAND. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How often?

Mr. STAND. Probably once or twice.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were there, who was with you?

Mr. STAND. I went there with the late Mike Kennedy, when he was leader of Tammany Hall.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there anybody else present?

Mr. STAND. When we got there General O'Dwyer was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Anyone else?

Mr. STAND. That has been many years ago. I cannot remember.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Jim Moran there?

Mr. STAND. Probably. I would not say for sure, but Irving Sherman was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Irving Sherman was there?

Mr. STAND. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Jim Moran, was he there?

Mr. STAND. I would not say for sure; it has been so long ago.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Anthony P. Severesi there?

Mr. STAND. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He was there too?

Mr. STAND. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And Mike Kennedy?

Mr. STAND. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there anyone else there?

Mr. STAND. I cannot recall. If you mention some names, I might be able to tell you.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you went up with Kennedy?

Mr. STAND. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You traveled up together?

Mr. STAND. Yes. I met Mr. Kennedy at the New York A. C., and that is at Fifty-ninth, and we walked up from there to Mr. Costello's home.

Mr. HALLEY. What time of day was this meeting?

Mr. STAND. It was around cocktail time.

Mr. HALLEY. Who asked you to go?

Mr. STAND. Mr. Kennedy.

Mr. HALLEY. For what purpose did you go?

Mr. STAND. I just met him and he says, "Come on; we are going up to Frank Costello's house."

I was not invited, but apparently he was, so he took me along.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have a date with him?

Mr. STAND. Yes; from time to time.

Mr. HALLEY. On this particular occasion did you have a date with Kennedy?

Mr. STAND. It is hard to say whether I did or not, because I saw him every day in the week.

Mr. HALLEY. I see. Did he tell you what he was going to Costello's for?

Mr. STAND. No; he said, "Come on; we are going up to have a drink."

Mr. HALLEY. Did he tell you why he was going there?

Mr. STAND. I could not say for sure.

Mr. HALLEY. When you got there O'Dwyer was already there?

Mr. STAND. Yes; he was.

Mr. HALLEY. He was in his uniform?

Mr. STAND. That is hard to say. I know he was in the Army at that time. It was after the 1941 campaign.

Mr. HALLEY. It was when?

Mr. STAND. It was after the 1941 campaign. Let me try to fix the date, because Kennedy was elected leader in 1942, and it must have been around that time.

Mr. HALLEY. It would be toward the end of 1942?

Mr. STAND. I would say it would be in the early part of 1942.

Mr. HALLEY. The early part of 1942?

Mr. STAND. Yes; within the first 6 months of 1942.

Mr. HALLEY. When you were there, were Sherman and Severesi already there?

Mr. STAND. They were there when we arrived.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Neal there?

Mr. STAND. No.

Mr. HALLEY. He was not?

Mr. STAND. Not on this occasion.

Mr. HALLEY. Nobody else was there?

Mr. STAND. As I say, if you were to mention some names I might be able to tell you, there were not too many people there.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I am not hiding behind any bushes. I don't know of anyone else.

Mr. STAND. The names you mentioned were there.

Mr. HALLEY. You are being frank?

Mr. STAND. Oh, naturally.

Mr. HALLEY. And I am trying to be frank, too.

Mr. STAND. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any discussion up there after you arrived?

Mr. STAND. No, it was just one of those cocktail affairs, we were having a drink, and there was a little tray of hors d'oeuvres, and talking generally, punching the bag you might say.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you talking about politics at all?

Mr. STAND. O'Dwyer was talking about the campaign. He seemed to be directing his remarks at Severesi, who had recently been elected in Queens.

Mr. HALLEY. After that did you all go out to the Copacabana for dinner?

Mr. STAND. I think so; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did O'Dwyer go with you to the Copacabana?

Mr. STAND. That I cannot say. He may have gone with us, and he may have left before the evening was over. I cannot say for sure.

Mr. HALLEY. Did O'Dwyer have any separate conversation with Costello?

Mr. STAND. I could not say; during the time that I was there?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. STAND. I could not say; no, I don't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any talk about any Army matters?

Mr. STAND. Not in my presence.

Mr. HALLEY. Or any investigation that O'Dwyer was conducting?

Mr. STAND. Not while I was there, just talking sort of generally, he was talking about the 1941 campaign to Severesi, and now and then we all pitched in and said something.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there any talk about who the Democratic nominee would be for mayor in 1945?

Mr. STAND. I can't say there was. There may have been. If there was I paid no attention to it. I would have no reason to remember it. It was just a conversation, you might say.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, can you explain to this committee what the leader of Tammany Hall, two very influential members, yourself and Irving Sherman, yourself, Neal, Irving Sherman and the district attorney of Brooklyn would all be doing in this fellow's apartment if he had no interest in politics? I mean, what would you have to say about that?

Mr. STAND. As I explained, I went there with Mr. Kennedy. He said, "Come on, we are going to have a drink." I went there. I had no idea, I cannot say there was any purpose of the meeting, except to have a cocktail.

Mr. HALLEY. Did Costello cultivate people who were in politics?

Mr. STAND. No, well, your inference would be as good as mine. I cannot say what his purpose was.

Mr. HALLEY. Costello had at that time a bad reputation, did he not?

Mr. STAND. I guess he has had a bad reputation all through the years.

Mr. HALLEY. Why would people, prominent people in political life, go to his apartment to have cocktails?

Mr. STAND. What answer could you make to that question? I would not know what to say. Mr. Kennedy asked me to go there, I went with him, and I went on invitation from Mr. Kennedy.

Mr. HALLEY. Wouldn't there be a natural tendency to shun people with bad reputations, rather than to fraternize with them?

Mr. STAND. Well, I was not giving the leader advice, he asked me to go and I went.

Mr. HALLEY. There are a lot of other things I think the committee, and I know that I, would like to talk to you about. Are you planning to remain in New York?

Mr. STAND. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you think we might talk some more informally at some time?

Mr. STAND. Whenever you say, I am at your disposal.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Mr. Stand, what is your opinion as to whether his influence has increased or diminished during recent years in Tammany Hall, can you say, Mr. Stand?

Mr. STAND. I really couldn't say, because I did not meet Mr. Costello, I was in Tammany Hall for 15 years, from 1934 to 1943, rather, and I did not meet Mr. Costello until after Mr. Kennedy became the leader.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. Well, are you still secretary?

Mr. STAND. No, I am Democratic leader in my district.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your district?

Mr. STAND. The fourth assembly district.

The CHAIRMAN. He does not have any influence in that district?

Mr. STAND. No.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Thank you, Mr. Stand.

Mr. HALLEY. May I ask just one more question?

Mr. STAND. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever up at Costello's apartment with Neal?

Mr. STAND. I may have been there once or twice with him.

Mr. HALLEY. On what occasions?

Mr. STAND. I have not been to Costello's, I don't think I was in Mr. Costello's apartment more than two or three times in all my life, the time you mentioned and maybe one time after.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you have got a pretty good memory.

Mr. STAND. I would say "Yes," but after all, I certainly have not been there in the last 5 or 6 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course, I understand that. But the only question is, when were you there with Neal, and what was the occasion?

Mr. STAND. I probably met Mr. Neal, and we went there, and I was in his company, no particular reason.

Mr. HALLEY. Could you be more specific, more definite?

Mr. STAND. I really could not, because, as I said, if I went with Mr. Neal, he went with Mr. Costello, and I left, and they may have gone someplace.

Mr. HALLEY. It is not a question or if you went, did you ever go?

Mr. STAND. Perhaps. I could not say for sure. I really could not place any importance upon it, because if I did, it did not mean anything so far as I was concerned.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you and Neal and Costello ever had lunch and dinner together?

Mr. STAND. Do you mean if I had lunch with him? I may have seen him in the club.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever sit down and eat lunch with him?

Mr. STAND. I just said I never eat lunch.

Mr. HALLEY. Or dinner?

Mr. STAND. Yes; once or twice.

Mr. HALLEY. Has Neal ever been present?

Mr. STAND. Perhaps once or twice.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he or has he not? Perhaps does not mean anything.

Mr. STAND. Well, I would say "Yes," I had dinner with a lot of people. I don't have any particular reason to remember who I have dinner with.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Thank you, Mr. Stand.

The CHAIRMAN. Call your next witness.

Mr. HALLEY. Our next witness will be Mr. Simon.

The CHAIRMAN. Good evening, Mr. Simon.

Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. SIMON. Yes; I do.

TESTIMONY OF ALFRED L. SIMON, BALLSTON SPA, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. We are sorry to have kept you waiting so long, Mr. Simon.

Mr. SIMON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. SIMON. Alfred L. Simon.

Mr. HALLEY. You have been sworn?

Mr. SIMON. Yes; I have.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mr. SIMON. Ballston Spa, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Simon, I understand that you for many years have lived in Saratoga; is that right?

Mr. SIMON. That is right; I have lived in Ballston Spa all my life.

Mr. HALLEY. You were formerly district attorney of Saratoga County?

Mr. SIMON. I was district attorney of the county in 1938, 1939, and 1940.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were beaten by a candidate, whom Jim Leary proposed?

Mr. SIMON. No; I did not run the second time.

Mr. HALLEY. I see. In any event, you are politically opposed to Jim Leary?

Mr. SIMON. Yes; I am a Republican. I am a former officer of the real Republican group that have opposed his group.

Mr. HALLEY. But you are a Republican?

Mr. SIMON. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, you have made certain statements to one of the committee's investigators, Patrick C. Murray, concerning the gambling at Saratoga. Will you state to the committee whether or not you believe Leary has any connection with the gambling in Saratoga?

Mr. SIMON. The only information that I have of my own knowledge, and that is not based upon newspaper articles or rumors, pertains to the years 1938, 1939, and 1940.

Mr. HALLEY. Go ahead.

Mr. SIMON. The only thing that I know is that it has been reported by persistent rumors that he has a connection with gambling.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, have you ever made the statement that Leary controlled the county, and for purposes of relation to gambling, this means controlling the sheriff's office and the district attorney's office?

Mr. SIMON. It has been—have I made that statement?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. SIMON. I have stated that I believe that Leary dominates the political situation in Saratoga County, and that his domination controls the candidates who are selected for public office, and party positions. That has been our position politically.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever stated that the dollars and cents value of the take at Saratoga amounts to about $300,000 per season?

Mr. SIMON. I have stated there are rumors to that effect, and there have been newspaper articles to that effect over a period of time.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you stated that $200,000 of it goes to Leary?

Mr. SIMON. I have stated that there are rumors to the effect that he receives approximately that much.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any information at all to back it up?

Mr. SIMON. I have no personal knowledge on the subject, other than as I have indicated.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, have people given you that information to whom the committee could go?

Mr. SIMON. No; I cannot recall. It is a persistent rumor that has covered a period of years.

Mr. HALLEY. For instance, you said, I believe, that each night club paid $1,000 a night for week days and $1,500 for Saturday?

Mr. SIMON. I have no personal knowledge on that. There have been newspaper accounts to that effect.

Mr. HALLEY. You personally know nothing of it, though?

Mr. SIMON. I personally know nothing of it, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I think you told Mr. Murray that the payoff was paid through an individual named Patty Grennon, of Schenectady.

Mr. SIMON. There have been rumors to that effect.

Mr. HALLEY. And that he fronted for Leary?

Mr. SIMON. That is right. I have no personal knowledge. What I am stating now is what has been rumored and gossiped about in the community.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, now, I think you said that Grennon collected each Sunday morning, and was seen on many occasions bringing the proceeds of the collection to Leary's office on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock?

Mr. SIMON. That was rumored.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever heard of anybody who saw Grennon collect it?

Mr. SIMON. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you heard of anybody seeing Grennon going to Leary's office?

Mr. SIMON. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever personally seen Grennon and Leary together?

Mr. SIMON. No; I have not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether they are friends?

Mr. SIMON. I believe they are. I believe Grennon lives in Schenectady where Leary has a law office. I think Leary knows Grennon.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, what can the committee do about this thing? You were formerly district attorney up there. Was it in 1938?

Mr. SHIVITZ. 1937, 1938, and 1939.

Mr. SIMON. 1938, 1939, and 1940.

Mr. HALLEY. There were some raids made during that time, were there not?

Mr. SIMON. Yes, there were.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have no doubt that gambling had gone on wide open up through August of 1950, have you?

Mr. SIMON. From the persistency of the rumors, and the information and the newspaper articles, I believe that is so.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you ever go into any of the gambling houses?

Mr. SIMON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have seen gambling going on, is that right?

Mr. SIMON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Wide open?

Mr. SIMON. That was before I was district attorney, I went to the gambling casinos, and I think on two occasions since I was district attorney, possibly 3 or 4 years ago, I went to dinner and visited the casinos.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, how would you advise the committee to go out after some evidence?

Mr. SIMON. My analysis, sir, of the situation, is that historically and traditionally, Saratoga is a gambling town. It has been a gambling town over many years, and the people have become to feel that it is a necessary evil.

I feel the majority of the people actually think that their livelihood depends upon it, and they are in favor of it.

I think the process of trying to educate the people that that is not a fact, that the springs can be developed, and that the resource of the racing in the summertime can be their mainstay in sustaining their livelihood. It is a situation that is difficult to analyze, because the attitude of the majority of the people is that they need that there.

Mr. HALLEY. As a lawyer and resident, do you know of any people to whom the committee may talk to try to get some evidence of these pay-offs? The committee is more interested in the pay-offs, obviously, than the fact of the gambling.

Mr. SIMON. No; I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. You must have had some reason, for you are a responsible citizen, and you must have had some solid basis for making the statements to Mr. Murray, when you knew he was an investigator for this committee.

Mr. SIMON. I told him there were news reports and rumors to that effect, and there have been over a period of time. I know nothing of my own personal knowledge, nor do I know of anyone who has ever observed conditions upon which that conclusion could be based. I would not want to pass judgment on a rumor, but I have used, when I was district attorney, information that came to me through those channels to make investigations and run them down to the best I could with the situation.

Mr. HALLEY. I have nothing else.

Oh, by the way, did you get statements when you were in the district attorney's office from people who knew anything about it?

Mr. SIMON. No; I did not, sir. When I entered the district attorney's office in 1938, it was my purpose to enforce the gambling laws in Saratoga County. I regret to say that because of that fact, many of the people have felt that I deprived them of a livelihood.

For instance, in one of the campaigns we had recently, there was a hand circular sent out through the city to the effect: "You remember Al Simon, and what he did to Saratoga."

The CHAIRMAN. Did you close them down when you were there?

Mr. SIMON. I beg your pardon?

The CHAIRMAN. Did you keep them closed when you were district attorney?

Mr. SIMON. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. That is all, Mr. Simon. Thank you very much, sir.

Mr. SIMON. Thank you.

Mr. HALLEY. Good-by, and thank you.

(Witness excused.)

The CHAIRMAN. We will now adjourn until 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon, at 9 p. m., Wednesday, February 14, a recess was taken, to reconvene at 9:30 a. m., Thursday, February 15, 1951.)

INVESTIGATION OF ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1951

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE,
New York City, N. Y.

EXECUTIVE SESSION—CONFIDENTIAL

The committee met, pursuant to adjournment, at 9:30 a. m., in room 2832, United States Courthouse Building, Foley Square, Senator Estes Kefauver (chairman) presiding.

Present Senator Kefauver.

Also present: Rudolph Halley, chief counsel of the special committee; James Walsh, special counsel; Arnold L. Fein, special counsel; Reuben A. Lazarus and David Shivitz, assistant counsel of the special committee; Patrick Murray, investigator; Lawrence Goddard, investigator; and Howard Brand, investigator of the special committee staff.

The CHAIRMAN. Let us be in order, gentlemen. Now, where were we, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. We are going to have Mr. Frank Costello this morning.

(The testimony of Frank Costello at this executive session has been eliminated, because it is virtually completely duplicated in the testimony given in the public hearings included in this publication, which were held in New York City on March 13, 14, 15, 16, 19, 20, and 21, 1951.

The testimony of Mr. Costello in this executive session is on file with the committee and is available for examination by any interested parties.)

The CHAIRMAN. Will you call your next witness.

Mr. HALLEY. We will call Mr. Lascari.

The CHAIRMAN. Good afternoon, Mr. Lascari. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, please.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. LASCARI. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lascari, you may take that seat.

Mr. HALLEY. I am sorry we had to keep you waiting so long, Mr. Lascari. My name is Halley. This is Senator Kefauver, and these gentlemen are Mr. Lazarus and Mr. Shivitz.

The CHAIRMAN. How are you, Mr. Lascari?

Mr. LASCARI. How are you, Senator?

TESTIMONY OF MICHAEL LASCARI, EAST ORANGE, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, please?

Mr. LASCARI. Michael Lascari.

Mr. HALLEY. Where do you live?

Mr. LASCARI. 120 Washington Street, East Orange, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. LASCARI. I am in the tobacco business.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the name of your company?

Mr. LASCARI. Public Service Tobacco.

Mr. HALLEY. What is the address?

Mr. LASCARI. 1464 North Broad Street.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any residence or place of abode in New York City?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you ever stay any place in New York City?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you a friend of Lucky Luciano?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. LASCARI. Well, it was back in childhood days, in fact, I lived with his parents, after I lost my parents at an early age. That is going back 40 years.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you live with his parents?

Mr. LASCARI. I lived with his parents 3 or 4 years.

Mr. HALLEY. How old were you at that time?

Mr. LASCARI. About 13 or 14.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do after you left the Luciano home?

Mr. LASCARI. I worked.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you work?

Mr. LASCARI. Western Union, American Can Co., and I worked for the Journal-American, I worked as a peddler, I worked at various jobs.

Mr. HALLEY. Luciano was the godfather of your child, was he not?

Mr. LASCARI. That is correct.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go to see Luciano before he was deported?

Mr. LASCARI. Where do you mean?

Mr. HALLEY. At Ellis Island.

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the purpose of your going to see him?

Mr. LASCARI. I brought him some clothes.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, it is almost a family relationship?

Mr. LASCARI. It has been for 40 years; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And that is the basis of any stories we have heard about close relations?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. I think it is a fact that your daughter went to Europe and visited him there when she was on her honeymoon?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have presented him with a pair of gold cuff links, or something like that?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You have probably given him other presents, too?

Mr. LASCARI. And a watch.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever sent him any money?

Mr. LASCARI. I have not. But on my visit over there I did give him some money.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did you give him?

Mr. LASCARI. About $2,500.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you get it?

Mr. LASCARI. It was my own money.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he express a need for funds?

Mr. LASCARI. No; not necessarily. I just thought he might need it.

Mr. HALLEY. And he accepted it?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you over there?

Mr. LASCARI. Last year; last May.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay with him?

Mr. LASCARI. About a week.

Mr. HALLEY. And you stayed with him?

Mr. LASCARI. I visited different cities. I went to Rome, Milan, Venice, Sorrento, and a few other places.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you with Lucky all that time?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Just about how long?

Mr. LASCARI. Just about a week of my stay there.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you there all together?

Mr. LASCARI. About 30 days.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have any business dealings with him?

Mr. LASCARI. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in the gambling business?

Mr. LASCARI. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the liquor business during prohibition?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes, I was.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you tell the committee about that?

Mr. LASCARI. I was in it for a short time. I sold beer.

Mr. HALLEY. Who did you sell it for?

Mr. LASCARI. I sold it for myself. I had a small distributing business.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you get it?

Mr. LASCARI. Around town.

Mr. HALLEY. Particularly from whom?

Mr. LASCARI. I picked it up from the so-called distributors in Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known Meyer Lansky?

Mr. LASCARI. I have known him for a long time.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first meet him?

Mr. LASCARI. About 15 years ago, approximately.

Mr. HALLEY. Who introduced you to him?

Mr. LASCARI. It was through Luciano that I met Lansky.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you know Zwillman?

Mr. LASCARI. About 17 years.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you first come to meet Zwillman?

Mr. LASCARI. I met him through Mr. Stacher, Joe Stacher.

Mr. HALLEY. Joe Stacher?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He is also known as Joe Stretch?

Mr. LASCARI. No; Doc Stacher.

Mr. HALLEY. Doc Stacher?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. He is also known as Max Rosen, isn't he?

Mr. LASCARI. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. Doc Stacher; is that right?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, he is an old-timer in the gambling business?

Mr. LASCARI. I don't know. I met him years ago, and he was my original partner in the tobacco business. When I moved over to Jersey, he sold out to Mr. Zwillman a short time later. That is how I met Mr. Zwillman.

Mr. HALLEY. You went to Jersey with Stacher?

Mr. LASCARI. Not with him. I had discussed the possibilities of going into the tobacco business with Mr. Stacher.

Mr. HALLEY. When was this?

Mr. LASCARI. This was in 1935 or 1936. Now, these are just approximate dates. They are not specific.

Mr. HALLEY. You were a fairly young man at that time, were you not?

Mr. LASCARI. Well, I am 49 years old today; that is, I will be next month.

Mr. HALLEY. You were about in your early thirties?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any assets at that time?

Mr. LASCARI. Any assets?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes; assets.

Mr. LASCARI. I had a small business, a tobacco business, in New York at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. What particular type of business did you have in New York?

Mr. LASCARI. It was a tobacco business, merchandising business, automatic-merchandising business, and it was known as the Manhattan Cigarette Service.

Mr. HALLEY. It was vending machines?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have an apartment in New York?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you happen to meet Stacher?

Mr. LASCARI. I met him, he was summering at Long Beach one year while I was down there.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes?

Mr. LASCARI. Back in 1935 or 1936, and it was I that had proposed the idea of going into the tobacco business in Jersey, and he accepted that and I moved over there and went into business, and we organized this company.

Mr. HALLEY. When did Zwillman get into it?

Mr. LASCARI. Zwillman got into it later on, and Mr. Stacher had no further interest in the business. He sold his interest to Mr. Zwillman.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever live at 1111 Park Avenue?

Mr. LASCARI. I lived at 1111 for 10 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Until when?

Mr. LASCARI. Until last year.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you moved to Jersey?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you conducted your business in Jersey, but you lived in New York; is that right?

Mr. LASCARI. Well, up until—I had a business in New York and Jersey.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you still have the New York business?

Mr. LASCARI. No; I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. You sold that?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. To whom and when?

Mr. LASCARI. December of 1947, to DeMartini and Mr. Caballero.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other business now besides the Public Service Tobacco Co.?

Mr. LASCARI. The Public Service Tobacco Co. is interested in another business which is known as Federal Automatic. It is a washing-machine business.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is that located?

Mr. LASCARI. It is located in Hillside, N. J.?

Mr. HALLEY. What kind of washing machines are they?

Mr. LASCARI. We install them in apartment houses for tenants.

Mr. HALLEY. How many houses do you now have machines in?

Mr. LASCARI. I cannot say how many houses we have machines in, but we have about six or seven hundred machines in operation.

Mr. HALLEY. Sixty-seven hundred?

Mr. LASCARI. No; six or seven hundred in operation.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other business?

Mr. LASCARI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Who, besides yourself and Zwillman, are interested in the cigarette business?

Mr. LASCARI. Both our wives and children.

Mr. HALLEY. No other people?

Mr. LASCARI. No other people.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Charles Yanowski, I guess it is?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever meet him?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know who I refer to?

Mr. LASCARI. No; I never heard of him.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you have no other businesses whatsoever?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Charlie Yanowski?

Mr. LASCARI. I don't know him.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't know him at all?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Joe Adonis?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes; I do.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. LASCARI. About 10 or 12 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Frank Costello?

Mr. LASCARI. Just a nodding acquaintance.

Mr. HALLEY. I take it you know Joe Adonis better?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How well do you know Little Augie Pisano?

Mr. LASCARI. I don't know him at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Jerry Catena, or do you know him?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you meet him, and how do you know him?

Mr. LASCARI. Well, he also had an interest in the original tobacco business back in 1934 or 1935. He had a small interest in it. I don't know to what extent his interest was.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean in the tobacco business?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. In whose business?

Mr. LASCARI. Beg pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. In Jersey or——

Mr. LASCARI. Newark, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. When did he step out?

Mr. LASCARI. About the same time that Mr. Stacher did.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the circumstances of their stepping out? Was there any particular reason for it?

Mr. LASCARI. No; they were not interested in that type of business.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, there is some other material that I need before I can go on.

Mr. LAZARUS. May I ask a question?

Mr. HALLEY. Go right ahead.

Mr. LAZARUS. The members of your family are interested in some of your business enterprises, aren't they?

Mr. LASCARI. They are, yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Your wife and daughter?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you recall what those business enterprises are?

Mr. LASCARI. What they are?

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes.

Mr. LASCARI. It was the Manhattan Cigarette Service at that time. I was also interested in the machining business, known as Alcuna, and the Public Service Tobacco Co., as well as the Federal Automatic Co.

Mr. LAZARUS. Are you still interested in that?

Mr. LASCARI. In the Public Service Tobacco Co. business, yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you furnish the money to your wife and daughter to invest in these enterprises?

Mr. LASCARI. I provided their interests sometime ago, and paid a gift tax on it. That was back in 1935 or 1936.

Mr. LAZARUS. Has Mrs. Lascari independent means of her own; money?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. LAZARUS. In 1935, when you advanced the money——

Mr. LASCARI. Pardon me. When I mentioned 1935 or 1936, those are just approximate dates. It might have been a year later or a year earlier. So these answers as to dates are just approximate.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you recall how much you advanced them at that time?

Mr. LASCARI. Why, I originally had an interest in the Public Service Tobacco Co., and whatever my interest was I transferred that interest as a gift, in order to provide or make future provisions for my wife and daughter. I paid a gift tax on that.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you recall what those amounts were?

Mr. LASCARI. No, I could not say at this time.

Mr. LAZARUS. Is their interest in these businesses a substantial one?

Mr. LASCARI. At this time?

Mr. LAZARUS. At any time was it or is it?

Mr. LASCARI. Well, not originally, no, because the business has been in operation now about 18 years, and it has been in a course of development during that time. In its inception it was a very small business.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you ever have to make any loans, or did you have the money yourself, to advance the money necessary for the purchase of their interest?

Mr. LASCARI. Well, I provided this as a gift, so far as my daughter was concerned. Naturally, she was a young girl, and she did not have any independent means, so I provided this on the basis of a gift, and I paid a gift tax on it.

Mr. LAZARUS. Your wife had sufficient funds of her own to make the purchase of her interest?

Mr. LASCARI. From savings, yes. The interest at that time was nothing to speak of.

Mr. LAZARUS. I assume that it was unnecessary to make any loans from what you have said. Is it possible you had to borrow some money at that time from Mr. Zwillman to help you finance it?

Mr. LASCARI. From Mr. Zwillman?

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes.

Mr. LASCARI. No; I did not.

Mr. LAZARUS. You are positive of that?

Mr. LASCARI. I am positive.

Mr. LAZARUS. Do you know a man by the name of Dave Lee?

Mr. LASCARI. Dave Lee?

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes.

Mr. LASCARI. I know of him.

Mr. LAZARUS. How do you happen to know him?

Mr. LASCARI. In fact, I went to his daughter's wedding. I don't know him too intimately.

Mr. LAZARUS. You know him, though?

Mr. LASCARI. I know him, yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. He is a partner in Lee Bros.?

Mr. LASCARI. Some construction company known as Lee Bros., yes.

Mr. LAZARUS. Did you ever act as a cashier at Lodi in a gambling place?

Mr. LASCARI. I have never been in a gambling place in my life.

Mr. LAZARUS. At Koster's?

Mr. LASCARI. I have never been anywhere in any gambling place.

Mr. LAZARUS. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your relation with Mr. Zwillman, if any?

Mr. LASCARI. Why, both of our wives are interested in the tobacco business.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, you are no blood relations?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

The CHAIRMAN. How did you happen to get into business with Mr. Zwillman?

Mr. LASCARI. I explained that to Mr. Halley.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. All right. I am sorry.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, now, you have no part in it except your family and Zwillman and Zwillman's family, is that right?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. I mean you have no other partners?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. In any business whatsoever, you have not taken any part?

Mr. LASCARI. That is correct, only those I mentioned.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other businesses?

Mr. LASCARI. With the exception of the Public Service Tobacco Co., and the Federal Automatic Co. that I mentioned to you, that is all.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no other business?

Mr. LASCARI. No other business.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you recently had any other businesses?

Mr. LASCARI. With the exception of the Manhattan Cigarette Service, which was disposed of in 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in the brewery business with Stacher?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. During prohibition were you ever in business with him?

Mr. LASCARI. No; I was not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know him during the years prior to 1933?

Mr. LASCARI. I did, slightly, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever purchase any beer from him?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. There is certain information before the committee that you received a number of phone calls from Charles Yanowski.

Mr. LASCARI. I?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LASCARI. No, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Yanowski was murdered about 2 years ago.

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know that?

Mr. LASCARI. No, I don't. I don't even recall the name.

Mr. HALLEY. And prior to his murder his phones were being tapped.

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And the information we have is that some of the phone calls went to your home.

Mr. LASCARI. My home?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no knowledge of that?

Mr. LASCARI. You are misinformed there.

Mr. HALLEY. You have no knowledge of having had any calls from Charles Yanowski?

Mr. LASCARI. Absolutely not.

Mr. HALLEY. You never met him?

Mr. LASCARI. Absolutely not.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Carmine De Sapio?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever speak to him on the telephone?

Mr. LASCARI. His name might have come up in a conversation, but I never met the individual.

Mr. HALLEY. In conversation with whom?

Mr. LASCARI. I don't know. I just don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. How do you think his name might have come up in a conversation?

Mr. LASCARI. For the moment the name comes to my mind, but I don't know Mr. De Sapio?

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever speak to him on the phone?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know William Solomon?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. LASCARI. I would say 8 or 9 years.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you meet him?

Mr. LASCARI. Through mutual friends. I just don't recall what the inception of our meeting was. I could not say.

Oh, by the way. I do. When we had the machine shops, he had brought in some orders and that is where the meeting took place.

Mr. HALLEY. What machine shop?

Mr. LASCARI. Alcuna.

Mr. HALLEY. What was that?

Mr. LASCARI. When?

Mr. HALLEY. What was that?

Mr. LASCARI. That was a machine shop.

Mr. HALLEY. I don't believe you mentioned it.

Mr. LASCARI. Oh, yes. Those were one of the businesses I mentioned, the Alcuna Co., going back to 1943.

Mr. HALLEY. It was a machine shop?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long were you in that?

Mr. LASCARI. Two and a half or three years.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you do work for the Government during that period?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were your partners in that?

Mr. LASCARI. Mr. Zwillman.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else?

Mr. LASCARI. Hayman.

Mr. HALLEY. Who?

Mr. LASCARI. Hayman.

Mr. HALLEY. What is his full name?

Mr. LASCARI. Cuno Hayman.

Mr. HALLEY. Any other partners?

Mr. LASCARI. Mr. Mendell, and my daughter also had an interest in that business.

Mr. HALLEY. Where was that machine shop?

Mr. LASCARI. It was located at that time on West Sixtieth Street, between Columbus and Broadway.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you make?

Mr. LASCARI. General machining. I did work for the Western Electric Co., General Motors, Curtiss Wright, Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., and several other companies that I cannot think of for the moment.

Mr. HALLEY. Was that a profitable business?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes, it was.

Mr. HALLEY. What would you say were the net profits of that business?

Mr. LASCARI. I could not say for the moment. It was a profitable business, that is all I can say.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your function in the business?

Mr. LASCARI. My function?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LASCARI. General supervision, outside salesman.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you do any direct Government work, or was it all subcontracted?

Mr. LASCARI. We were subcontractors.

Mr. HALLEY. You had no direct Government contracts?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you ever in a company known as the Riverside Music Co.?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right. I owned that company.

Mr. HALLEY. You own that now?

Mr. LASCARI. No; I did.

Mr. HALLEY. What was that?

Mr. LASCARI. It was an automatic music—jukeboxes.

Mr. HALLEY. Jukeboxes?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you in that?

Mr. LASCARI. When was I?

Mr. LAZARUS. Yes.

Mr. LASCARI. Up until 1947.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any partners in that?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. What jukeboxes did you handle?

Mr. LASCARI. I handled AMI and Wurlitzer, and I handled some other make; I just don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you buy your Wurlitzers from Lansky?

Mr. LASCARI. I bought them from the Wurlitzer Co. before Lansky was a distributor.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you start being a distributor?

Mr. LASCARI. I was not a distributor. I was an operator.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you become an operator?

Mr. LASCARI. I could not say; about 1937 or 1938. However, I do not want to be held to those dates.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do, liquidate or sell out in 1947?

Mr. LASCARI. The Riverside?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LASCARI. No, I gave that to Mr. Luciano's brother.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean Charlie, Lucky's brother?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. As a gift?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you did that in 1947?

Mr. LASCARI. In 1947; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What were the total number of jukeboxes owned by your company at that time?

Mr. LASCARI. Oh, about 16 or 17.

Mr. HALLEY. And what was the average net income?

Mr. LASCARI. It was very small.

Mr. HALLEY. Annually.

Mr. LASCARI. A couple of thousand dollars.

Mr. HALLEY. Are there any other businesses——

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you, how did you happen to give it to him?

Mr. LASCARI. Well, our relationship, so far as the Luciano family was concerned, was very close. He was not doing anything; as a matter of providing a means of making a living I gave it to him.

The CHAIRMAN. What would you value it at; the business?

Mr. LASCARI. It is hard to say, Senator, because after all I did not know what the depreciated value of those machines were at the time. I would not know. You see, these things become obsolete in 2 or 3 years.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, would you say $5,000?

Mr. LASCARI. I would say that, yes; or $6,000.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have——

Mr. LASCARI. That is, as a going business.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever have an interest in a restaurant?

Mr. LASCARI. In a restaurant?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have any other businesses?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Bugsy Siegel?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Virginia Hill?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. How did you know Bugsy?

Mr. LASCARI. Well, our children used to associate with his children.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever visit him in California or in Las Vegas?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know of any company known as the Federal Automatic Co.?

Mr. LASCARI. I just mentioned that to you.

Mr. HALLEY. Which is that?

Mr. LASCARI. The washing-machine business.

Mr. HALLEY. Those are the washing machines?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have an associate in that named George Kesselhaus?

Mr. LASCARI. Originally, he was an associate, but not now any more.

Mr. HALLEY. When did he go out?

Mr. LASCARI. The early part of last year.

Mr. HALLEY. The early part of last year?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been in the liquor business after prohibition?

Mr. LASCARI. I was in the beer-distributing business for a year or so.

Mr. HALLEY. What business?

Mr. LASCARI. Beer distributing.

Mr. HALLEY. For a year or so?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Whose beer did you handle?

Mr. LASCARI. A place out in Brooklyn; I cannot think of it—Kings.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know who owned that?

Mr. LASCARI. Who owned it?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LASCARI. I don't recall, counsel.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it Stacher?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. I have no other questions, now.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lascari, doesn't this washing-machine outfit you have, have some contract with the Metropolitan Insurance Co., the buildings that they finance, the apartment buildings?

Mr. LASCARI. No, sir; I never heard of the name before.

The CHAIRMAN. The Metropolitan Insurance Co.?

Mr. LASCARI. You mean the——

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; that big insurance company.

Mr. LASCARI. Yes; we have them in their buildings; yes.

The CHAIRMAN. In one of their apartment buildings?

Mr. LASCARI. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is that?

Mr. LASCARI. In East Orange.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it a large apartment dwelling?

Mr. LASCARI. I believe it runs about 200 family units.

The CHAIRMAN. And the way they operate is, that you put the units in the basement; is that the way you do it?

Mr. LASCARI. We install them in the basement, and service the machines.

The CHAIRMAN. And they come down and do their own laundry?

Mr. LASCARI. That is right. We provide washing machines, driers, and extractors.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any other companies that do the same thing?

Mr. LASCARI. Well, there is the Telecoin, and there are about a hundred companies in New York City in the same business.

The CHAIRMAN. But you are the principal one in northern New Jersey?

Mr. LASCARI. Not necessarily the principal one. There are about 35 or 40 of them over there.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, do you know Frank Lavorsi? He was in some sugar operation, or candy operation.

Mr. LASCARI. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know a fellow named Giglio?

Mr. LASCARI. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not know him?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You have never been in narcotics yourself, have you?

Mr. LASCARI. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Or had any connection with it?

Mr. LASCARI. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe that is all.

Thank you very much.

Mr. HALLEY. Just a moment.

Mr. Lascari, if I should find it necessary to talk to you within the next few weeks, will you be in the vicinity?

Mr. LASCARI. I am at my office every day in the week, including Saturdays.

Mr. HALLEY. I will make arrangements through your counsel's office.

Mr. LASCARI. I have no counsel in this matter. You have my tobacco-company number, and I am there, as I said, from 8 in the morning to 6, from Monday to Saturday.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is your office?

Mr. LASCARI. 1464 North Broad Street, Hillside.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not have any office here in New York?

Mr. LASCARI. No; I don't.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Lascari, do you know Mr. Lucchesi?

Mr. LASCARI. No.

Mr. WALSH. Do you know Vincent Raio?

Mr. LASCARI. No, sir.

Mr. WALSH. That is all.

Mr. LASCARI. You can call me at my office any time you want.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, sir.

Will you call your next witness?

Mr. HALLEY. We will have Mr. Profaci.

The CHAIRMAN. Good afternoon, gentlemen. Counsel, what is your name?

Mr. RONAYNE. My name is Ronayne. I was here the other night.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, yes. Glad to see you again, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. We are sorry to have kept you waiting so long, Mr. Profaci.

Mr. PROFACI. I am ready to answer anything you wish me to.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn, sir?

Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you give this committee will be the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. PROFACI. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JOE PROFACI, BROOKLYN, N. Y., ACCOMPANIED BY JAMES RONAYNE, ATTORNEY

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name?

Mr. PROFACI. Joe Profaci.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your address?

Mr. PROFACI. 8863 Fifteenth Avenue.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your business?

Mr. PROFACI. Olive-oil packer.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you been in that business?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, since I came from the other side.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you first come to this country?

Mr. PROFACI. In 1922.

Mr. HALLEY. Are you a citizen?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you become a citizen?

Mr. PROFACI. 1927, in September.

Mr. HALLEY. When you came to this country, where did you first live?

Mr. PROFACI. I went to live in Chicago.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you stay there?

Mr. PROFACI. About 3 years.

Mr. HALLEY. And then where did you go?

Mr. PROFACI. To Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did you live in Brooklyn?

Mr. PROFACI. Since 1925.

Mr. HALLEY. And you are still living in Brooklyn?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any home anywhere else?

Mr. PROFACI. No; only I own a farm.

Mr. HALLEY. You have a farm?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Where is your farm?

Mr. PROFACI. Hightstown, N. J.

Mr. HALLEY. Hightstown, N. J.?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you buy your farm?

Mr. PROFACI. In 1931.

Mr. HALLEY. Is the olive-oil business the only business you have?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you in that when you first came to this country?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were you in it first, in Chicago?

Mr. PROFACI. In Chicago.

Mr. HALLEY. How old were you when you went to Chicago?

Mr. PROFACI. Twenty-three, twenty-three or twenty-four, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. And then when you came to Brooklyn, you went back into the olive-oil business?

Mr. PROFACI. No; I used to do business in Chicago; I had a grocery store.

Mr. HALLEY. You kept it open?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you still have a business in Chicago?

Mr. PROFACI. No, no. I had it when I arrived there, I opened a grocery store.

Mr. HALLEY. And then you left Chicago?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you do with your grocery store?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, I can't make any money, and I went into the bakery business over there.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you came to Brooklyn?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you open a business in Brooklyn?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Or did you work for somebody for a while?

Mr. PROFACI. No; I work all the while for me.

Mr. HALLEY. You opened a grocery store in Brooklyn?

Mr. PROFACI. No, no. I just sell oil, and cheese.

Mr. HALLEY. In Brooklyn?

Mr. PROFACI. In Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. And today you still sell oil; is that right?

Mr. PROFACI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you sell anything but oil?

Mr. PROFACI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Your company is known as the Mama Mia Co.?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you have any other company?

Mr. PROFACI. No. Well, I had the Santucci oil, which is oil also.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that another company?

Mr. PROFACI. It is bulk oil. It is a mix, 20 percent olive oil and 80 per cent peanut oil. Olive oil, Mama Mia is another company, pure olive oil, and then I have a bulk oil, I mean, drums, and they are called Sunshine. We deliver it with a tank wagon.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you recently been convicted for selling misbranded oil, olive oil?

Mr. PROFACI. Repeat again, please?

Mr. HALLEY. Have you recently had trouble with the Government?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you tell the committee about that?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes; I will be glad, I explain.

Mr. HALLEY. Go ahead.

Mr. PROFACI. You see, gentlemen, this Santucci oil, I had trouble with. I never had trouble in olive oil, because olive oil has to be pure, 100 percent, and I never had any trouble with olive oil.

In Santucci oil, you have 80 percent peanut oil and 20 percent olive oil—peanut oil, 80 percent; olive oil, 20 percent.

I have vats, gentlemen, I would say a quarter of this room, and we mix, and we mix, so the trouble I have, according to my knowledge, was something that I don't deserve, because before they pinch me they pinched somebody else, a lot of people.

Mr. HALLEY. You plead guilty, did you not?

Mr. PROFACI. If you permit me, please, I explain; yes?

Mr. HALLEY. Go ahead.

Mr. PROFACI. You see, what I understand people, my competitors do me the job, it means they talked bad about me competitively. So they pinch me, too, and naturally we went to court, and I don't want to plead guilty, gentlemen, but my lawyer advised me, "You have to spend a lot of money, plead guilty to misbranding. That won't hurt your business."

Misbranded is what I understand, or what I make them understand is a lowest misdemeanor.

So they no hurt my business.

So, to save the Government money and expense, I plead guilty to misbranding. My lawyer took care of my business, he told me it would not be hard on my business if I plead guilty for misbranding.

Anything like that happens, so in fact, gentlemen, after that I plead guilty for misbranding, and the Food and Drug Administration return the oil they seize from me. They seize my oil, and then returned me the oil back.

Mr. HALLEY. But you did plead guilty?

Mr. PROFACI. For misbranding, yes.

Another gentleman, another concern, he beat the case for the same charges that I had. He beat the case for the same charges that I had.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever been arrested for anything else?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes, sir; gentlemen.

Mr. HALLEY. What is that?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, I was arrested one time in Cleveland.

Mr. HALLEY. What was that for?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, to my knowledge, for nothing, because I was working, and they pinched me there.

Mr. HALLEY. What were you doing there?

Mr. PROFACI. I went there to expand my business, gentlemen.

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, to open up the territory.

Mr. HALLEY. And how do you open a territory in your business?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, through my people, to invite people to see many people, in fact today in Cleveland I have six or seven jobbers.

Mr. HALLEY. Now—

Mr. PROFACI. Because after that, I have been going there all the time.

Mr. HALLEY. You came to this country in 1922; is that right?

Mr. PROFACI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were in Chicago for how many years?

Mr. PROFACI. Three years.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you came to Brooklyn?

Mr. PROFACI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did it take you to build up your business in Brooklyn?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, gradually, little by little.

Mr. HALLEY. How long was it before you spread out over the country?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, I figure about 15 years.

Mr. HALLEY. About 15 years?

Mr. PROFACI. About 15 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, for the first few years where did you operate?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, first at 110 Bridge Street, in my house, because I usually delivered family to family before.

Mr. HALLEY. Then how did you operate?

Mr. PROFACI. Then I bought a place where I have it now, small.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you buy the place; do you remember?

Mr. PROFACI. In 1936.

Mr. HALLEY. 1936?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes; and I started to improve it there.

Mr. HALLEY. Once you bought the place, did you then begin to operate around in these different parts of the country, or had you done that before?

Mr. PROFACI. No—well, before I used to go with a truck, with a car, you know. Then I would start to ship with freight, with the train, and in fact with my truck I don't sell all over the country.

Mr. HALLEY. I am having a little trouble in understanding you. I am sorry.

Mr. PROFACI. I am sorry, too.

Mr. HALLEY. It is my fault as much as yours.

Mr. PROFACI. No; it is mine.

Mr. HALLEY. But let's go back. You came from Chicago to Brooklyn. Do you know the year?

Mr. PROFACI. In 1925.

Mr. HALLEY. 1925?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you had just been bankrupt in Chicago.

Mr. PROFACI. Not bankrupt, gentlemen.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you went broke.

Mr. PROFACI. No; I was not making money on the grocery, because other competitors did not give me a chance.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I thought you left Chicago because your business had failed. Is that wrong?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, I didn't make any money; yes; that is true.

Mr. HALLEY. And you had to close up; is that right?

Mr. PROFACI. I closed up.

Mr. HALLEY. When you came to Brooklyn, did you have any money?

Mr. PROFACI. I don't have much.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have enough money to open a store?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, I have a few thousand dollars to buy oil, you know, and trust here and there.

Mr. HALLEY. But you operated from your own home; is that right?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes. No, before when I started operating in my own home, that was after I married.

Mr. HALLEY. After you were married.

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When were you married?

Mr. PROFACI. 1928.

Mr. HALLEY. What time in 1928, do you remember?

Mr. PROFACI. In June.

Mr. HALLEY. In June?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, up to that time, how big was your business when you were married?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, not big, gentlemen.

Mr. HALLEY. It was a little business?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you operating in other cities, or just in Brooklyn?

Mr. PROFACI. Sometimes we delivered in Philadelphia, you know, and I deliver in Connecticut, Newark, Brooklyn, or New York.

Mr. HALLEY. But you were just delivering yourself.

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You would go and make the delivery?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. How long was it before you had a business big enough to have jobbers in other cities?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, about 1935 I started—

Mr. HALLEY. That is when you began to really expand?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What cities did you begin to expand to?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, first Newark—no, local first, then Newark, Trenton, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Scranton, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit.

Mr. HALLEY. All at once, or which first?

Mr. PROFACI. No; little by little.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you go first?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, first I went here.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, where was your first expansion, to Newark?

Mr. PROFACI. No, local first.

Mr. HALLEY. Then Newark and Philadelphia?

Mr. PROFACI. Local, first, and then Newark.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, then, in 1928, when you were married you moved your business into your house?

Mr. PROFACI. I have a garage underneath, I put the store underneath, and I operated my business there.

Mr. HALLEY. You operated from your house.

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. At that time you did not have jobbers, or anything like that.

Mr. PROFACI. No; just I have some grocery business. I delivered groceries to private houses.

Mr. HALLEY. To private houses?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you mean you would sell to private houses?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes; I have been selling to private houses.

Mr. HALLEY. Where were these private houses? In Brooklyn?

Mr. PROFACI. In Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. Anywhere else?

Mr. PROFACI. New York and Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. Anywhere else?

Mr. PROFACI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. And in 1929 and 1930, did you continue the business that way?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You were not selling to other cities at that time, were you?

Mr. PROFACI. No. Sometimes I loaded truck, and I go to Trenton or Newark, you know.

Mr. HALLEY. And you did not begin to sell to cities like Cincinnati and Cleveland until some years later; is that correct?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes; about 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941—gradually.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, I would like to get back to this arrest of yours in Cleveland. I think you must have made a mistake when you said you went to Cleveland to open up some new territory for your business.

Mr. PROFACI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you remember when you were arrested in Cleveland?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, it was after I was married, in the same year I was married.

Mr. HALLEY. That is right, in 1928.

Mr. PROFACI. It was in 1928.

Mr. HALLEY. What business did you have in Cleveland in 1928?

Mr. PROFACI. I went there to sell merchandise, oil.

Mr. HALLEY. You just testified that in 1928 you were operating a very small business in your own home, and only selling around Brooklyn.

Mr. PROFACI. And I tried to double it, little by little.

Mr. HALLEY. You said a few minutes ago, that you did not start trying to sell in Cleveland until 1935 or 1936.

Mr. PROFACI. Yes, in a big way.

Mr. HALLEY. You did not distinguish between a big way or a little way. I thought your testimony was pretty definite.

Mr. PROFACI. (No response.)

Mr. HALLEY. Who were your customers in Cleveland?

Mr. PROFACI. Today?

Mr. HALLEY. Ever?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, I have Tornello Importing Co.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that Frank Milano?

Mr. PROFACI. Frank Milano. Then Mayflower Importing Co. Then I have some more.

Mr. HALLEY. I assume he is through with Cleveland.

Mr. PROFACI. In Ohio.

Mr. HALLEY. No, I meant Cleveland. You don't expect anybody here to believe that when you had a little business in Brooklyn, you suddenly went to Cleveland in 1928 to try to sell a little olive oil?

Mr. PROFACI. I tell you, gentlemen, why I went there, because there was some friend of my father told me they had a friend over there, and he says they need me there in Cleveland.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is this friend of your father's?

Mr. PROFACI. Somebody by the name of Ignacio Italiano.

Mr. HALLEY. How long did your father know him?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, he know him from the other side.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you know Ignacio Italiano?

Mr. PROFACI. That is right.

Mr. HALLEY. You went to Cleveland to see him?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He was then a much older man than you?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And with him did you go to a meeting at the Statler Hotel?

Mr. PROFACI. No meeting, gentlemen.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, there were 24 men there, were there not?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, I don't know how many there was, but as soon as I walked in, they pinched me.

Mr. HALLEY. As soon as you walked in, you were pinched?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You were not there to sell olive oil, were you?

Mr. PROFACI. That is what he introduce me for, this old man.

Mr. HALLEY. Was Italiano in the olive oil business?

Mr. PROFACI. He was in the grocery business. I was selling to him, too.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you selling to him in 1928?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Remember that in 1928, you testified a little while ago that you just had a little business.

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. That you were operating out of your own garage.

Mr. PROFACI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you said you only sold locally.

Mr. PROFACI. I said, yes—I tell you, I explain. The man came from Tampa, Fla., and when he come in he asked for oil, and I sell it to him.

Mr. HALLEY. What man came from Tampa?

Mr. PROFACI. This gentleman, this Italiano.

Mr. HALLEY. Italiano came from Tampa?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. For oil?

Mr. PROFACI. I met him in Brooklyn, he asked me for oil. I remember one time I sell him 150 cases oil.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you sell him 150 cases?

Mr. PROFACI. 1927, about that time.

Mr. HALLEY. In Tampa?

Mr. PROFACI. No; here.

Mr. HALLEY. In New York?

Mr. PROFACI. In Brooklyn.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes; but not out of town.

Mr. PROFACI. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, is it not a fact that 13 guns were seized in that room where you were arrested?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, I don't know, gentlemen. There were guns. I don't know who gave guns.

Mr. HALLEY. There were guns, weren't there?

Mr. PROFACI. I heard they had guns.

Mr. HALLEY. You know there were guns, don't you?

Mr. PROFACI. There was guns, but I don't know anything about a gun.

Mr. HALLEY. There was more than one gun there, there were a lot of guns.

Mr. PROFACI. We heard that.

Mr. HALLEY. What?

Mr. PROFACI. I heard they had a lot of guns there.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else was at that meeting that you know, besides Italiano?

Mr. PROFACI. Well, I went there, gentlemen, with a brother-in-law of mine.

Mr. HALLEY. Mangano?

Mr. PROFACI. No; a brother-in-law of mine, because I went with the car.

Mr. HALLEY. You drove?

Mr. PROFACI. My brother-in-law, Joe Magliocco.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he at the meeting?

Mr. PROFACI. He drive me over there, because I cannot drive a car, because I have one leg, and I could not drive a car sometimes, so he drive me over there.

Mr. HALLEY. He drove you to Cleveland?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. He was not arrested, was he?

Mr. PROFACI. He was arrested, too.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his name?

Mr. PROFACI. Magliocco.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that spelled M-a-g-l-i-o-c-c-o?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes, Mister.

Mr. HALLEY. His name is listed here as Guiseppe.

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He was your brother-in-law?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What business is he in?

Mr. PROFACI. In the beer business.

Mr. HALLEY. In the beer business?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And he went to this place with you?

Mr. PROFACI. He drove me over there.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know a man named Vincent Mangano?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Was he there, too?

Mr. PROFACI. I heard he was there.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you saw him there, didn't you?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. He was arrested there, too, wasn't he?

Mr. PROFACI. I heard he was there, and he disappeared. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Is he a friend of yours today?

Mr. PROFACI. Yes, sir; I know his family.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Halley, if I may interrupt, because of an engagement I have in Washington, I have to leave very shortly, and I wonder if Mr. Profaci and his counsel, Mr. Ronayne, would mind if we might conclude our last little press conference, and then continue with this examination, and try to get through with Mr. Profaci this afternoon.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I would suggest this, if it is all right with Mr. Ronayne and Mr. Profaci, that there are some further things I would like to ask him, but there is no rush, and we have promised to have the press conference, so if they are going to be in New York, and don't mind, perhaps we can arrange a conference in my office some day at our mutual convenience, and I promise you that you won't be kept waiting.

Mr. RONAYNE. Well, I am in New York and Mr. Profaci is here. We are at your convenience.

Mr. HALLEY. Of course you realize you are still subject to the subpoena and we can continue it some other time.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, can you continue sometime just informally without me coming back?

Mr. RONAYNE. I don't mind.

Mr. HALLEY. We will have a stenographer present to take the testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Mr. Ronayne.

Mr. HALLEY. That will be all for this time.

Mr. PROFACI. Thank you, gentlemen.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, that will be all for this New York hearing. (Whereupon, at 5 p. m., an adjournment was taken.)

INVESTIGATION OF ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

MONDAY, MARCH 12, 1951

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
ORGANIZED CRIME IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE,
New York, N. Y.

The committee met, pursuant to call of the chairman, at 10 a. m., twenty-eighth floor, United States Courthouse, Foley Square, New York City, N. Y., Senator Estes Kefauver (chairman) presiding.

Present: Senators Kefauver, Tobey, and O'Connor.

Also present: Rudolph Halley, chief counsel; James Walsh, Alfred Klein, Joseph Nellis, David Shivitz, Reuben Lazarus, and Louis Yayner, committee counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. I am sorry that our hearing room is not larger so as to accommodate more people who would like to attend the hearings, but we will have to do the best we can. This is probably the last series of hearings outside of Washington which the Senate Committee Investigating Crime in Interstate Commerce will have an opportunity to hold before our authority expires on March 31. The final closing hearings will be held in Washington during the closing weeks of this month.

We plan to take additional testimony and some suggestions or recommendations from a number of Government witnesses and heads of the executive departments at the hearings in Washington.

It is a great pleasure to have with us this morning two of our fellow Members of the Senate and members of this committee, Senator Herbert O'Connor, sitting on my left, of the great State of Maryland; Senator Charles W. Tobey, of New Hampshire, both very distinguished Members of the United States Senate, who have taken a most active part in the work of this committee.

During the week, on Wednesday, Senator Hunt, from Wyoming, another member of the committee, will be present for the rest of the week, and Senator Wiley, of Wisconsin, will be here during part of our hearings. In his absence his capable administrative assistant, Julius Kahn, is here in the hearing room somewhere.

Also, the committee has invited Senators Lehman and Ives, our colleagues of the State of New York, to sit with us any time they can be here during the hearing.

We are pleased this morning to have with us the United States district attorney, Mr. Irving Saypol, and one of his assistants, Mr. John Foley or Mr. Saypol will be present with us during most of the hearings. Judge Ploscowe, who is the executive director of the American Bar Association Commission, is present. We anticipate that someone representing the Greater New York Crime Commission and district attorneys' offices in New York will be present with us during part of the hearing.

It is quite appropriate, it seems to me, that New York be the scene of our next-to-closing hearing, not because this city is any more crime-ridden than any other city. As a matter of fact, I think considering the population, it is less so; but because, just as everything else in New York is bigger than anywhere in the country, the task of our committee here has proved to be bigger and more complex. However, we have come to New York with a fairly clear picture of the operations of organized crime as they are carried out elsewhere in the United States. We have been engaged in the study of these operations from coast to coast since last May, and I dare say the committee is better equipped to understand and to cope with the problems that are reported by our investigators to exist here than we could possibly had we come earlier in our investigation.

The city of New York is to be congratulated upon having many good and capable public servants and very able, aggressive prosecuting attorneys, who are doing their level best to suppress crime in this great metropolis. In this connection, I want particularly to mention Mr. Frank S. Hogan, the district attorney of New York County, and Miles F. McDonald, the district attorney of Brooklyn, two splendid officials who have been very zealous in their cooperation with the committee, as they have been in their work as public prosecutors.

We have had a great deal of assistance from officials and prosecutors, Federal, State, and local, on whom we have called.

The city is also blessed with an aggressive press, which is particularly aware of crime and has spared nothing to bring it forcibly to the attention of the public so that the people may be on guard against it.

Long before this committee inaugurated its intensive investigation into conditions in New York—in fact, during the last election campaign in the fall of 1950—a number of charges were made against each other by various candidates. Allegations were quite freely made to the effect that there was such a close connection between politics and crime that the committee could not overlook them.

The committee has, accordingly directed its attention to these charges, among other things to be considered here in New York, and we will attempt to discover whether there has been any solid link between organized crime and politics in this area; and more particularly between politicians and criminals engaged in interstate operations.

Some of the political candidates who made these voluble charges a few months ago have taken the position that they do not desire to testify before this committee to substantiate them, inasmuch as they regard the charges as statements made in the course of a political campaign.

Nevertheless, to the extent of its time and facilities, and to the extent that it is within our jurisdiction, the committee has delved into this situation. It is not our function, of course, to dig into purely local matters; it would be presumptuous for us to attempt to duplicate the fine work that is being done along these lines by your district attorneys in New York.

We have called a great many witnesses in anticipation of these hearings. Some of them have been heard in private session, both by the committee at its executive sessions some weeks ago, and by the staff. Because of the limitations of time, it has been necessary to make a choice of witnesses to be heard in open session. This choice has been made on the basis of the value of the individual's testimony and how much it could add to the picture of interstate criminal operations already developed by the committee.

It would be unfortunate indeed if the calling of any particular witness or witnesses, or the committee's failure to call any particular witness, should lead to any unwarranted inference; and the mere fact that a witness has been subpoenaed to appear here should not be taken as inferring any wrongdoing on his part. We have many good citizens, and many public officials, who will appear.

I would like to emphasize at this time, as we have at every previous hearing, that we want to do everything possible to prevent smearing the name or the reputation, or the standing, of any good citizen, and that anyone's name who is mentioned in connection with the testimony at this hearing who feels that the full facts have not been presented, or that he has a grievance, or wants to make any denial or explanation of the testimony that has been brought out, we want to invite him to do so. All they need to do is to get in touch with anyone on the staff of the committee, or with the committee, and in the same session where their name has been mentioned, if it is humanly possible to do so, or on the same day, in any event, we want to give them the full opportunity of being heard. So that when we leave New York we hope that no one will feel that their name has been mentioned and they didn't have a chance to have their say.

Before calling the first witness I would like, on behalf of the committee, to tender our thanks to the judges of the United States district court, particularly Chief Justice John C. Knox, for the use of these facilities for holding our hearings.

I would also like to thank the administrator of the building, Mr. Armand Chankalian, and his assistant, Mr. Miller, for their helpful assistance with the arrangements; and Mr. William A. Carroll, the United States marshal, who has provided us the service of his deputies for all of our hearings, and has served many of our subpoenas; and for others who have assisted us so generously.

We are also grateful for the splendid cooperation of the press of New York throughout our investigation here. The quality and caliber of the newspapers and newspapermen of the press of New York, and of the ladies of the press, is excelled nowhere in the country, and their assistance in our inquiry is deeply appreciated by the committee.

I should like also to thank the radio and television stations of New York for their public service in bringing the committee's activities here and elsewhere to the attention of their vast audience.

A word of appreciation is also due to our untiring chief counsel, Rudolph Halley, who is on the left of Senator O'Connor, who has personally directed the investigation of the committee in New York, and to the untiring and faithful service of the staff of lawyers and investigators and others who are here and who will participate in this hearing—I shan't mention all of their names at the present time—who worked so hard to bring this phase of the committee's inquiry to its culmination. Many and most of the staff members have made personal sacrifices to help us with this inquiry, and we are very grateful.

I am sure that we shall have occasion, before the close of this hearing, to refer more fully to the work of the staff and the lawyers who have assisted Mr. Halley and the committee.

But I did not want the open session to start without an acknowledgment of the committee's deep appreciation.

I understand that during this hearing, as much as we all like to smoke, that we will not be able to. That is, after the witnesses are sworn, this rule will go into effect, Senator Tobey. We will not start the rule immediately. We will have, however, to enforce the no-smoking rule, upon the order of the judge, and, of course, because of the crowded conditions.

I hope that we can keep the temperature here as cool as possible, and have as much fresh air as possible.

It will be our plan to try to get along without having night sessions in New York. Almost everywhere else, we have found it necessary to have sessions during the nighttime.

In this next to the last session, it is good to see so many gentlemen of the press who have been with the committee from coast to coast, and with whom we have enjoyed working all of these long months of this inquiry.

We want it distinctly understood that we have no prosecutive status. This is not a grand jury. We do not want to cause anybody any trouble, if we can help it. We are here to get the facts. We ask the cooperation of the witnesses and of the public in trying to give this Senate committee such facts that we can present the picture to Congress, and upon which Congress can pass legislation.

Before proceeding with the first witness, I wish to call on Senator O'Connor, of Maryland, for any statements or observations he wishes to make.

Senator O'Connor. Senator Kefauver, you have covered so thoroughly and so well, as you always do, this situation that there is nothing left to be said by us, who are, of course, serving under the able leadership of the distinguished Senator from Tennessee. But, by way of postscript, if I may, for double emphasis, the only observations I should like to make are these: That, as has been emphasized, this committee is not expected to delve into every local matter or to undertake the prosecution or the investigation of every local incident, because that is, and must be, left to local enforcement officers. However, we do feel it our duty, for the information of the public, to ascertain whether the facilities of interstate commerce are being used, have been used, for unlawful activities, and that seems to be a field in which profitably we can operate and bring out whatever facts are to be brought out.

While Senator Kefauver indicates that this committee isn't bent on causing trouble for anyone, nevertheless, if trouble must be brought, this committee is not going to shirk its responsibility.

I do, in that connection, Senator Kefauver, think that this is a fact-finding, rather than a fault-finding body in operation, and we have a job to do, and that is whether or not, putting it bluntly, gangsterism in America is to attain supremacy over law-abiding activities, whether or not the criminal class is to have the upper hand over those who are willing to abide by the legal statutes and the mandates which the rest of us feel are easy to live up to, and not have open defiance.

So, Senator Kefauver, I merely wish to say it will be a pleasure and privilege to proceed under your able direction in order to ascertain just what the situation in this great city is.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator O'Connor.

Senator Tobey, considering the fact that he had a campaign last year, has been able to give the committee a tremendous amount of time and always a great amount of encouragement at all times; and I know he will have some observations to make before we get started.

Senator TOBEY. Mr. Chairman, I shall be very brief. I am glad to be associated with you and the Senator from Maryland in this important work. I have followed it as closely as I could. I feel very strongly that the criminal elements in this country do not recognize State lines and State boundaries. Their field is the entire Nation, wherever it leads them, to carry on their dirty work, and even across the water perhaps some criminals from America are still functioning. Time will tell.

But I do want to say this: that we have disclosed in the testimony given here a series of alliances or, rather, mesalliances between criminal interests of this country and certain law-enforcement agencies and offices. And in my judgment we can do no more important, vital, or far-reaching work than to expose this collusion and this corruption between those who are sworn to enforce the law in the interests of the people of this country and the gangsters and criminal interests in America. So we carry on pro bono publico.

[S. Res. 202, 81st Cong., 2d sess.]

RESOLUTION

Resolved, That a special committee composed of five members, two of whom shall be members of the minority party, to be appointed by the President of the Senate from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the Senate and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate, is authorized and directed to make a full and complete study and investigation of whether organized crime utilizes the facilities of interstate commerce or otherwise operates in interstate commerce in furtherance of any transactions which are in violation of the law of the United States or of the State in which the transactions occur, and, if so, the manner and extent to which, and the identity of the persons, firms, or corporations by which such utilization is being made, what facilities are being used, and whether or not organized crime utilizes such interstate facilities or otherwise operates in interstate commerce for the development of corrupting influences in violation of law of the United States or of the laws of any State; provided, however, That nothing contained herein shall (1) authorize the recommendation of any change in the laws of the several States relative to gambling, (2) effect any change in the laws of any State relative to gambling, or (3) effect any possible interference with the rights of the several States to prohibit, legalize, or in any way regulate gambling within their borders. For the purposes of this resolution, the term "State" includes the District of Columbia or any Territory or possession of the United States.

SEC. 2. The committee shall select a chairman from among its members. Vacancies in the membership of the committee shall not affect the power of the remaining members to execute the functions of the committee, and shall be filled in the same manner as the original selection. A majority of the members of the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, except that a lesser number, to be fixed by the committee, shall constitute a quorum for the purpose of taking sworn testimony.

SEC. 3. The committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act at such places and times during the sessions, recesses, and adjourned periods of the Senate, to require by subpoena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, to procure such printing and binding, and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words.

SEC. 4. The committee shall have power to employ and fix the compensation of such officers, experts, and employees as it deems necessary in the performance of its duties, but the compensation so fixed shall not exceed the compensation prescribed under the Classification Act of 1949 for comparable duties. The committee is authorized to utilize the services, information, facilities, and personnel of the various departments and agencies of the Government to the extent that such services, information, facilities and personnel, in the opinion of the heads of such departments and agencies, can be furnished without undue interference with the performance of the work and duties of such departments and agencies.

SEC. 5. The expenses of the committee, which shall not exceed $150,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee.

SEC. 6. The committee shall report to the Senate not later than February 28, 1951, the results of its study and investigation, together with such recommendations as to necessary legislation as it may deem advisable. All authority conferred by this resolution shall terminate on March 31, 1951.

The CHAIRMAN. For today the chairman appoints a subcommittee of Senator O'Connor, Senator Tobey, and himself to act as subcommittee of three to hold the hearing today.

During the course of the hearing this week other Senators will be designated to preside. I want to ask Senator O'Connor to preside over the meetings tomorrow, if he will do so.

Now, Mr. Halley, our first witness.

Mr. HALLEY. The first witness, Mr. Chairman, is George Morton Levy.

The CHAIRMAN. Now I would like to ask the gentlemen of the press photographers to take pictures when the witness first starts so as not to interrupt the witnesses too much during the time of their testimony.

Will Mr. Levy take the stand. Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you will give this committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. LEVY. I do.

TESTIMONY OF GEORGE MORTON LEVY, ATTORNEY, FREEPORT, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

Mr. HALLEY. What is your full name, for the record, Mr. Levy?

Mr. LEVY. George Morton Levy.

Mr. HALLEY. And your address?

Mr. LEVY. 86 Smith Street, Freeport, Long Island.

Mr. HALLEY. And what is your occupation?

Mr. LEVY. Lawyer.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you had any connection with the Nassau County Racing Association or the Nassau Trotting Association?

Mr. LEVY. I am president of the Nassau Trotting Association, Inc.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you describe the Nassau Trotting Association and its activities?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know, Mr. Halley, whether you mean—at first, let me make this observation for the record. I am here as a voluntary witness and came on from Florida. I received a telegram, and I read in the paper this morning I had been subpoenaed. That is not so. So I just want the record to be clear on that.

Now as to the trotting corporation, in response to your question, the first corporation was the old Country Trotting Association, which is the owner of the property and the original pioneer of trotting under the pari-mutuel law of the State of New York.

Now, from your question, you mean both—because the Nassau Trotting is a tenant that came into existence as a successor corporation to another tenant known as the Cedar Point Trotting Association.

Mr. HALEY. Now, the old Country Trotting Association does not actually operating racing, does it?

Mr. LEVY. It definitely does.

Mr. HALEY. I thought it owns the track?

Mr. LEVY. It does own the track.

Mr. LEVY. Two corporations operate—if you are speaking of 1950, two corporations operate trotting at different times of the year during dates assigned by the New York State Harness Racing Commission. The old Country Trotting Association, the pioneer and the owner, operated in 1950 for approximately 80 nights. The Nassau Trotting Association, a tenant, operated for approximately, or for definitely, 36 nights.

Mr. HALEY. What is the reason for having different corporations operate on the same track?

Mr. LEVY. Well, there are two separate independent corporations. In other words—do you want me to give you a little history?

Mr. HALEY. Yes; that is exactly what we would like.

Mr. LEVY. I want to be responsive, too.

The old Country Trotting Association in 1940 helped in sponsoring the legislation, the law. We pioneered the trotting in the State of New York. In fact, we were the first pari-mutuel trotting track in America. We started in September, roughly, 1940. We started—and I will try to give you a quick figure—we started first with a capital of $100,000. We soon lost it. We then increased the capital, I think in November of 1940, by another $100,000. That is in the year 1940.

Mr. HALEY. At that point were you operating races or building a track?

Mr. LEVY. Operating races.

Mr. HALEY. On an existing track?

Mr. LEVY. There was an existing—no; we used the premises owned by Roosevelt Field, which premises consisted roughly of two-hundred-odd acres. There was an old automobile race track there to begin with which had a tremendous grandstand; in fact, it extended around there for almost a mile. So we cut down a little of that grandstand in the beginning; we had to build a track; the automobile track was, I imagine—all you gentlemen remember it—that was promoted, I think, by George Preston Marshall, of Washington, and a great many others, and had a distance roughly of a mile or a mile and a half, and there would be tunnels underneath, and then elevations, and what not. It was not a flat strip. They raced on it.

When we came in we tore down a little part of the grandstand, used the balance of the grandstand, and built our trotting track. That is as far as we went, and built the pari-mutuel department, and I think the first year a very small paddock. That was in 1940.

Mr. HALEY. Will you go on with the history?

Mr. LEVY. All right. So in the end of 1940 we, as I say, we had lost our original capital of $100,000; we had an average handle, I think, of roughly $45,000.

MR. HALLEY. May I interrupt you there? Who were the original chief parties in interest?

MR. LEVY. Well, I will give it to you exactly, because all of the names of the subscribers to our stock had to be filed with the New York State Harness Racing Commission. When Elbridge Gerry was the chairman of that commission. He is a nephew of Roland Harriman, who had been interested in trotting for many, many years, and I think a partner over there in Brown Bros., Harriman. Ebby Gerry and I talked about this thing in the very beginning, and I made the suggestion to him, "I have represented Erickson in the past, and I think every dollar of the money that goes in the track should be accounted for, the source, how long the people have had the money, and what not, so there is no question whatsoever."

Along that line, my subscription was combined with Robert Johnson, because he and I promoted the enterprise, which was $25,000. The $25,000 that we put in was borrowed from Frank Stevens, the caterer, and that went into the company.

Now, the other gentlemen who went in, of that first $25,000, as I said, Johnson and I put up $25,000 borrowed from Frank Stevens; Richard H. Brown, who was the third member of the law firm of Littleton & Levy, put up $5,000 for our law firm, independent of the $25,000 that I had borrowed from Frank Stevens.

William Weissman, a lawyer in New York City, who has an office at 1270 Sixth Avenue, put in $15,000.

J. Alfred Valentine, an old-time insurance man down in Nassau County, put in $5,000.

Stuart Iglehard, who lives out there in Westbury, and who actually did the building, the small amount of building originally made, put in $10,000.

One Robert Lester, a friend of one Oscar Roy, who is connected with the Journal of Commerce, invested $10,000. I think he sold his shortly thereafter.

One, Harry G. Star, put in $17,500. Star is a retired department-store executive, I think, out of Stern's department store. He had been a client of mine.

There is a very interesting short story connected with his investment.

He originally subscribed to $35,000. Then his family thought he shouldn't be in the racing business for such a large amount of money. He finally reduced it to $17,500. And then his lawyers—and the lawyers, I think, were Charley Poletti, his firm, Diamond, Rabbey, Poletti, and somebody else, whoever they were—insisted that I personally guarantee him against losses, together with—he wanted a salary, he wanted a number of things.

MR. HALLEY. We don't want the details.

MR. LEVY. Anyway, he invested $17,500, with my written guaranty against losses.

MR. HALLEY. All right.

MR. LEVY. Fred Burge, a local accountant down in Freeport, put in $2,500; and $5,000 was invested by the wife and assistant district attorney, named Albert Dimeo.

MR. HALLEY. In short, you have a list of stockholders who could be presented to the trotting commission and who were to be in every way respectable citizens, upstanding members of the community?

MR. LEVY. Very definitely.

Mr. HALLEY. And on that basis you were able to have laws passed permitting pari-mutuel trotting at the Roosevelt Raceway; is that correct?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I wouldn't say that. The law had been passed at the time we raised our money. The law was passed early in 1940. We organized and raised our money and started in September of 1940.

Mr. HALLEY. But one of the considerations——

Mr. LEVY. Of the commission.

Mr. HALLEY. Presented to the legislature was that any racing would be handled under the scrutiny of a commission and by persons of unquestionable integrity; is that correct?

Mr. LEVY. Well, that would be implied by the appointment of the commission, to scrutinize the integrity of the applicants; certainly.

Now, the second end of the original subscription—when we lost our first $100,000 was put up by very few men too. Ten thousand dollars was put up by Edward C. Bruns, the oldest member of the New York Stock Exchange. And all the stock exchange that I may refer to here came through Bob Johnson, who is connected with E. F. Hutton & Co. and a member of the New York Stock Exchange.

George Motz, a garageman who had the Ford agency at Mineola, put in $4,000.

Reuben Smith, who ran a dairy business at Amityville and at Rockville Center, Long Island, put in $5,000.

One George C. Burr, a lithographer and manufacturer and a member of the Weekly Hills Golf Course and a resident of the vicinity, put in $7,000.

Robert C. Hill, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, put in $5,000.

Katherine S. Manning, who was the widow of Louis Manning, who was the pioneer out in Roosevelt Field, put in $5,000.

One, Walter S. Horn, who is the vice president of Burlington Mills, the textile concern, put in $5,000.

Alfred V. Kinsley, who resided at Westbury and was secretary to Alfred Vanderbilt, put in $4,000.

Edward B. Thompson, the president of the First National Bank of Freeport, through me, put in $3,000.

Walter S. McGann, who was associated in my office in New York, put up $10,000; but it was not his money. The money was the money——

Mr. HALLEY. Just the name.

Mr. LEVY. Well, Walter S. McGann.

Mr. HALLEY. Whose money was it, without giving us the actual details?

Mr. LEVY. The money was the money of William P. McDonald, a contractor in Flushing whom I represented at that time. He wanted the stock in McGann's name.

Dave Holman, $3,000; an assistant district attorney and a long-time resident of Nassau.

Mortimer M. Mahoney, the original pari-mutuel manager of pari-mutuel tracks, put in $12,000.

Murray Becker, a lawyer of New York City, an old friend of mine, $5,000.

Henry B. Clark, a client of Bright D. A., down in the stock exchange, put in $5,000.

Donna L. Jones, who is the wife of James Jones, the photo-finisher man, put in $5,000.

John A. Sisler, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, put in $5,000.

Martin V. W. Hall, a long resident of Nassau, put in $3,000. He was president of the Hempstead Bank, That is, Hempstead, Long Island.

Three thousand dollars was put in by Fred Norman, who is the manufacturer in New York City and a friend of George Motz, the Ford agent I referred to.

And J. Alfred Valentine put in another $1,000.

Mr. HALLEY. Who actually ran the company?

Mr. LEVY. Well, the company is run by its directors and executive committee, which functions in between meetings of the board of directors; and the general manager, from the inception, has been J. Alfred Valentine.

Mr. HALLEY. What has been your connection with the track?

Mr. LEVY. I have been general counsel of the track. I helped in writing the law. As far as that is concerned, I helped considerably in getting these finances and in connection with the actual running of the track; I mean, we were all pretty green hands at that time as to the operation of a trotting track; we didn't know too much about it.

I would say that Valentine knew more about the horse end than any of us. Johnson knew very little about it. I think we all contributed.

I became chairman of the executive committee in later years.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you become chairman of the executive committee?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I can't give you the exact year. I wanted to get my records, as I discussed with you. But I would say within a few years after the inception of the track.

Mr. HALLEY. But 1942 or 1943?

Mr. LEVY. No, I don't think by 1942 or 1943. Mr. Halley. I think it was a little later than that.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you begin to take an active part in the management?

Mr. LEVY. Well, active part in the management; I think we all took more or less an active part in the management practically at all times. But I spent much more time at the track, I would say, after the dissolution of the law firm of Littleton & Levy; I think that was in 1942. I think I became chairman of the executive committee probably around 1945, 1946; somewhere in there.

Mr. HALLEY. But even prior to that you had had a good deal to do with the running of the track?

Mr. LEVY. Oh, yes; yes. As a matter of fact, I considered it my baby. I promoted the thing; I had worked on the thing. And I don't mind telling you, when we needed money, there were loans put up by us fellows. We put up $30,000 on one occasion in 1942.

Remember, the war was on. Dim-out restrictions were on; and, under the orders of Chairman Downing, of the commission, we had to close 30 minutes before the so-called meridian line of darkness.

That was fixed by General Drum over here, I think—not in Staten Island—one of these places around here, anyhow.

So, if he fixed 8:15 as a meridian line of darkness, Chairman Downing insisted we close 30 minutes ahead of that time, with the result that, instead of operating in the night time in darkness, we attempted in 1942 to operate at 5:30 in the afternoon. It was fatal.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it about that time that you moved over to Yonkers?

Mr. LEVY. No; the following year. I will come to that.

Mr. HALLEY. How did that happen?

Mr. LEVY. Let me just finish.

Mr. HALLEY. Go right ahead.

Mr. LEVY. In 1942, I think it was a Wednesday or a Thursday, we were out of money; all of these fellows that I have indicated to you in whole or in part were making loans, $5,000, $3,000; the proposition looked completely dead. As a matter of fact, the journalists, the newspaper reporters, I think, had a contest whether we lasted a week or two or 6 days or what not.

In any event, I would try and give a pep talk, somewhat like a college coach: "It is bound to come, boys. We have a great sport, and the people will finally take hold of it."

And I think I was more or less regarded as a lunatic, to be frank with you, in trying to keep the thing together.

But, in any event, on a particular survey, we figured we needed 30,000 to last until the following Tuesday or Wednesday. That money was advanced. I took 10,000, Ballantine put up ten or fifteen thousand, and Reuben Smith took the rest.

Mr. HALLEY. That was in 1942?

Mr. LEVY. Yes, 1942.

We went over to Edward D. Thompson, chairman of the civilian defense, to change the meridian line of darkness to 30 minutes before we had to close, and he talked to General Drum, and they moved the hour up, the line of darkness was moved up 20 or 25 minutes.

That allowed us to start at 6:30 instead of 5:30. The net result of that was that instead of being in the red every single night, we would be in the black two or three hundred.

In any event, we were moving out of the red.

Mr. HALLEY. It wasn't a money-making proposition, at least through 1942; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. It was a definitely losing proposition, for much longer than that.

You asked me about 1943?

Mr. HALLEY. 1943.

Mr. LEVY. In 1943, due to the restrictions on the transportation of horses and other restrictions on passengers and trains, and what not, and New York City busses, Governor Dewey's secretary, a Mr. Hagerty, called the representatives of the tracks. When I say the tracks, at that time there were three different tracks, trotting tracks, operating in the State of New York. There was one at Saratoga, which was owned by one Frank Wiswall and Ellis Wiswall, and I think Harrison had an interest in it, and the Buffalo track, and one at Batavia, and our track, and we were called in and given an opportunity to conduct trotting in one place, one place only, and Yonkers was the suggested place, at Empire City.

Following conferences with Luke O'Brien, the general manager of Empire City, who said that if Empire was allowed to have the so-called combination meet to conduct itself, that the Hambletonian had to go with it—I didn't know Mr. Cane at that time, and that is when I first met Mr. Cane, who had the Hambletonian at Goshen—well, finally arrangements were made between Cane and the others to have the Hambletonian there, and for the other tracks to operate the meet at Yonkers. That was in the daytime. It could not go in the nighttime—for approximately 30 days, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. And your track joined in that?

Mr. LEVY. We did.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you have anything to do specifically with the operation yourself?

Mr. LEVY. Well, not directly with the operation of the track. I was there very often.

J. Alfred Ballantine, our general manager, was the keyman in the combined meet in 1943.

Under the written articles there, Mr. Harriman had his man, Ellis Gilmore, proposedly as the manager, and Dunnigan had a young Jimmy Dunnigan, and, as I say, the actual operation was conducted by Ballantine.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there anybody who had supervision over all three associations, any general arbiter?

Mr. LEVY. You mean in this particular meet?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. I think probably everybody deferred to Valentine, on the theory that he knew more about it than anybody else.

Mr. HALLEY. Did the commission have much to do with it, the harness commission?

Mr. LEVY. Yes. Mr. Downing, the chairman of the commission, was there every day, I think.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were the other persons on the commission who were active at that time?

Mr. LEVY. At that time, I am not sure. You see, Mr. Gerry resigned when he went into service, and that left two members of the commission, a Mr. Newton, from Buffalo, and Ben Downey, from Nassau County, and then—

Mr. HALLEY. What was Mr. Newton's full name?

Mr. LEVY. Jacob Newton. He was a banker and farmer up around Buffalo, and the way they worked that, he more or less supervised the track in his particular neck of the woods, and Downing took care of his, and the middleman, I think, took care of Batavia and Saratoga.

I am not sure whether at that time—I think Mr. Henry James was a commissioner, Henry James, of Hudson, N. Y., who is a banker and newspaper publisher. He, at the present time, is the commissioner.

I think he was then, but I am not sure whether Mr. Newton, in 1943—I think Mr. Newton was the commissioner then, too.

I think the three commissioners were active.

Financially speaking, the net result was, in the actual operation for the whole four tracks—I think there was about 3,000 profit.

Mr. HALLEY. Who owned the track at that time?

Mr. LEVY. The Butler family.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were they?

Mr. LEVY. Well, all I know, James Butler and his mother and members of the family—I don't know who they are.

Mr. HALLEY. Who represented them in the operation?

Mr. LEVY. They weren't represented in the operation. They were in no way interested in the operation.

Following Mr. Haggerty's request, they agreed to let us use the property. I think there was a requirement of some small donation to charity, but that really amounted to the rent, and it was very, very small. So that the rent was small, and a few thousand was the operating profit.

But the net situation over the country was—because we had a lease for Roosevelt Field—the net result of that operation was that we owed our rent at the end of 1943, and a little had accumulated from 1942, so I think we entered the year 1944 owing about $85,000, outside of what we owed to our own individual stockholders, with the $200,000, originally, pretty well absorbed.

Mr. HALLEY. Where did you go from 1944?

Mr. LEVY. We came back to our own grounds.

Mr. HALLEY. Who operated on your grounds? What company?

Mr. LEVY. In 1944—take the following year—Old County Trotting Association was the only trotting operator of the pari-mutuel track at Roosevelt Raceway. We were the only operator that year.

Mr. HALLEY. When did the Nassau Association come back in?

Mr. LEVY. Well, it hadn't been in up to now. It wasn't a question of coming back in.

In 1945, the Cedar Point Trotting Association was formed, led by a man named Andrew West, a contractor.

He had been going to the commission for a year before that, making applications for a license to trot, more in letter form than officially, and he had a little piece of property down near the Cedarhurst depot, around 26 or 28 acres, wholly inadequate for a trotting tract. But he was constantly a little in our hair, making these applications and what not, and the commission had ruled that we had to have two separate meets at our track, one in the spring and one in the fall, so we were close in the center part, and we arranged with Weston to take a lease on the property, and that was when Weston Cedar Point Trotting Association came into existence, in 1945; and he operated for 24 nights in the midseason of 1945.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, would you trace out the history of the trotting at Roosevelt from there on?

Mr. LEVY. Well, the following year the Nassau Trotting Association came into existence. It came into existence, and Weston was an elderly man, not feeling too well, and he indicated he wanted to follow spring meets, in which he was interested, and he was given a later date, on our normal season, and the sale of the assets of Cedar Point was made then to the Nassau Trotting Association in 1946. That was when the Nassau Association was formed.

Mr. HALLEY. And Nassau had continued to operate at Roosevelt Raceway ever since?

Mr. LEVY. That's right, as a tenant of Old Country.

Mr. HALLEY. And you are chairman of the executive committee of Nassau?

Mr. LEVY. No, I am president.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you become president?

Mr. LEVY. I became president as a result of some action in the year 1949.

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to that you had been chairman of the executive committee?

Mr. LEVY. I had never held any official position in the Nassau Trotting Association until I, as a compromise candidate, you might call me, became president in October or November of 1949.

Mr. HALLEY. Which one of the companies were you chairman of?

Mr. LEVY. The Old Country, the first, the pioneer association. I was chairman of that executive committee from 1945 or 1946 on. I may be mistaken about that. I am not sure.

Mr. HALLEY. In your capacity as chairman of the one company, did you also purport to direct the operation of the other?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I wouldn't say I purported to. Under the conditions of the lease—I don't want to take too much time—but we, as the landlord, figured a tenant corporation coming in, we wanted to have some supervision of their activities, because if anything happened wrong in there, it would seem that it would be blamed or attributed to us, and we had at this time a considerable investment, so, under the provision of the lease, we controlled certain elements of their operations, such as their labor relations; that they had to accept our union contracts. I mean that we had made different contracts for different trades and classification of labor.

They had to follow whatever parking arrangements were made. They had to contribute to our advertising company, with an opportunity to go over the budget. In other words, strict matter of operation. On purses, we reserved the right to be the sole dictator of the purses, but with the limitation that they would not be apt to pay any more than we had paid in purses.

Mr. HALLEY. Had Old County Trotting Association been, in effect, in control of the property since the inception?

Mr. LEVY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. As the owner of the track?

Mr. LEVY. First as the tenant and then as the owner.

Mr. HALLEY. And would have control over such questions as the policing of the track and the permission of bookies to operate there, and such?

Mr. LEVY. Yes, in a way, except when Nassau was operating. During that period of time, if they recommended any changes of policing or what not, nobody would have the slightest objection. But I would say usually—I don't recall any instance of a variation—they took our racing secretary, they took our publicity department, our parimutuel crew, our admission crew, and our police crew. So we went right along. Say we stopped on a Saturday. They walked in on Monday, and the same crew that worked for us worked for them.

Mr. HALLEY. It is the same operation as far as the public would see it; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. That's right, except for the official monetary interests, which was a different one. For all outward purposes, it would be the same operation; that's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did a time come in 1946 when you had difficulty because the track was plagued with bookies?

Mr. LEVY. We certainly did. Do you want me to narrate it?

Mr. HALLEY. Would you like to narrate it in your own way? Go ahead.

Mr. LEVY. I will respond to your questions or narrate it, whichever you say.

Mr. HALLEY. I will ask questions, but if you would like to tell it in narrative form, you may.

Mr. LEVY. I think I know the instance you referred to.

Mr. HALLEY. Go right ahead.

Mr. LEVY. All right. In 1946, we had a police department, I would say—a private police department—of 75 men, roughly. It was headed by one Felix De Martini. De Martini had been, I think, a sergeant-lieutenant in the New York Police Department for many, many years.

Senator TOBEY. Did that “De” stand for “dry”—Martini?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know, Senator. I think it's “P,” anyhow, Senator.

And he had been, as I say, a sergeant-lieutenant in the New York City Police Department, and he had retired—no charges, or anything of that kind. I think any investigation will show he had a splendid record, and worked in his private detective agency for many years for the district attorneys of Nassau County, Suffolk County, upstate counties, and a great many other counties, I think, including Kings County. He was the man in charge of our private police department which had some men out of the Pinkerton service, retired cops, and so forth and so on.

Mr. HALLEY. How long had he been there?

Mr. LEVY. He had been there ever since we started; I would say he may have come a year later, but almost from the inception of the track.

Mr. HALLEY. That would be 1940 or 1941?

Mr. LEVY. 1940; I think he came in then. Whether or not he had much of a police department in 1940, when things were bad financially, I doubt. But certainly from 1942 on, I believe Felix De Martini was there, and maybe in 1941.

Well, in any event, he has the 75 men working for him. Now, the commission is represented by the State steward and by Chairman Benjamin Downing of the commission. He was chairman of the New York State Harness Racing Commission.

Mr. HALLEY. Who was the State steward?

Mr. LEVY. The State steward at that time—Doc Wade has been there the last 3 or 4 years—I think it was Dr. Pierce.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his full name, do you remember?

Mr. LEVY. Dr. Walter Pierce I think was the State steward at that time, and Dr. Pierce comes from Massachusetts, and the last 4 or 5 or 6 years he has been handling the Saratoga track and the Buffalo track. He hasn't been down to our track, I think, in the last 4 years.

Mr. HALLEY. How long has he been at your track?

Mr. LEVY. Pierce, I think, was there the last couple of years and then he was assigned to other tracks, as they came into existence. We pioneered this thing.

Mr. HALLEY. Go right ahead.

Mr. LEVY. Now, as I say, in 1946 a crew of about 75 men, and the commission had another dozen sponsors, or 8, 10, or 12—I don't know. Those sponsors are supposed to report the existence of touts, and gamblers, and what not, inspect the barns, the horses, the grooms, and what not—in other words, to observe regularity and decency in a track as well as it can be conducted.

They in no way reported to management—these inspectors. They reported to Chairman Downing.

Now, there came a time—I came out of the hospital in 1946 and shortly thereafter, when I got over to the track, Chairman Downing was at me almost every minute, "These bookmakers must be eliminated. We are not going to stand for them."

"Well," I says, "Commissioner, where are they? Where did you get the report? Let's send for De Martini."

He says, "Well, I don't mean this in injustice to De Martini," but he apparently suspected that De Martini was in league or in cahoots with the gamblers, whoever they were, and I said, "I can't believe that. This man is a very honorable fellow and I just don't believe it exists."

Mr. HALLEY. Is that your view, in addition to what you told the commissioner?

Mr. LEVY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that your personal view?

Mr. LEVY. Very definitely.

Mr. HALLEY. That you wouldn't believe that your private police force could be in cahoots with the gamblers?

Mr. LEVY. I wouldn't say that none of them were, Mr. Halley. I am not going to say that. I don't believe the man at the head was in any conceivable way.

Mr. HALLEY. You wouldn't believe that it could possibly be their policy to be in cahoots with the gamblers?

Mr. LEVY. Well, are you speaking of the majority or a minority or what? It might very well be that a few of those policemen were in cahoots.

Mr. HALLEY. I am talking about the official police of the police force.

Mr. LEVY. In my opinion, definitely not in cahoots—any official police.

Mr. HALLEY. And that would be the orders from the management?

Mr. LEVY. Very definitely.

Mr. HALLEY. To keep——

Mr. LEVY. It was to the interest of every pari-mutuel track to keep every gambler away.

Mr. HALLEY. To keep every bookie out?

Mr. LEVY. Certainly. The minute a bookie goes in and he takes any business, he hits our pocketbook, hits our morale. There is the danger of corruption of the horsemen. Any pari-mutuel manager that doesn't want to keep bookies out should be sent to a lunatic asylum.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever taken the position that bookies should be allowed in?

Mr. LEVY. Allowed in?

Mr. HALLEY. To the track?

Mr. LEVY. I never have.

Mr. HALLEY. To any track?

Mr. LEVY. You mean to operate and do business?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. To any track that you ever had anything to do with?

Mr. LEVY. Never, at any time.

Mr. HALLEY. Go right ahead.

Mr. LEVY. In the course, then, of this conversation, Chairman Downing is convinced that we are infested with bookmakers, and it is almost a phobia with him. Every night, every second, or every third night, and I had to get De Martini and he says, "Where are they? We can't find them." There were about a dozen complaints at least, on the part of the commissioner, that our place was infested with bookies. Finally one night we were at the track and Chairman Downing this night was beside himself with rage, and he got me—he was talking to Littleton, my old law partner, who came on from Chicago to visit me at the time—he was talking to him and he sent for me.

He says, as far as I can quote him, "George, these bookmakers have got to stop. If it doesn't stop," he says, "I'm going to take your license away."

"Well," I says, "Ben, your inspectors keep telling you that our place is saturated with bookmakers. Why don't they make an arrest?"

He said, "They haven't any such powers." He said, "You know what the law is." And there is an isolated provision in the racing board which Chairman Downing loved to harp on, to the effect that a track was authorized to hire private policemen, I think not less than five, or something of that kind, and they were authorized to preserve order, eliminate bookies, and they had the same powers as the old, ancient constables had under the constitution—I mean the State of New York.

He said, "It's up to your private police department and management to protect it and preserve it."

So I said, "What about the State of New York? They get the revenue out of this; they have the State troopers and what not," and he said, "That's not their function at all."

"Well," I says, "we are paying out this kind of money"—I have forgotten what it was, because we have paid out since our inception almost $700,000 to police our track, almost $700,000, right up to date on that figure, and what the 1946 figure was, I have it here and I can give it to you when I look for any papers that you may want, and I said, "What can we do?"

He says, "I don't care what you do. It's got to stop or I am revoking your license."

This talk goes on, and Littleton gets into this dispute until, I should say, 1:30 or 2 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. HALLEY. It was your view that there were no bookies on the track?

Mr. LEVY. I beg your pardon?

Mr. HALLEY. It was your view that the track was not being troubled by bookies?

Mr. LEVY. It was my view that no large bookies were there, Mr. Halley; that if there were some isolated "barbers" coming in—I mean handling a little business or something of that kind—that our police were competent or capable of handling that thing. But there were no organized, large bookies at our track. That was definitely my view.

Chairman Downing was of an entirely different view.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Chairman Downing, he is deceased; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. He is deceased, but his widow is still living, and I will come to that in a moment. She knows the entire story, Mr. Halley, because she drove him to the track that night. She drove him to my office the next morning. I have since asked her, and she knows the entire story, except he didn't tell her the name of the man I hired, but said "some racketeer." Do you follow me?

So Commissioner Downing's widow knows the entire story that he gave her, so we will get to the story very quickly. So we know what she is supposed to know.

Mr. HALLEY. Go right ahead.

Mr. LEVY. So, as I say, we argued and debated till the wee hours of the morning and then postponed it till the following morning. I came to the office, I would say, around 10:30—I have a law office in Mineola which is roughly 2 miles from the track.

Chairman Downing came over to the office, and I had gotten to the office early and checked the law to see what his powers were on this threat of revocation, frankly. To my surprise, I found they were enormous. Legal evidence was not necessary at all on a revocation, which meant hearsay, rumor, or what not. Five days' notice was all that was required.

Chairman Downing knew that he had warned us time and time again and I figured the inspectors would take the stand and they would say the place is infested with bookmakers, and our police department would take the stand and say they can't find them, and that isn't much of a defense, and under the rules pertaining to revocation it looked to me as if our license was 95 percent gone if he carried through his threat to revoke it.

So we sat down with it and again went over all the different phases.

"What do you want us to do? What can we do?" We had spent 5 years of struggle and strife in this field, and here we are in jeopardy.

"Well," he says, "I don't care what you do. You have got to keep the bookmakers out of this place."

Mr. HALLEY. Now, that was in the summer of 1946?

Mr. LEVY. This was in 1946, sir, that's right. I don't recall whether it was the end of our spring meet or the beginning of our fall meet, but it was definitely in 1946.

Now, then, Littleton, my former partner, had been district attorney in Nassau County, and Mr. Downing had been president of the grand jury association and foreman of the grand jury, oh, any number of times. So they get into the question, "How do district attorneys get evidence? How do they get convictions and indictments in matters of gambling and what not?" And Littleton, who had been in charges of vice in Nassau County as assistant district attorney, went into how they hired stooges and men of that type and what not, because the police finally were known to the gamblers and lost their usefulness after a reasonable period of time, and he suggested—he and Littleton finally got off on the undercover men and men of that type, and I listened for probably a half hour to this general debate.

I said, "I don't think that would do any good. In the first place, who is going to select all these undercover men? Who are they going to report to? They may cause more trouble than we got at the present time, Commissioner."

Mr. HALLEY. Don't most tracks use the Pinkertons?

Mr. LEVY. Oh, I forgot that. I suggested that to Commissioner Downing. It wouldn't be fair to the Pinkerton agency for me to tell you what he thought of it. We had them in 1943 in Yonkers. So I would rather not be directed to give his opinion of Pinkerton. But he didn't want them, wouldn't have them.

Mr. HALLEY. You did suggest the Pinkertons?

Mr. LEVY. I certainly did. I suggested anything, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. And what did Commissioner Downing say?

Mr. LEVY. No; he didn't want the Pinkertons, definitely. He cited the experience in Yonkers in 1943 when we did have them, and he went into that experience in Yonkers in 1943.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the experience in Yonkers in 1943?

Mr. LEVY. Well, he thought there were bookmakers up there, and frankly I don't know whether it was right or wrong, and I don't like to injure a very well-known detective agency, but he thought they were in cahoots with the gamblers.

Mr. HALLEY. And what did you think?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I frankly knew very little about them. They were all strangers to me. But I doubted it. I didn't see where he had much evidence, frankly, to support his suspicion.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you feel that the Pinkertons did let gamblers into the track?

Mr. LEVY. Well, it was so few customers that we had there, I can't imagine any gamblers, frankly, wanting to come up there. The handle was so ridiculously small.

Mr. HALLEY. In 1943 you did not oppose the Pinkertons?

Mr. LEVY. Oh, no.

Mr. HALLEY. Is that right?

Mr. LEVY. I never opposed the Pinkertons. I mean, I don't subscribe to his ideas of the Pinkertons any more than I subscribed to his conclusion on Felix De Martini down at our track.

Mr. HALLEY. He never told Downing—you didn't tell Downing at any time you didn't want the Pinkertons around?

Mr. LEVY. Well, when it came to the subject of Pinkertons it was more diplomatic to listen to the commissioner, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Please answer the question. Did you ever tell the commissioner that you didn't want the Pinkertons?

Mr. LEVY. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Or did you ever tell that to anyone else?

Mr. LEVY. No. I may have told some of our directors, or what not, that we couldn't have the Pinkertons on account of Commissioner Downing's opinions or conclusions, but never as far as I am concerned.

Mr. HALLEY. If you told anybody you couldn't have the Pinkertons, the reason would be that Commissioner Downing felt that they were letting bookies onto the track?

Mr. LEVY. That's right. We couldn't have them anyhow. He just wouldn't have the Pinkertons. From 1943 on he had a phobia against the Pinkertons.

Mr. HALLEY. You personally had no objection to the Pinkertons?

Mr. LEVY. I had no objection to Pinkertons at all. I mean, I know nothing about them except the short experience in Yonkers. I was only there approximately 2 or 3 days.

Mr. HALLEY. First let us take your experience in Yonkers. During the Yonkers meet, or during the year 1943, when you were operating in Yonkers, did you have any objection to the Pinkertons?

Mr. LEVY. I personally, no.

Mr. HALLEY. And you never expressed any objection to anyone?

Mr. LEVY. Well, again I repeat that it may be in talking to some of our men who said, "Why not have Pinkertons?" I might have said, "No; Chairman Downing won't have them." That might have been said. I don't recall.

Mr. HALLEY. But you certainly expressed no objection of your own to the Pinkertons?

Mr. LEVY. No. I knew very little about them, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. And you had no personal objection to them?

Mr. LEVY. Not at all; no personal objection on my part except a reflected objection to the commissioner, that I knew he wouldn't have them.

Mr. HALLEY. But despite the fact that he didn't like them in 1943, you again suggested them in 1946?

Mr. LEVY. I was suggesting anything, Mr. Halley. I was trying to work out a solution to a man threatening to revoke our license.

Mr. HALLEY. Anything he stated would be all right with you?

Mr. LEVY. Anything that would appease him would have satisfied me. The devil would have suited me.

Mr. HALLEY. What happened next?

Mr. LEVY. All right. So that we get in the next morning at my office. I had gotten to the point where Littleton had made the suggestion to use undercover men, and what not, and I said, "I don't think that would do any good," and I am trying to get a solution that might appease him.

I said, "I don't know, but there is a man that has a reputation of having influence with gamblers, and that man is Frank Costello. Whether he will take it or not, he is the only man I know that has that reputation. Now, will that be satisfactory to you, Commissioner?"

Well, the name—he had heard of Costello, he had read about him, apparently, and he says, "Why, I think that would be a good idea. I think that is fine."

I said, "All right; I will meet him and see if I can get him."

He said, "Now, wait a minute. Who is going to pay him?"

"Well," I says, "that's kind of incidental."

He said, "I don't want the organization to pay him. I don't think that's fair."

I said, "Commissioner Downing"—and I might say here at this time, I personally have a contract with Old Country Trotting Association wherein I receive 10 percent of the profits before taxes, as a consideration of all the promotional work and working for free for a long time until it was in a prosperous condition, ratified by the stockholders and so forth.

I says, "Commissioner Downing, if you are right, and I don't think you are, but if you are right that we are being infested with book-makers, then my personal income is grievously affected, and I will be very happy to pay him, and I will pay him by check, too."

He says, "Oh, yes. I want you to pay him by check. I don't want any irregularities at all."

I says, "All right."

I saw Costello within a day or two after that—

Mr. HALLEY. Before you go ahead with this discussion of Mr. Costello, Mr. Littleton was present at that time, was he not?

Mr. LEVY. Mr. Littleton was present—I might say, Mr. Halley, he is in New York at the present time and would be very glad to appear before your commission. I can give you his telephone number. He is staying with our president, Robert Johnson, in an establishment here.

Mr. HALLEY. I have his statement here, and if it is necessary to get him and if you feel that it is necessary to have his testimony in connection with yours, you may make the suggestion to the committee. At this point it may not be necessary.

Mr. LEVY. Well, I say that the committee is here and he is available for you if you want him.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, it is a question whether his testimony would add anything.

Mr. LEVY. Well, if you want my opinion, I think it would, and I would be glad to have him, but it may be—I don't want to direct you, I know you have got an awful lot of work to do—

Mr. HALLEY. Why don't you wait until you are finished and see if we need it?

Mr. LEVY. All right, perfectly O. K. Pardon the interruption. Now, as I again said—

Mr. HALLEY. I was asking a question. May I go ahead?

Mr. LEVY. Pardon me.

Mr. HALLEY. Mr. Littleton did make a statement in writing, and he tells a story approximately the way you do, but he points out that at the outset Downing did not know who Costello was exactly, and you explained to him. I will read the statement:

Downing wanted to know who it was he referred to, and Levy told him Frank Costello. At that time Costello had not achieved the notoriety he now has. I am not sure Downing knew at that time fully who Costello was until George Levy told him he was a reputed bookmaker and he could bring influence to bear on the bookmakers to keep them off the track.

Is that right?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I don't recall that he didn't know him. It seemed to me when I mentioned the name that he had heard of him, I mean by reputation. My recollection on the point is not exactly the same as Mr. Littleton's. It may be that I explained who he was. I mean, I don't recall. But in any event, whether I explained it or I didn't explain it, I mean, he soon knew who Costello was and recognized he had read about him or heard about him in some way.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, there had been a very widely advertised proceeding in connection with the nomination of Judge Aurelio for the supreme court in New York in 1943, had there not?

Mr. LEVY. Was that as far back as '43? The Aurelio thing certainly was well publicized. I don't recall the date.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes, 1943. And certainly by 1946 Costello's name was pretty widely known in New York, was it not?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I thought so, Mr. Halley; yes, as I say, and I thought he knew it, too.

Mr. HALLEY. Hadn't Mayor LaGuardia been issuing press statements about Costello year in and year out during his term of office as mayor?

Mr. LEVY. I think almost annually he would issue a statement that he was a bum, or a tinhorn, or something of that kind.

Senator TOBEY. That wasn't an exaggerated statement, was it?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know. I am not here to debate it, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, you had known Frank Costello personally for many years, had you not?

Mr. LEVY. Yes, I had. That is the reason I mentioned his name. He is the only one having that type of reputation that I knew.

Mr. HALLEY. What type of reputation?

Mr. LEVY. Well, as I have stated, he had a reputation of having influence with gamblers.

Mr. HALLEY. But you knew him well enough to know whether he had influence?

Mr. LEVY. I had nothing of the kind. I never was his confidant. Let us understand it. I never handled his business arrangements; I don't know what his income was, its source, legitimate or illegitimate or anything about it.

Mr. HALLEY. How often did you play golf with him?

Mr. LEVY. I played golf with him many times.

Mr. HALLEY. Two and three times a week?

Mr. LEVY. I wouldn't say that often. I probably played golf with him a hundred times.

Mr. HALLEY. Over a period of years?

Mr. LEVY. Over a period of years.

Mr. HALLEY. Was it two or three times a week, would you estimate?

Mr. LEVY. It might have been for a short period, a month. I might have played two or three times a week with him. He certainly didn't discuss his business with me on the golf course.

Mr. HALLEY. And you knew him for a great many years?

Mr. LEVY. I had known him for 20 or 25 years; that's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Frank Costello has mentioned and vigorously maintained that, whatever reputation he has, it is not deserved; isn't that a fact?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I know that he has maintained it. He has maintained it to me. I don't know whether it is deserved or it isn't deserved. As far as that's concerned, I will say this: he got a nine on a golf hole. He certainly said he had a nine. I have had other opponents, I mean, with little breaches of recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. I am talking about any reputation he may have had as a man with great influence over the underworld.

Mr. LEVY. Well, he claimed to me, Mr. Halley, that his reputation has been given to him by newspapers, magazines; a most unfair thing in the world. And I know nothing personally, I mean, to differ.

When I suggested him to Commissioner Downing, I suggested him on the basis of his reputation, not on the basis of anything I knew personally at all.

Mr. HALLEY. But you knew Frank Costello; he was your friend, was he not?

Mr. LEVY. Yes; he was my friend.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you not believe him when he told you that he personally had no influence?

Mr. LEVY. Many times I believed him, and many times I doubted it.

Mr. HALLEY. What was your opinion when he told you that he had no influence with bookmakers?

MR. LEVY. Frankly, I don't know whether he had or he did not.

SENATOR O'CONNOR. In Mr. Littleton's statement which was read to you, and which you didn't respond to one portion of, Mr. Littleton quoted you as having said to Mr. Downing that Costello did have influence with the bookmakers. Did you make that statement?

MR. LEVY. I did not. I said he had the reputation of having influence with them. Anything I knew Mr. Costello, I mean, in the off, was or is completely the result of reputation of stories read.

MR. HALLEY. May I add this, Mr. Levy: Mr. Littleton said, and his memory may not have been inaccurate, but he said that "I am not sure Downing knew at the time fully who Costello was until George Levy told him he was a reputed bookmaker." Did you say that?

MR. LEVY. I don't think I said that. I think I said very definitely that he has the reputation of having influence with gamblers. That is my definite recollection in regard to what I said.

MR. HALLEY. But were you deceiving Mr. Downing? That is important. Were you deceiving Mr. Downing?

MR. LEVY. I certainly was not. If I am deceiving Mr. Downing, I would say you gentlemen are deceiving the world.

MR. HALLEY. Well, if you were not deceiving Mr. Downing, you must have disbelieved Frank Costello when he said he had no associations with bookmakers and didn't know them?

MR. LEVY. Mr. Halley, I made the statement that he had the reputation of being influential with gamblers. I still say the same thing. That statement was definitely true.

MR. HALLEY. Is it your opinion that he was influential with gamblers?

MR. LEVY. That is a very hard thing to answer, because I don't know. I only know, based, if the newspaper reports are accurate, he must have had influence with them: If they are not accurate, you are asking me for the operation of a mental condition.

MR. HALLEY. Here is a man you knew very well, your close friend; is that not right?

MR. LEVY. Not a close friend; no.

MR. HALLEY. Your golfing companion?

MR. LEVY. Yes; on many occasions.

MR. HALLEY. The man you spoke to very often?

MR. LEVY. Well, on the golf courses and a few other times in between; yes.

MR. HALLEY. A man with whom you had any business?

MR. LEVY. The only business I ever had with Costello, I think, about 15 or 18 years ago he had an income-tax matter in Washington; and I think I went up there and saw some representative of some bureau. And then 4 or 5 years ago he bought a home in Nassau County, and the contractor sent in to our Mineola office, and I think one of our men had the title company make the search.

So, outside of those two instances, I don't recall ever having done any business with him or known anything about his business.

MR. HALLEY. Did you ever discuss business matters with him except for the two instances you have mentioned?

MR. LEVY. Business matters—I don't recall ever having discussed any business matters with him at all.

MR. HALLEY. He never told you his business?

MR. LEVY. He did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever tell him yours?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I guess he knew mine. He knew I was a lawyer practicing law and interested in this trotting track.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, did you ever tell him the details of your business?

Mr. LEVY. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Never?

Mr. LEVY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. You weren't on a basis with Costello that you would tell him the details of your business?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I have got many close friends that I don't tell the details of my business to.

Mr. HALLEY. Please answer the question.

Mr. LEVY. I am answering it.

Mr. HALLEY. No; you have not.

I will ask the stenographer to repeat it.

(Question read as follows: "You weren't on a basis with Costello that you would tell him the details of your business?")

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. You were not?

Mr. LEVY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Had you ever asked his advice about how to run the Roosevelt Raceway?

Mr. LEVY. His advice?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. I don't think so. I don't know what advice he could have given on how to operate the Roosevelt Raceway.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask his advice about the raceway?

Mr. LEVY. I don't recall ever asking it.

Mr. HALLEY. Or about any other race tracks you ever had any connection with?

Mr. LEVY. I don't recall ever asking him for any advice.

Mr. HALLEY. You say you ran races at Roosevelt and I think you said at Yonkers; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask his advice about Yonkers?

Mr. LEVY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Or about any other race track?

Mr. LEVY. None that I can recall.

Mr. HALLEY. Your association with Costello, then, was purely and simply that you would play golf together?

Mr. LEVY. Play golf; I dined with him, too.

Mr. HALLEY. But on a purely social basis.

Mr. LEVY. I think following a golf game I may have dined with him several times.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask his aid in connection with the running of the track?

Mr. LEVY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. At no time?

Mr. LEVY. No; except on this one point that I have referred to.

Mr. HALLEY. And when was that?

Mr. LEVY. That was in 1946, following the talk with Commissioner Downing.

Mr. HALLEY. That was the first time you ever brought Frank Costello into the affairs of the Roosevelt Raceway?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Or any other race track with which you were connected?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. You never prior to that had any relationship with Frank Costello concerning any race track?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. You never sought his advice on how to handle your race-track business?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you never sought his aid?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. On this occasion, then, you saw fit to disbelieve Frank Costello's statements that he had no influence with bookmakers; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. I didn't see fit to disbelieve it or to believe it, Mr. Halley. You asked a very difficult question. His reputation is along one line.

I suggested a name to the chairman of the commission, who was threatening to take away our license, and that seems to be a solution, and I am delighted it is a solution without going into any mind-reading operations in connection with it.

Now, the only question is, Can I get the fellow to promise to do some work?

Mr. HALLEY. You knew Frank Erickson, too, did you not?

Mr. LEVY. Yes; I represented him. Before you turn to the next thing——

Mr. HALLEY. No; we are not going to turn to another thing. But go ahead and make a statement.

Mr. LEVY. No. All I want to add to it is that Chairman Downing is dead. He has been dead since, I think, well, 2 or 3 years ago. But his widow is alive. She lives in Munsey Park, Manhasset, and her telephone number is Manhasset 7-0581. I don't know whether she would want to come down here or not. But certainly you can contact her with my full approval because she has told me that he told her when he left my office the next morning the entire thing, how he was relieved, a solution had been arrived at, and, as he told her—he didn't mention Costello by name. He said, "Levy has hired some racketeer and is paying him himself to try and keep the bookmakers out."

Mr. HALLEY. I have no doubt there was such a conversation with Mr. Downing, so we can just stop worrying about getting corroborative witnesses.

Mr. LEVY. All right.

Mr. HALLEY. I am wondering why you sold Frank Costello to Downing, particularly in view of Mr. Littleton's written statement that he is not sure Downing knew who Costello was, so George Levy told him he was a reputed bookmaker and could bring influence to bear on bookmakers to keep them off the track.

Now, you know very well that Frank Costello maintains he is not a bookmaker and never was one; do you not?

Mr. LEVY. I assume that is true.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know it of your own knowledge?

Mr. LEVY. No, I don't. I know he has told me. I said, "How can they write all these articles about you if something isn't true?"

He says, "I don't know. They take great delight in making these charges"; and he says, "I am not a bookmaker, a gambler." And he said, "I've only got some place in Louisiana."

Mr. HALLEY. You did know Frank Erickson?

Mr. LEVY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. But you didn't ask him to take on the job?

Mr. LEVY. Frank Erickson, in my opinion, has about as much influence as you might have.

Mr. HALLEY. He is a bookmaker.

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. By the way, I am told—not I, but this committee—that this committee has had a great deal of influence in keeping bookies off tracks in the last year, and I think I may have had a thing to do with it.

Mr. LEVY. Splendid. Keep up the good work.

Mr. HALLEY. I don't want to let that go by.

Now, getting back to Erickson, you say he would have no influence with other bookies?

Mr. LEVY. Not in my opinion. They would think he was trying to keep them away so that he could operate alone.

Mr. HALLEY. But they would trust Costello?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know whether they would or would not.

Mr. HALLEY. Is the point that they fear Costello?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know if they fear him, or love him, or what they do.

Mr. HALLEY. Take a guess.

Mr. LEVY. I was looking for a solution. Now, if his newspaper and magazine reputation was true, he had influence arising out of fear, arising out of love, or affection, or what not.

Mr. HALLEY. But a solution was that there was no definite agency or private police force that could accomplish this job; but Frank Costello could get the bookies off the track; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. That's not exactly true, either. I meant the fact is that Downing is of one fixed conviction, and I am of another. If he is right, our police force is doing a very bad job. If he is wrong, our police force might have been doing a splendid job, and his inspectors, whom our police department say were inexperienced men and couldn't recognize a bookmaker or a tout, or some improper character, and whenever they saw two or three people gather and hand money from the three to one other man, and if he went to a window, they thought that man was a bookmaker—according to our police. They attributed—DeMartini—the complaints of the inspectors to inexperience and inability to distinguish between what looked like bookmaking or gambling and what wasn't. So there you are.

You may have had a situation, if DeMartini was right, we had almost no gamblers at our track. If the inspectors and Chairman Downing was right, we had a great many of them there. So primarily, I am trying to settle something that appeases Chairman Downing so that he doesn't initiate a revocation proceeding. That is the first thing I had in mind.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you tell him to appease him? Apparently, he doesn't know very much about Costello.

Mr. LEVY. Now, you say that. My recollection is that when I mentioned Costello and the influence that he had from reputation, Chairman Downing recognized that and said, "I think he would be a good man." That's my recollection.

Mr. HALLEY. After you explained that he had influence with gamblers and racketeers—

Mr. LEVY. Frankly, I don't recall the necessity of explaining. I think he heard of him. Mr. Littleton apparently differs and thinks I explained it. Maybe I did.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, go ahead with the story and let's see what happened then.

Mr. LEVY. Well, the continuation of the situation is that within a day or two I went to Costello, told him the situation, what the commission thought, and the reasons for it; and I said, "I would like to hire you to try and help keep gamblers out of our track."

He outwardly says, "What can I do, if anything?"

Mr. HALLEY. What do you mean when you say he outwardly said it?

Mr. LEVY. Because so as to avoid a number of questions what the operation of his mind was. The words that he expressed to me—he didn't know what he could do.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean he winked when he said it?

Mr. LEVY. No, he didn't wink when he said it; no.

Do you want me to give the conversation or not?

Mr. HALLEY. When, where, and how did the conversation come about, and then let us have it?

Mr. LEVY. I called him within a day or two.

Mr. HALLEY. At his home?

Mr. LEVY. I assume so. I don't recall whether I met him at his home or at the Waldorf. In any event, I gave him the essence of the talk with Commissioner Downing. Then we would struggle on for 5 years here with a track that had been essentially losing money, and we had been beginning to get on our feet, and we got a threat of the revocation of this license, which meant everything to me. And I wanted to enlist his aid in keeping bookmakers or gamblers out of our track.

He said, "I don't know if I can do anything about it, and I will try to do the best I can."

I says, "I will want to pay you."

He says, "There is no necessity to pay. I will do what I can to help you."

I said, "I insist on paying for it."

Mr. HALLEY. Did you say this at the start, or at a later time?

Mr. LEVY. No. I told him I wanted to pay him in that very first interview.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you fix a rate?

Mr. LEVY. I did not. The rate wasn't fixed until the following year.

Now, then, following my talk with him, within 3 or 4 days, or I think almost promptly, I told Commissioner Downing I hired him and was going to pay him myself and pay him by check. Within a day or two after that, Commissioner Downing said, "Apparently he's doing pretty good work. Our inspectors are not making complaints."

What he did or didn't do I don't know. But the complaints started to disappear.

Mr. HALLEY. That, of course, bears on whether Downing was right or wrong in whether or not there were bookies at the track?

Mr. LEVY. That's true.

Mr. HALLEY. It looks as though there were bookies at the track; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know. I still feel if they were, Chairman Downing's inspectors have exaggerated tremendously.

Mr. HALLEY. But they stopped exaggerating the moment, or shortly after, you hired Costello?

Mr. LEVY. That's true.

Senator TOBEY. Mr. Witness, one question: Then, as I listen to the testimony, what the law, represented by the police, the legally constituted and regular authorities to keep these things right down there, could not do, Mr. Costello, with a consideration, could do and did do; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. If Chairman Downing was correct, that would be a reasonable inference.

Senator TOBEY. Well, the result of your errand was that he took the job and committed a fait accompli. He rid the track of the bookies?

Mr. LEVY. The track was rid of them.

Senator TOBEY. The interesting thing to me is that here is a man who isn't noted for being a leading exponent of law and order, and the legally constituted authorities were impotent, and then you go to this man who, by some mumbo-jumbo or strong-arm methods, puts them out of business; is that the picture?

Mr. LEVY. You are starting off with the premise they were there.

Senator TOBEY. You said they were there.

Mr. LEVY. I beg your pardon.

Senator TOBEY. You said the testimony of your associates was that they were there.

Mr. LEVY. You mean Commissioner Downing's opinion indicated they were there, and he had a fixed or an incorrect conclusion on that, or a phobia, one or the other.

Senator TOBEY. Now you testified they left.

Mr. LEVY. I haven't changed my testimony.

Senator TOBEY. But they had to be there in order to leave, didn't they?

Mr. LEVY. I spoke about some complaints, Senator. I said the complaints discontinued. Whether the bookmakers left or didn't leave, whether they were there or weren't there, I don't know. But I do know that the complaints which directly affected us discontinued, sir.

Senator TOBEY. That was cause and effect; wasn't it?

Mr. LEVY. You might be right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, Mr. Levy, you had no further trouble with Mr. Downing's complaints during the remainder of 1946?

Mr. LEVY. No, never did from that time on.

Mr. HALLEY. And then, in 1947, did you ask Mr. Costello to continue his efforts?

Mr. LEVY. Yes. Well, I had said nothing to discontinue or cease it. I had asked him to do it, and I would pay him. I would say between the time I first spoke to him and the time I paid him, in 1947, I had spoken to him four or five times. I wanted to get it settled.

Senator O'CONOR. Wasn't there any discussion of how much it would be?

Mr. LEVY. No.

Senator O'CONOR. Did he indicate what it was worth?

Mr. LEVY. No.

Senator O'CONOR. How much did you pay him?

Mr. LEVY. $60,000, $15,000 a year for 4 years.

Mr. HALLEY. What did he do? Did he ever tell you what he did?

Mr. LEVY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, he had told the committee that he wandered around to a few bars and talked to some people, none of whom he can remember, and he says that all he said that if there were any bookies caught out at the track, they were going to get heavy sentences, and they had better be careful.

Does that sound like $60,000 worth?

Mr. LEVY. When the laughter subsides, I will try to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. Let us have better order in the hearing room, and make no expressions one way or the other.

Mr. LEVY. We haven't gotten the continuation of the story up to the time it was paid.

Mr. HALLEY. Will you answer the question on the floor?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know whether he did $60,000 or 60 cents' worth of work. He did, in my opinion, when his name was satisfactory to Commissioner Downing, and there was no revocation proceeding instituted. The mere hiring of the fellow was invaluable, in my opinion.

Mr. HALLEY. I thought Downing wanted that result—

Mr. LEVY. You are right, you are right. Downing wanted what you say. I wanted the same thing.

Mr. HALLEY. And if the bookies continued, you would have been in trouble with Downing?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. All right, go ahead.

Mr. LEVY. When you say "Go ahead," do you mean—

Mr. HALLEY. You said you had not completed your narrative.

Mr. LEVY. I think the Senator asked me about the payments.

As I said, four or five times I spoke to him in regard to it, and he kept putting it off. He said he would take it up some other time.

Finally came 1947, and additional publicity, directed against Costello, hither, dither, and yon, and I wanted the question settled. I didn't want any large demands made against me, that I couldn't settle, and I wanted the matter settled, and I called him and I asked him if he could meet me down at my office in New York, at 149 Broadway. His lawyer's office was down on Wall Street, just a few blocks away, and we arranged to meet there.

I said, "Frank, I want to tell you what I owe you."

I said, "What do you think is a fair amount?"

He said, "I don't know, I don't know." He said, "You fix it."

Well, I said, "I would rather you fix it."

He said, "No; you fix it."

So I said, "Will $15,000 a year be agreeable?" Two years had gone by, and he said, "That is more than agreeable." So I said, "I will give it to you now."

Mr. Wolf was present, his lawyer, and I wrote out a check for $30,000 and I gave it to him.

The following year—all these payments were made by check, and I have those here. The entries on the stubs are here, and they are all available to the committee.

The following year, in 1948, he was paid the $15,000 in two installments, the first and second half of $7,500. The checks and the stubs show clearly what it was for.

The only time that he asked me for any money was in 1949. I was in Florida, I think in February or March of that year, and I ran into him.

He asked me if I intended to pay him for the year 1949, and I said that certainly I did. I had made a deal with him, and I said I would keep it.

He said, "Would you mind paying me now?"

I said, "Certainly," and I wrote out a check. That was the only nonnumbered check that wasn't right out of my office, you know, and I gave him $15,000.

Senator O'CONNOR. In advance?

Mr. LEVY. That's right. In 1949 he was paid in advance, because the season didn't open until May, and he was paid in February or March; that's right.

Mr. HALLEY. For the record, there is no question that the payments were made and reported by Mr. Costello in his income-tax report?

Mr. LEVY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. The question is, What Mr. Costello did for them, and why they were made?

When did Commissioner Downing die?

Mr. LEVY. Some time in 1948.

Mr. HALLEY. Some time in 1948?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. By that time, had you established that Mr. Costello was performing a continuing service with regard to bookies?

Mr. LEVY. You mean, with Mr. Downing?

Mr. HALLEY. No; with regard to yourself.

Mr. LEVY. Oh, yes. I figured, in 1947, when I arranged to pay him the $30,000, I made a definite commitment to pay him $15,000 a year.

Mr. HALLEY. Forever?

Mr. LEVY. Well, there was no time fixed. There was nothing in writing. I wouldn't say, "forever," and I wouldn't say whether we had 1 year or 2 years in mind. I mean, there was nothing said about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you pay him in 1950?

Mr. LEVY. No; I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Why not?

Mr. LEVY. The reason for that is, in 19—I think the summer of '49, when the Treasury Department made its routine examination of '46 and '47, and these payments appeared that were made to Costello, the Treasury Department thought it was against public policy, or not a necessary and deductible item under the tax laws, and refused to make the allowance.

Mr. HALLEY. When was this?

Mr. LEVY. I would say that was around July or August of 1949. I had already paid him, you see, in February or March, which was rather unfortunate in the light of that situation. He had already been paid. So from that time on, he has never been paid.

Mr. HALLEY. Has he continued to do the job, without pay?

Mr. LEVY. I haven't asked him to do anything further.

Mr. HALLEY. When did you last ask him to do anything for Roosevelt Raceway?

Mr. LEVY. Well, the last time I directly asked him to do anything was way back in 1946, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. But you kept on paying him without asking him to do any more for 4 years; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. I didn't ask him to do anything. He knew what I was paying him for.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether he did anything?

Mr. LEVY. No; I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. You never asked him whether he did anything?

Mr. LEVY. When the results were—there weren't any complaints coming in, I was delighted.

Mr. HALLEY. You had no complaints after the time you talked to Costello?

Mr. LEVY. That is true.

Mr. HALLEY. From then on the track has been free of all bookie trouble?

Mr. LEVY. Well, it has been free of complaints from the Commissioner. We have had gamblers there; in 1950 we probably made 12 or 15 arrests; ejected maybe 30, 40 people. But had no trouble that our private police department couldn't cope with, if I could put it that way.

Mr. HALLEY. To what do you attribute Costello's ability to settle this thing?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know. I don't have any more idea than you have.

Mr. HALLEY. Apparently, he did accomplish something with the bookies; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. Well, again, we have to substitute the inference or conclusion that Chairman Downing was right, and we had him there. If our police department was right, they weren't there.

Mr. HALLEY. You wouldn't say it was pure coincidence that Chairman Downing felt that bookies had ceased to be a problem in a few days after Costello got on the job; could you?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know. It is hard to characterize the operation of Mr. Downing's mind. He was a splendid old man, around 75 years of age, extremely stubborn, and a very honorable man, and extremely conscientious.

Mr. HALLEY. He had complained about bookies up to a certain point?

Mr. LEVY. Yes. He complained almost with regularity in the year 1946, up until the time of my conversation, and up until the time Costello was hired.

Mr. HALLEY. And then he stopped complaining?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And so far as you knew, there was no bookie trouble after that?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Senator O'CONNOR. Mr. Witness, in order that we might have an idea of your opinion to the effect of this Costello's work and the importance of it, without going into all the detail: How did his stipend compare with other salaries at the raceway?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I don't think there were any larger. As a matter of fact, I paid this out of my own pocket.

Senator O'CONOR. I understand.

Mr. LEVY. Suppose we have this right; suppose Chairman Downing was correct.

Senator O'CONOR. You don't mind answering my question directly, first, and then you can make any explanation you wish:

I just want to know how it compared with salaries that you were paying.

Mr. LEVY. I would say the lowest-priced officer we had at that time was receiving from $13,000 to $14,000 a year.

Senator O'CONOR. So he, just generally speaking, was paid about as much as anybody, as any officer in the raceway?

Mr. LEVY. As any of the lowest officers who did any work. A general manager received $35,000.

Senator O'CONOR. There is no question he was paid in excess of the amounts paid to many others at the raceway?

Mr. LEVY. You mean many other officers, or many other employees; which?

Senator O'CONOR. Many other officers; to some other officers, let's say.

Mr. LEVY. Well, it was paid within $2,000 of the lowest officer of the race track as of that time.

For instance, the head of our accounting department, I think, gets $12,000, $15,000 a year. Our racing secretary gets $18,000 to $20,000 a year.

Senator O'CONOR. So I think probably you have answered it. So that it is fair to say that you paid him in excess of the amount paid to the head of the accounting department?

Mr. LEVY. I would say about the same.

Senator O'CONOR. That answers the question. Thank you.

Mr. HALLEY. What does the head of your police department get?

Mr. LEVY. The head of our police department gets—well, that has varied. I think during the racing season he gets $500 a week. And the off season, I think he is now receiving $100 or $125 a week; in charge, more or less, of the safety thing. We keep our men going around protecting against fires and intruders.

Mr. HALLEY. On an annual basis, what does he get?

Mr. LEVY. He is not employed on an annual basis. He is employed all the year round, but his salary is $500 a week for the racing season.

Mr. HALLEY. How long is the racing season?

Mr. LEVY. We have gone roughly 110 nights. That is Nassau combined with us.

Prior to 1950 and in '49 we had three racing corporations there.

Mr. HALLEY. That would be about 15 weeks he gets $500?

Mr. LEVY. Fifteen weeks—well, it is a little more than that. You see, the racing season, 110, 20 6-day weeks there, it would be 15, 16, or 17 weeks; somewhere around there.

Mr. HALLEY. And then for the whole remainder of the year he is only getting $100 a week; is that correct?

Mr. LEVY. $100 or $125; I am not certain.

Mr. HALLEY. So that his total income would be under $15,000?

Mr. LEVY. Oh, yes; sure. We have two heads at the present time, getting, I think, the same salary. Two men share that. Martini shares it with another man.

As a matter of fact, at the end of '46, Chairman Downing insisted that De Martini could not be the sole head of the police department.

Senator TOBEY. Did Mr. Costello render a report to you on a monthly or yearly basis for his consideration?

Mr. LEVY. No, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You simply paid the money and took it on faith?

Mr. LEVY. That's right. You see, you took it on face, that is. As long as Commissioner Downing was alive, it was a great relief for me to be able to say, "I am still paying the man that we selected to do the work, and from your attitude, he is doing a good job, and I am delighted with him." I mean, that was the position.

Senator TOBEY. And Mr. Costello did do the job, according to Mr. Downing and the evidence you heard; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. Commissioner Downing thought so; yes.

Senator TOBEY. And you paid the money on Downing's representations, on Downing's faith in Costello's ability you advanced the money; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. Well, that is part of the reason; yes, sir.

Senator TOBEY. You don't know how he operated, or whether he just touched him on the shoulder and said, "Be good," or "Get out"?

Mr. LEVY. I haven't the slightest idea.

Senator TOBEY. So he got $15,000 a year for that?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Levy, didn't you ask him what he did?

Mr. LEVY. I did not. As long as Chairman Downing was satisfied, I was delighted.

The CHAIRMAN. You played golf together after that, didn't you, several times?

Mr. LEVY. Oh, without a doubt.

The CHAIRMAN. It looks like you were——

Mr. LEVY. As a matter of fact, I think I complimented him about three or four times. "Apparently you are doing a good job."

The CHAIRMAN. Apparently you asked him, "How did you do this magic?"

Mr. LEVY. As a matter of fact, Senator, if, in the crisis that existed in 1946, if he used the worst method imaginable, not violating the law, but threats or anything he wanted to use, we are trying to keep our track clean.

There was the name suitable to the commissioner, and agreeable to him. And when that solution was arrived at, if his reputation was 40 times worse than it has been portrayed, and it satisfied Commissioner Downing, I still would have hired him.

The CHAIRMAN. So you just didn't want to know how he did it?

Mr. LEVY. No—that is substantially so. I didn't want to know. I wouldn't want to feel that any crimes were committed, any crimes of violence to keep anybody out; then I would have been interested. But whether he used the telephone or wrote them letters, or they were friends of his, or whatever he did, I was not interested in the details. I was interested really in the result.

Senator O'CONOR. When, to the best of your knowledge, did Commissioner Downing die?

Mr. LEVY. In 1948.

Senator O'CONOR. If your sole purpose was to satisfy Commissioner Downing, how do you explain that you carried on Costello's employment after his death, and would have carried it on continuously, had you not had the trouble with the Internal Revenue?

Mr. LEVY. Because I made this commitment to him, and told him I would pay him $15,000 a year, and didn't want to go, and more or less to use a vulgar expression, welch on the promise I had made. That is exactly why I did it.

Mr. HALLEY. But you did welch in 1950?

Mr. LEVY. I welched then because Uncle Sam said it wasn't deductible. I told him the Treasury Department would not approve the payments. Under those circumstances, I can't make it any longer; and he says, "I didn't want it in the first place anyhow. It is perfectly O. K. with me."

Mr. HALLEY. Did it have any connection with the fact that early in 1950 he testified before the Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce that he had no connection with any bookmakers?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know. I don't know what his mental processes were, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever read that testimony of his?

Mr. LEVY. I don't think I read it; and he certainly didn't consult me prior or subsequent in regard to it; and I know nothing about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever read in the newspapers that he so testified?

Mr. LEVY. I may have read it. I don't recall it now, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. Were you surprised by that testimony?

Mr. LEVY. I don't even recall reading it.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you go to him and say, "How were you able to perform this miracle if you had no connection with any bookmakers?"

Mr. LEVY. I mean, that is something you would have to ask him. I haven't the slightest idea in regard to it.

Mr. HALLEY. What has been your relationship with Frank Erickson?

Mr. LEVY. Well, the relationship, we acted as attorneys, even when Littleton was there, up to 1942, in connection with several pieces of litigation.

He was indicted for perjury in the second degree, I think, and went to trial in Queens County.

There was a vagrancy charge against him, coupled, I think, with a disorderly person charge.

And then there were one or two civil suits with the return of money under the New York statutes, which enables the loser to recover money from the common gambler to the extent of his losses, and another statute which empowers the court authorities to recover three times the amount of such losses.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, you represented Erickson in connection with his bookmaking business, is that right?

Mr. LEVY. Represented—not in connection with his business—we represented him in the defense of that civil action. We represented him on two or three specific criminal charges.

Mr. HALLEY. All having to do with bookmaking?

Mr. LEVY. No. The perjury in the second degree had nothing to do with bookmaking at all.

Mr. HALLEY. That did not. But all the rest had to do with bookmaking, had it not?

Mr. LEVY. The vagrancy charge had to do with bookmaking. In other words, the charge was he had no known legitimate means of support.

Mr. HALLEY. And the civil cases had to do with bookmaking?

Mr. LEVY. The civil cases definitely involved bookmaking; that's right. Then I represented him. And then Littleton had retired from the law practice and gone out to Wyoming on a ranch some time, I think, in 1944 or possibly 1945—in a motion to quash a subpoena given by the Commission of Accounts of the City of New York, oh—Hirschberger—Bromberger.

That's the extent of my representation of Brother Erickson.

Mr. HALLEY. How long have you known him?

Mr. LEVY. Roughly 20 years.

Mr. HALLEY. Is it a fact that you, Erickson and Costello habitually played golf together for many years?

Mr. LEVY. Not habitually. We played golf, as I say, he would usually be there when I played with Costello. Probably it would be a matter, all told I would say, over the years of 100 times.

It so happened the three of us played about the same scores, or within two or three strokes of each other.

Mr. HALLEY. What golf club was that?

Mr. LEVY. Originally at Lakeville.

Mr. HALLEY. You were known as a constant golfing team, were you not?

Mr. LEVY. I wouldn't say that; no. I wouldn't say that.

Mr. HALLEY. Was there a fourth member of that golfing group?

Mr. LEVY. Most anybody who came along would be the fourth man.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, do you remember a man named Schoenbaum?

Mr. LEVY. Oh, yes. He was there many times.

Mr. HALLEY. Joseph Schoenbaum?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. He was an employee of the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. In a statement he gave this committee, he was asked: "Do you usually play in foursomes?"

He said, "Yes."

And then:

Who else played with you and Mr. Levy?

Answer. Mr. Erickson and Mr. Costello.

Question. Who else?

Answer. Well, those were the constant ones. Others on and off.

Would you agree with that statement?

Mr. LEVY. Others were the constant ones?

Mr. HALLEY. No. "Those," meaning Erickson, Costello, and you and he, were the constant foursome. And there were others on and off.

Senator TOBEY. Perhaps he is referring to his golf game, on and off.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Halley, suppose you get his name spelled.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. It is Joseph (spelling) J-o-s-e-p-h; Shoenbaum (spelling) S-h-o-e-n-b-a-u-m.

The CHAIRMAN. Was he with the Internal Revenue at that time, or had he previously been with the Internal Revenue Department?

Mr. HALLEY. I think Mr. Levy can answer that.

Mr. LEVY. I think he had been there when he first started playing golf, and I think he retired under a pension.

Mr. HALLEY. When did he retire?

Mr. LEVY. I couldn't tell you that. I think both before and after would be the answer to your question.

Mr. HALLEY. He retired in 1944 or 1945, according to his statement. Would that be your recollection?

Mr. LEVY. That is probably right.

Mr. HALLEY. And he had been a member of the foursome for many years before; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. I would say that is substantially right. He played with us very often.

Mr. HALLEY. Going back as early as 1941.

Mr. LEVY. Going back, I would say, even before then.

Mr. HALLEY. In fact, he bought some stock in the trotting association, did he not?

Mr. LEVY. Well, if you call it a buy in the light of present values, at that time the stock was practically worthless.

Mr. HALLEY. He got it for something like—go ahead.

Mr. LEVY. He got 100 shares of stock for $2,000; the common stock, $2.50 a share, around 1941.

It cost him $200 to $250. And it wasn't worth any more than that, at that time. Many sales were made much less.

For instance, Eddie Bruns, whom I referred to here, the oldest member of the New York Stock Exchange, had $10,000 or $15,000 of preferred and 300 shares of common, and as late as 1944 sold the preferred and the common to Al Valentine for, I think, $3,500 or $4,000. Preferred was redeemed a year or two later; that is, his $10,000 or $12,000, and that same stock has a tremendous increase in value.

Mr. HALLEY. It has gone up quite a bit, hasn't it?

Mr. LEVY. Oh, yes. So that Bruns got nothing for his common stock at all.

Mr. HALLEY. What was the original basis of financing? You read a list of investors and the amounts they invested. Were you selling them a package of preferred and common stock?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And what was the sale price?

Mr. LEVY. Well, the preferred was always sold at par.

Mr. HALLEY. What was par?

Mr. LEVY. All the common stock was owned, theoretically, by Robert Johnson, because he had the lease at Mineola Fair Grounds, where it was originally intended to conduct trotting. And therefore he would give as little or as much of the common stock as necessary to make the preferred stock sale.

There would be variations in connection with it; not very important variations, but variations.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, the common stock was the sweetener for the purchase of the preferred; and the preferred was sold at par; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. Yes. When you say "sweetener," an incentive.

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. I understand.

Mr. HALLEY. No derogatory term. That is the expression of Wall Street, isn't it?

Mr. LEVY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. When you say, for instance, a man invested $5,000, there were several $5,000 investments you referred to?

Mr. LEVY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. What would they get for their $5,000?

Mr. LEVY. Well, I am trying to see the pattern. We will say, for instance, Stuart Iglehart put in $10,000. I think that for each $1,000, in the two installments—the first one hundred and the second hundred, there were variations. I think the first time we got 50 shares of common stock at, say, 10 cents a share, some nominal price was put on it for each $1,000 preferred. And the second time we only gave 25 shares of common for each thousand of preferred.

Mr. HALLEY. How much did 1,000 shares of preferred cost?

Mr. LEVY. I don't mean 1,000 shares. I am talking $1,000, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. I see. When Schoenbaum bought his 100 shares, he wasn't required to buy any preferred; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. No.

Mr. HALLEY. So Schoenbaum, without making the investment in the preferred stock, got common stock at approximately the price that the others were paying for the common; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. Yes. His 100 shares at that time would have represented, probably, if 50 shares went for the $1,000, that would have been about a $2,000 investment. If it was 25, it would have been a 4.

Mr. HALLEY. He made a——

Mr. LEVY. All that stock had been disposed of at that time. There wasn't any left in the treasury at all. And this stock is my stock that I sold him.

Mr. HALLEY. Let's just get it straight: In an investment of this type, the real chance of making a gain is on the common stock, not the preferred; is that not right?

Mr. LEVY. Yes, that's right. Of course, you are going to get your money back on the other.

Mr. HALLEY. And it is a fact that Schoenbaum today gets a very sizable income from his 200 shares; is that not right?

Mr. LEVY. No. Schoenbaum didn't have 200 shares; he had 100 shares.

Mr. HALLEY. One hundred shares; $200 worth?

Mr. LEVY. By virtue of the two increases in stock, you could multiply it. It is 32 for 1, so he now has 3,200 shares out of an issue of 400,000, where originally he had 100 shares out of $12,500.

Now, that dividend for the last 3 years has been at the rate of $1.50 a share, Mr. Halley. And so 3,200 shares would bring him in $4,800.

Mr. HALLEY. That has been his income on his $200 investment?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. $4,800 a year?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now——

Mr. LEVY. As a matter of fact, that is not unusual in there. I don't mean to go into detail, but the preferred was retired in 1944, and out of any number of small investments, I mean, the small history you mentioned with him is repeated many times over.

Mr. HALLEY. Who else got this common without buying preferred in 1940 or 1941?

Mr. LEVY. In 1940 or 1941? It seems to me at the time that he got that stock, that was following a golf game somewhere—I think it was over in New Jersey—

Mr. HALLEY. Following a golf game?

Mr. LEVY. Following a golf game that he played in New Jersey, and he made some small winning. Schoenbaum would bet $5 or $10 Nassau. If he bet that, that was a very large bet for him.

Mr. HALLEY. He was a Treasury employee, wasn't he?

Mr. LEVY. Yes. I don't mean it that way at all.

Well, I think he won $25 or $30 in the golf game, and while having a sandwich, he brought up the question, and there was another fellow there, too, a fellow by the name of Perry, and he said "could I buy some too?"

I think at the same time, if I am not mistaken—I am not sure whether he got 200 shares and Shoenbaum got 100 at the same price.

Mr. HALLEY. But they are the only people who got the common without the preferred?

Mr. LEVY. No, there were other sales, but as far as I am concerned, they were the sales of common without buying the preferred.

Mr. HALLEY. If any individual investor wanted to give somebody an unusually fine opportunity, he could sell some of his common on his own account?

Mr. LEVY. Mr. Halley, that would depend on the time. Nobody would feel that they were given an unusually fine financial opportunity prior to 1945.

Mr. HALLEY. If there was any point in being in Roosevelt prior to 1945, it was by virtue of holding this common stock, wasn't it?

Mr. LEVY. That would be the incentive or investment stock.

Mr. HALLEY. If it was a losing track, you had the preferred, and if it was a winning stock, the money was in the common?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Senator TOBEY. Was this treasury stock?

Mr. LEVY. No. The original 100,000 was fully subscribed.

Senator TOBEY. Did the existing stockholders give them the stock?

Mr. LEVY. No, I made these two sales at the $2 price. As a matter of fact, I gave away a lot of the common stock.

Senator O'CONOR. As a matter of fact, that Treasury employee, that golf partner of Costello, is now receiving 24 times as much every year as he put in originally, and still has the same original investment?

Mr. LEVY. That's true, and the same is true of anybody else. There were any number of sales, without a doubt, because in 1943, most of the boys would have sold the common stock at 50 cents or a dollar, if anybody bid for it.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't sell the stock, did you? You were giving it away, weren't you?

Mr. LEVY. I don't consider that I was giving it away.

Mr. HALLEY. $200 didn't mean anything to you, did it?

Mr. LEVY. I was not so flush in those days.

Mr. HALLEY. In the deal with Mr. Schoenbaum, who was probably getting about $3,000 a year, you wouldn't want us to think—

Mr. LEVY. I gave it to him not because he was a sweet, dear friend of mine. The stock at that time was definitely not worth even the $2 a share.

Mr. HALLEY. It was paid so that he would have a record of any future income tax payment? Any Treasury man would do that, wouldn't he?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know what motivated him. There was no reasonable expectancy of dividends or profits at that time.

Mr. HALLEY. You were playing along. He bought that stock in 1941, didn't he?

Mr. LEVY. Somewhere along that time.

Mr. HALLEY. That is the year you went out and sold these people the package the second time around—

Mr. LEVY. That was in 1940. The second installment was sold in 1940.

Mr. HALLEY. Then, shortly after that, you gave this stock to Schoenbaum?

Mr. LEVY. That's right, several months.

Mr. HALLEY. And in 1940 you were able to find this long list of fine, respectable citizens—

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Who were willing to buy this preferred stock, $5,000 and $10,000 each, in order to get a little common; isn't that right?

Mr. LEVY. I assume that was their purpose.

Friends of Bob Johnson figured the money was gone, and they were kind of helping the enterprise out.

The CHAIRMAN. How many shares of common stock would you give with a share of preferred?

Mr. LEVY. That varied.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the usual amount?

Mr. LEVY. There were two sales. One bought 50 shares of common stock, and the second 25 shares, and which was which. I don't remember; that is, whether the first hundred bought the 50, or the second the 25.

Senator O'CONOR. Did you treat anybody else in a manner similar to the way you treated Shoenbaum, as generously or as liberally?

Mr. LEVY. May I give you some illustrations?

Senator O'CONOR. I don't want the details.

Mr. LEVY. The answer is yes. For instance, things were so bad in 1942 and 1943 that Vince Traynor, our parimutuel manager—we could not pay his salary, and Traynor insisted on getting his money, and I said to Traynor, "This will ultimately pay. Just have patience. If you buy some preferred stock, I will give you 250 shares of common stock for nothing."

He got a few of his associates and got a few thousand dollars together and got the common stock for nothing.

Senator O'CONOR. Do you say that that was similar to the manner in which you treated Shoenbaum?

Mr. LEVY. You mean the difference between buying the preferred and the—

Senator O'CONOR. That's right. I asked you whether you treated anybody in a manner similar to the manner in which you treated Shoenbaum?

Mr. LEVY. Well, young Al Weill, in my office, was doing a lot of work, and we couldn't pay him, and they gave him 500 shares of stock.

Senator O'CONOR. Was that in payment of his services at the track or at your office?

Mr. LEVY. Well, he was working on it around the law office, and we couldn't pay him.

Senator O'CONOR. Well, the track had an obligation to him, and thought to liquidate it in that manner. That is not similar.

Who else did you treat in a manner similar to the manner in which you treated Shoenbaum, who now gets 24 times what he originally invested, and still had his original investment?

Mr. LEVY. It would be marvelous if our foresight was as good as our hindsight.

Would a gift of stock fall in the question that you have in mind?

Senator O'CONOR. Do you consider Shoenbaum's a gift?

Mr. LEVY. No. In fact, I had grave doubts that it was worth anything. We thought that it was possible that the newspaper predictors would be right. I think it was a miracle that it came through at all.

Senator O'CONOR. All the others listed had to take the bundle?

Mr. LEVY. That is in here. But you asked me if there was anybody treated in the same manner. I think there were any number of gifts of common stock by me, with no preferred at all.

Senator TOBEY. What was the largest amount of common stock you held?

Mr. LEVY. I think roughly, in the beginning, I had about 30 percent. It was around 12,500, and that was 3,500 or 3,600 shares of the original stock.

Senator TOBEY. Didn't you say that you had a Mr. Perry that got some too?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Senator TOBEY. What is his business?

Mr. LEVY. As far as I know, he is a contractor in Westchester County.

Senator TOBEY. How did you happen to sell that to him?

Mr. LEVY. Well, he was in the golf game too, and he spoke up.

Senator TOBEY. I see.

Mr. LEVY. As I say, the original stock was 12,000. It has been subsequently increased to 400,000 shares.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, let us go on.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you hired any of Mr. Erickson's relatives to work on the racetrack at Roosevelt or in connection with it?

Mr. LEVY. You mean—well, one man is his son-in-law.

Mr. HALLEY. Who is that, Watson?

Mr. LEVY. Jimmie Watson. Outside of that, nobody that I can recall.

Let me add this: In the 11 years of our existence, where we have hired, I would say, seven or eight thousand people, I don't know of any man at that track at the request or recommendation of one Frank Costello. I don't know of anybody at that track—and I noticed in the newspapers some fellow called Moro, in our pari-mutuel department, and I inquired about him. He formerly worked for Erickson, a clerk in our pari-mutuel department.

Mr. HALLEY. What was his name?

Mr. LEVY. Moro.

Mr. HALLEY. Stephen C. Moro?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know his first name. Apparently he worked for Erickson at one time, and worked at our track. Whether Frank Costello ever called and asked me to intercede——

Mr. HALLEY. Did Costello ever ask you to intercede?

Mr. LEVY. Never.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask Costello if he wanted you to intercede with anybody?

Mr. LEVY. No. The only two men who came down at the request of Costello, or were friends of his—well, I remember a fellow Castino tried to sell us a plastic awning——

Mr. HALLEY. Jerry Castino?

Mr. LEVY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have read of him in connection with the Lodi crap game?

Mr. LEVY. Yes, that's why I brought it up. We told him we didn't want him, and that ended that.

Mr. HALLEY. But you never discussed with Frank Costello giving his friends or relatives a job?

Mr. LEVY. That's right. And none have received any jobs.

Now, getting back to Erickson——

Mr. HALLEY. No; let us stay with Costello a little longer.

Mr. LEVY. All right, go ahead.

Mr. HALLEY. I want to be perfectly sure there is no question in your mind that you never consulted Costello on any question concerning any job that anybody would have in and around the Roosevelt race track.

Mr. LEVY. I don't recall ever having talked to him about any job, and I don't know of anybody he recommended or suggested in any conceivable way.

Mr. HALLEY. Would that apply to all your operations at any track?

Mr. LEVY. Yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Including Yonkers?

Mr. LEVY. Yes. Yonkers, you know, was a combined thing for just that one year.

Mr. HALLEY. When we talk about Roosevelt, you are including Yonkers.

Mr. LEVY. You aren't including it as of today. You mean as of 1943?

Mr. HALLEY. That's right.

Mr. LEVY. Yes; that's right.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, you hired Watson in 1947, did you not?

Mr. LEVY. Bob Johnson and I were interested in promoting a track in Detroit——

Mr. HALLEY. Please answer the question.

Mr. LEVY. I am answering your question.

Mr. HALLEY. All right, go ahead.

Mr. LEVY. And we hired Watson to go out there. He was in the real-estate business.

I had known young Jimmy ever since he was courting Frank Erickson's daughter. He came out of World War II as a lieutenant in the air service, if I recall it, and he went to work for John Reynolds, I think, in the real-estate business in New York. We were very fond of the young fellow, and we needed somebody in Detroit to check locations, because Bob Johnson thought that he had a group of people ready to finance a track out there.

I talked to Watson about going to Detroit, to go over all the locations, and report to me which location he thought was most favorable for that type of business.

I paid him personally, and it wasn't on behalf of Roosevelt. It had nothing to do with the corporation of Roosevelt. It was individually, between Bob Johnson and myself, and I paid him personally for it, and I have his report here, the report that he gave me, Mr. Halley.

I have the report available, if you care to see it, the one that he gave me after he went to Detroit [handing document to Mr. Halley].

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

Now, you are not implying that the raceway never hired him, are you?

Mr. LEVY. I didn't say anything of the kind. You spoke about Detroit—

Mr. HALLEY. No; you did.

Mr. LEVY. No; you asked me if, in 1947, I hired Watson, and the answer is "Yes," and the work he did is indicated by that report.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, later on, the Roosevelt raceway hired him; is that right?

Mr. LEVY. I hired him on behalf of two corporations, together with Joseph J. Dowling. He was the president of Nassau, and I was chairman of the executive committee of the Old Country Trotting Association.

In 1948 the Empire City problem presented itself. Very briefly, under the law in New York State at that time, seven trotting meetings were authorized by law, and seven respective corporations had already been licensed as of the beginning of 1948.

Do you want to take a recess now?

The CHAIRMAN. I think we will go on and then stop for lunch.

Let me inquire of you gentlemen of the press, would it be of some convenience to you if we had a recess now?

A VOICE. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. For how long?

A VOICE. For two hours.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean for lunch?

Well, I think we will finish with Mr. Levy in about five minutes, and then we can go to lunch. Let us go on.

Mr. HALLEY. Now, will you go on with the employment of Watson?

Mr. LEVY. Yes, surely.

In 1948, we had realized—I mean the heads of the corporation—that Yonkers was a menace to our track at all times, that if anyone ever got into Yonkers and started to operate, it was much nearer to New York and had a better clubhouse and grandstand, better facilities for the public—it was much poorer so far as the other facilities were concerned, because our track had restaurant rooms and recreation rooms, but that was in the direction of the horses; but in the way of the public facilities. Yonkers had an advantage that we did not possess.

Therefore, we were very anxious to settle the problem of Yonkers once and for all—so much so that, going back to 1947, we were trying to find out if the Butler interests would sell the Yonkers track, and if we could buy it at a real estate value.

We intended to buy it and sell it off real estate and never have any trotting there, and eliminate the problem. We had tried through 1947 to find out if they wanted to sell. One of the directors of the Nassau Trotting Association was a fellow named Devereaux Milburn. Mr. Milburn and Mr. Butler were supposedly very friendly. They lived at Old Westbury, belonged to the Meadowbrook Club, played golf together, and so forth.

Well, no price was ever obtained during 1947. Come 1948, the rumors were persistent that Yonkers is about to be sold and some group is buying Yonkers. So we finally arranged an appointment with Judge Blakely, I think Luke O'Brien and Butler, and for the first time they gave us a price—that was some time, I think, early in 1948—of two million and three-quarters, plus a provision that we could not trot at night during the same time that Empire City—that was the Butler race track, the name of it—raced flat racing in the daytime and when we questioned, "Well, how could we ever know when we could trot, because until the flat commission gives you the date, you would never know whether you conflicted or you didn't conflict."

Well, that was the price and that was the only condition. Well, we had an appraisal of the real estate made and we didn't think the real estate as such was worth any more than eight or nine hundred thousand dollars. We didn't figure we could go that high. So we submitted a proposal in there that we would pay up to $500,000—I say we, Mr. Dowling had charge of it, because he knew the Butler people—for a covenant in the event of a sale by the Yonkers owners, namely, the Butlers, that they would preclude the use of the land for trotting purposes, and we were ready to pay upward of a half a million dollars to receive that covenant, which would have given us the protection we wanted.

But we didn't get to first base on whatever the offer was that we had presented, and we were hearing constant rumors that some other group was buying Yonkers.

Now, remember what I said. There were seven licenses in the State of New York under the existing law, and all those licenses were being used. True, a license is a mere privilege, I mean renewable each year, and one might have been knocked out, but ordinarily they are renewing existing licenses if their conduct has been good and what not.

So we were very much concerned as to what type would go into Yonkers and gamble on paying two million and three-quarters, which was the only price we knew about—do you follow me—and take a covenant that they can trot at the same time when the other track is racing. And Dowling, who was then president of Nassau and some of our executive committee, we talked about it, "This don't make sense, it don't add up. Who would come in and buy that at that kind of a price? The land is worth maybe a third of that price. Who would take that kind of a covenant?" And I commenced to think, very frankly, it must be some gambling crew. I didn't know of any conservative businessmen that would do it.

So Dowling and I discussed the situation and who we could try to hire to find out who was behind this deal. And I said, "I know a young man I am very fond of, Joe," speaking to Dowling. "He is Erickson's son-in-law, but I think he has got enough honor in his system that if Erickson is behind it in any way at all I think he would refuse the job, and we could assign to him the task of trying to find out who is behind the Empire City deal."

It was under those circumstances that we hired young Watson, and we paid him $7,500 a year and whatever his expenses were to find out.

He finally found out, in 1949, after this other group having no connection as far as I know with Mr. Erickson—I don't mean to infer that, do you follow me—as to this other group who came in, as far as I know they are people I know nothing about, I mean, one way or another, but in any event he found out that a Mr. Hertzfeld in the carpet business was the man, and a number of his associates were the men behind it.

Shortly thereafter that led up to interviews with their representatives in regard to trying to work out an agreement to prevent a post-war competition on dates, and we released one tenant, Mr. Keen's corporation, and he went up to Yonkers and it worked out peace more or less in the industry. I think I have covered the Watson angle, sir.

Mr. HALLEY. I would like to ask you a few questions about it. Prior to your hiring Mr. Watson, what had been his business?

Mr. LEVY. He was in the real-estate business with Mr. Reynolds.

Mr. HALLEY. That's not right. He had been working for the Walter Reed Theaters, I think.

Mr. LEVY. You mean prior to which—1947 or 1948?

Mr. HALLEY. Prior to 1947. It was in December of 1947. He didn't work until 1948; do you remember that?

Mr. LEVY. Well, he worked for us in Detroit in 1947, Mr. Halley. If you will look up those real estate locations, it is in that report that you have now.

Mr. HALLEY. He fixed it as the day of the big blizzard of 1947 that you first talked to him.

Mr. LEVY. About going to Detroit?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. I think that's right.

Mr. HALLEY. At the tail end of 1947?

Mr. LEVY. I think that's right; I think there was a snowstorm. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. It seems we are going to go longer than 5 minutes before we finish. So could you come back at 2 o'clock this afternoon, Mr. Levy?

Mr. LEVY. I certainly will.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will stand in recess until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon, at 12:40 p. m., a luncheon recess was taken until 2 p. m. this day.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

(Thereupon, at 2 p. m., the committee resumed.)

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

The committee is pleased to announce that the members of the committee have been in touch with Judge Knox and he has agreed to cooperate with us and through the courtesy of Judge Goddard, Judge Goddard is moving his hearing room somewhere else and giving us his courtroom, 318. He said he would make it available tomorrow, but because of the physical difficulty in moving lines, electric lines, and other equipment, it is not going to be possible for us to move into 318 until Wednesday morning.

We are, of course, very grateful to Judge Knox and to Judge Goddard and others who have made this move possible. We are sorry to put the television and radio people to so much trouble, but it is impossible to do the best kind of work in here, and it is very inconvenient and I know uncomfortable not only for the witnesses and the press, but the members of the committee and our counsel. And then we would like to be in a room where we could have more people who wish to attend the hearings come in.

So Wednesday morning we will meet in Judge Goddard's courtroom, room 318, I believe it is instead of here, and in the meantime we will just have to make out as best we can. I know it is not a very easy room to work in and the press has to go in and out, but let us go as quietly as we can and we will ask the witnesses to bear with us.

Very well, Mr. Halley. Will you proceed?

MR. HALLEY. Mr. Levy, at the recess we were discussing Mr. Watson.

MR. LEVY. Yes. Can I interrupt you for a second?

MR. HALLEY. Yes.

MR. LEVY. Senator O'Connor asked me a question before the recess about the sale of common stock without preferred.

Senator O'CONNOR. Yes.

MR. LEVY. I called my office, and the transfer girl is in that office. There are many sales of common stock in 1942 and 1943, but she didn't know the price—I mean without preferred. The one particular one we happen to know—and that was a sale of 175 shares of common stock either in 1942 or 1943, and it was bought by a Mr. Simmons, the head of Simmons Tours, the travel agency in New York, and it was bought through, I think, Charles Judson & Co., brokers down on Broadway, at a purchase price of $500 for 175 shares.

Senator O'CONNOR. Was that part of a package?

MR. LEVY. No; just the 175 shares. That is the only one I know of. Apparently there were many sales of common stock without preferred, I mean outside of the two sales I spoke of.

MR. HALLEY. But you personally made no other sales? Those aren't your personal sales?

MR. LEVY. No; I had nothing to do with that sale at all. The only sales I made are the two I spoke of before—outside of such giveaways, or some common stock that went in connection with some preferred stock.

MR. HALLEY. Now, getting back to Watson, have you refreshed your recollection of Watson's qualifications in the real estate field at the time you hired him?

MR. LEVY. You mean to go to Detroit, or the other matter?

MR. HALLEY. When you first hired him to observe conditions in Detroit, make a report on the feasibility of opening a track there.

MR. LEVY. No; I didn't. I thought anybody with a little common sense could go along and look at large vacant tracts of land and make recommendations and talk to the real-estate people could do the same thing. And he was picked out as a favor, more or less, because I feel very kindly to the boy, because he has enough handicaps.

Mr. HALLEY. In other words, you were doing a favor to his father-in-law?

Mr. LEVY. No; no thought of any favor to his father-in-law. It was a favor to the boy; yes. Nothing to do with his father-in-law. As I said before, I think the boy has got sufficient handicaps—

Mr. HALLEY. Well, talking of handicaps, do you know whether he purchased some stock in the Roosevelt raceway?

Mr. LEVY. Well, he bought some from me. As a matter of fact—let's see, I think in 1948, at or about the time he was asked to try and find out who was behind the Yonkers deal, he asked me whether or not he could buy some stock of Roosevelt raceway. He didn't have much money, and wanted to know if he could buy it on the installment plan.

So I sold him 400 shares of the first increased amount. You have in your mind that it was eight for one of the original at that time—I think for around $35 a share, or a total of $14,000.

He gave me a note for the $14,000, and he paid me one-third each year by check until he finally paid it, and I think his last payment was late in 1950.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, I believe the young man with the handicaps that you referred to said that his father-in-law gave him the money to buy that stock.

Mr. LEVY. Gave him the money to buy that stock?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. He paid it on the installment plan.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, he gave him the money—

Mr. LEVY. That I don't know. Each time he paid it.

Mr. HALLEY. And you know he sold half of that stock to Erickson's son?

Mr. LEVY. Yes, to young Frank, that's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you know that this young man immediately on being married bought a $50,000 house?

Mr. LEVY. No; I know nothing about the size of the house that he bought. I know he lives in Forest Hills.

Mr. HALLEY. Then you are not really familiar with the handicaps under which he labored, are you?

Mr. LEVY. Well, without going specifically, knowing that the young man would be handicapped by his father-in-law, that when I say "handicapped" that is not the only handicap that I meant.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you think getting wedding gifts so that one is able to buy a $50,000 house is handicapped?

Mr. LEVY. Not the ability to do that. But I think fundamentally the relationship situation was a handicap, yes.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you think a relation—

Mr. LEVY. It may be his father-in-law was very kind to him, and did certain things.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you think a close relationship with Frank Erickson is a handicap?

Mr. LEVY. Well, it might have been in his business; yes.

Mr. HALLEY. You had a close relationship with Frank Erickson?

Mr. LEVY. I was his attorney, sir. I told you about the matters that I represented him in. Other than that, I never—

Mr. HALLEY. Well—

Mr. LEVY. Just a moment, please. I never was Frank Erickson's confidant. I knew nothing about his business, how he conducted it, what his assets or liabilities were. Anything about his business, other than what I represented him in some specific cases that I told you about.

Mr. HALLEY. And you were his constant golfing companion?

Mr. LEVY. I would say not. In the last 20 years, if I played golf with him 100 times, it is very easy to multiply 20 times 365.

Mr. HALLEY. How many times did you play golf with him in the years 1945 to 1947?

Mr. LEVY. Oh, I would say tops, 40, 50 times, if that many. I am guessing that.

Mr. HALLEY. You only spoke to Frank Erickson only 15 times a year in those years?

Mr. LEVY. I would assume that that's correct, and that might be more than I played with him.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you disagree with Shoenbaum who said you were a constant foursome?

Mr. LEVY. He is talking about "constant," when I was there, I suppose. I don't know what he means by "constant."

I would say the maximum number of times that I played golf with Frank Erickson over 20 years would be 100 times, if that.

Mr. HALLEY. It couldn't be over a hundred?

Mr. LEVY. I wouldn't think so; no. I am guessing at it, to be frank with you. But I wouldn't think so.

Mr. HALLEY. How many times did you play golf?

Mr. LEVY. Months went by without playing with Erickson in the playable weather.

Mr. HALLEY. You mean, months during the golf season?

Mr. LEVY. You wouldn't be playing in the winter months.

Mr. HALLEY. And during the golf season, how often did you play with him?

Mr. LEVY. Many times months went by when I didn't play with Frank Erickson at all.

Mr. HALLEY. And many times months went by when you would play twice a week?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Mr. HALLEY. And you sought this——

Mr. LEVY. I sought?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes. Didn't you seek this association?

Mr. LEVY. I didn't seek it; no.

Mr. HALLEY. You didn't have to play golf with your client, did you?

Mr. LEVY. I did not. I played golf with judges and with bankers, and with hundreds of others outside of Frank Erickson and Frank Costello. In fact, I am kind of a golf fiend; I love to play golf.

Mr. HALLEY. And you didn't feel that having a golfing association with him was a handicap, did you?

Mr. LEVY. To me?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. No; I didn't think so. Because anybody who knew me knew very well I had nothing to do with his business.

Mr. HALLEY. And why do you think that being Erickson's son-in-law was a handicap?

Mr. LEVY. Because he was in a little different situation. He was a young man starting in life. He was the son-in-law of Frank Erickson, reputedly a very large gambler. To my mind, that would constitute a handicap to that boy.

Mr. HALLEY. When you offered him that assignment, he had a job, did he not?

Mr. LEVY. In Detroit?

Mr. HALLEY. He had a job in New York.

Mr. LEVY. You are speaking now of the first matter, Mr. Halley?

Mr. HALLEY. The first matter.

Mr. LEVY. Yes. He had a job of some kind.

Mr. HALLEY. He worked for some theater company, didn't he?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know exactly; I think he did. I think he was working for Walter Reed.

Mr. HALLEY. Walter Reed Theater?

Mr. LEVY. I think that's correct.

Mr. HALLEY. And not for a real-estate company?

Mr. LEVY. Not at that time. I think he went to work for the real-estate company the following year.

Mr. HALLEY. And he was earning between $50 and $75 a week, was he not?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know what he earned; I don't know what he earned.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ask him what he was earning?

Mr. LEVY. I did not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did he give up his job to take the job with you?

Mr. LEVY. To go to Detroit, you are speaking about?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. Specific?

Mr. HALLEY. That's right.

Mr. LEVY. I wouldn't think he had to. He only went on one or two trips to Detroit.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you pay him for the one or two trips to Detroit?

Mr. LEVY. I paid him. I agreed to pay him $5,000 to go out there and make an exhaustive report of available properties, whether he went once or 40 times.

Senator O'CONOR. The other payment of $7,500 for the 2 years——

Mr. LEVY. That is subsequent.

Senator O'CONOR. It was subsequent?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Senator O'CONOR. And for the precise purpose of finding out who was behind the offer of the other?

Mr. LEVY. That's right.

Senator O'CONOR. In other words, you paid him $5,000 for the one assignment in Detroit just to find a few facts, and $15,000 for the sole purpose of finding out one fact?

Mr. LEVY. Well, one fundamental fact. The five I paid myself, Senator, out of my pocket. The $7,500 for each of 2 years was paid by the corporations, with the knowledge and approval of the president of Nassau, who was part and parcel of the making of that arrangement. And both corporations contributed toward it.

So, the cost of the $7,500 to Old Country—that is my pioneer corporation—was roughly two-thirds, say, $5,000. The cost to Nassau was roughly, $2,500. And when the third corporation came in the following years, they in turn contributed toward it.

So the cost to Old Country was roughly half of that $7,500. And the other $3,750 attributed to the other two. Now, the way that was done, so that you may know :

All operating expenses pertaining to the operation of the corporation was divided by, first, the two corporations in accordance with the parimutuel handling. In other words, whatever percentage Nassau handled as compared to the grand total, that was its percentage. And the same rule prevailed when the Goshen mile track, which had operated the Hambletonian, came down in 1948, they in turn paid its share of operating expenses on the same formula.

The CHAIRMAN. I didn't understand what particular abilities this young man had to find out who was behind the Nassau track.

Mr. LEVY. I don't think he had any unusual ability, Senator. We were busy down on Long Island. My law office is mainly in Mineola. This apparently is a group—where they came from, don't know. We wanted somebody with his nose to the ground trying to find out who this crowd were.

The CHAIRMAN. It looks like you would get a private detective, or somebody of that sort.

Mr. LEVY. Well, I have hired a lot of private detectives in my life, and if that might be your choice, it certainly would not be mine.

Mr. HALLEY. What did you tell him to do?

Mr. LEVY. You mean, specifically?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. I told him to inquire in real-estate channels to find out, real-estate offices, did he know of any brokers that had anything to do with this deal; to go everywhere and wherever he could and just listen.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell him to go and sit in bars and listen?

Mr. LEVY. In bars?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. I wouldn't say bars. He could go to a restaurant; he could go wherever he wanted to.

Mr. HALLEY. He has testified that what he did was to go to places, bars, and sit around and hope he could hear something.

Mr. LEVY. He said he listened in bars?

Mr. HALLEY. That is about the only specific place. He has mentioned several bars that he seems to have gone to, and sat around with his ears wide open, listening to something about the Yonkers race track.

Mr. LEVY. Well, he wasn't directed to go any particular place, whether to go to a church or any bar, as far as that's concerned. He was paid and hired to try and go out and bring back some information as to who these people were. And if he succeeded, fine, we were very anxious—

Mr. HALLEY. Did you tell him to go to bars and get this information? You have mentioned real-estate offices.

Mr. LEVY. I have no recollection of telling him where to go; to find out wherever he could find it out.

Mr. HALLEY. You sounded very surprised that he might have gone to some bars?

Mr. LEVY. No; I am not surprised.

I am not surprised. You might hear something in a bar, you might hear something almost anywhere. I wasn't telling you where to go, Mr. Halley.

Mr. HALLEY. He might just stayed around a hotel and enjoyed the $7,500?

Mr. LEVY. Well, that is ridiculous.

Mr. HALLEY. Didn't you tell him just to go and hang around various bars and get talking to people at bars and see if he could pick up some information about the Yonkers race track?

Mr. LEVY. I did not. He was told he had to pay his own expenses, so if he went to restaurants and if he listened at restaurants, or wherever it was, he had to pay his own expenses. He was getting $7,500 to cover his expenses each year.

Mr. HALLEY. Let me read you a question and an answer directed to this young man——

Mr. LEVY. You are questioning me, and you are asking me about questions directed to him?

Mr. HALLEY. I am going to ask you for your opinion as to whether you agree with him.

Mr. LEVY. Well, go ahead.

Mr. HALLEY. You don't object to that, do you?

Mr. LEVY. No; I have no objection to how you want to carry this on.

Mr. HALLEY. Nothing improper about asking you whether you agree with an answer a young man gave to our committee in an examination, is there?

Mr. LEVY. You go ahead. You proceed.

Mr. HALLEY. Thank you.

Q. Did he indicate to you how you might go about that job?

A. Well, yes. He told me that probably one of the best ways would be to go around New York to various bars and get talking to people at the bars, that that was a good way to get information.

Q. Did he suggest any particular individual?

A. No; he didn't.

Now, the question to you is: Is the information read by me, given to this committee, proper? Is that the substance of what you told Mr.——

Mr. LEVY. I have no recollection of telling him to go to bars or any particular place. In our conversation as to where he should go, a barroom may have come up in the discussion. I don't recall it. As far as I was concerned, I was hiring him and instructing him to go where he could to get the information, and particularly had in mind—I particularly had in mind real-estate channels in New York.

Mr. HALLEY. He doesn't seem to have gone to any real-estate channels. Would that have been an oversight?

Mr. LEVY. I don't know.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you instruct him to go to any real-estate channels?

Mr. LEVY. I gave him no specific instructions, Mr. Halley. I gave him general instructions to find out—I didn't direct him how he should proceed at all.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you really need Mr. Erickson's son-in-law to find out who was behind that Yonkers race-track deal?

Mr. LEVY. We certainly didn't find it—he was the first one to find it out, as a matter of fact.

Mr. HALLEY. Did it ever occur to you that you could have asked Mr. Costello?

Mr. LEVY. It certainly did not. I wouldn't see any sense at all in speaking to Mr. Costello about it.

Mr. HALLEY. Have you ever met any of the people connected with the Yonkers race track socially while you were with Mr. Costello?

Mr. LEVY. With Costello?

Mr. HALLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEVY. Not that I know of.

Mr. HALLEY. You have gone out socially with Mr. Costello, have you not?

Mr. LEVY. I haven't gone out socially. I have gone to his home and I have had dinner at his home.

Mr. HALLEY. And you have gone to restaurants——

Mr. LEVY. I think we may have had a dinner at a restaurant. I am speaking now in the last 3, 4 or 5 years. I haven't any recollection at all of going to any restaurant with Mr. Costello.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, previous to that, did you ever go to restaurants with Mr. Costello?

Mr. LEVY. I may have gone to a restaurant with Mr. Costello three or four times in my entire lifetime.

Mr. HALLEY. Well, do you know Mr. Nacherfeld of the Yonkers Raceway?

Mr. LEVY. I know him now.

Mr. HALLEY. And do you know whether he knows Mr. Costello?

Mr. LEVY. No; I don't.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mr. Joe Henschel of the Yonkers Raceway?

Mr. LEVY. I know him now, yes. I have known him since this deal was accomplished. I never knew him before.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether he knows Mr. Costello?

Mr. LEVY. I haven't the slightest idea.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know Mr. Somyak of the Roosevelt Raceway?

Mr. LEVY. I have known him since—I know he had the programs up there at the Yonkers Raceway in 1950.

Mr. HALLEY. Do you know whether he is a friend of Mr. Costello?

Mr. LEVY. I do not.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever see any of these people with Mr. Costello?

Mr. LEVY. No; never saw any one of these people with Mr. Costello.

Mr. HALLEY. Did you ever ask Mr. Costello if any of his friends had any interest in the Yonkers Raceway?

Mr. LEVY. No; never did. I never presumed any of them did.

Mr. HALLEY. It never occurred to you that if you asked him, you might have gotten your answer?

Mr. LEVY. No; it never occurred to me, because I just can't believe that any of those people are in any business interests with Costello in connection with the race track.
